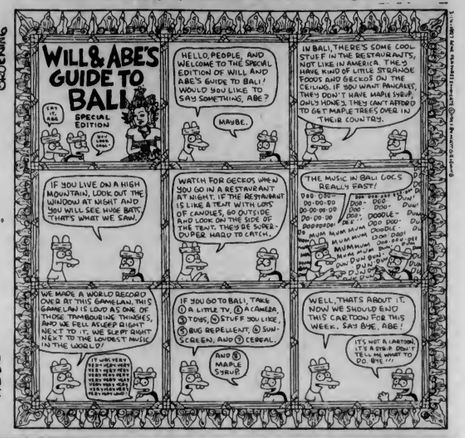
You'll notice that at no point in this routine is there a mention of checking under the bowl for the murderous descendant of the bastard who threw a monkey wrench in that whole Eden plan.

But, hey, I've never been a worrier, so why start now?

Upon landing in Tucson Saturday afternoon, my skin, which has spent the last seven months almost completely covered from head to toe, will receive its first taste of sun — real sun — in what seems like ages. I'll need sunglasses for reasons other than ice glares when I drive to campus in the morning. And my new spring clothes will actually see some wear before mid–to–late April.

But in the back of my head, there is the image of some concierge retching at the thought of having to siphon venom from a body area that will produce bell-hop snickers for years to come.

Maybe I should have just gone to Mexico — it seems to be the hot spot for folks to run away from their worries.



C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Letters to the Editor

ALANA needs to be more flexible

To the Editor:

As a UMass alum and a fairly recent one at that, it has been difficult not to miss the controversy in Amherst over demands by ALANA targeted towards the UMass administration. I was a student at UMass back in 1992, when the original list of demands was issued, and recall the concern then for the University not meeting particular needs of the students.

However, while I can sympathize with the passion and goals of the ALANA stance, I don't think they fully understand the dynamics of actually meeting their demands. If you think that Whitmore is a bureaucratic nightmare right now, just imagine it if everyone had an individual payment plan, or if students attended class as long as they want while their bills went unpaid, all the while trying to find the hundreds of millions of dollars needed to finance the new academic initiatives, new faculty, increasing of recruitment and increase of staff.

As a state university, the majority of the operating budget is determined by the legislators on Beacon Hill at the State House, not in the cubicles of Chancellor Scott's Office. That's one of the troubling aspects of attending a state school, the funding isn't there to have such things as an ALANA Affairs office, or specific studies programs targeted at specific ethnic backgrounds. The money just isn't there.

Even if the University were able to rework the current budget, there still wouldn't be enough to satisfy all the conditions that ALANA seems unwilling to be flexible with. We do need more faculty of color (although there are some excellent ones already on campus), more flexible child-care, and Lord knows Financial Aid would love for a Brinks truck to crash on Haigis Mall. But the way these events are being perceived by alums and the media, ALANA's chances for success are not realistic.

ALANA should consider being more flexible with their demands, and might consider putting themselves in the difficult position that the administration is in. Right now, there is a perception among some alums that ALANA's demands will do more to serve ALANA than the University as a whole, that political gain is more important than practically implementing change. For what I just said I may be deemed a racist, as being intolerant of such things as diversity and change. Well I am not, but I think there is one statement which I think people should be concerned with. I read on the student protest web page comments made by the Collegian's Humphrey brown III as he imagined Chancellor Scott "in a kilt playing golf," and how that image made him want to scream. How is this any different from someone saying they want to scream when they see an African-American "picking Cotton and eating watermelon and pork chops." Or Native-Americans... perceived as savages. You get the idea. Racism is a disease regardless of who promotes it, and if someone uses it to promote even a noble cause such as ALANA's, then I'd be hesitant to support their actions.

Evan Whitney
Class of 1995
evan_whitney@harvard.edu

Columnists display hypocrisy

To the Editor:

First, I would like to congratulate ALANA and its supporters on their achievement. In a decade when states and universities openly strive to reverse any progress obtained by Affirmative Action programs, this is a fairly unique success story of students forcing the implementation of diversity.

In contrast with the protest, which was seriously committed to non-violence and to bringing together all students, Hussein Ibish and Shyamala Ivatury's Friday opinion column struck a disharmonious cord. Chancellor Scott was depicted as follows: "Resplendent in sombrero, sunglasses, kilt and blue flippers, Chancellor Scott slowly lifts a limp arm..." Making such ridiculous caricatures of people is not unlike white racist literature, which depicts African Americans as brainless and clownish, or Nazi literature, which portrays Jews as physically grotesque and demonic.

In the same column, there are also bizarre derogatory references to Scott's ethnicity: "...apart from the unpleasantness about the bagpipes..." Ibish and Ivatury come across just as obnoxious opposers of other cultures as Robinson, Ingle, and Crosson, who they attack for such a stance.

Finally, Ibish and Ivatury claim that ineffective dialogue is "emotional... hostile, and wholly-counter productive." In their hypocrisy, Ivatury and Ibish fail to identify the exact same faults in themselves.

Ronen Botzer
rbotzer@clux3.cs.umass.edu

Education for everyone

To the Editor:

UMass Students: As a former employee of UMass and one who strongly believes in the freedom of education for all people, I can understand your protest. But, I have to say that I disagree with its approach for various reasons, but mainly I believe that the situation is not necessarily a UMass problem, but a national problem.

Making education accessible to everyone begins at much higher and lower levels than an actual campus. On a lower level, we need to instill the importance of an education and staying in school. On the junior high and high school levels, this needs to be reinforced along with the information on how to get that education, i.e. scholarships, loans, etc. I really don't believe that we make the average student aware of such things due to lack of personnel/funds in schools. Having funds made available on an equal level to these schools to give them the tools to be able to compete in higher education arenas whether it be a vocational or Ivy League school of their choosing is another key element.

This brings us to that higher level: support for programs that allow tax cuts for families to be able to afford to send their children to school; work–for–education type programs such as Clinton's plan that he proposed in his first term; and more funding for student aid.

But... someone has to want the education.

I had an English teacher once that told our class that if you want something bad enough, you will achieve it. We need to instill that strong desire to want an education into our children whether they be a minority, poverty stricken, middle class, or wealthy. I am sure you have all read stories of children who have done so — homeless children graduating from high school and going on to college, children from single parent families all going to college (my father's family did and that was many years ago), kids that people felt were too "stupid" to get anywhere in school performing beyond any teacher's dream. How did this happen? Someone gave them a challenge, a glimmer of hope to become more than they thought they could be. I think if you asked that person what gave them that chance, they would give you someone's name.

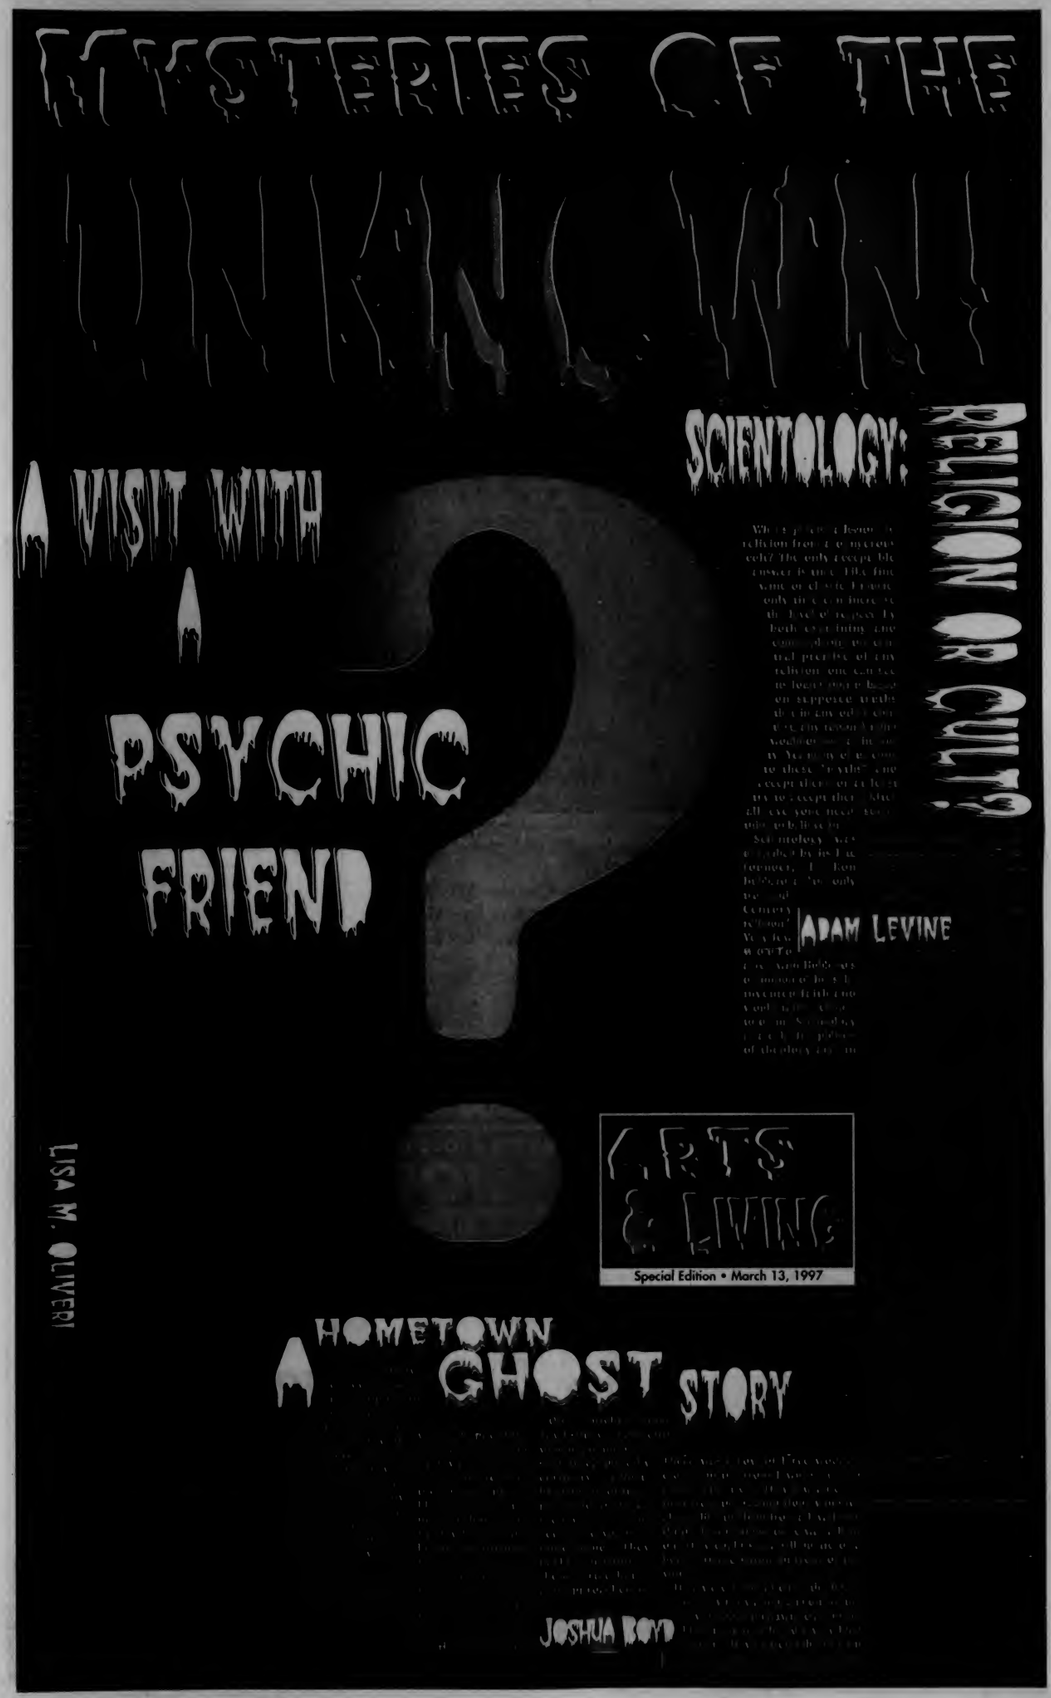
So I challenge you, as students, parents and future parents, to put your energies back into the children — invest the same number of hours you have spent in this protest to volunteer to tutor or mentor a child, go back to your high school and speak to students about getting an education, give them the information they need to get to school, write and write and write some more to your congressmen/women on state and national levels and to major corporations to get them to join in the fight to see that the opportunity to learn in this country is attainable. Help inspire our youth to excel in all they do and be proud of what they do whether it be a graduate or someone who fixes cars. Because when someone is proud of themselves and what they do it makes for a better global community.

You, yourselves, can provide that key to a child getting a better education — don't rely on administrative figures to solve "problems" that you yourselves can make a difference in. Organize your group to meet the challenge I stated above.

Diane Wheeler
mordred@intrepid.net

Grad organization expresses support

To the Editor:



The Economics Graduate Student Organization at UMass-Amherst would like to express its strong support for the students who participated in the Goodell struggle. We call upon all graduate student caucuses and organizations to join us in support of these students, by persuading other graduate students and faculty to provide the protesters with academic amnesty, necessary tutoring, lecture notes and proctoring of make-up exams.

In addition to supporting the demands made by the students, we would like to underscore the importance of transforming the current regime of education funding and access in the state of Massachusetts, and elsewhere. The purpose of state public education was ostensibly to bring affordable education to everyone.

But for too long, working-class persons have had their pockets picked by the educational apparatus, in the form of tuitions, fees and regressive taxation policies. Meanwhile, capitalist enterprises bear far too little of the cost of education. While capitalist enterprises are among the main beneficiaries of educational experience, in terms of the surpluses appropriated through productivity gains, workers earn stagnant, even declining, real wages.

We call upon other students to consider, alongside the race, ethnicity, and gender aspects, this class dimension of the education crisis.

Rob Burns
Eric Glynn
Philip Kozel
Economics Graduate Student Organization Co-Chairs

Demystifying Astrology

Your Sun Sign: The sign that most people consider themselves is called the sun sign. Meaning what sign and by how many degrees the sun was at the exact time and place of your birth. Your sun sign, although quite prominent does not actually represent your whole personality. Depending on whether or not you were born towards the beginning few days or ending few days of your sun sign, you might be reflecting key characteristics of other signs. This is called being born on the cusp.

Other Factors: What sign your moon is in also plays a very significant role in determining your personality. Other aspects include the sign placement at the time of your birth in the planets Mercury, Mars, Venus, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, and Pluto. Your ascendant is also a strong indicator of personality.

Categorizations of Signs: Each Astrological sign can be categorized into one of the four elements, earth, fire, water and air. In addition, they can also be categorized into three qualities, cardinal, fixed and mutable.

The Elements:

Fire: Aries, Leo and Sagittarius

These signs spread warmth and enthusiasm. They "fire-up" and motivate others, and have hot explosive tempers. They are people of action and make ideas or people come to life.

Earth: Taurus, Virgo and Capricorn

These signs flow through after the initiative of the fire signs in order to make things happen. They are solid, practical and realists. They enjoy material things and sensual pleasures.

Air: Gemini, Libra and Aquarius

These signs are the idea people. They are great communicators, and are very mentally active and sociable. They reach out after the consolidation of the earth signs to inspire others through the use of words, colors and pictures. They thrive on social contact, discussion and debate.

Water: Cancer, Scorpio and Pisces

These signs are emotional and compassionate. They use all the senses and their imagination. They are the non-verbal communicators who attune themselves to their surroundings and react to things through the medium of feelings.

Electrical Charge

The fire and air signs together share an electrical charge whose characteristics are positive, active, open and always expanding outward.

The earth and water signs together share an electrical charge whose characteristics are reactive, negative, nurturing, receptive and allow energy to develop and take shape.

The Qualities:

Cardinal: Aries, Cancer, Libra and Capricorn

These signs like life in the fast lane. They are the "start- up" signs, that kick off each of the four seasons. They are the initiators, anxious to get things done, and are often impatient.

Fixed: Taurus, Leo, Scorpio and Aquarius

These signs are steady, stable and always in control. They happen in the middle of the season when the initial character of the season has been established. They are centered and do things more deliberately and slowly — but always thoroughly. They make things take root and integrate experiences.

Mutable: Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius and Pisces

These signs embody the principle of distribution. They prepare the way for change by breaking up each seasonal cycle. They distribute the energy to each group. They are flexible, adaptable, communicative and move in many directions easily — darting around obstacles.

The Signs:

Aries: (March 29 – April 19)
A cardinal fire sign whose opposite sign is Libra and whose ruling planet is Mars. The Aries key word is "activity" and its key phrase is "I am."

Positive Aries characteristics: Pioneering, executive, competitive, impulsive, eager, courageous, independent, dynamic, lives in the present and quick.

Negative Aries characteristics: Domineering, quick- tempered, violent, intolerant, hasty, arrogant, "me first" attitude, brusque and lack of follow-through.

Taurus: (April 20 – May 19)
A fixed earth sign whose opposite sign is Scorpio and whose ruling planet is Venus. The Taurus key word is "stability" and its key phrase is "I have."

Positive Taurus characteristics: Patient, conservative, domestic, sensual, thorough, stable, dependable, practical, artistic and loyal.

Negative Taurus characteristics: Self–indulgent, stubborn, slow–moving, argumentative, short–tempered, possessive, greedy and materialistic.

Gemini: (May 20 – June 20)
A mutable air sign whose opposite sign is Sagittarius and whose ruling planet is Mercury. The Gemini key word is "versatility" and its key phrase is "I think."

Positive Gemini characteristics: Dual, congenial, curious, adaptable, expressive, quick-witted, literary, inventive, dexterous and clever.

Negative Gemini characteristics: Changeable, ungrateful, scatterbrained, restless, scheming, lacks concentration and lacks follow–through.

Cancer: (June 21 – July 22)
A cardinal water sign whose opposite sign is Capricorn and whose ruling planet is the moon. The Cancer key word is "devotion" and its key phrase is "I feel."

Positive Cancer characteristics: Tenacious, intuitive, maternal, domestic, sensitive, retentive, helpful, sympathetic, emotional, patriotic, have good memories, and are traditional.

Negative Cancer characteristics: Brooding, touchy, too easily hurt, negative, manipulative, too cautious, lazy, selfish and feeling sorry for themselves.

Leo: (July 23 – Aug. 21)
A fixed fire sign whose opposite sign is Aquarius and whose ruling planet is the sun. The Leo key word is "magnetism" and its key phrase is "I will."

Positive Leo characteristics: Dramatic, idealistic, proud, ambitious, creative, dignified, romantic, generous, self– assured and optimistic.

Negative Leo characteristics: Vain, status conscious, childish, overbearing, fears ridicule, cruel, boastful, pretentious and autocratic.

Virgo: (Aug. 22 – Sept. 22)
A mutable earth sign whose opposite sign is Pisces and whose ruling planet is Mercury. The Virgo key word is "practicality" and its key phrase is "I analyze."

Positive Virgo characteristics: Industrious, studious, scientific, methodical, discriminating, fact–finding, exacting, clean, humane and seeks perfection.

Negative Virgo characteristics: Critical, petty, melancholy, self–centered, fears disease and poverty, picky, pedantic, skeptical and sloppy.

Libra: (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22)
A cardinal air sign whose opposite sign is Aries and whose ruling planet is Venus. The Libra key word is "harmony" and its key phrase is "I balance."

Positive Libra characteristics: Cooperative, persuasive, companionable, peace–loving, refined, judicial, diplomatic, sociable and suave.

Negative Libra characteristics: Fickle, apathetic, loves intrigue, peace and any price, pouting, indecisive and easily deterred.

Scorpio: (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21)
A fixed water sign whose opposite sign is Taurus and whose ruling planet is Pluto. The Scorpio key word is "intensity" and its key phrase is "I desire."

Positive Scorpio characteristics: Motivated, penetrating, executive, resourceful, determined, scientific, investigative, probing and passionate.

Negative Scorpio characteristics: Vengeful, temperamental, secretive, violent, sarcastic, suspicious, jealous and intolerant.

Sagittarius: (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21)
A mutable fire sign whose opposite sign is Gemini and whose ruling planet is Jupiter. The Sagittarius key word is "visualization" and its key phrase is "I understand."

Positive Sagittarius characteristics: Straightforward, philosophical, freedom–loving, broad–minded, athletic, generous, optimistic, just, scholarly and enthusiastic.

Negative Sagittarius characteristics: Argumentative, exaggerative, talkative, procrastinating, self–indulgent, blunt, impatient, a gambler, pushy and hot–headed.

Capricorn: (Dec. 22 – Jan. 20)
A cardinal earth sign whose opposite sign is Cancer and whose ruling planet is Saturn. The Capricorn key word is "ambition" and its key phrase is "I use."

Positive Capricorn characteristics: Cautious, responsible, scrupulous, conventional, businesslike, perfectionists, traditional, practical, hardworking, economical and serious.

Negative Capricorn characteristics: Egotistic, domineering, unforgiving, fatalistic, the mind rules the heart, stubborn, brooding, inhibited and status–seeking.

Aquarius: (Jan. 21 – Feb. 19)
A fixed air sign whose opposite sign is Leo and whose ruling planet is Uranus. The Aquarius key word is "imagination" and its key phrase is "I know."

Positive Aquarius characteristics: Independent, inventive, tolerant, individualistic, progressive, artistic, scientific, logical, humane, intellectual and altruistic.

Negative Aquarius characteristics: Unpredictable, temperamental, bored by detail, cold, too fixed in opinion, shy, eccentric, radical, impersonal and rebellious.

Pisces: (Feb. 20 – March 20)
A mutable water sign whose opposite sign is Virgo and whose ruling planet is Neptune. The Pisces key word is "understanding" and its key phrase is "I believe."

Positive Pisces characteristics: Compassionate, charitable sympathetic, emotional sacrificing, intuitive, introspective, musical and artistic.

Negative Pisces characteristics: Procrastinating, over- talkative, melancholy, pessimistic, emotionally inhibited, timed, impractical, indolent and often feels misunderstood.

– Information courtesy from Linda Goodman's Sun signs.

BE A GOOD NEIGHBOR
American Heart Association
Fighting Heart Disease and Stroke
Volunteer.
For more information, contact your local American Heart Association or call 1 800 AHA USA1
© 1996 American Heart Association, Inc.

After six months, new graduates are often waiting for their first job.

Our Co-op MBA's are waiting for their first paycheck.

Getting your first job isn't easy, unless you're part of Northeastern's Co-op MBA Program. After six months of study, you'll work another six months in a paid professional-level position. A final nine months of school completes your degree. At the end of the program, you'll have built a solid resume and gained the valuable contacts and experience necessary to launch your career. To find out how you can have a great job in six months, call us at (617) 373-5960 or visit our web site at www.cba.neu.edu/gba. But, don't wait too long, the next class starts in June.

Northeastern University
Graduate School of Business Administration
Full-time programs that put you to work.

FIND YOURSELF
Israel
1-800-27-ISRAEL
STUDY ABROAD
SUMMER
WINTER
KIBBUTZ
INTERNSHIPS
AND MUCH, MUCH, MORE!
Call about Odyssey '97: Summer in E. Europe & Israel
ISRAEL EXPERIENCE
USD@NETCOM.COM
110 E. 59th Street, 4th Fl.
New York, NY 10022
Fax 212-755-4781
USD
University Student Diplomacy World Zionist Organization

Premium Law School Education
Without a Premium Price

For over two decades law school academics have claimed that a law school must be expensive to be good, and that it can be good without teaching students the skills they need in practice. These propositions are untrue. But they have led to a median law school tuition in New England of $17,740 this year, and to a dearth of courses in practical skills.

MSL illustrates that high quality legal education need not be that expensive and should include extensive education in practical skills. At MSL, up to one-half the courses you take during your career can be skills courses if you wish, and annual tuition for full time study is $9,000 this year (part time is $7,200).

The difference this makes is that MSL students are paying approximately $25,000 to $30,000 less in tuition during their law school careers, and are much better equipped to practice when they graduate.

We ask you to compare both prices and training. Personally ask schools how many practical skills courses their students realistically can take. Only personal inquiry can enable you to learn about courses. And check tuitions at individual schools – you will find that MSL's tuition usually is 40% to 60% less than tuitions at other schools.

MSL graduates are eligible to practice law in Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine and Massachusetts, as well as California and other selected states.

For a catalog or more information, please call 508-681-0800

Massachusetts School of Law
500 Federal Street, Woodland Park, Andover, MA 01810
Visit our video: www.mslaw.edu

R&P Liquors
• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
• Largest Selection of Micro Brews in S. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
391 West St., South Amherst
Minutes from UMass, Hampshire & Mt. Holyoke

SPRING WHITEWATER!

Whitewater Rafting is one of the best ways to break out of the mid-semester blues! Our great Spring Rates make the most exciting season a real bargain.
From April 15-May 15 raft for as little as $54 on the Zoar Gap section of the Deerfield River.
ZOAR OUTDOOR
Charlemont, Massachusetts
CALL NOW TO BOOK YOUR SPRING RAFTING ADVENTURE!
800 532-7483

NO BLARNEY ABOUT IT! WE'VE GOT THE BEST DEALS AROUND!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive

BLOCK CASE
BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE & BUD ICE LIGHT
CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS $12.49 + DEP
GENUINE DRAFT & GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT
CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $9.49 + DEP
4 PK. OF DRAFT CANS $4.99 + DEP
GUINNESS STOUT
6 PK. BOTTLES $6.49 + DEP
GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY & ANNIVERSARY LIGHT
CASE OF 2-12 PK. CANS $7.29 + DEP.
PAPER CITY BREWING & BERKSHIRE BREWING
ALL TYPES 1/2 GALLONS $3.99 + DEP.
HARPOON
I.P.A. & MIX PACK 12 PACK BOTTLES $8.99 + DEP

WINE OF THE MONTH
DUNNEWOOD
CHARDONNAY, ZINFANDEL, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $5.49
ROSSI WINES
ALL FLAVORS 4.0 LITER $7.49
ROBERT MONDAVI
WOODBRIDGE CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5 LITER $10.99
COLOUR VOLANT
CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML $5.49
M.G. VALLEJO
CHARDONNAY 750 ML $4.99
BACARDI Breezer
4 PK. BOTTLES SALE $3.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -1.50 FINAL COST $1.99 + DEP.

LUKSUSOWA VODKA
"THE ORIGINAL POTATO VODKA" 1.75L SALE $15.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $12.99
SEAGRAMS GIN
1.75L SALE $12.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $9.49
BAILEY'S & BAILEY'S LIGHT
IRISH CREAM LIQUEUR 750 ML $14.99
JAMESON
PREMIUM IRISH WHISKEY 750 ML $13.99
JIM BEAM
1.75L SALE $14.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $11.49
CLAN MACGREGOR
SCOTCH WHISKY 1.75L $13.49

We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 586-3007
HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 3/13/97 THRU WEDS. 3/19/97
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Is David Lynch lost?

Highway pushes audiences to the brink

By Matthew Ludvino
Collegian Correspondent

LOST HIGHWAY
Directed by David Lynch with Bill Pullman, Patricia Arquette, Balthazar Getty Playing at Amherst Cinema

David Lynch has always been somewhat of a dark horse in the motion picture industry. With 1986's Blue Velvet, Lynch painted a vivid portrait of America; a candy colored mid western town teeming with dark secrets, and a mysterious underworld that lurked just down the block. The film hit the screen like a Hardy Boys novel soaked in kerosene, burning the audience with its ferocious sexuality and violent imagery and boosting Lynch's already growing cult status immeasurably.

Throughout his career, Lynch has mined his own desires and obsessions to the delight of fans and critics, but with his latest film, Lost Highway (his first in almost four years), he may have stumbled over his own surrealistic urges.

Both Lynch and co–writer Barry Gifford (who also penned the novel Wild at Heart, on which Lynch's eponymous 1990 film was based) have described Lost Highway as "a 21st– century noir horror film," and whether you come out of the film grinning, scratching your head, or clenching your fists, it can't be denied that this is in fact Lynch's most ambitious project to date. The film contains not one story but two, and is not interesting so much for the content of those stories, but for the unique manner in which Lynch links them together.

Where Blue Velvet told its story from the perspective of innocence peeking into a small town's sordid underbelly for the first time, Lost Highway remains in the center of corruption at all times. The first story deals with Fred Madison (Pullman), a soft–spoken jazz musician who is having obsessive dreams about his wife cheating on him. Madison is also receiving video tapes that contain footage of his house, his living room, and his bed room where he and his wife, Renee (Patricia Arquette) are still sleeping. After he informs the police, the already cerebral story takes a jarring turn where Madison awakens to find his wife murdered, is found guilty in the crime and sentenced to prison.

Lynch stretches the threshold of the viewers' patience to the breaking point when a guard discovers that Madison has disappeared from his cell, and is inexplicably replaced by Pete Dayton (played by Balthazar Getty).

This is where the second story begins. Pete is released to pick up where his life left off, still haunted by the mysterious night he disappeared. He gets involved with a mobster's girl (also played by Arquette) and must deal with the consequences when they are found out.

The film is filled with a plethora of puzzling enigmas. Lynch laces his film with little hints and clues as to the connection between these two stories, and taunts the audience with calculated gaps in the narrative. Who is "the mystery man" (played with eerie delight by Robert Blake) who invades both our protagonists' lives? Does Arquette play one character, or two? What strange force binds Fred and Pete together? And more importantly, does anyone care in the first place? Simply put, the answer to the last question is easily answered with a no.

To be fair, the film is beautifully composed, lit by cigarettes and an unnatural scarlet red, combined with Lynch's trademark overlapping tracks of ambient noise, we are left with the impression that we are watching a nightmare rather than a movie.

COURTESY SUZANNE TENNER
Alice (Patricia Arquette) and Pete (Balthazar Getty), two of the more beautiful creatures in David Lynch's Lost Highway.

And the storyline is by no means the unintelligent blather of an overindulgent director, as it could be easily mistaken for. With a little patience anyone can figure out this film. The problem is, no one wants to.

Lynch crafted two stock noir tales and filled them with the most vacant characters that have ever appeared in any of his films. Dennis Hopper's Frank (from Blue Velvet) is one of the most kinetic and imaginative performances of the '80s, Nicholas Cage's mock Elvis drawl made Wild at Heart a joy to watch and everyone I know fell head over heels over Kyle MacLaughlin's Agent Cooper (from the short lived television experience that was Twin Peaks). The closest he gets to an interesting character is Robert Loggia's quirky take as a pornographer who above all else detests a tailgaiter.

Lynch is often heralded for his love of secrets, and all those things we keep wrapped up in curtains. But perhaps with his latest effort he could have given us more than card– board cutouts of forgotten matinee idols, matched against two non–stories for the sake of his lofty themes. Lynch is a twisted intellectual, but the dark horse is in no way pulling himself from the critical mire he has been sinking in with Lost Highway. C+

■ psychic

continued from page 5

interactive, that she wanted a dialogue. So she asked me my name, birthdate, where I was calling from and my occupation. I somehow expected her to already know this kind of information, but I guess I was wrong. Then she told me that she would be using tarot cards to enhance our reading. And for a while, she had me convinced.

Ruth Ann mostly spoke of my personality, and the thing that she kept referring to was how I always look at every situation with a "would have, could have, should have" attitude. For example, as she was telling me this, I was thinking, "I wonder if I should have called the psychic solution..."

But she told me that she foresaw some sort of global change in my future, that I had real big plans for myself, and that I have the patience to do anything I wanted. Now, to me, that seems pretty generic. That can apply to anyone. Then, and ten minutes have gone by so far, she told me that she saw a move in my future. Well... obviously! I am a senior (which I had told her), so chances are I would be moving in the near future.

At that point I should have said "thank you, goodbye" and hung up, but my curiosity got the better of me and I continued our conversation. I wanted to know more.

What I discovered about Ruth Ann, was that she would use catch phrases that could literally be applied to any situation. She told me that things in my life were comfortable, I should trust in myself, that there would be compromises that I would have to make and that the world was competitive and that I could easily adapt to any situation. Now to me, this reading was not indicative to just me. I'm sure Ruth Ann told the same story to the person just

Turn to PSYCHIC, page 8

Hit Jackpot!
No risk gambling... Gift Certificates
We know you want your voice to be heard!

BALLOT COUNTERS NEEDED
TIP the Scales to '97
MONEY $ MONEY $ MONEY $ MONEY $ MONEY
Apply at The Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement

UMass' Best!

WIN PRIZES!

The Collegian Poll Rules:

1. Ballots must be dropped of at The Collegian office in the basement of the Campus Center or mailed to 113 Campus Center, Amherst, MA 01003.
2. No Xeroxed ballots.
3. One ballot per person
4. Ballots must be filled out with reasonable completeness. Ballots less than half of the blanks will be disqualified.
5. Independent Ballot Referees are hired.
6. Decisions of Ballot Referees are final.
7. All Ballots due by Thursday, March 13, 1997.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian's UMass' Best is intended to be a good natured contest among the local community. It is a fun poll based solely on UMass student opinions. This is not a harsh competition with results that have deep and lasting significance. Please do not take it as such, but rather as a basic published poll.

Ballot

Name: _____
Address: _____
Phone #: _____
Student ID#: _____

I. UMass Grub
1. Best Pizza Place _____
2. Best Sub Shop _____
3. Best Place to Go on a Date _____
4. Best Place to Eat if Your Parents are Paying _____
5. Best Ice Cream Shop _____
6. Best Chinese Restaurant _____
7. Best Italian Food _____
8. Best Breakfast (Hangover Cure) _____
9. Best Bagel Shop _____
10. Best Vegetarian Place _____

II. UMass Weekend
1. Best Liquor Store _____
2. Best Coffee Shop _____
3. Best Place to Start the Night Out _____
4. Best Place to Finish the Night Out _____
5. Best Shot _____
6. Best Beer _____
7. Best Drinking Game _____
8. Best Bartender (What Bar?) _____

III. Shops & Services
1. Best Grocery Store _____
2. Best Florist _____
3. Best Clothing Store _____
4. Best Gas Station _____
5. Best Bike Shop _____
6. Best Bookstore _____
7. Best Hair Salon _____
8. Best Place to Work Out _____
9. Best Tan Salon _____
10. Best Place to Buy Condoms _____

IV. Arts & Entertainment
1. Best Place to Hear Live Music _____
2. Best Local Band _____
3. Best Radio Station _____
4. Best Music Store _____
5. Best Place to Play Pool _____
6. Best Cheap Date _____
7. Best Video Store _____
8. Best Movie _____
9. Best TV Show _____

V. Unique UMass' Best
1. Best Thing About UMass _____
2. Best Apartment Complex _____
3. Best Class _____
4. Best Reason to Miss Class _____
5. Best Reason to Hand in a Paper Late _____
6. Best Professor _____
7. Best Place to Read The Collegian _____
8. Best Excuse for Not Graduating in 4 Years _____
9. Best Place to Study _____

FILL OUT A BALLOT FOR A CHANCE TO WIN A PRIZE!

Oscars - Place your bets

(AP) Oscar oddsmaker Lenny Del Genio hedges his bets this season by offering two favorites in four of the six major categories, including the best picture and best actor and actress awards.

Del Genio's predictions, and a bit of his reasoning behind them, include:

Best Picture — The English Patient and Shine, even money; Jerry Maguire, 3-1; Fargo, 5-1; Secrets & Lies, 8-1.

On The English Patient: "If you look at the historical trend of films that have double-digit nominations, all but one or two have done exceedingly well." Meanwhile, Shine looks good because "there's a revolt going on within the Academy against the [big] studios."

Best Actor — Geoffrey Rush (Shine) and Billy Bob Thornton (Sling Blade), even money; Tom Cruise (Jerry Maguire), 3-1; Ralph Fiennes (The English Patient), 5-1; Woody Harrelson (The People vs. Larry Flynt), 8-1.

"The trend is Geoffrey Rush had won everything that had been out there."

As for Billy Bob Thornton: "Now when he goes into a coffee shop or a restaurant in Hollywood, other actors that he doesn't know and don't know him come up to him and give him a hug."

Best Actress — Kristin Scott Thomas (The English Patient) and Brenda Blethyn (Secrets & Lies), even money; Frances McDormand (Fargo), 3-1; Diane Keaton (Marvin's Room), 5-1; Emily Watson (Breaking the Waves), 8-1.

"Kristin Scott Thomas's role was wonderful but she hasn't really been out there going to all the award dinners and banquets because she's been staying in Paris with her child... There seems to be a feeling that she hasn't gone out and hustled enough." His personal favorite? Frances McDormand

Best Supporting Actor — Cuba Gooding Jr. (Jerry Maguire), 2-1; Armin Mueller-Stahl (Shine), even money; William H. Macy (Fargo), 3-1; James Woods (Ghosts of Mississippi), 5-1; Edward Norton (Primal Fear), 10-1.

"I think the performance is more than worthy of winning the award for Cuba," says Del Gina.

Best Supporting Actress — Lauren Bacall (The Mirror Has Two Faces), even money; Joan Allen (The Crucible) 2-1; Juliette Binoche (The English Patient), 3-1; Barbara Hershey (The Portrait of a Lady), 5-1; Marianne Jean-Baptiste (Secrets & Lies), 10-1.

On Lauren Bacall: "The role itself was a good role and I think that there are enough older members within the Academy that are going to reward her."

Best Director — Anthony Minghella (The English Patient) and Scott Hicks (Shine), even money; Joel Coen (Fargo), 6-5; Milos Forman (The People vs. Larry Flynt), 8-1; Mike Leigh (Secrets & Lies), 10-1.

On Anthony Minghella: "There's the story on how he made the film and what he did — the broken ankle and the sands on the lenses and all that. He directed with his foot in a cast."

The odds are for entertainment only, as Nevada sports books only allow betting on sporting events.

■ psychic

continued from page 7

before me.

So I decided to ask about my job search. After asking me what medium of journalism I would like to go into (I said newspapers), she quickly agreed with a enthusiastic, "yes, that's what I was getting." Then she told me that I would have to only send out 10 or 11 resumes before I would hear back from a company, but that I shouldn't expect to win a Pulitzer with my second article. You know, my mom could have given me the same advice for free!

Now I felt at this point that Ruth Ann was just going in circles, stretching her advice while stretching my phone bill. So I asked her if we could switch the topic to love.

"That's strange, I was just going to switch to that," she said. Hmm, that's a coincidence, isn't it?

According to Ruth Ann, I would have a hot and heavy relationship in September, and then I would find a more serious one a few months later. She told me he would not be too ambitious, but I should stick it out for the long run. She told me our relationship would be wonderful and harmonious, and that we would have an equal part in the relationship.

OK, still pretty generic. So I decided to ask her about money. My question, "Will I be coming into money any time soon?" She seemed stumped on this one. She hesitated and asked me what I meant. Now next week I am going to Atlantic City, but I didn't want

Turn to PSYCHIC, page 9

Author Cook to read new novel in Northampton

By Tricia Van Winkle
Collegian Correspondent

NORTHAMPTON — Author Karin Cook is coming to Northampton on March 13 to read excerpts from her debut What Girls Learn, published by Pantheon.

Cook, a Vassar College graduate with an M.A. from the Creative Writing Program at New York University, currently resides in Brooklyn, N.Y.

What Girls Learn is about sisters Elizabeth and Tilden. Tilden is a strong and very mature for her age. Elizabeth is the typical defiant mischievous teenager.

Elizabeth and Tilden struggle to overcome challenges: Frances, their mother, has moved the girls to the outer parts of Atlanta. Just as the girls start to get comfortable, Frances meets a man and he moves them all up North. The girls not only have to adjust again to a new home and school but now there are bigger problems. Frances discovers a lump in her breast — cancer. The girls' lives are now changed forever.

The novel is a fictional book, but it is drawn from Cook's real life experiences. When she was in college, her mother died of cancer. The feelings the girls are experiencing in this novel are based on Cooks' emotions during her own mother's struggle.

"There are times when Elizabeth and I fight senselessly... It is in conflict that we come closest to the selves we once were. Our grief filling the space between us like language," Cook said.

"This is a moving portrait of two young girls growing up with a mother who has cancer. It is a great first novel. We are really looking forward to Karin's visit," said Mark Brumberg, an employee at the bookstore.

What Girls Learn will be read by Karin Cook tonight at Northampton's At The Globe Bookshop at 7:30 p.m., admission is free. There will be refreshments served.

1-800-COLLECT®

44% SAVINGS

Dial 1-800-COLLECT and save up to 44%.*

*For long-distance calls. Savings based on a 3-minute AT&T operator-dialed interstate call.

Spring Break on the Web

Killing Time on the Web

Well campers, it's that time of year again. That's right, time for spring break. Hopefully, all of you who are going to sunny locations get sun burned and have to spend the whole time in your hotel room. In the meanwhile, I will be enjoying myself in the frigid air of Vermont and when I want to get warm, I will throw a couple of logs on the 'ol fire.

Too bad for all of you poor slobs who are not going anywhere for spring break. Wait, maybe I should rephrase that. You are lucky because you will have the whole Valley to yourselves and you know what that means, right? Exactly! You will be able to get onto the UMass system anytime your little heart desires! So, instead of bringing you the story about the white supremacists who hacked the sacred NCAA homepage and were caught by a Duke student and our very own Ben DeLong, I will, instead, give those of you who are couch bound for spring break, something to do.

Not Working Over Break?

If you have a lot of time to waste I suggest some of these sights. Warning! Be sure to keep some Visine handy when viewing these pages.

Library of Congress: Why not? Hey there is plenty in this web sight for you to look at. While visiting check out the guide to the U.S. Copyright Office and the rather large database of current legislative information. Why not take in the wondrous paintings and pet Ralph the Wonder Llama. All joking aside, this sight can be a very helpful research tool.

http://www.loc.gov

American Medical Association: If you are one of those sickos who likes to watch those operations on The Learning Channel, then this is not the place for you. This is, however, a good sight for researching specific diseases or ailments by keyword as well as having access to various medical journals. (Yawn)

http://www.ama-assn.org

Biography Online: This site is modeled after the program on A&E. It explores the diversity of history's famous and infamous. You can look up your favorite humanitarian or political figure, enter into discussion with others and test your knowledge of history.

http://www.biography.com

These next sites are actually pretty cool. You can find some really neat tidbits of information to wow your friends. Be the intellectual midget you always wanted to be. Have some culture for god's sake!

Museum of Modern Art: Located in N.Y. City, this site magically makes you forget you are sitting in front of your computer for a while. It is almost like being there. You can look at one painting, sculpture or drawing for as long as you like and don't have to worry about the museum closing. You can see what is going to be up-and-coming at the museum as well as even visiting the museum gift shop. The best thing though, is not having to spend a bundle on the cab and a meal.

http://www.moma.org

NASA: Now this site rocks. I think this is one of the best places to get images. Despite all of the great images here, there is a lot of news about space exploration, including latest space shuttle missions, aeronautics and astronomy. You can also learn about the history of space exploration, as there is a great deal of documentation here. Oh did I mention you can download some really cool images too. Some come from the Hubble telescope. Nifty!

http://www.nasa.com

Here are some sights that are for those of you on the cutting edge of technology.

C:Net: This is a page that is really put together well and is pleasing to the eye. There is a great deal of information on computing and life in the digital age. Plus there is news and information regarding technology as well as reviews of new products. RealAudio clips and search through an estimated 190,000 shareware titles.

http://www.cnet.com

HotWired: This is the online version of the tech magazine Wired. Along with some added extras, this copy delivers everything that the print version does and is worth checking out.

http://www.hotwired.com

Need help?

SupportHelp.Com: Any sort of problem that you may be having or even imagine having can be solved here. You will find links to many company pages so that you may e-mail your problem and voila, a guru will hook you up. Or you can browse through the list of technical support sites, phone numbers and alphabetically arranged Usenet groups that may have the answer to your problem.

http://www.supporthelp.com

Finally we get to the fun part. Here are some sites that will help you achieve a sort of Zen existence, and if they don't, sorry. Maybe they will at least provide you with a little chuckle.

Entertainment Drive: This rival to the online versions of E! and Mr. Showbiz, is a multi-leveled page which is rich in entertainment. I will let you be the judge of the three.

http://www.edrive.com

E!Online: By far, this is one of the best entertainment sites. I like it better than Edrive. You be the judge.

http://www.eonline.com

Mr. Showbiz: This site, in my opinion, is the best site out of the three. It is the wittiest, smartest and most informative out of the three. But again, I will let you be the judge.

http://www.mrshowbiz.com

Patrick Shanley is a Collegian Correspondent.

■ ghost

continued from page 5

"unearthly, demonic roar." They headed for their car, and turned back to see that the silhouetted figure had gotten up and was looking through the window, but had not pulled up the shade.

A couple of years went by and one of those guys returned with a new group of ghost-hunters. They parked the car in front, but did not get out. They were just staring into the trees. One of the guys said, "I don't see anything." The other two were staring at something that the other one who spoke could not see. One of these two was shaking and saying, "do you see that?!" The other friend still could not see anything, and wanted to know what it was his buddies saw. They never went out of the car, they just took off. The guy who hadn't seen it still could not get it out of the other two. The other two later told him that they'd seen a spectre. A spectre is an illuminated outline of a human form.

The next morning, the guy who hadn't seen anything woke up to voices in his room, that he said were right in front of his face. He searched his room to see where they were coming from. As he was rounding the corner of his bed, he moved into a spot where it was very loud, described as a "shooshing noise," or "a bunch of voices almost spinning in the air," and then it stopped almost immediately. He searched the room looking for anything out of the ordinary. He was looking on his bureau, and his eyes just happened to see his glass candy jar, in which a piece of candy was falling from the top of the jar to the bottom. He took off the lid of the jar and examined it, but could see nothing.

He left his room in an almost panic state toward his parents room. His parents were gone to work. He was alone in the house. He heard many noises within the house, such as loud poundings, more voices and something moving throughout the house. After he "cursed" the ghost, it left him alone — for that day. He continued to be haunted similarly on singular occasions in the next couple of years.

He talked to one of Tewksbury's "ghost experts," and this person said that if my friend wasn't experiencing something at the moment, he should still nevertheless expect to continue to be haunted. The reason, this "expert" said, that my friend was haunted and not the two who saw this "spectre" that day at Catamount, is because he did not see or even believe that it existed, but was still afraid of any evidence that it might. The "expert" said that ghosts will feed off a person's fear and that will be the reason a ghost continues to haunt.

A ghost is on another plane, another dimension and it will only be visible or audible to humans if it is in an area where dimensions meet. When a place is "haunted" as people say, it it but a doorway between worlds. It is odd that people will believe in religious phenomena of intervention, but will not concede to the belief of any other supernatural beings. Why would one be more real than the other? Most people desire to keep this world as sensible as possible.

The material presented in this article was provided by an interview with Tewksbury resident Dat Nguyen.

Josh Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

■ religion?

continued from page 5

Scientology's history is as interesting as it is bizarre. It is the story of one man's struggle to build an empire out of absolutely nothing. There is no mentioning of prophets and martyrs or miracles, however big or small, just a failed writer's attempt at theological entrepreneurship. Hey, religion sells!

During the latter part of the first half of the century, L. Ron Hubbard aspired to be an influential science fiction writer. Although he continuously had his works published, he was by no means successful, especially financially. In 1950 he invented the Church of Scientology of California. The scriptures of his hopeful new religion was based on his self-help book entitled Dianetics. Scientology's popularity rose tremendously throughout the following decades and came to include a slew of celebrity members such as John Travolta, Juliette Lewis, Tom Cruise and Nicole Kidman. The church claims a membership of eight million.

According to the preachings of Hubbard, Dianetics and Scientology reads much like a campy sci-fi novel. Supposedly, human nature spawned from a different galaxy which is ruled under the harsh dictatorship of Xenu, the overlord of the 26th Planet Confederation. Xenu trapped the good humans in ice and sentenced them to Earth. Here we await the coming of Xenu, and, yes, we must prepare for our defense against his wrath.

The Scientology world is regarded as utopic, excluding evil nature, criminality and insanity. They get in touch with their emotions with the help of devices called E-Meters, yet money is what really seems to make them tick. Scientology has had a 25 year battle against the I.R.S. and Hubbard's own wife was sentenced to a jail term for infiltrating I.R.S. headquarters. Shady business deals are not unique in the realm of religious practice, but where do we draw the line? Incidentally, Scientology is currently outlawed in several European countries including Germany.

It is difficult to decide the relevance of Scientology or any religion for that matter. Hearing that Tom Cruise believes In Galactic Overlord Xenu is hard to bear, yet how many of us believe in virgins having children or Moses opening seas. I feel the reason Scientology is dangerous is because it is too limiting. With Judeo-Christian beliefs we can accept what we wish to and leave the rest as fairy tales if we so do desire. Scientology offers no such selection, a bit like the Mafia perhaps, they accept a family where financial income is what sets your standings. But after all, isn't that ironically the wonderful thing about America, people can believe in whatever they want to, because everyone feels the need to believe in something.

Adam Levine is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY JORGEN TELLER

Nicole Kidman is one of several famous stars of the silver screen who is also a member of the Church of Scientology.

COURTESY ANDREW COOPER

The most famous Scientologist?
An award-winning actor, and husband to Nicole Kidman, Tom Cruise may be Scientology's most famous adherent.

■ psychic

continued from page 8

that fact to be known just yet. So I asked again, and she still didn't have an answer. Instead she made up some stuff about how I will be successful in life and that I would profit from all of the money I would make in my career. I guess she doesn't exactly know what journalists make these days.

When she started to get off topic once again, I brought her back by telling her of my vacation plans. Her comments, that I will win enough money to make my trip worthwhile, but not to bring any more money than I could afford to spend. Thanks again, mom — Instead I just wasted four minutes and $12 to get that gem of advice.

Then it was on to past lives. Instead of telling me where I lived or what I did in a past life, something I've always wondered about, she told me that family was important to me and that there was sorrow surrounding my past life because I wasn't able to help serve them as much as I would have like to.

After this part of the discussion, as much as I liked talking to Ruth Ann, I no longer believed that she was really reading my cards, or predicting anything for the future. She was merely picking up key words in our conversation, listening to the tone of my voice and the questions I asked, and steering the conversation in that direction.

I guess psychics are the same as phone sex operators. They have nice voices and can pick up on subtle signals from their callers. Now I am not saying that all psychics are quacks, I'm sure there are some that honestly have a special ability. But I'm sure they are putting their talent to good use instead of working on the other end of the phone line.

If psychics are used strictly for entertainment purposes, I think they can be a lot of fun. It's too bad that they are so damn expensive. They range between $1.99 and $5.99 a minute, which is way too high for the average person.

But in my opinion, as much as I want to believe that Ruth Ann, or anyone else for that matter, could predict my future, I realize she is just a good talker that tells people what they want to hear. I wanted to hear that I would live comfortably, have a great relationship and be able to find a job without too much difficulty, and she succeeded in telling me that much.

So to all you prospective psychic callers out there, keep a few things in mind. Shop around and ask your friends who they recommend you call, find out the prices before you start a reading and then take the psychic's advice with a grain of salt. They may market themselves as a psychic, but chances are a really good friend who knows you well can probably tell you the exact same stuff.

Lisa M. Oliveri is a Collegian columnist.

Career Services are coming to Campus!

You are cordially invited to a presentation "Gala Reception" on the relocation of Career Services next year.

Monday, March 24, 4 P.M. at the (soon to be old) Career Center
37 Mather Drive (plenty of parking nearby)

Hear Vice Chancellor Robinson and Provost Pat Cross[illegible] on the new career services.

View the newest career resources for students and [illegible]

Meet the career services staff

Be part of the latest advancement in studen[illegible]
For more information Contact Joan[illegible]

Guitarist Whitfield shows love

COURTESY PETER BRADDOCK

Mark Whitfield gets real sweet and romantic on his new album for Verve, Forever Love.

From listening to guitarist Mark Whitfield's latest album, one can surmise one thing: this man has got to be in love.

Forever Love (Verve) is the new album, and Whitfield, in the liner notes, openly confesses that he had in mind the great jazz balladeers when he put this together. The song credits inside the sleeve are augmented by his inspirations to play the songs on his third album. For example, on "You Don't Know What Love Is," the first track, he was inspired by Dinah Washington's version of the standard. The thick guitar and lush orchestration of "You Don't Know..." sets the basic sound of this album.

Hailing from Long Island, Whitfield began his musical life as a bassist in an orchestra for about eight years. Despite getting a guitar as birthday present when he was seven, he stuck to bass and his skills on that instrument got him a scholarship to go to Boston's prestigious Berklee School Of Music at the age of 15. His family moved to Seattle around this time, and Whitfield also changed his instrument to the more melodic instrument of guitar, and he never lost skills by changing instruments. He accepted the invitation to Berklee (who knew of his change of instrument and his progress since changing) and around Boston, he jammed with famous jazz brothers Branford and Wynton Marsalis. As he was so close to New York's fertile jazz scene, he was often in the Big Apple alongside such talent as trumpeter Terence Blanchard and his mentor guitarist George Benson.

In the '80s, Whitfield put out three albums for Warner Brothers, and has since guested on albums by drummer Carl Allen, trumpeter Nicholas Payton and played live with vocalists Betty Carter and Carmen McRae.

Whitfield's 1994 signing with Verve yielded the albums True Blue and 7th Avenue Stroll on which he teamed up with other "young lions" of jazz such as Stephen Scott and Christian McBride. With Forever Love, he chose to cast his versions of songs covered by famous singers, but not standards that had "been done to death by other guitarists," as Whitfield said in a press release.

As if Whitfield's deep, sugary guitar wasn't romantic enough, he employed Dale Oehler (who has worked with Freddie Hubbard and Dianne Schuur over a long career) to arrange and conduct a string orchestra. He also called in a regular jazz group consisting of pianist Jim Pryor, drummer Donald Edwards and bassist Roland Guerin. The jazz-guitar- with-strings approach had often been taken on by Wes Montgomery and Benson, and so Whitfield decided to join those ranks in putting his rapid but stately soloing to romantic use.

With the orchestra, Whitfield treats the Nat King Cole– influenced "Nature Boy" beautifully, taking it tender at first with the strings and then bringing the tune to his quartet and approaching a commendable climax with it. His quartet also reaches elevated climax on the only original on the album, "Forever," augmented by spare orchestration. He took his acoustic guitar to work also, providing solo castings of the classic "My One And Only Love," the sweet "Some Other Spring" and Billy Eckstine's standard "I Want To Talk About You." Vocalist Diane Krall lends her firm alto to Leondard Bernstein, Betty Comden and Adolph Green's composition "Some Other Time," and Ralph Burns and Johnny Mercer's "Early Autumn." This is definitely an album for lovers, but unfortunately it's a little late for Valentine's Day.

On the flip side of jazz, we have trumpeter Blue Mitchell's 1965 album, Down With It, part of Blue Note's extensive "Rare Groove Series."

Unlike previous "Rare Grooves" reviewed in this space, this album is not much electric nor funky, but instead shows the undeniable soul of Mitchell and his long–time partner, saxophonist Junior Cook, putting out some of the most soulful jazz available. Chick Corea puts in piano duties on Down With It, and is downright bluesy, especially on a rendering of an R&B hit from the '50s "Hi–Heel Sneakers," and "One Shirt." Cook shows his heartfelt skills on "One Shirt" also, as well as the Latin–flavored "Samba De Stacy." Mitchell plays real chilled and laid–back, letting his cohorts show their skills, but he does get to really cast some beauty on the ballad "Alone, Alone and Alone." A fine ensemble session, and a good choice for re–issue.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

Plan a trip to an Amherst haven; Hitchcock has flowers and more

Alfresco News with Liz Anderson

Be an environmental scientist and study the Pioneer Valley's rich ecosystems as they become alive with the growing penetration of the Spring's bright beams of sunlight. Learn about the plant and wildlife that surround you on rugged rambles through the Valley's enchanting Conservation Areas and find out the purpose of the peeps and creeks that ring through your ears at the Hitchcock Nature Center.

Nestled deep in the woods, the Hitchcock Nature Center is located in Larch Hill Conservation Area off South Pleasant Street behind Amherst College. Created to foster a greater awareness and understanding of the environment, the Hitchcock Nature Center's mission is to develop environmentally literate individuals.

This center for naturalists has a bountiful collection of current science and environmental educational materials. It is an excellent resource center full of an extensive natural history collection of posters, puppets, puzzles, games, videos and cassettes.

Although the ground is covered with snow, as Spring slowly approaches, the Hitchcock Library of Environmental Education is currently featuring the cassettes "The Calls of Frogs and Toads" and "A Guide to Night sounds." One can enjoy the peeps, quacks, and buzzes that make up a spring night in New England by listening to these two eco– cassettes.

Currently the Hitchcock Center is also uncovering the secrets of how to find premature wildflowers in the snow. Highlighting the book Enjoying Wildflowers by Donald and Lillian Stokes, the center is offering visitors expert advice on how to get a jump on spring with a sharp eye for beautiful vegetation and how to prepare a "green thumb" for summer gardening.

Enjoying Wildflowers is just one book of a series of natural history guides which introduce the life, lore, and adaptations of plants and animals in the Spring. Other gardening manuals in the series are The Butterfly Garden by Mathew Tekulsky, Flowers in the Kitchen: A Bouquet of Tasty Flowers by Susan Belsinger, and Xeriscape by Connie Ellefson.

As I stated earlier, books are not the only environmental references in the center that supplement naturalists' hunger for eco–knowledge, the library is also stacked with a collection of environmental video and audio tapes. However, always seeking to improve, the Hitchcock Nature Center encourages any donations of educational material about the environment on VHS to the resource center. The Hitchcock Nature Center also offers the public free demonstrations on bee–hives and an array of wildlife classes.

Explore the landscape of the Connecticut River Valley and capture it with pen and paper on a journal writing field trip. On March 23, April 6 and 20 and May 4 and 18 from 1:30 p.m. until 4:30 p.m. Karl Myer is hosting "Journeys and Journals: Writing in the Connecticut River Landscape" at the Hitchcock Nature Center.

On April 1 the Hitchcock Nature Center is sponsoring a day long "Search for the Quabbie." As the ice slowly melts from the Pioneer Valley's mini–lakes and reservoirs now is a perfect opportunity for people to observe the waterflow that has spent the winter hibernating under the ice.

Lead by a Hitchcock staff member participants will explore the Quabin Reservoir and look for the Quabbie. Otherwise known as a plesiosaur, a Quabbie is a leftover creature from the Cretaceous period. Participants are asked to bring warm clothing, boots, food, flashlights and a paper bag in case a snipe decides to make an appearance.

On April 10 from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m., the Hitchcock Nature Center will be sponsoring a workshop called "Night Sounds of the Lawrence Swamp Or Do You Know Where Your Peepers Are?" Harvey Allen will conduct a discussion about what causes all of the terrifying to tranquilizing sounds that surface from the depths of the swamp. Participants are required to bring a flash light and wear a pair of water resistant boots.

If you are a nature enthusiast or just plain tired of hiking without knowing what makes earth's ecosystems "tick" then trek on over to the Hitchcock Nature Center.

Liz Anderson is a Collegian columnist.

Pearl Street Nightclub
Live Music & Dance Club
INTERNATIONAL NIGHT
Saturday, March 15 @ 9:00 PM
EVERY TUESDAY
GAY NIGHTS
18+ (413) 586-2400
EVERY THURSDAY
FREE BEFORE 10:00pm
THE BIRD'S BIGGEST
HIGH ENERGY
Dance Party
A FULL HOUSE EVERY WEEK
EVERY FRIDAY 9–2am
FREE BEFORE 10:00PM
RETRO NIGHT
MUSIC FROM THE 70's, 80's & 90's
EVERY SATURDAY
TEEN NIGHT
AGES 15-19 • 7:30 - 11:30 PM
LIVE MUSIC
Thur. Mar. 13 @ 8:30 pm
Greatest Dead Tribute
SHAKEDOWN
Fri. Mar. 14 @ 9:00 pm
AMY FAIRCHILD BAND
The Ware River Club
Paul Hansbury of Tree Fort
Thur. Mar. 20 @ 7:30 pm
8 Side Bands Benefit for Local Artists
THE INVADERS
HALLRAKER/ARCHITECTURAL METAPHOR
ALISON'S ROOM/ONE NIGHT
Fri. Mar. 21 @ 9:00 pm
TEXAS FLOOD
Sat. Mar. 22 9:00 pm
BARRY KINGSTON & THE SCREAMING SOULS
FIGHTER/CLOWN
Sun. Mar. 23 @ 7:00 pm
LORDZ OF BROOKLYN
GRATITUDE/DRAIN/GREEDY EDNA
Wed. Mar. 26 7:30 pm
THE DESCENDENTS
THE SURGE MACHINE'S SHADES APART
COMING
Fri. March 28 THE WESTERN Outdoor 18+
Fri. March 28 STEVE WESTFIELD & THE SLOW BAND 18+
Sat. March 29 STUNOD 18+
Sun. March 30 All Ages
Tue. April 1 BLOODWOOD GANG All Ages
Fri. April 4 THE BLACK REBELS 21+
Sun. April 6 THE INDEPENDENTS All Ages
4/15-4/20 THE REALLY LOUD MUSIC FESTIVAL All Ages
Wed. April 23 STRIPE All Ages
Thurs. April 24 ACOUSTIC JUNCTION 18+
Advance tickets available at the Northampton Box office 586 8686 800-760 7404 Strawberries Record Store Inc. The Record • Amherst: Absolute Music • Greenfield • In Unlimited at U. Mass Plymouth: Wayfield Music Outlet in Enfield, CT & Easton, PA • Northampton: 584-9336
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
www.pearlstreet.com
413-584-7771

Classe cafe
eat heavy, eat light, eat sweet, eat smart
eat natural, eat veggie, eat meat, eat soup
EAT GOOD IT'S HERE
morningOnoonOnight
M–Sat. 7am–9pm
Sunday Brunch 7–3
wine & beer
Welcome OCMP
166 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2291

Alfredo's
PHOTOGRAPHIC ART LOCAL
AMHERST PHOTOS MAKE
GREAT GRADUATION GIFTS
SPORTS PHOTOS & POSTERS
39 S. PLEASANT ST. 413 - 253 - 1707
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

Best Locations!
Showings Start April 7th
Ellsworth Manor
Hobart Lane
Lincoln Real Estate
25 N. Pleasant Street
253 - 7879

DISCOVER STARS ON ICE presented by SMUCKER'S
Kristi YAMAGUCHI Scott HAMILTON
Jayne TORVILL & Christopher DEAN
Paul WYLIE Kurt BROWNING
Ekaterina GORDEEVA
BECHKE & PETROV • ROSALYNN SUMNERS
JILL TRENARY • KOVARIKOVA & NOVOTNY
Directed and Co-Produced By SANDRA BEZIC
FRIDAY, MARCH 21 • 7:30 P.M.
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
Tickets: $35.50 and $25.50 at the Mullins Center box office and ticketmaster locations
Ticketmaster Charge By-Phone: 413/733-2500 Group Information (20 or more): 413/545-3001
General Information: 413/545-0645 Purchase tickets with your Discover Card and $2.00 per ticket will be donated to the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Western Massachusetts

The Beaver College London Semester
AT CITY UNIVERSITY
Spend fifteen weeks getting to know London studying with British students at City University. Classes are available in dozens of subjects. You can also opt for one or more of our special classes that explore the theaters, the museums and the heritage that prompted Samuel Johnson to observe, "When a man is tired of London, he is tired of life."
There's so much going on, you might want to stay for the whole year! Speak to your study abroad advisor about Beaver College programs.
Call for a free catalog today.
1.888.BEAVER-9
cea@beaver.edu
http://www.beaver.edu/cea/

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385
• Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
• Over 90 years staff experience
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
• Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
• We provide substitute transportation
• Users of Sikkens paint products
Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities
Shop Registration # RS1212

■ lacrosse

continued from page 14

gram around. Being the most skilled players on the field four years ago for the Minutewomen, the trio straight out of Ridley had to make the instantaneous jump to Division I, and instead of a step forward, they took a step back in their lacrosse development.

"In their first year we really needed them on the field, and they didn't have a lot of time to adjust," McClellan said. "They were our strongest players on the field, and as a result, their responsibility was to bring the other players up to their level.

"So, they weren't necessarily as challenged by their teammates, which is one element to develop the complete player. As the years have progressed, we've brought in stronger players, and this year they've been challenged more than any other year because of the youngsters making them step up a little bit."

The first year for Bryan, Hocker and Warrington was a transitional one in the purest form of the word. Their sophomore season, though, was looked upon as the breakthrough year, even with their final 3–10 record. The squad was young, skilled and talented and the addition of a host of high school All–Americans, like Joanna Dignazio and Vicky Nedomansky, and a talented goalkeeper in Kate Brew brought high expectations for the program.

Eventually, that assessment was too early, and last season the team had to regroup again as they lost all three of those top prospects to a variety of academic troubles, and, simply put, basic human reasons (i.e. maturity). Last season brought a similar record of 4–10, and the rebuilding of the program started again.

At the center of the second rebuilding? The three Ridley High defenders.

"The first two years it felt like we were finally starting to build up, and we lost a lot of very good players [last year]," Bryan said. "It seemed like we had to start all over again, and it was hard to start playing with new people again."

"It was frustrating," Warrington added.

Bryan is looking forward to working with this year's freshmen.

"There was only four or five of us that played together from freshmen year, and yeah, it was frustrating," Bryan said. "Finally, this year, we're going to have players in here for the next four years. Francesca has a group of freshmen that are really dependable, and will work hard for her and want to win."

"We actually have a bench this year, too, and that helps us a lot," Warrington said.

"Yeah, we have a bench, and there's no...," Bryan said.

"Everyone's equal," Warrington interrupted.

"Yeah, everybody wants to play for the team," Bryan said. "And play for each other."

"And it's a lot better," Hocker said. "Freshmen year it was really hard coming from our high school, where everyone was at the same level, and coming here to find out you're playing against someone who's only played for two years.

"I felt like my level of play dropped after high school, and now it has gone back up where it should be. It's a lot better because the other players we play with have more skill," she added.

"Yeah... there is definitely more skill," Bryan and Warrington said.

"And you wouldn't think that the freshmen haven't played at this level before," Hocker concluded.

Nothing to lose

If you did not notice, Bryan, Hocker and Warrington are so much in synch they not only finish each other's thoughts, but, especially with this season, can finish what began eight years ago. The three have been friends off the field, and partners in defensive crime on the field. But, just as the team was shaken up with all the changes last season, so was their working relationship.

With gaps to fill in the midfield, Warrington was moved to that position. Her confidence paid the price, but with a quality group of freshmen this year, she will go back home — defense. With a young, unproven goalkeeper in Megan Haggerty starting this year, the three defenders will be looked upon even more for leadership, and McClellan has no doubts that will happen.

"This year, we're able to give [Michele] some slack and put her back on defense, so now we're able to use her strengths where they should be," McClellan said. "So, she's been able to settle down and focus. It may end up being them back on the line of defense — Hocker, Bryan and Warrington — and you can't beat that."

The Ridley reunion on the defensive line can mean only good things for the Minutewomen this year. Combined with fellow senior Stephanie Walsh, the young team has plenty of experienced leadership to fall back on, especially since they are the first four–year, senior class to graduate from the program in almost a decade.

No more inferiority complexes against teams that were more experienced and no more thoughts about how not to lose, because winning is all that is on their minds. Like finishing each other's thoughts, they want to finish off this final season together on a positive note. After three years of being in the shade of victory, and eight years together on the lacrosse field, it has all come down to this for Bryan, Hocker and Warrington, and at this point, they really do have nothing to lose.

"I don't think there is anyone on this team that is not totally in shape [for this season]," Warrington said.

"Yeah, [the coach is] not easing up at all this year, which is good," Hocker said. "Because, usually once every year, she'll be like..."

"'Ooh, we won't scrimmage today...," Warrington said.

"And we'll just have today off, and this and that," Hocker said. "But she's not having any of that this year."

"This year, we want to be a team that everyone thinks is a great women's lacrosse team," Bryan said. "We want..."

"We want to go to the Dance," Warrington said.

"We want to finally prove ourselves, and we have to," Bryan said, "This is our final chance to show everyone we can go out and win. And we are a better team. We've been playing better now that we know we're up to the level of these other teams. We do have nothing to lose."

■ hoop

continued from page 14

which the Devils will win.

Kansas shouldn't have too much of a problem with Rhode Island, meaning it's back to beautiful Kingston for the Rams. Maryland will benefit from having to play a stronger in–conference opponents and beat Arizona. It should be a good game to see, but Kansas will take the Terps.

That sets up a Duke–Kansas Elite Eight game, a game I have been dying to see. Unfortunately for Cameron Crazies everywhere, Kansas is so strong underneath the basket (Can you say Raef LaFrentz?) and also able to counteract Duke's perimeter game. Book the Jayhawks into an Indianapolis hotel.

East Region

It's safe to say Fairfield won't be advancing against North Carolina and Dean Smith will tie Adolph Rupp for career wins.

While the other eight–nine games are tough to pick, this one is downright hard. And it should be a great game to boot. Indiana–Colorado. Two key Mr. Clutch players on the floor in Buff Chauncey Billups and Hoosier Andrae Patterson. Unfortunately, it's been a down year for the Big 10 (except Minnesota) and I've been backing Colorado all year. Take the Buffs.

Princeton, always good for a early–round upset, will face a really vulnerable California squad. This one has gone empty in my brackets for awhile, but it's time to decide. Cal will be without Ed Gray, the Pac 10's leading scorer (24.8 ppg), who is out with a broken foot. This hurts the Bears, but not enough. Stay with the Bears.

Long Island faces Villanova, a squad that is very beatable. Look for the Blackbirds, who are led by the nation's leading scorer (Charles Jones, 30.8 ppg) and four starters averaging in double figures to pull off the upset of the first–round.

Massachusetts faces Louisville in what the Las Vegas oddsmakers have given the smallest line in an six–11 game. The Cards are favored by only one point, but UMass is refocused and re–energized after receiving an at–large berth. Be a homer and pick UMass.

Kenny Thomas meet Odell Hodge. Odell, Kenny. Thomas provides New Mexico with an all–around game that is valuable in the Lobo set–up. Hodge is a bruiser who can post up, score and rebound. Plus Old Dominion is the No. 14 seed, the same as when they upset Nova in 1995. All the same, go with New Mexico.

A man told me this week that Texas is always good for a first–round win over a Big–10 school. Hmmm... the Longhorns are playing Wisconsin. I guess that means take Texas. I will.

South Carolina is Cinderella herself, a force in a three– guard set. The last time the other USC was in the tourney it lost to North Carolina State in the first round. This year, the No. 2 seed gets to play Coppin State, but look for the Gamecocks to have better luck this time.

Texas probably won't be good for a second–round win over an SEC tough guy, go with South Carolina. UMass–New Mexico? I'll stay a homer and pick UMass. But in the battle of the three–guard line–ups, this time I gotta go with USC. Take Carolina over Cal, and the Northern over the Southern.

In Indy, it'll be super seniors in the final. Duncan and Wake Forest and Jacque Vaughn and Kansas.

Click your heels together three times and say, "Kansas is the national champion."

The Collegian's 1997 NCAA Tournament Final Four picks

Casey Kane
co–Sports editor
Wake Forest, UCLA, Kansas, North Carolina

Chris Stamm
co–Sports editor
Utah, North Carolina, Kansas, Cincinnati

Luke Meredith
Sports associate
Valparaiso, Fairfield, Illinois State, South Alabama

Jacob W. Michaels
Editor–in–Chief
Kansas, UMass, Kentucky, Miami (Ohio)

Lisa Oliveri
sportswriter
Duke, North Carolina, UCLA, Kentucky

Bob Dunn
ed/op columnist
Iowa, Temple, UMass, Georgia

Laura Stock
News editor
Kentucky, Temple, Kansas, South Carolina

Lisa Chiu
Multicultural Affairs editor
Montana, Temple, Long Island, College of Charleston

Jeremy Brothers
Arts and Living editor
I really liked "Fargo." I know the scene with the woodchipper might turn off some of the Academy members, but it still has a dear place in my heart.

Mike Nam
Collegian rat
Wake Forest, Cincinnati, North Carolina, Duke

Dave Voldan
Advertising Production Manager
Kentucky, Kansas, Temple, UMass

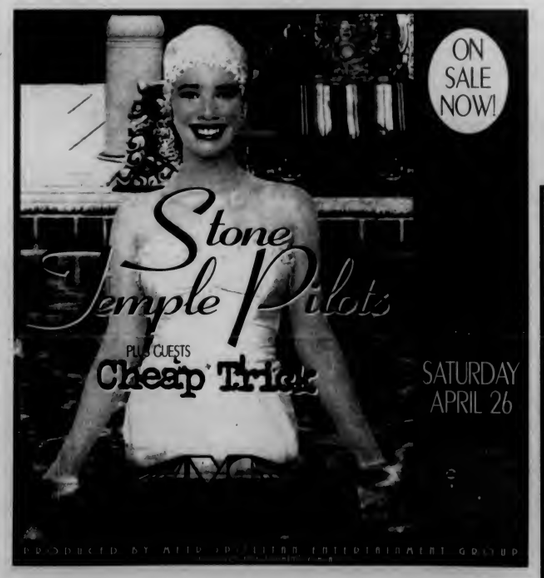
Mark McGrath
Collegian Ooks
Rhode Island, Princeton, St. Joseph's, Boston University

Joshua Boyd
Arts associate
The teams with the best college names will be there — Old Dominion, Marquette, Valparaiso, Miami (Ohio)

Leon Latino
Collegian Graphics
Three words: UMass!!!

Here are the answers to the Collegian's NCAA Tournament quiz (see the NCAA tourney preview for the quiz).

Answers:
1. Three. Arizona, Villanova, Kentucky.
2. There are four. Clemson, Jackson State, Pacific and Princeton.
3. Three. Marquette, Coppin State and Boston College.
4. Three. Boston University (Terriers), Butler (Bulldogs), Georgia (Bulldogs).
5. Tennessee–Chattanooga, the Moccasins.
6. The Stanford Cardinal and the Tulsa Golden Hurricane.
7. California Golden Bears, Illinois State Redbirds, Long Island Blackbirds, Marquette Golden Eagles (the Stanford Cardinal can be used here because it's also a color).
8. Wake Forest Demon Deacons and Duke Blue Devils.
9. Fairfield and Southern California.
10. Mississippi, Massachusetts and Navy.
11. Valparaiso, Vanderbilt and Charleston Southern.
12. Providence and St. Mary's (California).
13. The Purdue Boilermakers.
14. Illinois Fightin' Illini, Utah Runnin' Utes.
15. College of Charleston (Cougars), South Alabama (Jaguars).
16. Old Dominion (Monarchs) and Maryland (Terrapins).
17. Colorado, Montana, Texas, Rhode Island, New Mexico and UCLA.
18. Wisconsin and Minnesota.
19. Temple, St. Joseph's, Kansas, Iowa.
20. Southwest Texas State (Bobcats) and Cincinnati (Bearcats).
21. The Iowa State Cyclones and the Tulsa Golden Hurricane.
22. The North Carolina–Charlotte 49ers and the Oklahoma Sooners.
23. The Cavaliers are from Virginia and the Musketeers are from Xavier (Ohio).
24. South Carolina.
25. Redskins.
26. The Racers.



Non–Mascot Answers:
1. Butler is back in the tournaments for the first time since 1962.
2. There will be no one on the court bigger than sophomore center Brad Millard (7–foot–3) when St. Mary's (California) starts its games.
3. There are six starters who stand at 5–foot–10. Long Island's Dave Masciale, Jackson State's Michael Hall, Miami (Ohio)'s Rob Mestas, UNC–Charlotte's Roderick Howard, St. Mary's Kareem Duff and Southwest Texas State's Geoff Golden.
4. If you're looking for someone to hit the long distance shots, look to Pacific's Mark Boettner. The senior guard is hitting 46.9 percent from behind the arc coming into the tourney.
5. Duke's Trajan Langdon.
6. Cool Colorado guard Chauncey Billups.
7. Oklahoma is located in Norman, while Illinois State is in Normal.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way Roundtrip
LONDON $130 $245
PARIS $202 $379
ROME $235 $438
TOKYO $799 Roundtrip
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Europasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs–immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required
PRISM TRAVEL
347 Madison Ave NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

SUMMER CAMP COUNSELORS!!
OVER 100 POSITIONS OPEN IN BASEBALL, BASKETBALL, GOLF, GYMNASTICS, HOCKEY, LACROSSE, SAILING, SOCCER, SWIMMING, TENNIS, WATER-SKI
AMERICA'S PREMIER CAMPS
WINADU FOR BOYS
DANBEE FOR GIRLS
IN WESTERN MASS
SALARY/ROOM&BOARD AND TRAVEL INCLUDED!!
COME VISIT WITH OUR REPRESENTATIVE THURSDAY, APRIL 3RD 802 CAMPUS CENTER 10 AM - 4 PM (WALK-INS WELCOME!)
FOR MORE INFO CALL 800-494-6238

BEADS
Great Selection
Classes
Hemp Twine
Also Featuring Gift Items
•Silver •Jewelry
•Pottery •Candles
•Unique Imports
•Picture Frames
•Stationery •Cards
August the First
197 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst Ma. 01002
413-256-0276

IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL
20 Center St. Northampton
ALL AGES ALL THE TIME
thursday, march 13 • 10 pm lettuce and BOOGIEMAN funkengruven tunes • $5 adv.
friday, march 14 • 10 pm HUMBERT plus the figments alternarock $5 adv.
saturday, march 15 • 10 pm DUNCAN SHEIK & JILL SOBULE today here for coming breaks! • $10 adv.
sunday, march 16 • 10 pm MOXY früvous quirky Canadian folk rockers • $8 adv.
monday, march 17 • 7 pm BIG BAD bollocks St. Patty's Day Brawl • $10 adv.
wednesday, march 19 • 7 pm ROBYN hitchcock eccentric songs from former saltboy • $15.50 adv.
friday, march 21 • 9:30 pm $17.50 CARIBBEAN JAZZ PROJECT Paquito D'Rivera, Dave Samuels, Andy Narell monday, march 24 • dance floor! ROYAL CROWN REVUE swingin' jive orchestra • $6 adv. • 7 pm monday, march 31 • 9 pm ASHLEY MACISAAC FIDDLE REBEL from CAPE BRETON • $8 adv.
MUSIC SEVEN NIGHTS A WEEK
Coming Feb on: Patti Rothberg, Nils Lofgren, Honeyboy Edwards, Corey Harris, Odetta, The Neelds, Greyboy All-stars, Jerry Granelli & UFB, Dick Dale
TICKETS For the Record Northampton Box Office or call 586-8686
24 HOUR CONCERT INFO 413 584 0610

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan (888) 211-OCMP
Present
Dining Out
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants
For info & rates call 545-3500
COMING March 26

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Excellent 4 bedroom/2 bath apt. on bus line. Beginning 6/1/97 Call 253-6301 4 info

AUTO FOR SALE

1985 318i BMW 100K miles, perfect exterior and interior $2000 or B/O 546-3830

1988 Ford Escort 5-speed, A/C, 119K, runs well! $1900 or B/O 533-8413

EMPLOYMENT

Technical Support/ISP Looking for a great part-time job? We are a local, progressive, internet service provider that is looking for Quality, Energetic, and Reliable persons to join our team. Requirements: experience in Windows '95, Windows 3.1, Mac, Dialup Networking and TC PIP. Call our job hotline today! (413)587-4333 or e-mail jobs@crocker.com

LEADERS NEEDED! Summer teenage Bicycling trips. US, Canada and Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hostelling Program, Ashfield Rd., Conway, MA 01341 (800)343-5122

Loving, responsible, non-smoker to care for 2 year old infant sons in South Hadley home. References required! 536-1899

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Jobs- Martha's Vineyard Island Food Products is now accepting applications for warehouse/delivery positions. Housing available for exceptional candidates. Interviews will be held in Amherst on Wednesday, March 19. For more info or application, Contact: Brian C. Smith, IFP, Box 4068, Vineyard Hevan, MA 02568 (508)693-2030

Cruise Linen Hiring Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel (Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. (919)918-7767 ext C180. (Member, Better Business Bureau) CARE Program)

Alaska Employment Earn up to $3000-$6000+/month in fisheries, parks, resorts, airlines, food processing. Get all the options. Call (919)918-7767 ext A180

Drivers Wanted Apply at Pinnocho's between 2:00pm and 5:00pm. No phone calls.

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT- Work in America's National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Our members uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (206)971-3674 ext. N5901B (We are a research and publishing company)

Belchertown Recreation Dept. Seeking swim coaches (May-July) Experience preferred. M-F, EOE, ADA. Call Beth, Dev (413)323-0419 Night (413)967-4651

EMPLOYMENT

National Parks Hiring Plus Forest, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Rafting Companies. Up to $12/hour. Nationwide Openings. Call (919)918-7767 ext. R180

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. CS0017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Cape Cod group & summer rentals Waterfront houses. Falmouth area (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

GIBSON Les Paul studio, Ebony mint condition $700 549-9266

Leather Jacket Black Classic Biker Style Jacket. Mens Size XL "Wilson's" Leather. Thinsulate. Call 546-6733

FOUND

Necklace- Silver with green beads- it's heavy. Call Claire to identify. 772-5064

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, CECE!!! You've been an awesome roommate and a GREAT friend!

-Rachel :)

Now, where are MY flowers? :)

Happy 21st Birthday to JESSICA PHILIPS Love, The Sisters of Tri-Sigma!

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT
30 hours, $395
American Academy
1-800-806-Prep
(please leave your name and number)

LOST

REWARD
Lost Gold Rings
Call Lisa 546-2611

MUSICIANS

DRUMMER WANTED
Punk/Ska Band 25 Lires needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming. Call Dave and Ryan 665-9112

MISCELLANEOUS

Pledged and didn't like it? Start your own Fraternity! Veta Beta Tau is looking for men to start a new chapter. If you are interested in academic success, a chance to network and an opportunity to make friends in a non-pledging brotherhood, e-mail ZBT@IBT.National.org. Or call Brett Hrbeck at (317)334-1898

MISCELLANEOUS

SEEKING FINANCIAL AID? Get the system to help find FREE MONEY FOR COLLEGE! Detailed profiles on 200,000+ individual rewards from private and public sectors. Call Student Financial Services: (800)472-9575 ext. F5001? (We are a research and publishing company)

PERSONALS

To my little Erica:
By now you might think you know who I am. Well try again. It was all just a scam. I talk about camp day and night. We have so much in common, even our height.
Phi Love,
Your big sister
LML

Blaire:
Clue #2 was a lie. A little something about me is that I live near by. I pledged last year at this same time. It's hard to give clues when you're trying to rhyme. My big sister is not very tall. She's uptown every night until last call.
-LML-
Your big sister

Rachel- I have blonde hair like you. Is this true clue?

Marianne –
You make every day brighter when I see you at work. I'm too scared to talk to you, but you might be interested in a boyfriend, wear a red shirt on Friday and I'll give it a try
A Secret Admirer

PERSONALS

To the girls at 91 Main St-
You all rock my world. Have a great spring break, don't have too much fun in Cali. KC, 'If I knew the answer to that question, I wouldn't be here right now!'
Mar

To Han –
I love you.
Lesa

Dear Lesa,
I know.
Han

Togs! Togs! Togs! Have a great spring break, from Otter and the rest of the boys of Delta House

Is that for me?
No, son, that's for me

Hey Smullin –
What do you think you're doing?!
The Wednesday Night Crew

Lost:
A shaker of salt. If found please contact Jimmy B. in Margaritaville

To the girl at Time Out -
Who are you, and where did you come from? Stop turning away from me. Maybe it's your beer goggles. Please talk to me tonight.
The boy with the baseball cap

Dear Lisa,
Mooooo!
Jacob

PERSONALS

Jacob,
We may not work on Thursday nights anymore, but we still know how to have fun!
Mananne

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for famale to share an apartment with starting Fall '97. Call Nikki 549-4484

Female to share large bedroom in Puffton. Available ASAP $197.50/month Call 549-4757 or 665-2067

Two 21 year old males looking for 2 females to live off-campus with for the upcoming school year. Call Josh or Scott F. at 549-7128

Legal Questions? The Student

SERVICES

Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Resumes: Written, Proofed, Printed Polished, Affordable Packages. 548-7042

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

ALTERNATIVE SPRING BREAK

TRAVEL

Explore Nature/Self. 5 Days Music Dance Sports Meditation Vegetarian Meals Missouri Ozarks. $155 Renaissance Universal (800)896-2387

TRAVEL

Party Weekend in Vermont April 4-6, only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Party In Vermont For Spring Break Only $139. Over 15 colleges attending. Free liairr to Ski/Snowboard. Add $100 for 5-Day Lift Ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Caribbean/Mexico $199 R/T Europe $169 O/W. Fly The World Dirt Cheap. ONE WORLD TRAVEL

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13. 2 nights lodging and round trip bus $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $650/week. (413)786-7133 Partial kitchen

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights/5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

Looking for used UMass Alumni Directory. Mark (413)746-4695

Dorm Size Refrigerator Call 546-4538

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS!
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or typo.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, MARCH 13

Lecture — Dr. Bill Essman, Psychology Dept, UMass, will lecture on "Behavioral Models of Psychomotor Stimulant Drug Action: Focus on Nucleus Accumbens" in Tobin Hall, room 521B at 12:15 p.m. Part of the UMass Neuroscience and Behavior Program Noon Seminar Series.

Lecture — Sarah Wilcox, PhD candidate in sociology at UPenn, talks about "Constructing and Deconstructing Identity in the Politics of Lesbian Health." The event is free and will begin at 12:30 p.m in the Campus Center, room 803, which is wheelchair accessible. Sponsored by the UMass Stonewall Center.

FRIDAY, MARCH 14

Lecture — James A. Simmons, from Brown University psychology department, will speak on "Dynamics of Perception by Acoustic Images in Echolocating Bats," in Morrill Science Center II, room 319 at 4 p.m. Part of the UMass Neuroscience and Behavior Program Seminars.

SATURDAY, MARCH 15

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe will hold an improv comedy show, Mission Improvable, at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center basement at 8 pm. Free.

NOTICES

Elections — Elections for Student Government President, Trustee and local area government positions have been rescheduled to March 26 and 27 due to the student takeover of Goodell last week. Polling locations to be announced.–

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545-9484.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one–acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to department of comparative lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Band wanted — Amnesty International is looking for a Jazz Band to play for its upcoming fundraiser this spring. If interested, call the Amnesty office at 549–1925 or Babz at 546–3105 as soon as possible.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore). The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 3 at http://www-ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Collegian Weather... coming soon to a paper near you

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Member O.C.M.P.
"we accept all major credit cards"

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
$1 drinks Vodka Tonic & always $1 Bud "light draft

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 13, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Women's College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. First Round				Connecticut for All Seasons			Wall for God	Keeping Up	T. Old House
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition		College Basketball: NCAA Tournament First Round Game -- Teams TBA				College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. First Rd. Game -- Teams TBA
WBZ	4	News		CBS News		College Basketball: NCAA Tournament First Round Game -- Teams TBA				College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. First Rd. Game -- Teams TBA
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	High Incident (In Stereo)		Vital Signs (In Stereo)		Peter Jennings Reporting: Pot	News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		e★★ "Impulse" (1990, Suspense) Theresa Russell, Jeff Fahey				News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHUH	8	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Sudden-Susan	Seinfeld	Naked Truth	Law & Order "D-Girl"	News	Tonight Show
WTXX	9	Fresh Prince	Martin	Real TV (R)	Cops "Buried in Prison" (R)		Baywatch Nights (R)			L.A.P.D.	R. Patrol	Real TV (R)
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends	Sudden-Susan	Seinfeld	Naked Truth	Law & Order "D-Girl"	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Martin (R)	Living Single	New York Undercover		News	Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Sudden-Susan	Seinfeld	Naked Truth	Law & Order "D-Girl"	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Members' Choice					Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	High Incident (In Stereo)		Vital Signs (In Stereo)		Peter Jennings Reporting: Pot	News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	Seinfeld	NBA Basketball: Boston Celtics at Dallas Mavericks. (Live)				Mad Abo. You	Real TV (R)
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	e★½ "Uncommon Valor" (1983, Drama) Gene Hackman, Robert Stack					e★ "Night of the Iguana" (1991) Dooley Wilson
A&E	69	Quincy		Equalizer "Riding the Elephant"		Biography: Albert Speer		Ancient Mysteries (R)		Unexplained "Exorcism"		Law & Order "Precious"
CNN	47	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	64	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	e★½ Science & Cocoa's Next Movie (1996) Cheech Marin.				Comic Relief	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	48	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings "Straight Up" (R)		Wild Discovery: Great Whites		Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Chopper Power: Whispering		Wild Discovery: Great Whites
ESPN	45	Up Close	Sportscenter	Legends of Hockey		World Cup Skiing			Cheerleading		Baseball	Sportscenter
LIFE	63	Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Uncovered Mysteries (In Stereo)		"1995 Murder in Mind" (1992, Drama) Elizabeth Montgomery			Living	Mysteries
MTV	53	Ren & Stimpy	Sports (R)	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)		Yes! (In Stereo)			Singled Out	Lovelina
NICK	51	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret-of Alex	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Munsters	M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Taxi	Odd Couple
SCIFI	61	Twilight Zone	Darkside	Time Trax "Framed" (In Stereo)		Tekwar (In Stereo)		Forever Knight "Bad Blood"		Sci-Fi Buzz	Inside Space	Time Trax "Framed" (In Stereo)
TLC	26	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Real America: 48 Hours		Rogues Gallery		Trauma: Life-Death in ER		Real America: 48 Hours (R)
TNT	49	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night "Brotherly Love" (In Stereo)				In the Heat of the Night "Give Me Your Life" (In Stereo)
USA	62	Renegade "Split Decision"		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote		e★ "The Disappearance of Christina" (1993) John Stamos			Wings	Wings
HBO	65	e★½ "Necessary Roughness" (1991) Scott Bakula. PG-13		e★½ "Nick of Time" (1995) Johnny Depp. R				"DNA" (1997) Mark Deakins. NR			"Fast Talk on Low Cholesterol"
MAX	66	(4:45) "Circle"	e★ "Only You" (1994) Andrew McCarthy. PG-13	"For the Moment" (1993, Drama) Russell Crowe. PG-13						e★½ "To the Limit" (1995) Anna Nicole Smith. R		"I'll Do Anything"
SHOW	67	e★ "Does This Mean We're Married?" (1992) Stephanie Freiss.		"Fatal Combat" (1996) Jeff Wincott. R					Tyson-Holyfld	e★½ "Men at War" (1995) Dolph Lundgren. R			"Fortunes Wor"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

University® By Frank Cho

Loodee By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
As you prepare to launch a big new idea, try to gain an awareness of exactly what every person involved is feeling. Although it may not change harsh realities, any extra sympathy you can give will aid the general goodwill.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
A cantankerous mate or friend may seem to be finding fault with everything, but it's possible that they have just been feeling neglected lately. Spend a little extra time with them, and see if that doesn't bring them around.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
Variety is the spice of life, but this week you may be in need of a break. Try relaxing with a tried and true evening routine—perhaps a bath and a backrub from a loved one. Avoid sleeping late, as it could make you even more tired.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
What seems like an absolute mountain of paperwork clears up much more quickly than you had expected. Treat yourself to a special night as a reward for your diligence—perhaps a night on the town.

LEO
July 23–August 23
If a co-worker seems particularly pernickety, offer them extra responsibilities, if you're in a position to do so. They may just want a chance to prove themselves, and they could really surprise you.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
Repairs that seem expensive may be the only way to prevent a real mechanical disaster, so don't skimp. A second opinion could save you a little money, but prolonging the inevitable could prove costly in the long run.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
A conversation with a sweetheart could lead to an exchange of confidences. Be careful you don't tell your sweetie more than she or he really wants to know. What starts out as honesty can end up being hurtful.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
If you feel overwhelmed by things you can't change, try focusing on just one or two small things. Instead of remodeling the house, rearrange the utility room. Donating household things to the needy will clear out clutter and leave you feeling good, too.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
Handle a demanding boss by burying your nose in whatever task is at hand. You may make a good impression, and at the very least you will avoid a no-win situation.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
It's important to stay on top of all your daily tasks and appointments, whether professional or personal. Check your calendar to be sure you don't miss something important this week.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
An encounter with bureaucratic paperwork and red tape could have you feeling a bit hot under the collar. Ease off by handling some personal affairs that have been neglected lately, such as writing letters or visiting relatives.

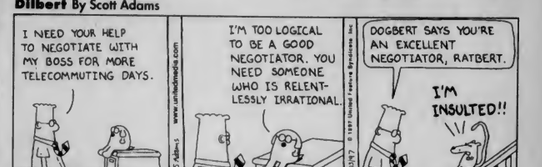
PISCES
February 19–March 20
Changes to your financial situation seem like a windfall at first, but be fully aware of all the demands made on your time. There may be more to the arrangement than meets the eye.

Close to Home By John McPherson

Midway through the interview, Wayne decides to see how well the applicant handles stress.

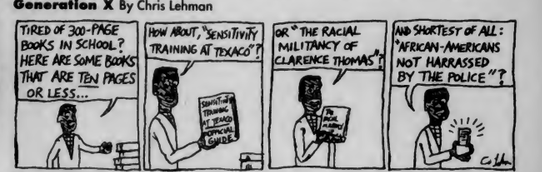
Quote of the Day

"I like March cause it's easier to spell than Febuairy..."

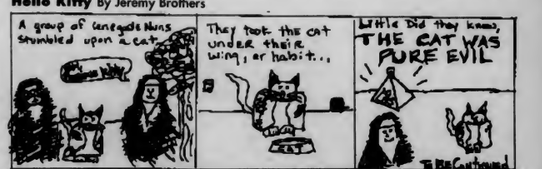


–Cathy
Collegian Graphics

For Entertainment Purposes Only

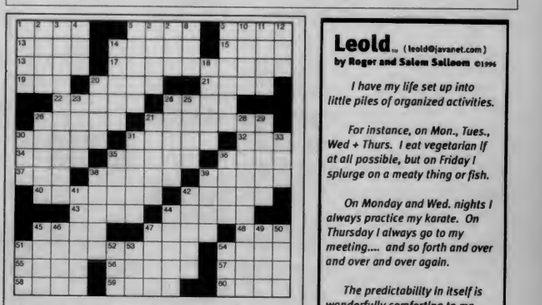


Robotman By Jim Meddick



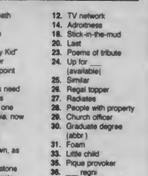
Dilbert By Scott Adams

Generation X By Chris Lehman



Hello Kitty By Jeremy Brothers

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2626 for more information.



Franklin		Worcester
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Crispy Cowburger Jalapeno Shrimp & Rice Veal Parm. Sand. Super Savory Salad	Duchess Meat Piell Chicken Cacciatore Gargantuan Garden Chili Breaded Chicken Tenders	Interrupting Cow-burger Bow Ties & Savory–Sauces Golden Burgers	Duchess Meat Piell Crazy Chicken Cacciatore Bean/Corn/Tomato Cass. Endless Pastabilities
Hampshire		Berkshire
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Mad Cowburger Grilled Sneeze Veal Parm. Sand. Scrumptious Salad	Duchess Meat Piell Savory Chicken – Cacciatore Supremo Savory Salad	Convenient Cowburger Worc. Breakfast Sand. Bow Ties & Sauce Golden Burgers	Duchess Meat Piell Chicken Cacciatore Bean/Corn/Tomato Cass. Possibly Pastabilities

ACROSS
1. Gnathonic one
5. Sell
9. Frontiersman Wyatt
13. Lhasa ___ (dog breed)
14. Four-door car
15. Strike replacement
16. Captain's assistant
17. Ransom demanders
18. Org. explored by the Mossad
20. Shrewd
21. Go higher
22. Yule songs
24. Stickum
26. Type of wave
27. Flapjack-maker's tool
30. Mammonist
31. Come off in chips
32. Model Carol
34. Scrooge's cries
35. Investigate
36. Forever ___ day (2 wds.)
37. Exist
38. Cat calls
39. Completed
40. Helps
42. Aaron Neville, e.g.
43. Egad, e.g.
44. Underneath
45. Disable
47. Very thin
48. Zero
51. "Say Hey Kid"
54. Give over
55. Highest point
56. Gay ___
57. America's need
58. Ad patres
59. Imitative one
60. Christiania, now

DOWN
1. Pack down, as tobacco
2. Felt birthstone
3. Flabbergasts
4. She fawns over a fawn
5. Bridal-shop merchandise
6. Author of Science and Health
7. ___ Shan (Chinese mountain range)
8. Watson and Crick's model
9. Spotted
10. Tops
11. Lightly cooked
12. TV network
14. Adroitness
19. Stick-in-the-mud
20. Last
23. Poems of tribute
24. Up for (available)
25. Similar
26. Regal topper
27. Redraws
28. People with property
29. Church officer
30. Graduate degree (abbr.)
31. Foam
33. Little child
35. Pique provoker
36. Spy signs
37. '72 convention site
39. Slippery
41. Dirty
42. Uptight
44. Actor Charles
45. Cattle prey
46. The Faerie Queene character
47. Show publicity
49. Pagan's statue
50. Gauza weave
51. Gum lump
52. Smog-watching agcy.
53. Gas station's offering
54. Labor gp.

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Leold™ (leold@javanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

I have my life set up into little piles of organized activities.

For instance, on Mon., Tues., Wed + Thurs. I eat vegetarian If at all possible, but on Friday I splurge on a meaty thing or fish.

On Monday and Wed. nights I always practice my karate. On Thursday I always go to my meeting.... and so forth and over and over and over again.

The predictability in itself is wonderfully comforting to me. Keeping busy is so unlonely.

If, as happens from time to time, I get urges for self-mutilation I try to squeeze it into my busy weekly schedule. If not this week - don't fret, there'll be time next week.

Pennsylvania lax trio leads charge in senior season

Ridley group marks eighth year together

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

What were you doing eight years ago?

That's a tough one, some people can't remember what they did yesterday. In the larger picture of life, though, eight years is but one drop in the proverbial bucket; but right now — today — that span of time can mean everything.

For the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team, this Saturday's season opener at Harvard will signal the start of the eighth and final season for a trio of defenders. Erica Bryan, Kristen Hocker and Michele Warrington took the field for the first time at Ridley High School in Ridley Township, Pa., and have been together on the field ever since.

If you can imagine what it feels like ending an eight–year relationship, than you might have a idea what this senior season means to them. This year, the transition from a team struggling since the program's reinstatement in 1993 to a winner is all that is on their minds. Excitement mingles with toughened retrospect when they talk about how this year means everything to them, and after eight years together, they have nothing to lose.

"It's going to be awesome this year, because it finally feels like [the team is] getting real tight," Bryan said. "The chemistry's there, and we want to play hard for everybody, especially all three of us. I just want to play my hardest, because I want to have my best year in my senior year."

Hocker agreed.

"It's looking like our last year together will be the best year," Hocker said. "We really feel like this team is going to stick. [The freshmen's] level of play is so good, and you know they're going to be here until they graduate. This is a year the program can build upon."

"I don't know... it's kind of scary that it's my last season after playing eight years," Warrington said. "It's coming to an end, and I just want to play my hardest. We want our team to play its hardest, and have our best season. I think we can do it. We have nothing to lose this year."

UMass coach Francesca McClellan has witnessed what this trio has meant to her team, and to each other. For the past three seasons, they have been everything for her team.

"I think that they're playing better than ever together," McClellan said. "They've sort of rediscovered each other, having grown up as people and they now have rediscovered those new adults. They've been tremendous for us, and I think it's been a great experience for them.

"They've been able to grow as individuals, maintaining both their friendships with one another, and their strength on the field."

Three sides to the story

The three sides to their story have been on the field for UMass, and together they have been the nucleus McClellan has built her reinstated pro-

Turn to LACROSSE page 11

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

The UMass women's lacrosse team is boosted by a trio that has played together for nearly eight years. From left: Kristen Hocker, Michele Warrington and Erica Bryan.

Tourney fans, here are your NCAA winners

It seems a bit uncommon for millions of people to be focusing their eyes on Indianapolis at a time that is nowhere near Memorial Day weekend (Indy 500 time).

But that's what will be happening starting today, as the 1997 NCAA Tournament gets underway. Sixty-four teams will start dancing today and tomorrow, but only one will be left standing in Indy's RCA Dome.

Let's break down the contestants, bracket by bracket:

Midwest Region

CASEY KANE ON COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Minnesota is the tops seed in the region and will face Southwest Texas State in a first–round matchup. After rolling over the Bobcats, the Gophers will face the winner of Mississippi–Temple.

This should be a good game. Intuition says go with the underdog (a good risk in the eight–nine game), but knowledge says go with the Owls anyway. Non–league opponents always underestimate John Chaney's matchup zone and it kills them.

Temple has the advantage in the Minnesota game as well. The Gophers lost to Illinois, a good 3–point shooting team, and the Owls can get real hot at the perimeter.

Tulsa faces Boston University. Tunji Awojobi is BU's main man, but now Joey Beard has drawn some defensive attention away from the big man. But the Golden Hurricane has Shea Seals, a force on defense and offense. Pick Tulsa.

Clemson thumped toward the end of the regular season, and Miami (Ohio) is a strong team. But the Tigers will get back to speed in the tourney and beat the Redskins.

Iowa State–Illinois State. Iowa State is overrated, but it has Dedric Willoughby, a great outside threat. The Missouri Valley champ Redbirds have Rico Hill, a 6–foot–6 forward who is averaging 18.9 points per game. Don't overlook Illinois State, but don't pick 'em to advance either.

Cincinnati's Bob Huggins is rumored to be going hardship, leaving the college game after the season for the NBA. No surprise. Look for the Bearcats to try to make some noise in the tournament (maybe If they do they'll drown out Huggins' whining). Cincy over Butler, convincingly.

The end–of–the–alphabet battle between Xavier and Vanderbilt should be a good game. The four starting guards are hovering around or above 35 percent from 3–point land. But Vandy's big on defense and Xavier likes to score. Take the A–10 West champs.

UCLA–Charleston Southern? Man, not only do the Bucs get the Bruins, they also have to play in Detroit.

Look for Cincy over Iowa State and UCLA over Xavier, with UCLA taking the Sweet 16 battle. Clemson over Tulsa and Temple, but not UCLA. Send the Bruins to Indiana.

West Region

SEC champ Kentucky gets little known Montana in the first round. Grizzlies, thank you for playing.

Again, go with the No. 9 seed in the Iowa–Virginia game. Virginia can pull this one out as long as the Cavs keep the tempo at a pace they like.

The next game presents a go–with–your–head or go–with–your–heart dilemma. My head says Boston College, my heart says anything but. Unfortunately, Bryce Drew and Valparaiso probably don't have it in them, and BC will win.

St. Joseph's will match up against the last team to get an automatic berth, Pacific. There are few as deadly from long distance as Pacific's Mark Boelter, but one who is close is Hawk Rashid Bey. The Hawks lack NCAA experience, as do the Tigers, but St. Joe's has played well together all season. Stay in conference with this one.

Stanford–Oklahoma? Brevin Knight can kill a team when he is on. Defense will keep the Sooners around, but if Knight unleashes it's bye–bye OU.

The Wake Forest–St. Mary's game provides an interesting match up at center. Player of the Year frontrunner Tim Duncan and Big Continent himself, Brad Millard (Millard stands 7–foot–3, tallest starter in the tourney). But Duncan can, and will, dominate the fun–to– watch battle.

UNC–Charlotte has run with the big names in Conference USA and should not be overlooked in its game with Georgetown. The inside presence of (the other) Alexander Kuehl helps the 49ers, but the Hoyas have tourney experience. Pray the refs and free throws (they are awful from the line) are in Georgetown's favor and stick with 'em.

Keith Van Horn stands three full inches taller than any Navy starter, a fact that will hurt the Midshipmen. Navy has been outrebounding opponents, but that was in the Patriot League, and this is the Big Dance. Take Utah, no problem.

I've given Virginia one, that's all. Take UK in the second. Credit St. Joe's and give the A–10 another win over BC this year. But Kentucky will have the Hawks' number and advance to the Elite Eight.

Duncan won't be denied, especially in the second round. Look for Tony Rutland and Jerry Braswell to counteract the Cardinal's outside game and Wake to win. Georgetown will be worn down inside after acing Kuehl and Van Horn will be too much. Utah moves on.

I just said Duncan won't be denied. Wake will have regained its early form by now and Utah will be a bit harried after Georgetown, write in the Deacs.

Kentucky is vulnerable — regular season losses to South Carolina showed that. Dave Odom will study tape and capitalize, pushing his Deacs on to Indianapolis.

Southeast Region

Jackson State faces Kansas in the first round. Knock, knock. Who's there? B'bye. I don't get it. There's nothing to get. B'bye.

I have to give Rhode Island the upper hand in its eight– nine game with Purdue. The Boilermakers have played in the parity rich–Big 10 this year, while the Rams have toughed it out in a rough and tumble A–10. Rhode Island also has Tyson Wheeler, who is capable of guiding his team in the first–round.

Maryland showed its muscle during its ACC conference slate, and it will be enough to power the Terps by the College of Charleston. The Cougars do have Thaddeous Delaney, the Shaq of the TAAC, but the combination of Keith Booth, Laron Profit and Sarunas Jasikevicius will be too much.

Arizona has built itself quite a reputation for being a proponent of the early exit in NCAA action. Not so this year. It is surprising the Wildcats received the No. 4 seed in the region, especially after an anti–climatic finish to the season, but count on Lute Olsen's squad to grab at least one.

Henry Bibby, father of Arizona freshman standout Mike Bibby, has had quite an impressive rookie coaching campaign at Southern Cal. But Bibby and Co. have been rewarded with a game against Illinois. This is another tough game between the No. 6 and No. 11, but the edge goes to the Illini thanks to a guy named Kiwane Garris.

Georgia wrapped up the No. 3 seed after an impressive run through the SEC tournament. They face a Tennessee– Chattanooga team not many people know or care about. See ya later, Moccasins.

Marquette–Providence provides a tough battle to call. Providence was alright in a bad Big East, Marquette was okay in an okay C–USA. Take Marquette, but it'll be pretty close.

The last time Murray State was in the tournament (1995), the Racers had to face North Carolina. Lucky them. This time they have to face Duke. Lucky them. Count on an early Spring Break for Murray State.

Marquette should put up a fight, but the Blue Devils outside shooting will take them to the Sweet 16. Georgia will ride its outside game and consistent tempo into a matchup with Duke,

Turn to HOOPS, page 11

Once 6-9, now tourney time

LAUREN KOSKI / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore center Lari Ketner (shown dunking over former teammate Marc Jackson) will look to rattle the rims in this year's NCAA Tournament.

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

In the early going, it looked like the Massachusetts men's basketball team would be left in the dark — not with standing the fact that the lights went out in team's home opener against Wyoming.

Plagued with injuries and faced with one of the toughest schedules in the nation, the Minutemen progressed from owning a 6–9 record to a final mark of 19–13 (11–5 Atlantic 10) and an NCAA Tournament berth.

What sparked UMass' success in the later half of the season as it won 12 of its last 15 regular season games? The following is a look at some of the season's sweetest wins and most bitter defeats.

Three guard magic

Massachusetts 63, St. Bonaventure 59

The most pivotal win of the season came not over a top ranked opponent, or even against one of the A–10's toughest teams. On Jan. 14, UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint found what he had been looking for all season — a winning lineup. With veterans Tyrone Weeks, Carmelo Travieso and Edgar Padilla sidelined with injuries in the early going, Flint dipped deep into his bench of rookie talent. However, when the Minutemen traveled to Olean, N.Y. to face the Bonnies, flint went with a starting lineup that boosted the team marking the turning point of the season.

With Lari Ketner in the middle, Tyrone Weeks up front, Padilla on point, Travieso the outside shooter, and Charlton Clarke as penetrating slasher Flint found consistent depth.

Despite a 29–point performance from the Bonnie's Rashaan Palmer, the Minutemen held on for the win. UMass boasted three players with double digits in scoring as Weeks (19), Travieso (18) and Ketner (12).

Massachusetts 90, No. 19 Boston College 78

The convincing win over the intrastate rivals in the second Commonwealth Classic was quick evidence in the threat the three guard lineup posed to opponents while kicking off a five game win streak.

Padilla, who struggled with injuries early in the season was the driving force in the UMass win scoring 24 points on 7–for–12 shooting while he dished out seven assists. Clarke added 23 points of his own marking the first time this season two Minutemen scored 20 points or more in the same game.

Another key aspect of the win was the management of the UMass big men. Flint rotated Ketner, Weeks, Norville and Ajmal Basit exploiting BC's size mismatches in order to spread out fouls and harass the Eagle's Danya Abrams.

Massachusetts 78, No. 10 Maryland 61

This was the win that put the Minutemen back on the map. Leading up to the match with the Terapins, UMass won nine of its last 10 games. With a national television audience and a sold out pro–Massachusetts Worcester Centrum crowd, the Minutemen rolled to an impressive victory. Ketner had a banner day pulling down a career high 19 points while grabbing 12 boards.

The Terps' game plan centered around trying to double team UMass in the paint figuring that Clarke would not emerge as a scoring threat. That did not happen, and in fact, Clarke tied a career record of his own knocking down 3–for– 3 from 3–point range while he was a point away from tying his career high in points (22).

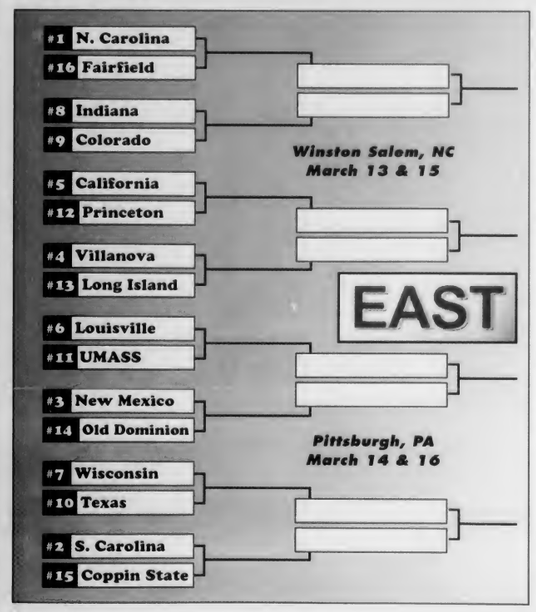
The tough ones

No. 16 Fresno State 102, Massachusetts 81

When the infamous Jerry Tarkanian and his Bulldogs invaded the Mullins Center, things got ugly. Former Boston College bad boy Chris Herren returned to his home state and shot the lights out scoring 25 points.

For UMass, Ketner pulled down a double–double (18pts. 12 rebs) while Basit scored 16 points in the losing effort. While the Minutemen's inside game was on the money, they came out flat on defense.

Virginia Tech 63, Massachusetts 47



The loss to the Hokies was the club's lowest scoring defeat at home since a 49–43 routing by St. Bonaventure in 1986.

UMass held a one point lead with 9:50 to in the first half on a Ketner jumper, yet that was the last time the Minutemen would have the lead the rest of the way. In the second half UMass came within six points of the Hokies, but they couldn't bring it any closer.

The sharp shooting Ace Custis led the game in scoring with 16 points on 4–for–4 3–point shooting. For UMass, Ketner led the way with 18 points of his own.

The home beating which was dished out on Jan. 12 marked the low point of the Minutemen's season, however, it was in the very next game that UMass faced the Bonnies and began the three guard turnaround.

While Massachusetts dropped a handful of other close games like a heart–breaking 64–61 loss to Connecticut, two losses at the hands of St. Joseph's and an 87–84 OT loss to Xavier at home, one thing was clear. Despite the team's battle with injuries early on which resulted in a baptism by fire for the young team coupled with daunting schedule the Minutemen matured significantly from start to finish this year. A bid into the NCAA's is more than the result of wins and losses and facing a tough schedule — it is a testament to hard work and determination.

Breaking down the bracket: a look at the East first–round

When Midnight Madness kicked off this year's college basketball season on Oct. 15, today seemed so far away.

But after five months of practices, scrimmages, games, meetings, press conferences and interviews, today — the first day of NCAA Tournament action — is finally here.

Fans and members of the Massachusetts men's basketball team waited anxiously last Sunday to see if their team would be among the 64 invited to the Big Dance, and the selection committee did not disappoint.

CASEY KANE

The Minutemen (19–13) will start their post–season road tomorrow at 10:10 p.m. as the No. 11 seed in the East Region. They drew sixth seeded Louisville as a first–round opponent in Pittsburgh.

The Cardinals (23–8) are not an unfamiliar opponent for the Minutemen, who travelled to Louisville's Freedom Hall for a 62–59 UMass victory last year.

UMass is in the lower half of the East bracket, meaning that if they advance through the first two rounds, the Minutemen would be in a position to face the region's No. 2 seed before the No. 1 seed (that hinges on whether or not the top two seeds also advance).

South Carolina holds that East No. 2 spot, a seed the upstart Gamecocks (24–7) garnered after they roared through the Southeastern Conference schedule (which included mopping the floor with defending national champ Kentucky, twice).

The Gamecocks have the chance to do some damage in this tourney, but their chances rely solely on the shoulders of their guards. Its 3–point shooting is a threat, but South Carolina hurts on the boards, meaning a potential Sweet 16 match–up with UMass could be very interesting to watch.

To get to the Sweet 16, South Carolina must first get by MEAC (Mid–Eastern Athletic) champion Coppin State (21– 8). In only their third NCAA, Coppin State has not had the luck of the draw, getting as tough an opponent as its last tourney foe (Cincinnati in 1993).

The South Carolina–Coppin State winner will square off against the winner of the Wisconsin–Texas battle. The Badgers (18–9) upended Midwest

Turn to EAST, page 8

The Massachusetts Daily

COLLEGIAN NCAA TOURNAMENT Pairings

The Collegian proudly thanks

CAMPUS GE

NCAA TOURNAMENT Preview

Bruiser leads team into his first NCAA Tourney

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

In December, who would have thought that the Massachusetts men's basketball team would be packing its bags for the postseason come March?

Hampered by injuries, three different starters were sidelined through the first 11 games of the season. When your first 11 games include teams such as North Carolina, Wake Forest and Georgetown and your bench is full of rookie talent things could get tough.

However, first year Massachusetts coach James "Bruiser" Flint nursed his team back to health to a 19–13 (11–5 Atlantic 10) record. Though he may have taken his lumps early Flint ended his rookie season at the helm as the winningest first–year coach in school history. Flint's mark has eclipsed some pretty impressive predicessors. John Calipari went 10–18 his first year as Minuteman coach, while Jack Leaman (Dr. J's former coach and now WHMP color commentator) earned an 11–14 mark his first season.

MO GAO / COLLEGIAN

James "Bruiser" Flint will lead his troops into his first NCAA Tournament battle tomorrow.

With 19 wins going into the tournament, Flint's win total ties him for the fifth best record of rookie coaches with Melvin Watkins of UNC–Charlotte. With the Big Dance kicking off tomorrow, his eyes have focused on getting his team out of Pittsburgh and on to Syracuse for the round of 16.

"He's stepped it up a notch I think. Usually he comes in here, cracks a couple of jokes and he's down to business," UMass guard Charlton Clarke said. "Now as soon as he leaves the locker room it's all business. He's telling us just what we need to concentrate on, otherwise, we'll be back here on Sunday."

Clarke describes how his coach's winning attitude will help the team in the tournament.

"He's just been Bruiser. He's always smiling, always laughing. When you lose, you always see a change in someboy and we've seen that, but when you're winning he's the best person to be around. Right now, he's trying to win games. Our goal is to get to the Elite Eight and even the Final Four."

One of the key factors in getting the Minutemen into the tournament was Flint's implementation of a three–guard line up which sparked an 11–1 run late in the season. While this set up may have helped UMass, there are certain aspects of the game the squad has to be weary of — running the half court set.

"You try to get easy baskets," Flint said. "People play better transition defense and not only that, you need to rebound so you have to rebound with all five now. You have a bigger group, you don't have to rebound with all five.

"You can rebound with essentially two or three guards but when you have three guards, that kills you rebounding wise so you have to keep some extra guys back to rebound the ball.

MO GAO / COLLEGIAN

Minuteman coach Bruiser Flint is the winningest first–year coach in UMass men's hoop history.

Making the transition from the traditional lineup to the three–guard version was not something that came without hesitation. In those first games, Flint had a few concerns about how effective the new lineup would be.

"The only concerns I really had was that those three guys would try to score every basket," he said. "I didn't really think we were as good defensively as we had been and I know we weren't rebounding the ball as well, but we have guys who can rebound the ball.

"Tyrone and Lari are good rebounders. Where when Charlton came into the game, he was the primary scorer, when Carmelo came into the game, he was the primary scorer, so when they are in the game, do they look to score more or give each other shots?"

UMass is not the only team in the NCAA Tournament to run a three–guard set, as both Duke and South Carolina have a similar game plan.

"We are closer to Duke than we are South Carolina," Flint said. "South Carolina has drivers, Duke has shooters. Obviously we're closer to them than we are South Carolina."

In addition, running with three guards opened up play and acted as a catalyst for center Lari Ketner. After sitting out last season due to Proposition 48, Ketner took some time to dust off the cobwebs. By the end of the season, the 6–foot– 10 center was named National Newcomer of the Year by Basketball Times magazine.

"One of the reasons why we got better and [the guards] started to play better was because we got Lari to start going to it so people had to play him," Flint said. "He could actually dominate you and he's shown that from time to time."

With the three–guard set roaring into action, Ketner proving to be a force in the paint and consistent

Turn to BRUISER, page 6

March Madness last one for UM seniors

Padilla, Travieso and Weeks all primed to make a final tourney run

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

March Madness is a bittersweet time. Jubilation over getting into the NCAA Tournament can often be followed at breakneck speed with the disappointment of having a season end.

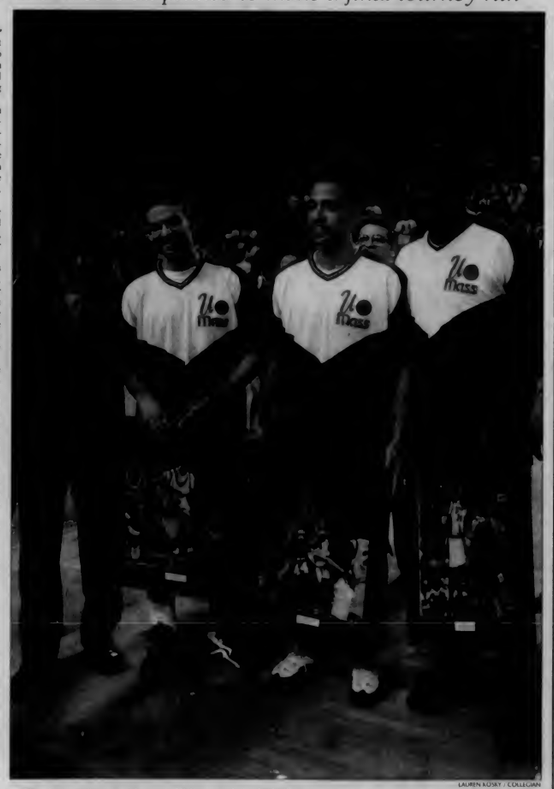
That is part of what makes each and every tournament game special. Each bounce of the ball or rattle of the rim could upset the delicate balance of what the future holds. There is no garuantee of a win, no one with a sealed envelope and a predetermined victor. Anything is possible.

The members of the Massachusetts men's basketball team, the seniors in particular, know that the NCAA tourney door is open to possibility.

"We found out that [anything's possible] when we beat Maryland, which was a top 10 team," senior guard Edgar Padilla said. "We beat a lot of supposedly good teams, we beat them practically easy. We have to go out there and play out best basketball and take it one game at a time."

The Minuteman seniors can take it one game at a time, a proposition that would have been jumping the gun on Sunday. The team gathered together to watch the tournament selection show, which would ultimately decided whether or not UMass would play in this year's tourney.

When the name Massachusetts was one fo the first called, the emotion from Padilla, Carmelo Travieso and Tyrone Weeks, the three seniors, was obvious.



"We thought we deserved to be in the tournament," Traveiso said. The senior shooting guard was visibly happy when UMass' name was announced, jumping from his chair to cheer on the selection.

Now that UMass is in the tournament, the Minutemen must focus on the job at hand. Thier first round opponent is Louisville, a team the UMass seniors are very familiar with. They have faced the Cardinals twice before, coming out victorious in both meetings.

"They're a good team, they have good players," Travleso said. "I definitely think we can beat them. We beat a lot of good teams this year and played against a lot of great teams.

"They're a good team, we've heard they aren't playing too well, but come tournament time everyone picks up their play."

Turn to SENIORS, page 5

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

The three seniors on this year's UMass men's basketball team stand during pregame ceremonies before thier final regular season game.

Sophomores help key UM mid-season turnaround

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Sports

At the beginning of the 1996–97 season, a lot of the talk concering the Massachusetts men's basketball team centered around the vaunted freshman class, seen by many as one of the best recruiting classes in America.

But as the season unfolded, and the prospects of returning to the NCAA tournament began to look grim, it was the play of a pair of sophomores who helped right the ship, and lead UMass to it's sixth straight trip to the NCAA Tournament.

Lari Ketner and Charlton Clarke did not have banner years in 1995–96, their freshman campaigns. Ketner never even stepped on the court, falling victim to Prop 48 and having to sit out his first season.

Clarke saw playing time, but a broken foot in his first five minutes of college action, sustained in the season–opening win over Kentucky, slowed his development.

The 6–foot–3 guard from the Bronx, N.Y. returned mid– season, but the foot injury left him out oi shape, and he saw limited playing time for a team that used two guards, Carmelo Travieso and Edgar Padilla, almost exclusively.

But this season has been a different story for the two members of the class of '99.

Clarke has exploded with his increased playing time, the result of UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint's decision to go with a three–guard offense. The versatile Clarke started the last 26 games for UMass, ranking fourth on the Minutemen in scoring with 10.4 points a game. Clarke was also named Atlantic 10

Turn to SOPHMORES, page 5

Collegian NCAA Quiz

Stop filling out your brackets for a second. Time out from furiously marking up your TV Guide, trying to map out a game–watching schedule.

Relax for a few minutes and try the Collegian's second annual NCAA Tournament quiz.

1. We'll start you off with an easy one. How many teams in this year's tourney are called the Wildcats? Who are they?
2. Okay, there are more Tigers than Wildcats. Can you name all the Tigers?
3. There are a couple of Eagles in this year's tournament. How many, and can you name them?
4. The NCAA Tournament is always a dogfight, but exactly how many dogs were allowed into this year's fight? What schools are they from?
5. There is a team in this year's tourney with a mascot that sounds like a type of shoes. What school?
6. Two of the schools' mascots are singular. What are they?
7. What team's have colors in their mascot's names?
8. Name the Demons and the Devils.
9. Name the Stags and the Trojans.
10. How about the Rebels? The Minutemen? The Midshipmen?
11. The Crusaders, Commodores and Buccaneers?
12. Name the Friars and the Gaels.
13. Do you know the team whose mascot's name is a drink?
14. Can you name the team with the word Fightin' in their mascot name? What about the one with the word Runnin'?
15. Name the Cougars and Jaguars.
16. Name the school with the butterfly mascot and the one with the turtle mascot.
17. Animals to be afraid of: name the Buffaloes, Grizzlies, Longhorns, Rams, Lobos and Bruins.
18. Not so scary animals: name the Badgers and the Gophers.
19. Can you name these flying mascots: Owls, Hawks, Jayhawks, Hawkeyes?
20. There are Bobcats and Bearcats in this year's tourney. Can you name them?
21. Name the natural disasters.
22. Name the 49ers and the Sooners.
23. Where are the Cavaliers and Musketeers from?
24. What about the Gamecocks?
25. What is Miami of Ohio's mascot?
26. Murray State has one of the cooler names in the tourney. What is it?

BONUS – Bonus points to anyone who knows what the following are: Hoyas, Tar Heels, Hoosiers.

Non–Mascot Questions:

1. What team is returning to the tournament after the longest hiatus?
2. What team has the tallest starter?
3. What team has the shortest starter?
4. What player is coming into the tourney with the highest 3–point shooting percentage?
5. Name the only player in this year's tournament who hid from Alesha.
6. It's not uncommon to find a hoop player with a tattoo. Which player has the word "smooth" written across his arm?
7. There is a school from Norman and a school from Normal in the tourney. What schools are they?

NCAA TOURNAMENT Preview

Basit tries to turn tourney into fun time

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

It has been a long year for Massachusetts men's basketball player Ajmal Basit.

Playing with an emotional level that has put him at times at odds with his coaches and referees, Basit was given a baptism by fire at UMass.

Thrown into the starting line-up a few games into his collegiate career, Basit was forced to learn the college game on the spot.

Mere months after wavering on whether or not to even attend the school, Basit was put under the spotlight. It was a difficult adjustment.

Basit's adjustment to the next level of basketball was made harder the day he was to be introduced to the Minuteman media. His grandmother, Izora Wells, passed away, leaving Basit a changed person.

"I went through some personal problems back home," he said.

That affected the freshman big man on the court, and Basit's numbers suffered.

"I was just frustrated," Basit said. "I just wanted to play better. I had to learn my role."

It is said that the postseason offers players a new beginning, a new season in which to make their mark. It could be just what Basit is looking for.

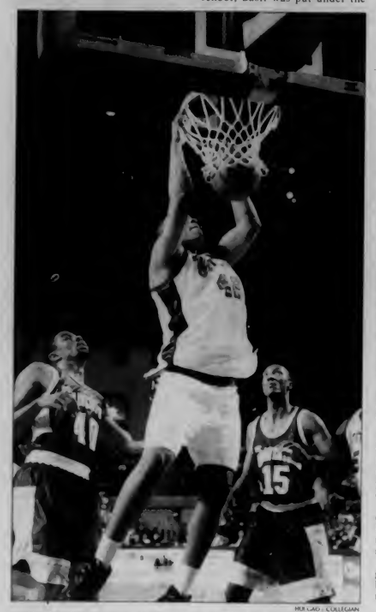
"I decided to get refocused," he said. "That's what they say the tournament's for, it's a new season. And I want to go out and have a good time.

"I don't get excited anymore. I just try to have fun. I haven't had fun in awhile."

* * *

Sitting through several days of anticipation and guessing paid off for the Minutemen, and as a result freshman forward Mike Babul will have a chance to play in the tournament he has watched on television for so long.

"I'm excited," Babul said. "I can't wait to get there. I've been watching the NCAA Tournament my whole life, now I finally get a chance to go play in it."



Babul was among the team members watching the selection show on Sunday with more than a tinge of anxiety.

"I was relieved," he said about hearing UMass' name announced. "I was nervous sitting there watching, hoping we're going to get in. I thought we had a good chance, but you never know with the selection committee and how they do that."

If Babul was the epitome of excitement, sophomore center Lari Ketner, who will also make his tournament debut, was the exact opposite.

Ketner watched to see what teams got in and where they were placed, but not with the nrevous eye his teammates had.

"I wanted to get in, but when we

HUI GAO / COLLEGIAN

Ajmal Basit has overcome adversity to become a solid player off UMass' bench this year.

Turn to FRESHMAN, page 6

Chris Kirkland returns to Pittsburgh for his collegiate tournament debut

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

When the Massachusetts men's basketball team got together to watch the NCAA Tournament selection show last weekend, you could feel the tension in the room. Would the Minutemen make the big dance, or would their postseason bubble burst?

When the team's No. 11 seed in the East region was announced, millions of college hoop fans from across the nation saw the team erupt in a flurry of excitement. However, for freshman forward Chris Kirkland the Minutemen's trip to the Big Dance is even more special because his team will play in his native Pittsburgh.

"It's real exciting," Kirkland said. "You get to see your family, you get to play in your home town.

Although Kirkland is one of six Minutemen playing in their first NCAA Tournament, he feels he can make the adjustment even though he'll be playing at home.

"That's a dream for everyone, go home and play in the NCAAs," Kirkland said. "But I think it puts a little extra pressure on you. But still, you have to focus on what you have to do when you get there. They'll be time to see family, but there's time to blay basketball. You just have to separate them."

Kirkland was a standout at Sto Rox High School where he averaged 25.9 points and 13.1 rebounds per year his senior year. As a junior, he led the team to the Western Pennsylvania Championship averaging 20 points per game and 14.7 rebounds per game.

Since his return to the Steel City was announced, the 6- foot-6 freshman has been met with a flurry of requests.

"Everything I hear, 'Oh, can I get tickets, can I get tickets?' Everybody is glad for me to come back home to play there."

For now, Kirkland's mind is on working with the team to prepare for tomorrow's game against Louisville not on returning home and tourney hype.

"It hasn't hit me yet," Kirkland said. "I guess it will hit me once we get down there and see the crowds see the other players and everything else. Then, it will probably hit me, but right now it hasn't hit me yet, so I'm trying to prepare for it."

Playing in his first NCAA Tournament and dealing with the added pressure of playing at home is just another step toward becoming a better ball player.

"I think it [playing at college level] makes you grow up a lot physically and mentally," Kirkland said. "For me, I started out playing a lot and then I went down and didn't play that much. It makes you think, it makes you a better, stronger person.

HUI GAO / COLLEGIAN

Chris Kirkland's first NCAA Tournament experience will bring him back to his hometown of Pittsburgh.

NCAA TOURNAMENT Preview

■ sophmores

continued from page 3

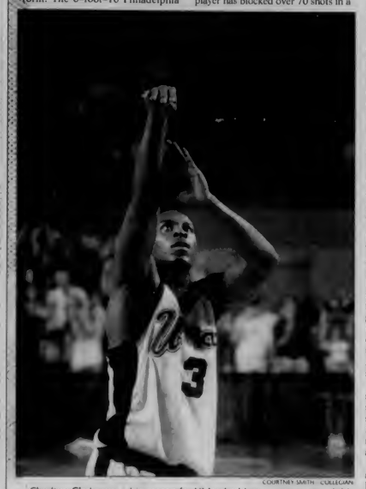
co–Player of the Week on Jan. 25, after leading Massachusetts past A-10 foes George Washington and Temple. His award-winning week included a 17-point, 12- rebound performance against the Owls in McGonigle Hall.

"Coach Flint calls me 'utility guy'," Clarke said. "Anywhere coach needs me to play, I have to come out there ready to play that positon. That's what I focused my summer on, coming out and contributing anywhere possible, and getting in shape."

Ketner never had the troubles Clarke did in his first year in uniform. The 6-foot-10 Philadelphia native stepped in almost immediately, starting the last 28 games, and has provided the much needed post presence many thought would be lost when Marcus Camby left for the NBA. Ketner had a banner rookie year, ranking third on the team in scoring at 10.7 points a game and second in rebounds at 5.3. Ketner's efforts this year earned him National Newcomer of the Year honors from Basketball Times.

The reason Ketner scared opponents all season is his combination of size and athleticism. The sophomore led the A-10 in blocked shots with 72, only the third time a UMass player has blocked over 70 shots in a single season. Ketner also showed his raw talent in the season-ending win over Temple, in which he jumped from upwards of 10 feet from outside the basket to slam home a missed Minuteman shot with only 15 seconds left, preserving a tight 59–53 win over the bitter conference rival, and eliciting chants of "Lari, Lari," from the William D. Mullins Center faithful.

Ketner and Clarke have been solid all season, but each has elevated his game to another level when the time called for it this season. For Clarke, it was against Boston College. Flint, faced with a 6–9 record, decided to put on the floor what he thought were his five best players, with Clarke as a third guard.



"Coach thought it would hurt us at the beginning because I was too small," Clarke said. "But [Flint] went to [the three– guard set], because he felt like he had a lot of confidence in me, like I would come out and play as hard as I can for him, and it's worked out for the best."

Clarke responded with the best game of his life, dropping a career high 23 points and six rebounds to lead UMass past BC 90-78. The BC win was one of the two non-conference wins that would eventually push the Minutemen off the bubble and into the dance.

Ketner made the Maryland game his showcase. After spotting the Terps an early lead, the Minutemen surged and crushed No. 10 Maryland. Ketner led the way, knocking down a career high 19 points and adding 12 rebounds and four blocks. As much as any other game UMass won this season, beating Maryland was imperative. A quality win over a top ten team from the ACC, the toughest conference in America, went far in the eyes of the selection committee.

Ketner and Clarke are the only starters returning for the 1997-98 season. Next year they will be in the spotlight, but for Flint and the Minutemen, they'll need to step up now if UMass is to make a run at another Final Four.

Can they do it? We'll have to wait and see. But if their past record in big games is any indication, the Minutemen will be able to count on the class of '99.

COURTNEY SMITH / COLLEGIAN

Charlton Clarke was a big reason for UMass' mid-season turnaround this year.

■ seniors

continued from page3

In order for UMass to succeed in the NCAAs, the three seniors will have to pick up their play as well. That should not be a problem for the Minuteman seniors, who have shown consistent stability during the postseason.

Padilla recorded the most steals in last year's NCAA tourney, collecting 19 to rank second in tournament history for the category. He also is only 12 steals behind career tourney steal leader Grant Hill.

Traveiso has scored in double figures in six straight tournament games, a streak that dates back to UMass' Sweet 16 win over Tulsa. In addition, Travieso hit an tournament best 20 3-pointers last year.

Weeks has led the senior class to a 8–3 all–time record in the NCAA Tournament.

But UMass has the chance to play, having been tabbed as the No. 11 team in the East Region. It would have been a far different situation, and a far more bitter pill to swallow if the Minutemen had not made the field of 64.

"Very," Travieso said when emphasis when asked if playing in the NIT this year would have been disappointing. "I didn't get much sleep last night thinking about [playing in the NIT]. We would've had to go, but I wouldn't have been too happy about going there because I thought we deserved to be in the tournament."

Travieso's backcourt counterpart would have also been disappointing.

"I don't know," Padilla said when asked if he would have been let down if the Minutemen had not made the NCAA field. "It didn't happen so I don't know how I would have felt."

UMass does have the chance to play, and the Minutemen are concentrating on getting the job done.

"Not just being in the Final Four, but in the last three tournaments is going to help us going into this tournament. Experience always helps you, and hopefully we can use this to help us advance to the Final Four.

NCAA Staff

Graphic Production: Josh Sylvester
Sports Editors: Casey Kane Chris Stamm
Advertising Manager: Craig J. Brody

TOURNAMENT GUIDE

College Classifieds

A GREAT BET!

NOT YOUR USUAL DOG & PONY SHOW

LIVE SIMULCASTS!
Thoroughbreds from: Aqueduct, Suffolk Downs, Gulfstream & Santa Anita • Harness races from: Foxboro, Meadowlands & Pompano • Greyhounds from: Plainfield and now Raynham!

2-FOR-1
Dinner Entrees Every Friday Night In Hinsdale's Dining Room!

STUDENT'S DAY EVERY FRIDAY:
FREE Hinsdale Program to college students with a valid ID.

LIVE GREYHOUNDS • SIMULCAST RACING

HINSDALE GREYHOUND PARK
America's Favorite Tracks
SIMULCAST BETTING 7 DAYS A WEEK!
FREE PARKING • FREE ADMISSION
For Post Times & Info: 1-800-NH-TRACK
Route 119 • Hinsdale, NH
www.trackinfo.com

NEW! TREADMILL
ULTIMATE AEROBIC TRAINING
Lifestride 9500 with Heart Rate Monitor

We Now Have FOUR!
Safe Convenient Fun
PLUS
KEISER
NAUTILUS
FREE-WEIGHTS
STAIRMASTERS
LIFE CYCLES
LIFE ROWER
GRAVITRON
CYBEX UBE
NORDIC TRACK
AEROBICS
AMHERST Athletic Club 256-0080 Rte. 116 – So. Amherst

Where else can you buy an ad with spare change?

Shoot for a Jetta GLX!

at Haigis Hoopla

The UMass Five College Federal Credit Union wants you to win a brand new 1997 Volkswagen Jetta GLX! Each day during Haigis Hoopla, a lucky student will get the chance to make a half-court shot for the Jetta GLX. This fully loaded Jetta GLX includes leather seats, air, alloy wheels, sun roof, ABS brakes, and a Bose 10-speaker sound system with 6 disc CD-changer. So come by our shoot-out court during Haigis Hoopla and you might drive away in a 1997 Jetta GLX!

UMass Five College Federal Credit Union
6 University Drive • Amherst • 549-7400
Across the street from Rafter's

AWARD WINNING LOCAL SERVICE

- Full Service Autobody Insurance Approved
- Full Selection of Genuine GM Goodwrench parts.
- Mass. State Inspection Station #3243
- Fine Selection of New and Used Cars & Trucks.

- Ask About Our FREE 18 Point Maintenance Check.

PAIGE'S Amherst CHEVROLET Geo
DICKINSON ST. • BETWEEN RT. 9 & MAIN ST.
253-3444 • PARTS LINE 253-5928

CAMPUS GEAR
THE BEST SELECTION FOR COLLEGE HOOPS
Champion T's – As low as $8
✓ T-Shirts ✓ Jerseys
✓ Jackets ✓ Hats
✓ Sweatshirts ✓ Shorts
Champion Sweatshirts as Low as $20
GO UMass
413-549-0944
255 Triangle Street • Amherst
Between Dairy Mart & Northampton Co-Op Bank

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

Celtics
Ticket Drawing
Buy a Classified between N O W & Wednesday, March 26th and you can have your name entered in a raffle for Celtic tickets.

Drawing to be held Thursday, March 27th.

Students & non-corporate entities only

NCAA TOURNAMENT Preview

Your UMass, NCAA tourney trivia guide

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

Picture it: It is 10:10 tomorrow night and you are sitting down in front of the television to watch the Massachusetts men's basketball team mix it up with Louisville in yet another NCAA Tournament. Tip off is seconds away, and you long to impress your friends with random facts of UMass NCAA tourney history. Luckily you read the Collegian today.

Did you know?

The team...

• This is the Minutemen's sixth consecutive NCAA Tournament appearnace and the school's seventh overall. UMass first went to the Big Dance on March 12, 1962. The coach was Matt Zunic and the then-Redmen lost to New York University 70-50 at Philadelphia's Palestra.

• UMass did not reappear in the NCAAs until 1992 when it made its first-ever Sweet 16 appearance. In '93 and '94 the Minutemen advanced to the second round, while in '94 they advanced to the Elite Eight. Last year UMass posted its most successful run with its first ever Final Four appearance.

• This year marks the first time the Minutemen have entered the Big Dance with an at-large bid. UMass won the last five straight Atlantic 10 Tournaments and their accompanying automatic bids. In the 1962 campaign, the Redmen captured the Yankee Conference automatic bid.

• Two wins this weekend will mark the fourth time in six years UMass has advanced to the Sweet Sixteen. In that time period, only three other schools have advanced to the Sweet Sixteen more than the Minutemen: Arkansas, Kentucky and Kansas have all made it four times.

• Of UMass' seven NCAA appearances, they have competed in the East region six times. The last time they competed in anouther region was in 1994 when they played in the Midwest Region.

• Only 11 teams have have played in the last six NCAA Tournaments. Dean Smith and North Carolina boasts an impressive 23 straight Big Dance appearances. Arizona has been there 13 times, Indiana 12, UCLA 9, Kansas and Temple 8, Wake Forest 7, Cincinnati, Kentucky, Louisville, and UMass six times.

The conference...

• This year, the A-10 has sent the most schools to the NCAAs ever, as five other conference squads earned bids into the tournament. St. Joseph's earned the No. 4 seed in the West by virtue of winning the conference tournament. Rounding out the three other at-large bids are Xavier (No. 7 in the Midwest), Temple (No. 9 seed in the Midwest), Rhode Island (No. 9 in the Southeast).

• Atlantic 10 teams have gone 44-41 in NCAA Tournament games.

The seed...

• According to the numbers, UMass has a 50 percent chance of beating Louisville. Since 1985, the No. 11 seed is 16-32 in first round games, 7-9 in the second round, and 2-5 in the Sweet Sixteen.

• Of all No. 11 seeds, LSU has gone the farthest of any advancing to the national semifinal before falling to eventual national champion — Louisville — in 1986.

• Last year was not a good year for 11 seeds as they posted a 1-4 record in the tournament. The only No. 11 seed win came when Boston College defeated Indiana 64-51.

The players...

• Carmelo Travieso has scored in double figures in six straight NCAA Tournament games. Travieso averaged 15.8ppg in the Minutemen's Final Four season last year. In addition he knocked down a tournament-best 20 3-pointers. This year he has been invited to compete in the NCAA 3- point competition at the Final Four in Indianapolis, Ind.

• Not to be outdone by his backcourt mate, Edgar Padilla set a record of his own. With 19 steals he took away the most balls in last year's tournament. Padilla was just four steals away from breaking Mookie Blaylock's record of 23 steals set in 1988 when he played for Oklahoma. In addition, the senior posts 27 career NCAA tournament steals, 12 fewer than all-time leader Grant Hill who owns 39 steals in 20 games played for Duke from 1991-94.

• The UMass seniors have an all-time 8-3 NCAA record.

• Massachusetts coach James "Bruiser" Flint is the youngest coach in this year's NCAA Tournament field. The 31-year-old coach is one of six rookie coaches to take his squad to the Big Dance.

• Minuteman freshman forward Chris Kirkland and associate coach John Robic return to their native Pittsburgh for the first round of tournament action. Kirkland was a star at Sto Rox High School, where he averaged 25.9 ppg his senior year last year. Robic played ball at North Hills High School in the early 80's.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

The 1961-62 Minutemen were the first in UMass history to make the NCAA Tournament.

Three from Massachusetts make cut for the Big Dance

BOSTON (AP) — The suspense for Boston College and Boston University was who they would play in the NCAA tournament. For UMass, it was a question of whether they would play in it at all.

So a huge cheer went up from the players and coach James "Bruiser" Flint when they learned Sunday that they had made it for the sixth straight year.

Unlike the other five years when the Minutemen won their conference tournament, the University of Massachusetts is going as an at-large selection in the 64-team field, with a very slim chance to repeat its Final Four appearance of last season.

"We took our lumps, but our (tough) schedule got us in," Flint said.

UMass (19-13) is seeded 11th in the East and will play No. 6 Louisville (23-8) in Pittsburgh tomorrow. Last season, the Minutemen made it to the national semifinals before losing to Kentucky, which beat Syracuse for the title.

For the first time, the state of Massachusetts has three teams in the tournament. BU qualified last Friday by winning the America East tournament and BC made it Saturday night with the championship of the Big East tournament.

Fifth-seeded BC (21-8) faces No. 12 Valparaiso (24-6) Thursday in the West Regional at Salt Lake City. Twelfth-seeded BU (25-4) meets No. 5 Tulsa (23-9) Friday in the Midwest Regional at Kansas City.

"We're very happy to be where we are," BC coach Jim O'Brien said. "The whole idea of us getting a fifth seed is pretty surprising," considering that not long ago a berth in the NCAA tournament was in doubt.

Then the Eagles beat Georgetown in the Big East tournament semifinals and Villanova in the finals, both by scores of 70-58.

"Right now, we're really having a lot of fun and playing our best basketball of the season," BC's Danya Abrams said.

"I don't know much about (Valparaiso)," said Scoonie Penn, the Big East tournament's MVP, "but they have to be OK because they've gotten in the tournament."

BU must learn about its opponent, too, if it is to improve its chances of avoiding its fifth straight NCAA tourney loss since its last victory in 1959.

"We're playing a team we don't know a lot about," Terriers coach Dennis Wolff said. "Coming from the America East Conference, they probably don't know a lot about us either and maybe that will work to our advantage."

Tulsa certainly knows about 6-foot-7 Tunji Awojobi. The BU forward is one of five Division I players with more than 2,000 points, 1,000 rebounds and 300 blocks. The others are David Robinson, Alonzo Mourning, Derrick Coleman and Pervis Ellison. BU, 20-1 in its last 21 games, won the conference tournament with a victory Friday over Drexel, which upset Memphis in the first round of last year's NCAA tournament.

"We're hoping we can carry the banner for our conferrence in the same way," Wolff said.

UMass is one of five Atlantic 10 teams to reach the tournamnt, a record for that conference. The Minutemen were excited about getting in after losing three of their last five games after an 11-1 streak.

"It's rewarding," said guard Carmelo Travieso, a starter on last year's team. "We've been through so much, a lot of tough games and a lot of tough losses. I thought we deserved it but I wasn't sure we'd be picked."

One of Travieso's teammates was not sure either.

"I didn't feel very confident," UMass guard Charlton Clarke said, "but the (selection) committee proved me wrong. I'm happy they did."

■ freshman

continued from page4

got in it wasn't a big shock or anything," Ketner said calmly. "It was like, 'We're in,' that's was it."

* * *

Minuteman sophomore Charlton Clarke knows the position the new guys are in, having been a tournament rookie last year.

Clarke said he and the older players have been instructing the younger players to enjoy the feeling of being involved with NCAAs, but not to get too caught up in the moment.He warned them to continue to focus on the games.

"Everybody's real energized. Everybody's up," Clarke said. "It's an atmosphere that's supposed to happen right now.

"A lot of these young guys don't know what it is to be in a tournament. I've been there once. I know what it feels like. Even though I hadn't played much, but I know what it feels like. It's the best feeling.

"That's what the older guys are trying to carry over right now. This is what it's all about. Either you're going to come out and practice as hard as you can or you're going to watch us play. They've just been following the lead now."

Chris Kirkland

Mike Babul

■ Bruiser

continued from page 3

numbers coming from power forward Tyrone Weeks the Minutemen look favorably upon the road to the Final Four.

"If you are not ready to play in the NCAA Tournament you can't get ready to play for anything," Flint said. "But I told [the rookies] just to go out there and play and have fun. You can't put too much pressure on them, I think that is one reason why we didn't get off to a good start. Guys were moping around on the expectations. You have to go out and play as hard as you can and let the chips fall where they may.

Bruiser Flint

HUI GAO / COLLEGIAN

Tourney time!

UMass fans have something to celebrate, as the Minutemen start NCAA action tomorrow in Pittsburgh.

In association with:

UMass Five College Federal Credit Union Present:

SECOND ROUND • MARCH 18-16 FIRST ROUND • MARCH 13-14

WEST

Salt Lake City, UT
March 18 & 18

San Jose, CA
March 20 & 22

Tucson, AZ
March 14 & 16

Kansas City, MO
March 14 & 16

San Antonio, TX
March 21 & 23

Auburn Hills, MI
March 13 & 15

SOUTHEAST

Kentucky #1
Montana #16
Iowa #8
Virginia #9
Boston College #5
Valparaiso #12
St. Joseph's #4
Pacific #13
Stanford #6
Oklahoma #11
Wake Forest #3
ST. Mary's #14
UNC Charlotte #7
Georgetown #10
Utah #2
Navy #15
Minnesota #1
SW Texas St. #16
Missippi #8
Temple #9
Tulsa #5
Boston Univ. #12
Clemson #4
Miami, Ohio #13
Iowa State #6
Illinois State #11
Cincinnati #3
Butler #14
Xavier #7
Vanderbuilt #10
UCLA #2
Charleston S. #15

for their sponsorship & support.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian Presents...

TOURNAMENT GUIDE

NCAA

March 13, 1997

■ east

continued from page 1

No. 1 seed Minnesota to finish the regular season, and ended up with the No. 7 seed. Texas (16–11), much like UMass, waited with crossed fingers to see if it would get in the tournament and was rewarded with the region's No. 10 seed.

It was the Longhorns' strength of schedule that got them in the tournament (just like UMass), a fact that was not lost on those broadcasting the selection show.

"Schedule tough people. It worked for Texas, it worked for UMass," ESPN broadcaster Chris Fowler said Sunday night after the brackets were announced.

Wisconsin could have one of the best names in the tourney (guard Duany Duany), but it also has a strong defensive player in Sam Okey. Texas has shot poorly all season, and rebounded even worse — a formula that spells potential disaster for the Longhorns.

It will either be the Minutemen or the Cardinals against either be New Mexico–Old Dominion. New Mexico (24–7) has been bolstered all year by Kenny Thomas, one of this season's marquee names in the WAC. But the Lobos lack size, their tallest starter stands 6-foot–8.

Old Dominion (22–10) should put up a fight, led by 6- foot–9 big man Odell Hodge, who provides scoring and rebounding inside. Old Dominion pulled off the upset over Villanova two years ago, if the Lobos take ODU lightly they could be in for a surprise.

In the top half of the East bracket, No. 1 seed North Carolina gets the closest thing to a home-court advantage with its first–rounder in Charlotte, N.C. The Tar Heels (24– 6) face 16th seeded Fairfield (11–18) and, barring the most upsetting of upsets, will advance to face the winner of Indiana–Colorado in the second round.

The Stags have their work cut out for them. They are only the 12th team to ever enter the tourney with a losing record.

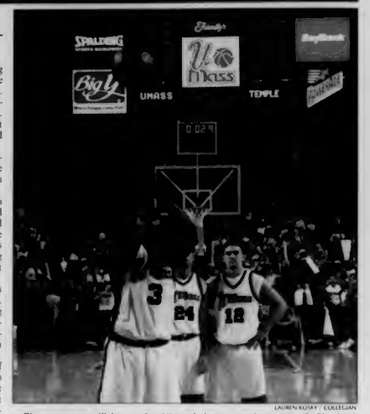
Indiana and Colorado provide what could be one of the best early games (and the word early may not even need to be there) of the tournament. The reason?

It's not the General versus Patton. It's Billups versus Patterson. Chauncey Billups, the Buffs' star guard, and Andrae Patterson, the Hoosier's Mr. Clutch.

Indiana (22–10) has the experience advantage in this one. Bob Knight's teams are nothing if not battle–tested, while Colorado (21–9) is in it's first tournament since 1969.

But as USA Today said in it's tournament preview this week, "Any team with a player as talented as Billups can be very dangerous."

Princeton has a new coach leading the way, but that hasn't stopped the Tigers from reaching the Big Dance. Bill Carmody's squad ended the season 24–3 as the Ivy League champs. Cal (21–8) has a strong defense, but might lose a step now that senior Ed Gray is out with a broken foot.



Caveat hoopster: Princeton is dangerous (with a capital D) and the Tigers knocked out a Pac–10 team last year.

Villanova and Long Island play in the final East Region first–round game. "Nova (23–9) could be mad after losing to Boston College in the Big East Tournament, or the Wildcats could come into the game anticipating an easy win over the somewhat unknown Blackbirds.

Either way, Long Island (21–8) is not the team you want to take lightly. The team has the nation's leading scorer in Charles Jones, who has posted a sick 30.8 points per game average, and a highlight reel of a player in Richie Parker.

LIU, once famous as the home of basketball's legendary Clair Bee, is now the home of the nation's highest scoring team (91.6 ppg). With all but one starter averaging in double figures, LIU isn't afraid to run the ball.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

LAUREN KUSKY | COLLEGIAN

The pressure will be on for UMass' three-guard set (No. 3 Charlton Clarke, No. 12 Edgar Padilla, No. 24 Carmelo Travieso) during this year's NCAA Tournament.

Individual Player Statistics

Carmelo Travieso

Senior • Guard

Games played/started - 32/30
Average minutes - 36.1
Field goal percentage - .370
3–point percentage - .362
Free throw percentage -.711
Total/average rebounds - 117/3.7
Assists/steals -102/34
Blocks - 13
Average points - 14.8

Edgar Padilla

Senior • Guard

Games played/games started -29/23
Average minutes -31.5
Field goal percentage -.346
3–point percentage -.362
Free throw percentage -.792
Total/average rebounds - 81/2.8
Assists/steals -158/64
Blocks -6
Average points -8.3

Tyrone Weeks

Senior • Forward

Games played/games started - 28/23
Average minutes -28.9
Field goal percentage -.509
3–point percentage- .000
Free throw percentage -.734
Total/average rebounds - 245/8.8
Assists/steals - 34/38
Blocks - 21
Average points -12.5

Lari Ketner

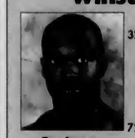
Sophomore • Center

Games played/games started -32/28
Average minutes -23.7
Field goal percentage -.555
3–point percentage -.000
Free throw percentage -.588
Total/average rebounds - 171/5.3
Assists/steals -23/8
Blocks -72
Average points -10.7

Charlton Clarke

Sophomore • Guard

Games played/games started -32/26
Average minutes -32.7
Field goal percentage -.423
3–point percentage -.355
Free throw percentage -.725
Total/average rebounds - 95/3.0
Assists/steals - 106/31
Blocks -0
Average points -10.4



Inus Norville

Junior • Forward/Center

Games played/games started -31/4
Average minutes -15.7
Field goal percentage -.474
3–point percentage -.500
Free throw percentage -.609
Total/average rebounds - 107/3.5
Assists/steals -12/10
Blocks -26
Average points -3.8

Winston Smith

Freshman • Forward

Games played/games started - 32/7
Average minutes -13.5
Field goal percentage -.375
3–point percentage -.000
Free throw percentage - .636
Total/average rebounds - 72/2.3
Assists/steals -18/10
Blocks -2
Average points -2.3

Ajmal Basit

Freshman • Center/Forward

Games played/games started -30/9
Average minutes -13.9
Field goal percentage -.425
3–point percentage -.000
Free throw percentage -.695
Total/average rebounds - 117/3.9
Assists/steals -3/9
Blocks -14
Average points -4.6

Mike Babul

Freshman • Forward

Games played/games started -25/10
Average minutes -10.2
Field goal percentage -.441
3–point percentage -.000
Free throw percentage -.381
Total/average rebounds - 50/2.0
Assists/steals -13/12
Blocks -7
Average points -1.5

Chris Kirkland

Freshman • Forward

Games played/games started 18/0
Average minutes 7.6
Field goal percentage .435
3–point percentage .000
Free throw percentage .429
Total/average rebounds 24/1.3
Assists/steals 4/6
Blocks 1
Average points 1.3

Ross Burns

Sophomore • Guard

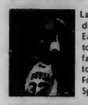
Games played/games started 8/0
Average minutes 1.5
Field goal percentage .000
3–point percentage .000
Free throw percentage .500
Total/average rebounds 1/0.1
Assists/steals 3/0
Blocks 0
Average points 0.1

Andy Maclay

Sophomore • Guard

Games played/games started 9/0
Average minutes 0.7
Field goal percentage .000
3–point percentage .000
Free throw percentage 1.000
Total/average rebounds 4/0.4
Assists/steals 0/0
Blocks 0
Average points 0.2

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVI Issue 102 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Friday, March 14, 1997

35 years behind the shades

For 35 years, Bob Dylan has brought insightful lyrics into rock and folk music. Check out our career overlook feature (see Arts & Living, page 5).

UMass ready for Louisville

Lari Ketner begin defense of their East regional title tonight when they face Louisville in tournament action. For the scoop, (see Sports, page 8).

WORLD

Dunblane remembers victims of massacre

DUNBLANE, Scotland — With candles flickering in windows — but no formal ceremonies — this small Scottish town marked the first anniversary yesterday of the massacre of 16 kindergartners and their teacher.

Bereaved parents laid wreaths in a garden that used to be the gymnasium where gunman Thomas Hamilton killed their children in a four–minute rampage. He injured 12 other children and two teachers before killing himself.

Dunblane Primary School opened 90 minutes late so children could be home on the anniversary of the exact moment when Hamilton, a resentful loner and suspected pedophile, burst into the gymnasium just after 9:30 a.m.

Then, on a gray and rainy day, it was school as usual yesterday. Or as usual as it ever is now.

"Recovering, we are, but it has been a much harder process than anticipated," headmaster Ron Taylor said in a pre-recorded interview aired by Sky Television.

NATION

Bill to force disclosure risk of HIV infections

WASHINGTON (AP) — States would be required to alert people to possible contacts with HIV-infected individuals under a bill being advanced by a Republican congressman.

The measure also would create a national reporting system for the virus, require testing of anyone accused of a sex crime, require insurers to disclose HIV test results to applicants and allow disclosure of HIV status of children up for adoption. Rep. Tom Coburn, R-Okla., said the provisions will protect those who aren't infected and help those who are learn their status as soon as possible so they can take advantage of new, life-prolonging treatments.

The proposal "will return sound medical practices to our nation's public health policy and curtail the spread of the deadly HIV epidemic," added Coburn, who also is a physician.

The American Medical Association supports the measure, as it has many of the bill's provisions. But the Human Rights Campaign, a gay political group, said the bill would intrude on the authority of local public health officials and do nothing to help at-risk individuals change

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 35 LOW: 25	HIGH: 45 LOW: 35	HIGH: 35 LOW: 25

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 6
Comics.....page 7
Crossword .....page 7
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 6
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 8

Workshops to hear student voices on the CC/SU for the year 2000

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The Office of Campus Planning and Space Management is sponsoring a series of workshops to develop a vision for the Campus Center/Student Union Complex in the year 2000.

Judy Steinkamp, of the Office of Campus Planning and Space Management, said that these workshops, titled "University Center 2000," are the first step in a one–and–a–half to two year planning process for renovation of the complex.

"We're trying to develop a wish list of components that people would like to see in the Campus Center," Steinkamp said. "The workshops are to get ideas from different people."

According to Steinkamp, the Student Government Association's proposal of a capital campaign for a new student union this past August prompted her office to begin considering renovating the Campus Center/Student Union Complex.

"There were a lot of different proposals out there, and our job is to reconcile them and ensure the best use of the space," Steinkamp said. "Everybody is painfully aware that both buildings need help."

The workshops, which will take place in March and April, will address nine topics: food services, hotel services, conference services, retail services, academics, Registered Student Organizations (RSOs), student businesses, commuters and programming.

At each workshop, participants will be asked to draft a list of ideal components, organization and policies. Important issues such as privatization will be included in the discussions, all of which are open to anyone interested in attending.

Steinkamp said that the majority of the workshops will be held on Thursday afternoons 4–6 p.m. in order to facilitate more student participation.

"We feel that we have to have as much student input on this as possible because students are the biggest users of the complex," Steinkamp said. "We scheduled them from 4 to 6 so we can involve more students."

In addition, a follow–up to the food services workshop, which took place on March 12, has been scheduled for April 8.

"We did not feel that we had enough student input at the first meeting, so we scheduled a follow–up," Steinkamp said. "We feel that [students'] input and needs are of utmost importance."

Steinkamp and Beverly Wood, Associate Vice Chancellor for physical planning, will also be available on Wednesdays in March and April from 12 to 1 p.m. outside of the Coffee Shop in the Campus Center to hear student, staff, and faculty opinions on the project.

"[Beverly Wood] and I will be at a table outside of the Coffee Shop to take comments from people walking through the Campus Center," Steinkamp said.

After all the workshops are completed, reports from each of the groups will be presented at a "Town Meeting" in May. The reports and the data gathered from a recent Student Center for Education, Research and Advocacy survey will guide the Office of Campus Planning and Space Management in conducting a space needs assessment this summer.

"Over the summer, we will see what is where and how we are using our space," Steinkamp said. "We will see how much of a deficit of space there is, if any. We will work with what we have and evaluate whether we need additions."

Steinkamp also said that her office would be sponsoring a logo contest for the project.

"As part of developing a vision, in order to get funding sources in place, you need to have a firm game plan and a logo to represent it," Steinkamp said.

Details on the logo contest, as well as a full schedule of the workshops, will be posted on a bulletin board outside of the Coffee Shop. Steinkamp said that her office will also present a briefing to the SGA on March 26.

Steinkamp said that she is looking forward to the process.

"I am extremely optimistic," Steinkamp said. "We have a great opportunity."

The next workshop is the Hotel Group workshop which will be held March 26 at 11 a.m. in CC Room 802.

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEK | COLLEGIAN

Solitary tower
The UMass library stands alone on a cloudy afternoon.

UM Boston cancels class after explosion & fumes

Yesterday at 10:45 a.m., the Harbor Campus of the University of Massachusetts Boston was shocked by an explosion, which seriously injured one undergraduate student.

Later in the day, a number of others were taken to the hospital for observation after fumes were reported in another building.

According to Anne Marie Lewis, of the UMass Boston Information Office, the explosion occurred when one student opened a refrigerator used for storing chemicals. A small fire was started as a result of the explosion.

Another student, hearing the explosion contacted the Department of Public Health and the Boston Fire Department, at which point the injured student was removed from the building.

The nature of the explosion is currently under investigation by the Fire Department and the Department of Hazardous Materials.

A few hours after the explosion students reported smelling chemicals in a building adjacent to the one in which the explosion occurred, and approximately 20 more students were taken to the hospital for observation.

Lewis said that these hospitalizations were precautionary. "You have to take precautionary measures if you think somebody might have been exposed," she said.

At 2:30 p.m., the administration officially closed down the campus, cancelling all classes, events and activities scheduled for the remainder of the day.

Lewis added that the campus was shut down under the advisory of the Department of Hazardous Materials and the Boston Fire Department, which are currently conducting their investigation.

— Mark McGrath

NCAA gets report on alleged misconduct during '95-96 season

By Mark McGrath
& Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Chancellor David K. Scott and the National Collegiate Athletics Association (NCAA) have received a report on the allegations of misconduct by former University of Massachusetts basketball star, Marcus Camby.

The report, which Scott praised as "an extremely thorough job" and "careful work," was confirmed by Bill Saum of the NCAA, who said that the University has cooperated fully with the investigation.

According to the Associated Press, UMass officials are obligated under law not to disclose the contents of the report because the University must protect the privacy of present and former students.

An investigation was ordered after Camby went to the Hartford Police in June alleging that Wesley Spears, a Hartford lawyer and aspiring agent, was attempting to blackmail him.

Spears was arrested in December and charged with first degree attempted larceny by extorsion and promotion of prostitution after an investigation of the Camby complaints.

According to an arrest affidavit, Spears threatened to go public with information that would "bring UMass down," if Camby didn't pay him 4 percent of his NBA salary and 25 percent of his endorsement fees. Spears was reportedly angry after Camby decided to sign with agent James Bryant.

Marcus Camby

The committee responsible for issuing the report was made up of University and Atlantic 10 officials including, Associate Chancellor Susan Pearson, Dean of Students Jo– Anne Vanin, and Associate Athletic Director for Compliance Jeff O'Malley and Commissioner of the Atlantic 10 Linda Bruno.

The issue came to light last summer, after the Massachusetts men's basketball team reached the Final Four.

Reports also stated that a gold chain Camby had been seen wearing before games was a gift from Spears, and in addition Spears hired a prostitute to have sex with Camby while he was still attending UMass. Camby has admitted to accepting $1,000 from Spears in May 1995, before his final season at UMass.

If the NCAA rules that Camby had committed violations during his playing days at Massachusetts, it can force UMass to forfeit any games played with Camby during the 1995– 1996 season. The Minutemen went 35–2 in the 1995–1996 season, and made the first appearance in the Final Four in school history.

Suspect in Cosby death has alleged mob connections

By Jeff Wilson
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A man who was said to be tied to a Russian car theft ring was arrested in the roadside slaying of Bill Cosby's son after a tipster went to the National Enquirer in hopes of claiming a $100,000 reward.

Police refused to comment on any Russian connection, saying only that they had seized evidence tying the suspect to the Jan. 16 slaying of Ennis Cosby, who was shot as he changed a tire on his $130,000 Mercedes convertible.

But the supermarket tabloid said that the key to Wednesday's arrest may have been call from a tipster who said "a Russian gang member was involved."

The identity of the suspect was not immediately released. A man and a woman were also taken in for questioning.

"We got a call on our Cosby reward tip line in January, within days of the killing," Enquirer editor Steve Coz said yesterday. "Normally it would have sounded like some nut — the Russian mob? But this guy sounded so credible, we began to pursue it." He said the tipster provided an Enquirer reporter with a pager number and told the tabloid "his friend heard point-blank that he heard a Russian gang member say, 'I shot a black boy.'"

The Los Angeles Times, citing an anonymous source, also reported that

Turn to COSBY, page 2

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEK | COLLEGIAN

That's a lot of laundry!
Think of all the clothes one could wash in this laundry machine found in the Student Union.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor:
Seema Gangatirkar
Copy Editor:
Lisa Chiu
Photo Technician:
Chris Cesnek
Production Supervisor:
Mark McGrath
Production Staff:
Lizzie Brown
Sandi Krauss

■ Cosby

continued from page 1

detectives believed the shooting involved a gang of about four Russian robbers.

Coz said the tabloid's tipster helped police find the gun by pointing out the area a few miles from the crime scene where it had been dumped. It was eventually found after a thorough search of the area with help from recruits from the Los Angeles police academy. On Monday, ballistics experts identified the gun as the weapon used to kill Cosby's son, the New York Daily News reported. In a late-night news conference Wednesday, Police Chief Willie Williams attributed the arrest in the San Fernando Valley to "a lot of hard work and a little bit of luck." Williams said the suspect closely resembled a composite drawing circulated earlier of a man in a light-colored knit cap.

Cosby family spokesman David Brokaw talked to Bill and Camille Cosby and said, "I sense a real sense of triumph, exuberance and something along the lines of some sort of closure."

In a statement, the couple thanked police and said they "felt certain and had every hope that they would find the suspect and that the process of jurisprudence would unfold."

The younger Cosby was a doctoral candidate in special education at Columbia University.

House to decertify Mexico in 90 days until goals met

By David Briscoe
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House voted yesterday to give Mexico 90 days to fully cooperate in the anti-drug war or lose its certification. President Clinton is counting on the Senate to protect his outright acceptance of Mexico as a full partner in the war.

The 251-175 vote came on a bill that originally called for immediate decertification — a proposition that is losing ground in the Senate. Even if the resolution wins Senate approval, the House margin was far short of the two-thirds required to override an expected presidential veto.

"This is an effort on our part to help the people of Mexico, to help the people of Colombia and to help the American people," said House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga. Clinton decertified Colombia but certified Mexico as "fully cooperative" in fighting drugs. The bill retains Clinton's right to waive sanctions against Mexico if he determines that is in the national interest.

The final vote was closer than the overwhelming defeat the Clinton administration expected. The vast majority of Democrats turned against it because it sharply criticized Clinton's anti-drug policies.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., who supported the original bill, said the 90-day provision also would put Mexican officials in a bind, with any effort to meet the congressionally imposed goals viewed as giving up on its sovereignty leading into a July 6 midterm election.

"It puts President [Ernesto] Zedillo into a real box," Hamilton said before the House voted 212-205 on the 90-day amendment.

Rep. Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y., chairman of the House International Relations Committee, which voted 27-5 to decertify Mexico a week ago, said diplomatic relations "must not override the importance of fighting drugs in our bilateral relationship." Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., called the House bill an insult to Mexico and to Clinton. "Passing this ill-conceived legislation will make the Mexican government less likely to cooperate with us and it will make the Mexican people justifiably outraged," Lantos said.

The original House bill would have declared Mexico uncooperative in the anti-drug fight but allowed Clinton to waive sanctions — an option he already has.

Presidential spokesman Mike McCurry said Clinton would not be surprised with defeat by a large majority in the House and was concentrating his efforts on the Senate. He met with several in the White House late Wednesday.

Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., said the senators made it clear to Clinton they would not accept the current status of U.S. or Mexican efforts against illegal drugs.

"I think the situation in Mexico is worse," said Kerry, contradicting administration claims at a Senate hearing Wednesday of progress in Mexico's efforts. But Kerry said he and others were willing to accept Clinton's decision.

Concerns about disrupting Mexico's fragile economy, souring relations with a close ally and hindering the war on drugs dominated discussion at the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee hearing. Several Republicans said they disagreed with the president's decision but were leaning towards letting it stand. Sen. Paul Coverdell, R-Ga., cosponsor of a decertification measure in the Senate, said he was looking for a third alternative to accepting or rejecting the president's certification of Mexico, something that "would move us off this no-win debate." But he did not offer a specific proposal.

"I just do not believe at the end of the day that Congress is going to accept the status quo," Coverdell said.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said it was clear Congress was disappointed with Clinton's decision, but he proposed a resolution that would hold off on decertifying Mexico while setting benchmarks the country should meet in order to keep that status.

Another cosponsor of the Senate measure, Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., called the State Department's rationale for certification of Mexico "a fairy tale."

"Whether or not our leaders can work together is less important than whether our cops can work together," Feinstein said, giving a litany of corruption and lack of cooperation by Mexican authorities.

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, appealed for greater protection of U.S. ranchers and farmers along the Mexican border who she said are terrorized by drug gangs with "a sort of lawlessness we haven't seen in our country since frontier days."

But Hutchison said she was inclined to accept certification and would support an approach that would increase Mexican cooperation. Sen. John Warner, R-Va., indicated outside the hearing room that he would not vote for decertification. He said the core issue was to fight drugs and "at the moment" he would support retired Gen. Barry McCaffrey, the national drug policy director who strongly endorsed Clinton's position.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
March 11
There was a two vehicle accident on Commonwealth Avenue.
March 12
There was a two vehicle accident in parking lot 45 on Holdsworth Way.
There was a two vehicle accident in parking lot 43 on Eastman Lane.

Animal Complaint
March 11
There was a report of a bat in Thoreau Residence Hall.

Assault & Battery
March 11
A large fight was reported in parking lot 40 on Hicks Way.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
March 11
A vehicle in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive was broken into.

Disturbance
March 11
Two individuals were reported fighting in Boyden Gym.
Adam M. Lunghi, 17, of 95 Weaver Road, Springfield and James S. Flaherty, 17, of 69 Chapin Ter., Springfield were arrested on Commonwealth Ave. for malicious destruction of property over more than $250.
March 12
There was a verbal argument between individuals on Orchard Hill Drive.

Larceny
March 11
Three telephones were reported stolen from Health Services.
Numerous nameplates were stolen from office doors in Hills House.
A package delivered to Baker Residence Hall was reported stolen.
Textbooks were stolen from a room in Patterson Residence Hall.
A new laptop was reported stolen from Boyden Gym.
An individual reported cash was stolen from her room in John Adams Residence Hall.
A jacket was stolen from a classroom in Tobin Hall.

Traffic Stop
March 11
There was a minor accident in parking lot 45.

Vandalism
March 11
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 50 on John Adams Road.
A vehicle in parking lot 12 was damaged.
Several offices in Thompson Hall were damaged.
Vehicles parked behind the Mullins Center were damaged.

Weapons Violations
March 11
A report of paint balls being fired from the 13th floor of John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

FBI admits possibility of missile

By Pat Milton
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The FBI agent in charge of the TWA Flight 800 investigation acknowledged for the first time yesterday that the plane could have been brought down by a shoulder-fired terrorist missile.

But so far, there is no evidence to prove that theory, James Kallstrom said. And he condemned as ridiculous, a new flurry of claims that the jet was destroyed accidentally by the U.S. military.

Investigators have focused on three possible explanations for the July 17 disaster: a bomb, a missile or mechanical failure. Kallstrom said that it is "technically possible" a terrorist using a shoulder-fired, Stinger-type missile could have caused the tragedy, and he said investigators are examining that possibility. He would not elaborate on where a missile could have been fired from or provide other specifics.

The plane was 10 miles offshore and more than 13,000 feet up at the time.

Kallstrom said there is no new evidence to support the terrorist missile scenario over other theories.

Stinger-type missiles are designed specifically to shoot down planes.

Flight 800 exploded after takeoff from Kennedy Airport, killing all 230 people on board and scattering wreckage across a five-mile stretch of the Atlantic Ocean.

The missile theory has been bolstered by people who reported seeing something in the sky before the disaster.

"There were too many people who describe strange events like flares and streaks of light in the sky" to ignore the missile possibility, Kallstrom said.

Kallstrom's remarks came in a week rife with reports that a missile was responsible for the explosion. He was particularly incensed by claims by Pierre Salinger, a former ABC newsman and press secretary to President Kennedy, that the U.S. government is covering up the real cause of the blast.

Salinger offered an expanded version yesterday of his theory that a Navy missile shot down Flight 800. At a Paris news conference, he released a 69-page document and a set of radar images from a video. The tape "completely confirms a missile fired down TWA 800," Salinger said.

Kallstrom said investigators long ago eliminated any "friendly fire" scenarios or the possibility of a military cover-up. The FBI reviewed radar and other sources to conclude the military could not have shot down the plane, he said.

Mother Teresa chooses successor

By Chandra Banerjee
Associated Press

CALCUTTA, India — An ailing Mother Teresa handed over her global mission yesterday to an Indian-born nun who converted to Roman Catholicism after being inspired by the works of the Nobel laureate.

Sister Nirmala, born of a priestly Hindu caste, was selected by a conclave of 120 nuns who deliberated for eight weeks before reaching a consensus.

"Now I am happy," said Mother Teresa, 86, who guided the mission for a half-century. "Pray, so that she can continue God's work."

Sister Nirmala, now known as Mother Nirmala, immediately became head of the Missionaries of Charity, which has more than 4,000 nuns and runs 517 orphanages, homes for the poor, AIDS hospices and other charity centers around the world.

"I am in dreamland right now," the 63-year-old nun said. "It's a big responsibility."

Mother Teresa and her successor appeared on the second-floor balcony of Mother House, the mission's headquarters in downtown Calcutta. Behind them a cloth banner proclaimed: "We love our dearest Mother Nirmala." Flowers and garlands were delivered to the front door, where the sisters were cloistered for the election.

Thursday's election is unlikely to change the character of the order. However, Mother Nirmala will have to work hard to get the access to world leaders that helped Mother Teresa, winner of the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize for her work with the poor, raise millions of dollars.

"I don't know how far I will be able to carry out the work successfully," Mother Nirmala said. "I will try, and with the blessings of Mother and God, I will be able to carry it out."

She was not among the leading candidates for the position, one of the most visible in the Roman Catholic church outside the Vatican, and few people outside the group even could identify her.

Masspirg urges support for a bottle recycling bill

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

This week, results were released from an informal citizen poll taken last summer in regard to updating the Bottle Bill — a law which would provide more support for the recycling of more varieties of beverage containers under the present 5 cent deposit law.

The Massachusetts Student Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG) conducted the poll in approximately 30 Massachusetts communities, Northampton included.

According to Emily Quies, a Smith College student and member of the research group, "Masspirg polled 7,500 citizens in 29 locations across the Commonwealth, with a 79 percent support rate for the Updated Bottle Bill."

"Recent polling of over 4,400 more Massachusetts residents showed a 4 percent increase in support for the common sense recycling law; that is, 3,700 citizens, or 83 percent want the law passed," Quies said.

If the new Bottle Bill is passed it would essentially expand the current 5 cent deposit, already provided on beer and soda containers, to include most other beverage containers.

This would increase the realm of returnable deposit bottles from a limited few to an expansive amount which would range from cans and bottles of ice teas, bottled water and fruit juices to liquor containers.

Presently, there is an 80 percent recycling rate for aluminum cans and bottles.

According to Masspirg sources, this rate is much higher than any other collective element that is currently being recycled in Massachusetts.

State Representative Ellen Story, along with a multitude of students from the 5-college area Masspirg chapters joined together to support the ascension in public support for recycling more varieties of beverage containers under the 5 cent deposit law.

Hearings on the Bottle Bill will begin in April, and students are urged to support the passing of Bill s.1678 and H. 2457.

For further information, students can contact the UMass Masspirg chapter in #23 Student Union or at 545-0199.

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEK/COLLEGIAN

Bicycle Symphony.
A close picture of parts of a bicycle can really stir emotions in one's inner self.

Correction

In yesterday's Collegian Tournament Guide, the Southeast and Midwest brackets were switched. The Collegian regrets the error

Got a tip?
The Collegian is always looking for hard-hitting, timely and informative stories. If you're aware of any of these, give the News Desk a ring at 545-1762.

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

summer
Summer learning at UMass Boston ranges far and wide.
In Vietnam Today: Culture, History, Politics
In Ireland Ireland Today
Along the New England Coastline Exploring the Coastal Environment
On Nantucket Island Playwriting and Performance
On Nantucket Island Marina Biology
For information
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Boston
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125-3393
Tel 617 287-7915
Fax 617 287-7922
Web www.conted.umb.edu
UMass Boston

STUDY THIS AD
This is not a test...It's an opportunity. An opportunity to manage a fun, productive team while establishing relationships and gaining experience for the future. Examine these benefits:
- Hours designed around your class schedule
- Full time hours available during semester break
- $500 Hiring Bonus
- Learning management skills you can use for a life time
- Advancement opportunities after graduation
- Positions available in Easthampton, Northampton, Hadley

The prerequisites? Ambition, effective people skills, proven leadership ability, and good academic credentials. If you think you can make the grade, send/fax your resume or apply in person at: Burger King: attn: Bob Turner, 353 Russell St., Hadley, MA, 01035 Fax: 413-527-7654
"Working Together...To Be The Best"
F.P.S. Inc is an Independent Franchisee of Burger King Corporation.
BURGER KING

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by MarkMcGrath • Photos by Ken W.P. Scott

How do you feel about UMass' chances in the NCAA Tournament?

"I think they have a good chance of making it to the Sweet Sixteen. They'll take Louisville. Louisville has a small team. The UMass big men in the middle will take care of them, and New Mexico is overrated."

Mike Herchuck
senior, chemistry
Springfield

"I don't think they're gonna make it past the second pairing. They're just not as strong as they were last year."

Brian Salisbury
senior, finance
Attelboro

"I think they'll win in the first round against Louisville. Louisville lost in the first round last year, so I think we'll take them."

Erica Takach
sophomore, biology
El Toro, Calif.

"UMass has put together a good team for the last couple of years, so I would expect them to do well. They're an experienced team, and in the last half of the season, they really did well."

Don Gillman
Dept of Natural Resources
Minneapolis, Minn.

"I don't know what their chances are. If they shoot well from the outside, they can beat Louisville. Even if they play their best game, I don't think they can beat a team like Kansas or Wake. Anybody can beat anybody. I'm rooting for them."

Brandon Fleming
sophomore, biology
Nantucket

"I think if they play like they can, they'll be in a lot of close games, and if they win some of those close games, they can make it to the Final Four."

Ben Roesch
freshman, undeclared
Paxton

"It will be a very, very tough road indeed, but if they have to play Louisville, Old Dominion, Coppin State, Fairfield, and then Jackson State and Navy in the Final Four, they might have a shot... but a slim one at that."

Mark McGrath
Collegian Graphics
Campus Center Basement

Gymnasts look toward A–10's

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Women's Gymnastics team takes to the road this week, finishing up their regular season against No. 10 West Virginia, George Washington and Rutgers.

The following weekend the Minutewomen will travel to George Washington for their first post–season competition — the Atlantic 10 Championship. The Minutewomen are ranked No. 1 in both the A–10 and the Eastern conference.

The Minutewomen have had a two week break since their last meet against New Hampshire. According to UMass coach Dave Kuzara, they have used this extra time to train hard and prepare for their post–season.

"We've trained quite a bit. We've been able to get some really quality training days in," Kuzara said. "In the last two weeks we have had four really great training days. We have been able to pick up our conditioning.

"Everybody seems refreshed, both mentally and physically. It's amazing what a couple of days off will do. So I feel really good about going into these two competitions, physically."

The Minutewomen are 10–2 overall this season, and have been going strong all season. As of last week, they were No. 15 nationally, earning their highest NCAA ranking ever.

In their last meet against New Hampshire, the Minutewomen were looking for an impressive away score. They look to tomorrow's meet to help them prepare for their post–season match–ups.

"The West Virginia meet is going to be a tremendous meet in preparation for regionals, and again, that's a different rotation, we start on floor," Kuzara said. "It helps prepare you for what might happen somewhere down the line at regionals or nationals."

Currently, the Minutewomen are the regional leaders on balance beam (Anita Sanyal, eighth nationally) and uneven bars (Tara Swartz, eighth nationally) and Lianne Laing is second in the region on floor. It is this caliber of gymnastics that should help them against West Virginia.

"I think we have a few things in our favor, going into this meet because we had the weekend off, but believe me, it will go down to the last routine," Kuzara said. "There's no way we'll be pulling away from West Virginia."

Four teams will compete in the Atlantic 10 Championships on March 22 — UMass, George Washington, Rhode Island and Temple. The Minutewomen hope to once again hang onto their title.

"A–10's will be a very closely contested meet. GW always performs at their highest level at A–10's. Rhode Island is a great team," Kuzara said. "We have to take care of business. But we feel good about that. We have controlled our own destiny all year, and we have competed well.

"I don't believe we have peaked yet," Kuzara said. "I think we have some great performances ahead of us."

Water polo heads to Calif. Set to battle No. 1 UCLA

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The No. 14 University of Massachusetts women's Water Polo team is on the road next week, beginning with the CWPA Tournament at Dartmouth, before going to California to face No. 1 UCLA.

The tournament, which takes place in Hanover today and tomorrow will include Dartmouth, Brown, Wesleyan and Williams. The team will then head out to the West Coast where they will take on Golden West CC, the University of Redlands with Indiana, USC and UCLA. They will round out their trip with the Claremont Colleges Tournament March 21–23.

But right now, the Minutewomen are concentrating on playing well against the reigning national champions, UCLA.

"It's tough because we have never played a team of that caliber before," said senior Vicky Bamond, UMass' all–time leading scorer. "We have never played a team in the top five.

"This weekend is Brown, at Hanover. They are probably our big rival. They beat us last year by one goal, but they lost their best player to California. And I don't believe they have any new recruits."

The Minutewomen have 10 strong recruits this season, six from California, two from Puerto Rico, one from Ohio and one from Michigan.

"They are all good players, they are all from junior nationals or junior Olympics, and we have the national goalie from Puerto Rico, Peggy [Nieves]."

Though a relatively new and young team, the Minutewomen have been steadily improving each season. Last year they were 16–8 overall, and this year, one of their main goals is to make it to nationals.

"I think we are well on our way to where they [the California teams] all are. Our team is only three years old. We have gone from being a team who lost every single meet, or close to it our first season, to one who last year almost made it to nationals," Bamond said.

According to Bamond, one of the strongest aspects of team is unity, and the fact that every one of the women is a team player, which should help them on their way to a championship.

"The girls get along very well which had been a problem in the past. But now we are very close, we play well together. There's no selfishness or no ball hogging," said Bamond. "Everyone wants to win, so everyone works extra hard. The girls have improved on everything — their swimming ability, their playing ability.

"I know this year we are making it to nationals."

■ lacrosse

continued from page 8

will need continued offensive output from the likes of Chris Grande, John O'Conner and Mike DelPercio, as well as other players stepping up their play.

This game will give UMass a chance to see just how strong it really is in the early going. In its season opener UMass got an offensive explosion to cruise to a 22–3 win over a very overmatched Fairfield team, while Tuesday's 7–4 win over Hartford was much closer to the belt.

According to Cannella the Minutemen will try to play the game at a relatively slow pace to keep Virginia's offense from running away with things.

"We're going to try to slow things down," Cannella said. "We don't want to get into a running game with Virginia."

UMass versus Hofstra

While the beginning of the Minutemen's spring break will bring them to a warm spot, the end of it will bring many of the Minutemen home. Hempstead, N.Y. is not only the site of Hofstra University, but a location in the heart of "lacrosse country." Several of the Minutemen live nearby.

Hofstra will do its part to make the homecoming as unpleasant as possible. After the Minutemen embarrassed the Flying Dutchman, 11–5, in 1995, Hofstra nipped UMass, 15– 14, in overtime.

A trio of returning 20–goal scorers, Anthony Alexander (26g, 13a — 39), Jarel Testa (27g, 5a, 32) and Brian Langtry (21g, 10a —31) will hope to have the Dutchmen flying.

Game notes: Both games will be broadcast on WMUA, 91.1 FM.

Intramurals finishing up

The UMass men's ultimate frisbee team took part in the Damn Cold Ultimate Frisbee Tournament in Pennsylvania this past weekend.

The tournament did not live up to its name, but that did not stop UMass from tromping over its opponents and claiming the No. 7 spot in the Ultimate Players Association collegiate poll.

UMass knew its first opponent would be a tough test. Cornell had been to the national semifinals in 1996, and was facing UMass with a large part of their talent pool intact.

UMass wasted no time in jumping to a 3–0 lead. Led by the line calling of Nathan Rogers, Zoo Disc kept pounding until it had a 13–8 victory.

The next game was one of revenge for UMass. Vermont had come out on top in last year's Yale Cup finals, winning by two points. Zoo Disc wanted revenge and got it, in the form of a 13–7 win.

Zoo Disc knew that a letdown after two big wins was possible, and it came in the form of a rough first half against Lehigh. But UMass led at the break 7–5, and thanks to Andrew Wright's defensive play went on to win 13–8.

Haverford was the day's final opponent, and UMass used the game to get its younger players some game experience. The rookies did not disappoint, cruising to a 13–7 win.

Alex Cook was a standout for UMass in the tournament, as he showed impressive layouts and solid defense.

Women's rugby set to start season

Spring is here, and that means that the UMass women's rugby club is once again ready to play. Co–captains Lynn Getchell and Toni Ercoli lead a group of returning players that will be joined by almost two dozen rookies.

The women kick off their spring slate at UConn on April 2 (6:30 p.m.) and at home against Princeton on April 5 (3 p.m.). They will be on campus the following week against Amherst, before they hit the road for a pair of games.

Anyone interested in joining the UMass women's rugby club should contact Getchell or Ercoli at 549–7367.

Intramural action

Hockey

Night & Day swept the Intramural hockey championships this year, after posting a 7–0 regular season record. The Steamers were their first playoff opponent, who fell 2–1.

Night & Day's next opponent, Blood, Sweat & Beers lost 4–2 in the first game and 5–3 in the final.

Basketball

This week marks the final week of play for Intramural hoop. In the Men's Division, the Tofu Twinkies will take on the Bad Boy Killaz II. The Women's final is set with Suckin' Wind squaring off against Floor Play III. In the Co– rec Division, Hey DP will face Hoop Screams, while International Males and Sugar Free will compete for the title in the Grad/Fac Division.

Wallyball

Intramural Wallyball is down to only four teams, as the Cape Codders will meet the Oysters with No Pearls and Cocoo for Coco Puffs will face PCCO Hit Squad. The winners of these two matches will square off in the final.

Upcoming sports

Special rosters for spring softball, co–rec soccer and volleyball should be turned in to the Intramural Office at 215 Boyden Building before break.

Captains' meetings are scheduled for March 24 and 25 at 6 p.m.. There will be singles' meetings on those dates at 5:30 p.m.

Facility hours

For facility information, call the 24–hour schedule at 545–2693. All facilities will be closed March 15–23 for spring break. New facility schedules effective March 24 will be available soon.

Sports Briefs was compiled by Collegian staff member Casey Kane.

SPORTS BRIEFS

■ women's lax

continued from page 8

From 1980–83, she was a two–time All–American for the Crimson, and was named Ivy League Player of the Year twice as well. This year's team already has one win under their belts, a 7–3 win over Boston College on Wednesday, and were led by three goals from Chris Shortsleeve.

Recent history against Harvard has not been kind to the Minutewomen, but facing a less–experienced Crimson team holds a lot of positives for the Maroon and White.

"Coming into this game, we're the strongest we've ever been at this point," McClellan said. "We believe that they are beatable, and we're really excited about this game, especially after some fantastic training at William and Mary.

"We're going to need more discipline to face the history of this game than the game itself. Once we can get over any intimidation involved, it should be a very good game."

After Saturday's possible game with Harvard (weather permitting, of course), the Minutewomen will move on next to the Commonwealth's second largest city, Worcester, and will take on Holy Cross at Hart Omni Turf Field on Monday (3:30pm). A training trip to St. Petersburg, Fla. during spring break will follow the Holy Cross game, and the team will return for its home opener a week from next Wednesday, facing Yale at Totman Field on March 26 (3:30pm). Yale is just one of six teams that UMass will face this season that were nationally ranked last season.

SPORTS * SPORTS * SPORTS

COME AN... RITE FO... OLLEGIA... PORTS!...

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
COMING March 26
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
(888) 211-OCMP
Present
Dining Out
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants
For info & rates call 545-3500

SPORTS WISHES EVERYONE A GREAT SPRING BREAK!

SUMMER CAMP COUNSELORS!!
OVER 100 POSITIONS OPEN IN BASEBALL,BASKETBALL,GOLF,GYMNASTICS, HOCKEY,LACROSSE,SAILING,SOCCER, SWIMMING,TENNIS,WATER-SKI!
AMERICA'S PREMIER CAMPS WINADU FOR BOYS DANBEE FOR GIRLS IN WESTERN MASS
SALARY/ROOM/BOARD AND TRAVEL INCLUDED!!
&
COME VISIT WITH OUR REPRESENTATIVE THURSDAY, APRIL 3RD 802 CAMPUS CENTER 10 AM - 4 PM (WALK-INS WELCOME!)
FOR MORE INFO CALL 800-494-6238

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Fessal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The fall of Jericho

On the evening of the fourteenth day of the month, while camped at Gilgal on the plains of Jericho, the Israelites celebrated the Passover. (5:10)

Now when Joshua was near Jericho, he looked up and saw a man standing in front of him with a drawn sword in his hand. Joshua went up to him and asked, "Are you for us or for our enemies?" (5:13)

"Neither," he replied, "but as commander of the army of the Lord, I have now come." Then Joshua fell face down to the ground in reverence, and asked him, "What message does my Lord have for his servant?" (5:14)

The commander of the Lord's army replied, "Take off your sandals, for the place where you are standing is holy." And Joshua did so. (5:15)

Now Jericho was tightly shut up because of the Israelites. No one went out and no one came in. (6:1)

Then the Lord said to Joshua, "See, I have delivered Jericho into your hands, along with its king and its fighting men. (6:2)

March around the city once with all the armed men. Do this for six days. (6:3)

Have seven priests carry trumpets of ram's horns in front of the ark. On the seventh day, march around the city seven times, with the priests blowing the trumpets. (6:4)

When you hear them sound a long blast on the trumpets, have all the people give a loud shout, then the wall of the city will collapse and the people will go up, every man straight in. (6:5)

So Joshua, son of Nun, called the priests and said to them, "Take up the ark of the covenant of the Lord and have seven priests carry trumpets in front of it." (6:6)

And he ordered the people, "Advance! March around the city, with the armed guard going ahead of the ark of the Lord." (6:7)

On the seventh day, they got up at daybreak and marched around the city in the same manner, except that on that day they circled the city seven times. (6:15)

The seventh time around, when the priests sounded the trumpet blast, Joshua commanded the people, "Shout! for the Lord has given you the city!" (6:16)

When the trumpets sounded, the people shouted, and at the sound of the trumpet, when the people gave a loud shout, the wall collapsed; so every man charged straight in, and they took the city. (6:20)

Then they burned the whole city and everything in it, but they put the silver and the gold and the articles of bronze and iron into the treasury of the Lord's house. (6:24)

At that time Joshua pronounced this solemn oath: "Cursed before the Lord is the man who undertakes to rebuild this city Jericho: At the cost of his firstborn son will he lay its foundations; at the cost of his youngest will he set up its gates." (6:26)

So the Lord was with Joshua and his fame spread throughout the land (6:27)

– From the Book of Joshua, The Old Testament

Does this story sound familiar to you? If not, I would suggest a refresher. The story of the fall of Jericho has never been more pertinent or relevant to our daily lives. It is more than just a story of past events as soon you will learn that the fall of Jericho is, in fact very much a part of our future; and a more immediate future than we may believe.

Look around you at the world in which you are living. What is it that you see? Floods, earthquakes, corruption, greed, war, poverty, suffering and an overall plague of wickedness in heavy abundance. Many people have been warning us all that we are in the last days, that our day of reckoning is drawing near. And so we go on living our lives, totally oblivious to plight of our world.

It will be just a matter of time before the final seal has been broken and America's judgement comes due for its final rendering.

Martin F. Jones

Tomorrow, Saturday, March 15, 1997 is the seventh day of the week as well as Sabbath, which we were once told to honor and keep holy. It is also the seventh day since the current siege of Goodell was ended. That building occupation which lasted six days may one day prove to have been a precursor to the final seventh day in which the story of the fall of Jericho finds itself resurrected into our present time.

This year, Saturday, March 15 is also the day in which hundreds of millions of Hindus will celebrate the Holi Festival, an ancient ritual holiday honoring the triumph of good over evil. Coincidentally, this weekend marks the delayed release of the final installment of the Star Wars Trilogy: The Return of the Jedi. This film, starring Mark Hamil as the young Jedi Knight Luke Skywalker, chronicles the final defeat of the Empire and the triumph of good, (represented by the Skywalker), over evil, (represented by his father, Darth Vader).

And have you forgotten the Ides of March? Yes, the Ides (the fifteenth) of March was that historic day, as written by the great English playwright William Shakespeare, in which the Roman Emperor Julius Caesar was killed, an act which would ultimately predict the fall of the mighty Roman Empire.

Today, in 1997, there is but one empire remaining in the world, an empire that is dying, decayed, and decadent. This empire is known to the world as America. The presiding monarch over this empire, our own modern day Julius Caesar, is none other than a former Arkansas governor named William Jefferson Clinton. He is the last emperor, and it is becoming ever more apparent that he is wearing no clothes. Since he first assumed the office of President of the United States, Mr. Clinton has been dogged by an endless succession of scandals involving allegations of adultery, incompetence, obstruction of justice, and illegal campaign fundraising. As he has yet to be convicted or even indicted for a crime, to date, Bill Clinton has become the most scandalized and investigated president in the history of the Empire.

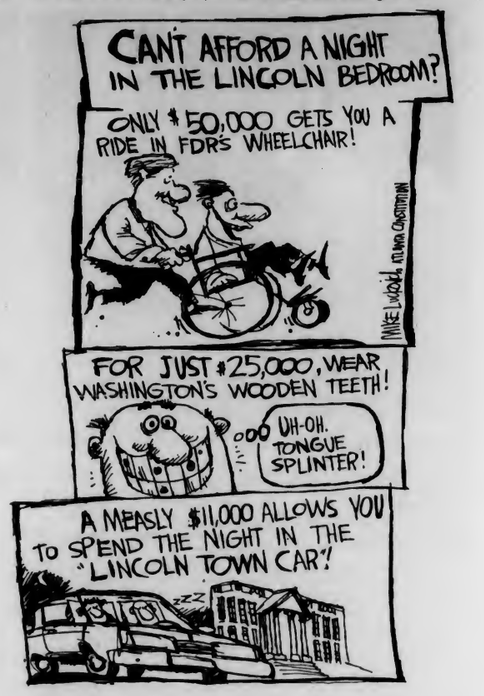
It must be acknowledged, however, that while these investigations have undermined the credibility and integrity of Mr. Clinton, they are a far more scathing indictment of the state of the Empire. Those who are the most swift in their indictments of Mr. Clinton and his wife Hillary, are also the greatest hypocrites, as their investigations are not driven by the search for justice, but rather by their own partisan desires to gain an advantage over the president to further their own political agendas. As they wallow in their self-righteous rhetoric, they steadfastly refuse to reckon with the nebulous ethos of their own corrupt and undemocratic system, through which they continue to rule and exploit the people with ruthless disregard.

In an essay by Gore Vidal entitled Requiem for the American Empire (The Nation, Jan. 11, 1986), Vidal writes that "The original republic was thought out carefully, and openly, in The Federalist Papers: we were not going to have a monarchy and we were not going to have a democracy. And to this day we have neither. For 200 years we have had an oligarchical system in which men of property can do well and the others are on their own."

Vidal also quotes Henry Adams, (the grandson of John Quincy Adams) who in 1910 stated, "The whole of society will go to wrack if we really lay hands of reform on our rotten institutions." Adams then added, "The whole system is a fraud, all of us know it, laborers and capitalist alike, and all of us are consenting parties to it."

And now the newspapers headlines continue to stack up daily with more revelations of illegal campaign fundraising, including new disputed reports of FBI knowledge of illegal campaign money being laundered into the U.S. from China.

If there is anyone out there who cannot see the writing on the wall, then I must recommend an immediate eye exam. It will be just a matter of time before the final seal has been broken and America's judgement comes due for its final rendering. At present, the state of the 1996 election is in serious jeopardy and we may yet see President Clinton returned to private citizenship within the next ten weeks. This and other impending crises are just the beginning, as those of us living in America ultimately find ourselves bound up into the inevitable fall of the world's last empire.



Beware the Ides of March.

Martin F. Jones is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The Irish question

Walking around campus; or on North Pleasant Street; or even Main Street in NoHo, unless you feel like the entire world is against you, good things will probably be going through your mind. Treading on the threshold of spring, with green thoughts that will mirror the soon green leaves on the trees, it's easy to assume that the universal concept of being at "peace" is filling your thoughts.

It doesn't matter If you're a jocko, frat boy/girl, crunchie or whatever inane stereotype we like to stamp on each other, spring lifts the haze of winterized eyes, and the world seems to be "good" — at least for a little while.

Yet, with the beginning of spring, there is also St. Patrick's Day to look forward to, and other thoughts begin to fill my mind. As I walk the streets of the Pioneer Valley, peace also fills my thoughts, but it is a much more tempered state of mind. I reminisce and rationalize of the time, a year ago, when I walked the streets of another part of the world — Manchester, England.

Jorma Kansanen

Times were great, and after a tough first semester filled with financial problems, my year-long exchange was finally starting to get rolling. On Saturday afternoons, my flatmates and I would maybe take a ride into downtown and spend a little of our excess money on the streets of Manchester. And, when the spring sun finally began to break through the clouds of the Northwest of England, my spirit exulted "in the light of spring's first day!"

But all around me, there was no exultation in, and no light being thrown on, the Anglo-Irish situation. Before I could even imagine, the shock waves of this centuries-long debate would soon shake my very soul.

At the beginning of last year, negotiations began to break down between Prime Minister John Major, and the voice of the Irish independence movement, Sinn Fein's Gerry Adams.

When talks continued with Sinn Fein, Major laid on the table the obnoxious proposition that negotiations would not resume until the disarmament of each independent Irish para-military group was completed. Needless to say, talks broke down completely.

Listen, I do not condone violence, or the shedding of blood in any way, shape or fashion. To propose such a schematic thought, where the fundamentalist side of the Irish independence movement would have to give up it's only trump card was ludicrous, to say the least.

I don't agree with the concept of violence solving problems. One of my favorite Transcendentalist writers is Henry David Thoreau, the 19th century father of civil disobedience, and one of the 20th century leaders I look up to the most is Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

But the observer has to really try and understand their philosophy; especially when those groups truthfully believe this is the only way to unite Ireland. This has been their way of confronting over 500 years of English presence in their homeland. Hard line — hard line after hard line has been the notorious negotiating style of both sides, and the debate will never be resolved if the hard line is what you have to cross.

Simply put, understanding does not start on a one-way street, and you have to look both ways before you can make it to the other side.

Consequently, the IRA resumed the call to violence, and their first place to hit was not in the Northwest, but in London. Hit someone where it counts? No, not there, but in their pocket book instead.

The bombing of the hub of London's business quarter, the Canary Wharf, once again signalled the start of IRA terrorism against England. Headlines across the world blasted the renewal of conflict, but where I was, I didn't think a thing about It. Yeah, it bothered me, but I never thought it could happen to me. Even after a few false alarms in Manchester, I still never thought it could happen to me. It never did, but on the other hand, it almost did.

My year on exchange ended in June, and both tears of joy and sorrow were shed by myself and my friends. I had to leave some very special people behind, and losing them just for the time being really hurt me. After a week of readjustment, though, I started to get back into the American flow, until I saw the Sunday headline of The Boston Globe.

A week after I had left Manchester, on the street that I walked on an endless amount of times; on the spot where me and my flatmates would walk by almost every Saturday afternoon of the year — and, who knows, where my own friends could still be walking by — an IRA car bomb went off, injuring over 200 people.

The warning to the media gave enough time for people to get away from the bomb, but not enough to feel its shock waves. I felt the psychological shock waves on my couch in peaceful central Massachusetts down to my bone marrow. Rebuilding is still being done because of the structural damage done on the neighboring area, and the overall structure of Anglo-Irish relations has had to be rebuilt as well.

If you think terrorism is logical, it was a logical time to do it. Euro '96 (i.e. European Soccer Championships) was going on at historic Old Trafford, and fans all over the Continent were in Manchester to witness the spectacle.

Well, a different sort of spectacle occurred. Each newspaper in each of those countries spelled out the nature of a united Ireland, written in blood by the hands of its harshest protagonists — violence.

I believe in a united Ireland, but not through violence.

A very large percentage of Irish people believe in a united Ireland as well, but their voice of reason and peace was lost in the shattering volume of blind, utter violence. Some of my Irish friends (who do support Irish independence) don't even buy discs of The Cranberries, Sinead O'Connor or even Van Morrison because of their alleged sponsoring of Irish para- military groups. You don't hear that everyday do you?

But, for me, what it all comes down to is this: when you are walking down North Pleasant or Main Street, and see all of the leprechauns and green plastered all over the shop windows, just picture that peaceful street and those shop windows being blown out instantaneously by a car bomb.

All these cute little reminders of what American advertisers consider to be St. Patrick's Day is a sham. There are people across the pond, on both sides of the debate, that are losing their lives every month over varying conceptions of Ireland... walking streets just like ours. Hopefully, this spring will bring better news for those people.

Raise a glass to them. Enjoy that state of peace you have here in the States, but make sure it's a tempered one.

Am I buggin' ya? I don't mean to bug ya.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

Dylan's long career: 35 years of a music sage

By Joshua Boyd & Justin Beland
Collegian Staff

No other artist in the 20th century has been more closely scrutinized, more mimicked, or more loved and hated (read misunderstood) than Robert Allen Zimmerman, whom everybody for the last 35 years, has known as Bob Dylan. The modern musician who can lay claim to having written songs (such as "Blowin' In The Wind," and "The Times They Are A-Changin'") that are almost as well known as "London Bridge." After fleeing the life the stagnant Hibbing, Minnesota life with the yearning to live as a musician, the young boy took off to New York City, where he changed his name and his entire history to suit his own whims and to get farther into the Greenwich Village scene. He played for some friends at some parties, did some gigs at the Gaslight and Gerdes' Folk City, and released his debut album on March 19, 1962. Within a couple of years, he did nothing less than revolutionize society and make the people who supported every government action, every business scheme for profit and every racist act, think twice about their actions and their whole existence. He was an amalgamation of James Joyce and James Dean — intelligence combined with youth rebellion. And he was that voice.

Dylan's travelling shows have gone from painful ordeals to intense portraits of a man who knows what he's good at and how to display his rediscovered talents.

Joshua Boyd & Justin Beland

Years went by and besides putting out classic albums (see selected discography), he lived through many events that are now legendary in musical history. In the '60s, he stood up for every cause; shared a bed with Joan Baez; introduced The Beatles to marijuana; got booed off the Newport Folk Festival '65 stage for "going electric"; got in a 1967 motorcycle accident that may or may not have happened; conceived the leader of one of the hottest current rock bands (The Wallflowers' lead singer and writer Jakob Dylan); hung out with a bunch of Italians from Toronto (The Band) in a basement in an ugly pink house in Woodstock, New York.; and was one of the first artists to explore country– rock.

The '70s, however, were Dylan's biggest time of change. If any of you have ever seen a chameleon, you've got the idea. He was a good friend of poet Allen Ginsberg (that spells trouble right there), tried to be a movie star [PAT GARRETT: "Who are you?" ALIAS (Bob): "That's a good question"), did a tour that was an argument on wheels with The Band, led the biggest bunch of musicians, filmmakers and freaks across America disguised as The Rolling Thunder Revue, suffered a vicious divorce from his wife of 10–plus years (Jakob's mother, Sara), and towards the end of the decade, he found Jesus.

This religious awakening found its way on record, and on stage in the '80s. There were many lectures between songs to those in a concert crowd who may have not believed. This alienated many old fans, but brought him some new ones, also. He went on to start drinking more to the general harm of himself and his fans, and even tried making another movie, Hearts Of Fire, which was a classic flop and which decimated an already bruised reputation.

By 1985, with such minuscule efforts as Empire Burlesque and Knocked Out Loaded, the fingers were starting to point at Dylan for being a washed–up old star. A hope to revive himself in the company of some old friends in a band who, in 1987, were enjoying refound success (The Grateful Dead) didn't help, as his blunt efforts in teaming up with the Dead on stage practically ruined the more successful band's summer tour that year. He did have one glimmer of success near the end of the decade, as a musical liaison with The Traveling Wilburys re–awakened him to the idea of good musicianship and no–bull songwriting.

He went on to bring himself and his best friend, the liquor bottle, into the '90s. His drunken exploits led him to further ridicule. A story close to home goes that after his horrendous 1991 UMass Spring Concert appearance, he vomited right after leaving the stage (The Collegian headline for the story that followed read: "Dylan disheveled, awn miffed"). His 1991 acceptance speech at the Grammys for the lifetime achievement award was a drunken grumble with good intentions, thanking his parents for everything.

COURTESY COLUMBIA RECORDS

Desire, released in 1976, was a high point in Dylan's roller–coaster 35–year career.

In 1992, a whole bunch of friends joined him onstage for his 30th Anniversary, televised worldwide on public television. By this time, Dylan had realized that a decade of alcoholism was too much, and that he was a musician, and that was what was most important to him. Despite his unwillingness to write many new songs since 1991's Under The Red Sky (except for 1994's "Dignity"), his travelling shows have gone from painful ordeals to intense portraits of a man who knows what he is good at and how to display his rediscovered talents. Recent tours have seen the best turn–outs since The Rolling Thunder Revue. With the 1995 death of one of his best friends, Jerome Kern Garcia, he mourned by paying tribute, introducing such Grateful Dead songs as "Alabama Getaway" and "Friend Of The Devil" into his setlists. New artists such as Jewel and Ani DiFranco clamor to open for his shows, and onstage he has also enjoyed the company of veterans such as former Steely Dan guitarist Bucky Baxter, former Eurythmics guitarist/songwriter Dave Stewart, and even Patti Smith.

For those of you who love (or have always kept a silent love for) Dylan, you will get your chance sooner than you think to see him, as there has been an East Coast tour announced for April and May (no confirmed local dates yet), and he went back into the recording studio with a new book of originals to be produced by Daniel Lanois, who had previously worked with Dylan on 1989's Oh Mercy as well as past U2 and Nine Inch Nails albums.

After 35 years of a career that has seen dizzying high points and genuinely embarrassing low points, Dylan has swept all that behind him and continues on a momentum that he has chosen for himself.

This momentum should keep him moving off to the side and past the current, depressing "alternative rock" sound, and ahead into a new century. But with a man called "Alias," you never know what to expect.

The classic Dylan albums

The records that made it all happen

By Justin Beland
Collegian Correspondent

Trying to pick the "best of" an artist with 42 albums and over 500 songs is an arduous task in and of itself. Dylan makes it that much tougher in that some of his best songs never make it on albums (witness the Bootleg Series, Vol. 1–3, which contains such masterpieces as "Let Me Die In My Footsteps," "Angelina" and the immaculate "Blind Willie McTell"). Even his most heavily criticized albums (Down In the Groove, Knocked Out Loaded) contain flahses of genius ("Silvio" and "Brownsville Girl," respectively). Likewise, his live recordings range from mediocre (Real Live) to outstanding ("Isis," on the Biograph retrospective). The following are the peaks of a roller–coaster 35–year (and counting) career, in chronological order.

Questioning others and laughing at himself became trademarks Dylan would carry for years.

Justin Beland

•The Freewheelin' Bob Dylan (May 27, 1963) — From the questions of "Blowin' In the Wind" through the raucous "I Shall Be Free," Dylan's second album, the first with all originals, paints a portrait of an artist unlike any other the world had ever seen. Questioning others and laughing at himself became trademarks Dylan would carry for years.

•The Times They Are A-Changin' (Jan. 13, 1964) — The title track sent a message to the older generation that the revolution was underway. The album deals more with social injustice than Freewheelin', incorporating stories familiar to everyone in the country at the time. "Only A Pawn In Their Game" talks of the murder of civil rights leader Medgar Evers — but in a display of Dylan's magical use of lyrics, it is not an outcry to Evers' killer, but a condemnation of white Southern politicians' use of uneducated white men as a tool against the Civil Rights movement. "Lonesome Death of Hattie Carroll" is the true story of a black 51–year–old mother of 10 killed by William Zanzinger, a 22–year–old Southern plantation owner. The album also contains two of Dylan's most touching love songs, "Boots of Spanish Leather" and "One Too Many Mornings."

•Bringing It All Back Home (March 22, 1965) — Half acoustic, half electric, the album meshed the past Dylan with future Dylan in music and lyrics. Not everyone got the surrealistic lyrics, but not many seemed to mind. Cries against society such as "Maggie's Farm" and "It's Alright, Ma, I'm Only Bleeding" meshed with beautiful ballads like "It's All Over Now Baby Blue," and rollicking raps like "Subterranean Homesick Blues" and "115th Dream." It also contains Dylan's nod to the drug culture, "Mr. Tambourine Man."

•Highway 61 Revisited (Aug. 30, 1965) — No one was prepared for breadth and scope of this album. "Something is happening and you don't know what it is," Dylan sang to critics and critical fans. His metamorphosis to rock was complete, and with the exception of the sprawling, 9–minute acoustic "Desolation Row," the album was all upbeat. "Like A Rolling Stone" kicked off the rollicking ride through Dylan's dark, swirling visions that included "Tombatone Blues," the classic blow–off song "Queen Jane Approximately," "Just Like Tom Thumb's Blues" and the title track.

•Blonde On Blonde (May 16, 1966) — Widely regarded as the best rock album ever made, Dylan completed his rock "trilogy" with songs he himself described as "the closest I ever got to the sound I hear in my mind... It's that thin wild mercury sound. It's metallic and bright gold, that's my particular sound." Ranging from silly ("Rainy Day Women #12 & 35"), to trademark Dylan poetics ("Visions Of Johanna," "Temporary Like Achilles") to lilting love songs ("I Want You," "Sad–Eyed Lady of the Lowlands" — a song dedicated to his new wife Sara, whom Dylan had secretly married in Nov. of 1965).

•John Wesley Harding (Dec. 27, 1967) — After coming out of seclusion after his supposed motorcycle accident, Dylan shocked everyone by returning to his folk roots. Released in the context of Sgt. Pepper's and the Stones' At Her Satanic Majesty's Request, both of which utilized styles and imagery Dylan helped create, the album cared more about the natural sound of instruments. His vocals were rounded and softer — anger transformed into calm resignation even when articulating complaints against the wicked as in "Drear Landlord" and "I Pity The Poor Immigrant." The only tense moments come in the original acoustic "All Along The Watchtower."

•Blood On the Tracks (Jan. 17, 1975) — By 1974, Dylan was being blasted by fans and critics alike, and his marriage to Sara was failing. It came to a boil with this album. Dylan was immediately Dylan again, the poignant clarity of Free- wheelin' was married to the complex emotional undertones of Blonde on Blonde, and it was a lot closer to a perfect album than anyone expected. "Idiot Wind" is the most personal song he has ever written. Other songs range from narratives like "Tangled Up In Blue" and the nine– minute "Lily, Rosemary and the Jack of Hearts" to hypnotic blues riffs ("Meet Me In the Morning") to beautiful love songs ("Shelter From the Storm").

•Desire (Jan. 16, 1976) — This album marked a direct turnaround for someone who had always scorned literal interpretation. The narrative style of these songs ("Hurricane," "Joey" and "Black Diamond Bay") was more direct than it had ever been. Dylan brought in Scarlett Rivera, whom he found on a streetcorner playing for quarters, to provide the haunting violin that permeates the album. He also brought in then–new country singer Emmylou Harris to sing with him and bring to fruition some of the most beautiful, chilling harmonies ever heard. Dylan weaves moods that are simultaneously dark and romantic, such as in "Romance In Durango" and "One Cup of Coffee." This album leaves a pleasant, dry taste in the mouth as if you and your lover had just come through a desert.

•Infidels (Nov. 1, 1983) — During a tumultuous down– point of his career following the Rolling Thunder Revue, Dylan became a born–again Christian, giving that up for Orthodox Judaism, and then finally returning to the skeptic he always was. The fans felt after 21 years, he was finally washed up. Then came Infidels. From the beginning the album left a powerful impression. The first song, "Jokerman," was laden with dreams and visions, made even more otherworldly with the Dire Straits' Mark Knopfler's phenomenal guitar technique. "Neighborhood Bully" defended Israeli Nationalism. "Union Sundown" bore down on the rapidly rising trend of American businesses moving overseas. "I & I" parallelled "idiot Wind" in its rejection of someone who just doesn't understand.

•Oh Mercy (Sept. 22, 1989) — Dylan's all–time low came directly after Infidels and lasted until 1989 when, inexplicably, in 1989 everything, absolutely everything, came back into focus. Coming on the heels of the critically acclaimed Traveling Wilburys Vol. 1, Oh Mercy proved Dylan was back. He made even his most critical fans stand up and take notice. "Everything Is Broken" became a "Subterranean Homesick Blues" for fortysomethings. "Most of the Time" and "Shooting Star" rank among the most passionate songs he has ever written. The album was confident, coherent, and proved Dylan could compete with yet another generation of musicians that he himself had influenced.

Discover Stars on Ice to bring the best to the Valley

By Julia Casson
Collegian Staff

These days it seems like every time you turn on the television there is a figure skating special on. Ice skating is continuously growing and capturing audiences of all ages.

The Pioneer Valley will be graced with the presence of Discover Stars on Ice next week at the Mullins Center. Some of the best singles and pairs skaters from around the world will be in Amherst for a one night performance.

The show features well–knowna names such as Kristi Yamaguchi, Scott Hamilton and Ekaterina Gordeeva amongst ten others. Stars on Ice began its 61–city tour last November and will close out the 1996/97 season at the end of March.

Perhaps the group's most famous name is Kristi Yamaguchi. She has been dubbed "the best skater in the world" by numerous sportscasters and it is not hard to see why. She was world champion in 1991 and 1992 and captured the world's heart as she won gold in 1992 at the Albertville Winter Olympics. This season will mark Yamaguchi's fifth year with Stars on Ice.

Ekaterina Gordeeva and late husband Sergei Grinkov caught the attention of audiences as they won Olympic gold medals in 1988 and 1994 and together brought home four world championships. Grinkov died tragically in 1995 of heart failure and Gordeeva began her singles skating career later that year. Gordeeva recently wrote a best–seller depicting her life and marriage entitled My Sergei: A Love Story.

The renowned attention–getter, Scott Hamilton always seems to bring the audience to their feet. His endless energy, joking personality and signature backflips have made him a favorite amongst fans. He won a gold medal in the 1984 Sarajevo games and won four consecutive world championships from 1981 to 1984.

The evening will also include Canadian figure skater Kurt Browning. Browning has won several championships including four world and four Canadian and has also skated in the 1992 and 1994 Olympics. He is regarded as an energetic and fresh skater who wows the audience with his impressive jumps and moves.

A local favorite from Somerville MA, Paul Wylie, will be performing. He snatched the silver medal in 1992 and surprised many as skating his best performance.

Gold medal duo, Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean are one of skating's most popular double teams. The chemistry and fire that they possess won them the 1984 gold medal when they skated what is considered the greatest performance in figure skating history.

Elena Bechke and Denis Petrov and Radka Kovarkova and Rene Novotny are two additional pairs skaters who will be performing. Bechke and Petrov are 1992 Silver medalists and have participated in Stars on Ice for three seasons. Kovarka and Novotny are a married team from the Czech Republic. They skated in six world championships and two Olympica and were the 1995 world champions.

Rosalyn Sumners, 1984 silver medalist, and Jill Trenary, 1990 world champion will round off this complete list of world renowned ice skaters.

The production is directed and choreographed by Sandra Bezic, an Olympic and world champion, and promises to be a night of powerful performances and exciting stars.

Discover Stars on Ice will be presented on Friday, March 21 at the Mullins Center at UMass. For ticket information call TicketMaster at (413) 733–2500.

The Afflictions provide a different listening experience

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

Do you like songs about girls, drunken buffoonery, interesting people and stuff? How about a band influenced by the Replacements, Elvis Costello, Make Up and Ben Block? Do you like a band, who according to their lead singer, Jeremy Willis sound like what would happen if you "filled up a submarine with polka musicians and set them all on fire then you dropped it on top of a Shriners' convention and play punk influenced, progressive, garage pop while watching that spectacle?" You have The Afflictions.

That's right, the Afflictions have come to save you from your musical doldrums. The band that played their first show before Thanksgiving with Holiday, Just About Done and the Radio Angels in Greenough House are making quite a stir on the UMass campus. The band is made up of Jeremy Willis the lead singer and guitarist, Nate Langeley on bass and sideburns and Mike Colin on drums and spiritual guidance.

In a conversation with Willis and Colin last Friday, they spoke on their band, and their success.

According to Willis, success of the Afflictions can be attributed to the fact "everyone loves us because we're the best looking band in America and because Mike [Colin] broke Dave Matthews' nose. Honestly, I can't tell what people think because they're not honest, I mean It's hard to tell someone you don't like their band."

Another attribute of the band's success could be the mutual respect they have for each other. That friendship really comes through in their songwriting.

"Initially I wrote all the songs and they added little embellishments and their own parts but recently we've been working together to create this weird synthesis and it rocks," Willis said.

"This Is the first band that I've been in where everyone gets along and no one has attitudes. We're all straightforward and we all try to incorporate our styles, and no one has egos. Now we also jam more and we all have ideas for grooves which we work together. It's becoming more of a band; it used to be all Jeremy's and now we all do it," Colin said.

According to Colin, the band is Influenced by more then just drunken buffoonery.

"I think that as a musician, in my drumming I express everything that went on that day, that goes on in my life is in my drums. I take that energy of life and put it out through my music and it represents me."

As for the local UMass scene...

"There's a lot of different scenes that most people don't pay much attention to. It's pretty pathetic how few college kids get involved in the scene or only show interest in one particular scene. There's a lot of great stuff going on here, go check out Hallraker, Just About Done and all the great shows at Pearl Street, the dorms and the Iron Horse," Willis said.

The band started when Colin and Willis, who lived in Brett House, during a drunken daze, discovered that I angeley played bass, and thus, the seeds were planted. Then when the Colonel Matt Wang bet Willis $25 that he wouldn't start the band, Willis began the Afflictions because, according to him, he was broke and needed the money.

The Afflictions are a unique garage–punk–pop band with a lot of soul, so go check them out.

"We want to play in front of as many people as possible, to record, to play anywhere, parties, bar–mitzvah's, bowling alleys, clubs, whatever. We just want to rock and we'd like the world to know that Matt Wang rules."

The Afflictions will be playing March 28 at Hampshire College with Hallraker. They will also be playing at the Loud Music Fest at Pearl Street in April along with Showcase Showdown and a host of others. You can contact the Afflictions through Jeremy Willis at 405 Brett House or call him at 546–3292.

Have a nice SPRING BREAK!
from:
The Collegian Arts & Living Staff!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Excellent 4 bedroom/2 bath apt. on bus line. Beginning 6/1/97 Call 253-8301 4 info.

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Ford Escort 5-speed. A/C. 119K, runs well $1900 or B/O 530-8413

EMPLOYMENT

AUSTRALIA EMPLOYMENT Student jobs, teachers, professional, skill trades. Working/adventure hols. 18+. M/F, single/Married. Detailed legal employment and travel instructions. (208)725-0311

Legal Assistants Wanted- Fall 1997 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office, get hands-on experience in the Legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the Legal profession necessary— training provided. Stop by the office today and pick up an application. 922 Campus Center

Local Computer Dealer starting reseller program. Perfect for students. Earn excellent $$$$$ without altering your schedule! No investment, commitment. Voice (413)863- 8989 E-Mail 8wake107@aol.com

Technical Support/ISP Looking for a great part-time job? We are a local, progressive, internet service provider that is looking for Dxability, Energetic, and Reliable persons to join our team. Requirements: experience in Windows 95, Windows 3.1, Mac, Dialup Networking and TC PIP Call our job hotline today! (413)587-4333 or e-mail jobs@crocker.com

EMPLOYMENT

Loving, responsible, non-smoker to care for 2 year old infant sons in South Hadley home. References required! 536-1898

Summer Jobs: Martha's Vineyard Island Food Products is now accepting applications for warehouse/delivery positions. Housing available for exceptional candidates. Interviews will be held in Amherst on Wednesday, March 19. For more info or application, Contact Brian C. Smith, IFP. Box 4068, Vineyard Haven, MA 02568 (508)693-2030

Cruise Lines Hiring Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel (Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary (919)918-7767 ext C180 (Member, Better Business Bureau CARE Program)

Alaska Employment Earn up to $3000-$6000+/month in fisheries, parks, resorts, airlines. Food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180.

Drivers Wanted Apply at Pinnacboa's between 2:00pm and 5:00pm No phone calls.

NATIONAL PARK EMPLOYMENT- Work in America's National Parks, Forests and Wildlife Preserves. Our materials uncover rewarding opportunities in the outdoors. Call (208)897-3624 ext. N50018 (We are a research and publishing company)

Belchertown Recreation Dept. Seeking swim coaches (May-July) Experience preferred. M-F, EOE, ADA. Call Beth, Dav (413)323-0413 Night: (413)967-4051

EMPLOYMENT

National Parks Hiring Plus Forest, Beach Resorts, Ranches, Retiring Companies. Up to $12/hour Nationwide Openings. Call (919)918-7767 ext. R180

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details to: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-8000

FOR SALE

Leather Jacket Black Classic Biker Style Jacket. Mens Size XL. "Wilson's" Leather Thinsulate Call 546-8723

FOUND

Necklace- Silver with green beads- it's heavy. Call Claire to identify 772-5084

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Aaron,

Happy 19th Birthday! I hope this is one of the happiest! Hey, maybe since it's your birthday, I'll let you play DIABLO, naah! I Love You! Ariel

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

HAPPY BIRTHDAY SEAN!

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT
30 hours, $395
American Academy
1-800-806-Prep
(please leave your name and number)

LOST

REWARD
Lost Gold Rings
Call Lisa 546-0311

MUSICIANS

DRUMMER WANTED
Punk/Ska Band 25 Liars needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming. Call Dave and Ryan 805-8112

MISCELLANEOUS

Pledged and didn't like it? Start your own Fraternity! Vista Beta Tau is looking for men to start a new chapter. If you are interested in academic success, a chance to network and an opportunity to make friends in a non-pledging brotherhood, e-mail ZB1@BTNetbrnet.org Or call Brent Hrbeck at (317)334-1898

SEEKING FINANCIAL AID? Get the system to help find FREE MONEY FOR COLLEGE! Detailed profiles on 200,000+ individual rewards from private and public sectors. Call Student Financial Services (800)472-9575 ext. FSD017 (We are a research and publishing company)

88 HONDA ACCORD This baby's HOT !! Alloy Rims, Rear Spoiler, $350 Sony System, Fog lamps, new exhaust and battery. It's obviously well taken care of. Beg it for $4000. Call Mike at (546- 5192)

PERSONALS

Robyn,

Clue #5 - I like Greek men, and my boyfriend is one of them.

LML Your Big Sis

Abby-

High in the sky is where I reside. In my family you will be filled with PRIDE! Guess who!?

Phi Love, Your Big Sis

ROOMATE WANTED

Looking for female to share an apartment with starting Fall '97. Call Nikki 549-4484

Female to share large bedroom in Puffton. Available ASAP $197.50/month. Call 549-4757 or 885-2087

Two 21 year old males looking for 2 females to live off-campus with for the upcoming school year Call Josh or Scott f. at 548-7128

SERVICES

Resumes: Written, Proofed, Printed Polished, Affordable Packages 548-7042

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

ALTERNATIVE SPRING BREAK Explore Nature/Surf 5 Days Music Dance Sports Meditation Vegetarian Meals Missouri Ozarks. $155 Renaissance Universal (800)886-2367

TRAVEL

Party Weekend In Vermont April 4-6, only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Party In Vermont For Spring Break Only $139 Over 15 colleges attending Free learn to Ski/Snowboard Add $100 for 5-Day Lift Ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13. 2 nights lodging and round trip bus. $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15. studio, $850/week (413)786-7133 Partial kitchen

Killington- Cheap Spring Break $239 for 5 nights,5 days skiing. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED

Looking for used UMass Alumni Directory Mark (413)748-4695

Collegian Classifieds wishes you a great and safe
Spring Break !!

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS!
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, MARCH 14

Lecture — James A. Simmons, from Brown University psychology department, will speak on "Dynamics of Perception by Acoustic Images in Echolocating Bats," in Morrill Science Center II, room 319 at 4 p.m. Part of the UMass Neuroscience and Behavior Program Seminars.

SATURDAY, MARCH 15

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe will hold an improv comedy show, Mission Improvable, at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center basement at 8 p.m. Free.

NOTICES

Elections — Elections for Student Government President, Trustee and local area government positions have been rescheduled to March 26 and 27 due to the student takeover of Goodell last week. Polling locations to be announced.-

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545–9484.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one–acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to Department of Comparative Lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Band wanted — Amnesty International is looking for a Jazz Band to play for its upcoming fundraiser this spring. If interested, call the Amnesty office at 549–1925 or Babz at 546–3105 as soon as possible.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Evergyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. In Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore).

The schedule will also be available on the World Wide Web beginning March 3 at http://www–ureg.admin.umass.edu.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air, Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Final exams — The spring 1997 Final Examination schedule will be available beginning March 13. Copies will be delivered to students in the residence halls, and will be available to off–campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore).

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545–9484.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one–acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to Department of Comparative Lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Band wanted — Amnesty International is looking for a Jazz Band to play for its upcoming fundraiser this spring. If interested, call the Amnesty office at 549–1925 or Babz at 546–3105 as soon as possible.

Elections — Elections for Student Government President, Trustee and local area government positions have been rescheduled to March 26 and 27 due to the student takeover of Goodell last week. Polling locations to be announced.-

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545–9484.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one–acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to Department of Comparative Lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air, Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

PYs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Member O.C.M.P.
"we accept all major credit cards"

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN	Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Channel
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	UMATV
17	HSCN	Programming
18	TV-19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	CNN
24	CNN/Headline	News
25	BET
26	BET on Jazz
27	UCTV
28	The Learning	Channel
29	TV Land
30	Comedy Central
32	Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

$1 drinks Vodka Tonic & always $1 Bud "light draft

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 14, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Ira Gershwin at 100: A Celebration at Carnegie Hall				On Gershwin	McLaughlin
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	College Basketball: NCAA Tournament First Round Game – Teams TBA					College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. First Rd. Game – Teams TBA
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	College Basketball: NCAA Tournament First Round Game – Teams TBA					College Basketball: NCAA Tourn. First Rd. Game – Teams TBA
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Family Matters	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Step by Step	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.	"Angel II: The Final Chapter" (1985, Drama) Mitzi Kapture.				News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)	Crisis Center (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8		Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV (R)	"The Heidi Chronicles" (1995) Jamie Lee Curtis, Tom Hulce.			News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV (R)
WVIT	9		News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)	Crisis Center (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	10	61	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home	Coach	Sliders "The Breeder"		When Dreamers Strive (R)	News		Coach Jr.	Step Space II
WWLP	11	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)	Crisis Center (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	12	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Your Financial Future			John Tesh: The Avalon Concert (R) (In Stereo)
WGGB	13	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Family Matters	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Step by Step	20/20	News	Nightline
WSBK	14		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld		Mad Abo. You		Mad Abo. You	NBA Basketball: Boston Celtics at San Antonio Spurs. (Live)		Mad Abo. You	Real TV (R)
WTBS	15		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	"The Cutting Edge" (1992, Comedy) D.B. Sweeney.					"Weird Science" (1985, Comedy) Anthony Michael Hall.
AAE	16		Gubny "Double Death"		Equalizer		Biography			"The Shadow Riders" (1982, Western) Tom Selleck.		Law & Order "Self Defense"
CNN	17		World View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof		Larry King Live		World Today	Sports Bus.	Moneyline
COM	18		Tick	Dream On	Brian Regan	Gallagher: The Meddest (R)		A-List (R)		Comics Come Home (R)		Dana Carvey: Critic's Choice	Drew Carey	Comics-Home
DISC	19		Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings "The Great Pretzel War"		Wild Discovery	Wild River		Invention	Beyond 2000	Wings "Thunder From the Sea"	Wild Discovery	Wild River
ESPN	20		Up Close	Sportscenter		Legends of Hockey		Boxing: World Championship. (Live)				Baseball	Sportscenter
LIFE	21		Supermarket	Debt	Dish	3 Blind Dates	Wire	Pandora		"Grieving 2: The New Batch" (1990, Fantasy) Zach Galligan.		Dish (R)	3 Blind Dates
MTV	22		Ren & Stimpy	Week in Rock	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Music Videos	(In Stereo)				Beavis-Butt.	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	23		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Pagrats	Kablam!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Munsters		M.T. Moore	Rhoda	Odd Couple
SCIFI	25		Twilight Zone	Darkside	She-Wolf of London			"Puppet Master 5: The Final Chapter" (1994) Gordon Currie.				Friday the 13th: The Series	She-Wolf of London
TLC	26		Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Quest (R)	What a World	Rogues Gallery			Gloria's Toxic Death (R)	Quest (R)	What a World
TNT	27		In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		"The End" (1978, Comedy) Burt Reynolds, Sally Field.					"The Librarian" (1993, Horror) Ellen Burstyn.
USA	29		Renegade (In Stereo)		Highlander: The Series		"A Kiss Before Dying" (1991, Suspense) Matt Dillon.			La Femme Nikita "Cry" (R)		Sweet Cat" (1990) (In Stereo)
HBO	30		"1-2-3" (1994, Comedy) Meg Ryan. (In Stereo) PG				"Broken Arrow" (1996, Adventure) John Travolta. R			"Lethal Tender" (1997, Adventure) Jeff Fahey. R		Dennis Miller
MAX	31		(6:45)		"Pet Sematary Two" (1992, Horror) Edward Furlong. R		"The Dogfighters" (1996, Suspense) Robert Davi. R			"Heat" (1995, Drama) Al Pacino. (In Stereo) R
SHOW	33		(5:30)	"Hook" (1991, Fantasy) Robin Williams. PG			"Lawnmo	(1992, Drama) Jeff Fahey. R		Outer Limits	Poltergeist: The Legacy	"Digital Man"

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, MARCH 14

Lecture — James A. Simmons, from Brown University psychology department, will speak on "Dynamics of Perception by Acoustic Images in Echolocating Bats," in Morrill Science Center II, room 319 at 4 p.m. Part of the UMass Neuroscience and Behavior Program Seminars.

SATURDAY, MARCH 15

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe will hold an improv comedy show, Mission Improvable, at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center basement at 8 p.m. Free.

NOTICES

Elections — Elections for Student Government President, Trustee and local area government positions have been rescheduled to March 26 and 27 due to the student takeover of Goodell last week. Polling locations to be announced.-

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545–9484.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one–acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to Department of Comparative Lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

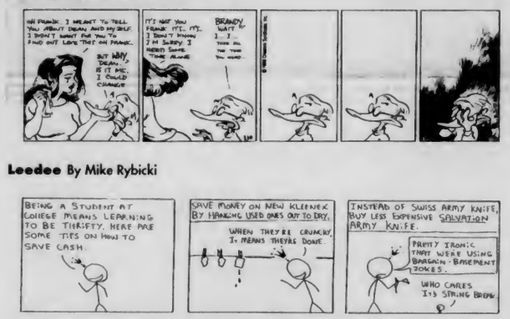
Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air, Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

PYs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

University² By Frank Cho

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
RED SCROD	BIG SCROD
BLUE SCROD	SMALL SCROD
ORANGE SCROD	TALL SCROD
BLACK SCROD	SHORT SCROD

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
IRON SCROD	1 SCROD
COPPER SCROD	2 SCROD
TIN SCROD	3 SCROD
LEAD SCROD	4 SCROD

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
PUNK SCROD	HONDA SCROD
CLASSICAL SCROD	MAZDA SCROD
R & B SCROD	CHEVY SCROD
SKA SCROD	FORD SCROD

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
POP ART SCROD	CD SCROD
BAUHAUS SCROD	TAPE SCROD
AB EX SCROD	8-TRACK SCROD
CUBIST SCROD	VINAL SCROD

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
As you approach a decision, try to ignore outside interference. A clear head will point you in the right direction. An explosive situation heats up—using tact may be your only hope for resolution.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Beat the heat with an outdoor activity. A fresh insight at work prevents burnout for you and your colleagues. When a friend approaches you for advice, consider carefully before you speak. Double meanings may work against you this time.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
A cheerful companion is in need of support this week as a difficult time reaches its peak. If you feel taken for granted, consider all of the demands on that person's time and attention before voicing your complaint.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
A great opportunity approaches from an unexpected direction. Use a light touch in breaking some news to superiors at work—your tact will earn you extra respect and influence.

LEO
July 23-August 23
If it seems like there are a million things to do, just try to get the most important ones done. Perseverance pays off eventually. Curb a tendency to worry by focusing on the positive aspects of a situation.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
It's a good time for reviewing all of your options, rather than for making large decisions and commitments. Make a small, healthy change rather than a sweeping lifestyle alteration.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Spending extra time with a family member seems increased closeness and renewed insight. A tense situation at work may worsen. Try to regain perspective at home, away from the politics.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
A domestic dispute that you thought was resolved may still be simmering beneath the surface. Make the extra effort to ask another how they feel, and you'll reap the benefits in the form of goodwill and decreased tension.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
A fragile mate or companion is in need of extra TLC this week. Do not allow professional and personal commitments to interfere with your relationships. This could be an unusually important time in your life.

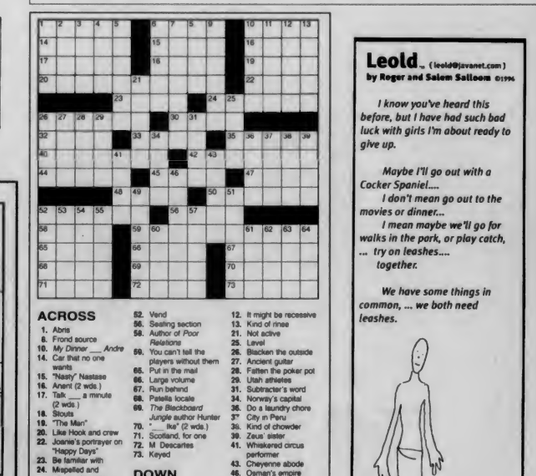
CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
A successful event has you flying high as the week begins, but beware an eventual letdown. Plunge into work to keep occupied, but rely on a close companion to ease the quiet dismay you feel.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A special treat for the one you love the most pays dividends for both of you. They'll feel renewed and appreciative of your thoughtfulness, and you'll know you were a source of support.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
If an older person is cranky, allow extra time to listen to what's really bothering them. You may have the power to solve their problems. An innuendo may indicate cause for followup—it's a good week for romance.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson



"Whoa! Up 14 pounds since November! What'd you do? Get a job at a doughnut shop?!"

Quote of the Day

"-What's on the menu for tonight, sir?
-Ahh! Your favorite dish!"

-Mark Renton and Mother Superior from "Trainspotting"

ACROSS
1. Abris
6. Frond source
10. My Dinner ___ Andre
14. Car that no one wants
15. "Nasty" Nastase
16. Anent (2 wds.)
17. Talk ___ a minute (2 wds.)
18. Stouts
19. "The Man"
20. Like Hook and crew
22. Joanie's portrayer on "Happy Days"
23. Be familiar with
24. Mispelled and mistyped words
26. Contract term
30. Novelist Morante
32. Peck's partner
33. Taunted
35. Nada
40. Certifies
42. Like an unopened Band-Aid
44. Della or Pee Wee
46. Be beaten
47. Persian poet
48. Thanks ___! (2 wds.)
50. Hat or Canal
52. Vend
56. Seeling section
58. Author of Poor Relations
59. You can't tell the players without them
60. Put in the mail
66. Large volume
67. Run behind
68. Patella locale
69. The Blackboard Jungle author Hunter
70. "___ Ike" (2 wds.)
71. Scotland, for one
72. M. Descartes
73. Keyed

DOWN
1. Tito, e.g.
2. Partial prefix
3. Painter Nolde
4. Barbie or Ken, e.g.
5. Creeps
6. Rubinstein's instrument
7. Permitted
8. Place
9. Disorders
10. More prudent
11. Within: prefix
12. It might be recessive
13. Kind of rinse
21. Not active
25. Level
26. Blacken the outside
27. Ancient gutter
28. Fatten the poker pot
29. Utah athletes
31. Subtractor's word
34. Norway's capital
36. Do a laundry chore
37. City in Peru
38. Kind of chowder
39. Zeus' sister
41. Whiskered circus performer
43. Cheyenne abode
45. Osman's empire
49. Director Richard
51

UMass to face Louisville in first round of NCAA Tournament

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

It is a whole new season for the Massachusetts men's basketball team. Once the name UMass had come onto the television screen during Sunday night's NCAA Tournament selection show, every one of the No. 11 East seeded Minutemen felt the relief of not only receiving a berth to the tourney, but also of having the chance to almost start over.

"We're starting 0-0 right now, and that's what we needed," guard Charlton Clarke said of getting a fresh start in the tournament. "We need a 0-0 start and we have it. It's like new life has been pumped into us."

UM vs. Louisville
NCAA First Round

Clarke is not the only team member to feel that way.

"The team has a new life now that we're in the tournament," Lari Ketner said.

Though unlike many teams' regular early season slate, being in the tournament means the Minutemen will start with a heavy hitter. The one they drew was No. 6 seed Louisville, a team they will face tonight at 10:10 p.m.

Many are predicting the Louisville–UMass game to be the closest of all the 6–11 games. Las Vegas oddsmakers have put the Minutemen as a one–point underdog, while the other No. 6 seeds rate as three to four point favorites.

"I feel we can make a lot of noise in this bracket," Clarke said." But I keep telling everyone, Louisville is first."

One of the reasons the line is so close is that each team features strong guards. UMass' backcourt duties are in the hands of Edgar Padilla, Carmelo Travieso and Clarke, while the Cardinals rely on DeJuan Wheat and Alvin Sims.

"To win at tournament time, you have to have good guard play," Louisville coach Denny Crum said. "Of course, you have to have good guard play all the time. Those guards at UMass don't make many mistakes. They are obviously outstanding players and they have been to the Final Four."

Louisville's guards aren't shabby either.

"They're really athletic and their guards are very, very good," Padilla said.

Wheat is the player to note in the Louisville backcourt. The senior is averaging 18.1 points per game, a figure that leads his team. His average, the highest a Cardinal player has had since the 1979–80 season, is one of the reasons he has become the No. 3 all–time scorer at Louisville with 2,136 points.

It is Travieso who has drawn the unenviable task of defending the Cardinal star.

"I've faced him before," Travieso said. "But it's not going to be me against him, it's going to be UMass against Louisville."

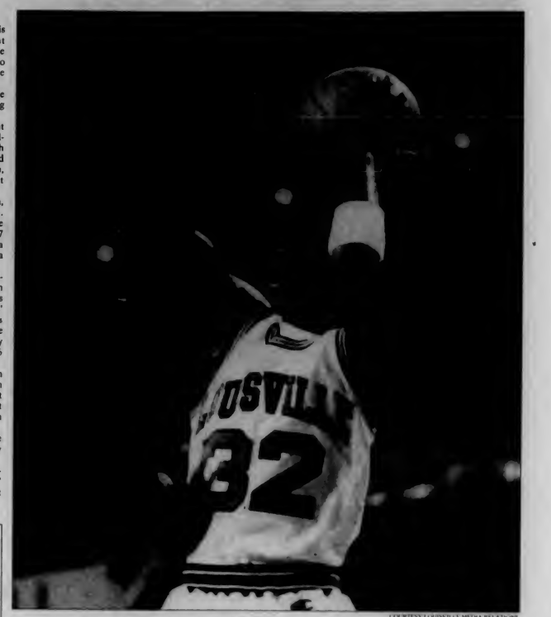
UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint knows that Wheat is one of the main reasons for Louisville's success.

"I think we've gotta contain Wheat," Flint said. "Wheat makes those guys all better. When he plays really well, they play really well."

However, Flint knows Louisville is not a one–man show, and that Conference USA Freshman of the Year Nate Johnson will also have to be contained in order for the Minutemen to be successful.

Therefore, Flint has assigned the 6–foot–3 Clarke the duty of guarding the 6–foot–6 Johnson.

"[Clarke]'s played guys like that before," Flint said. "Charlton guarded Rashaan Palmer and he's much bigger than Johnson. He guarded [Keith] Booth in the Maryland game, so he's been in match–ups like that all year."



What Louisville is lacking, though, is a dominating inside presence. UMass' paint combo of the 6–foot–10 Ketner and 6–foot–7 senior Tyrone Weeks can pack a punch that will be contested by a pair who both stand 6–foot–7.

Case in point: The Cardinals leading shot–blocker is forward Damien Dantzler, who has swatted 29 shots this season, 50 in his career. UMass' main block threat is Ketner, who has turned back 72 shots this season (the only one of his career so far). By comparison, Inus Norville has 26 blocks.

"We're going to be working on [our inside game] all week," Crum said. "We need more production out of our front line. They have to at least hold their own. That has been our weakness all year long."

Either way, everyone on the UMass squad now knows how important this "new" season is.

"That's what they say the tournament is for, it's a new season," UMass forward\center Ajmal Basit said.

COURTESY LOUISVILLE MEDIA RELATIONS

DeJuan Wheat and the Cardinals are the first round opponents of UMass tonight in the Pittsburgh Civic Center.

Men's lax set to battle No.5 VA; look to push winning streak to 3

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

With a pair of tune–ups already behind them, when the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team takes the field tomorrow, it will be showtime.

For the No. 14 Minutemen (2–0), showtime means a 3:30 p.m. tilt with No. 5 Virginia in Charlottesville, a task that UMass has struggled with in years past. The Cavaliers have dominated the all–time series, 5–0.

MEN'S LACROSSE VS
VIRGINIA

But the majority of those wins have come early in the season. Virginia, playing in the South, doesn't have to face snow or other weather–related problems, while in many of those early games, the bulk of UMass' preparation had come on either asphalt of the rickety hardwood of Boyden Gym.

This year is different however.

Coach Greg Cannella brings a talented veteran–led squad that has two games under its belt already. Virginia hasn't exactly sprinted out of the gate either. The Cavs have had to battle top–ranked Princeton and perennial–power Syracuse both on the road and came away with losses in both games. Their lone victory came against Michigan State at home.

Coach Dom Starsia's troops finished just a goal away from earning themselves a National Championship a year ago and their talented level hasn't fallen much. They return a pair frightening offensive weapons. Senior attackmen Michael Watson (56 goals, 30 assists — 86 points) and Doug Knight (49g, 26a —75) make up one of the nation's top scoring tandems.

The Minutemen aren't likely to be intimidated though. The defensive unit featuring veterans Harold Drumm, Greg MacDonald, Adam Waxer, Todd Sokolowski and emerging freshman Eric Sopracassa have all played well in the early going in front of junior goaltender John Kasselakis.

Virginia's defense is no slouch either. UMass star attacker Brendan Glass will likely become well acquainted with UVA's Tommy Smith this weekend, as the 1996 First–team All–American will likely shadow Glass.

To have any hope for success against the vaunted Cavs, UMass

Turn to LACROSSE, page 3

UMass to spend break in Florida

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Like many college students, the Massachusetts baseball team is spending its spring break in Florida. But unlike the denizens of kids ready to spend the week partying, UMass has work to do.

Baseball vs.
Pace, Rider

The Minutemen (1–2) head down to Ft. Myers, Florida today, where they will play seven games during the next week. UMass will face Rider in a four game series, followed by single games against Pace, Canisuis and Bucknell.

The Minutemen opened the season last weekend in Virginia, where they dropped two of three games to James Madison. Massachusetts and JMU split a doubleheader on Saturday, but the Minutemen lost the rubber game on Sunday 6–5.

"It was a positive trip in a lot of ways," UMass coach Mike Stone said. "But we're disappointed, because we feel we should have won all three games. We hit well, and we played great defense."

Massachusetts has gotten a lot of support from people that they had hoped they could count on in the first three games. Junior second baseman Muchie Dagliere, the Minuteman's leading hitter from last year, went 4–8 in last weekend's series with the Dukes, including a double and a home run in the season opening doubleheader.

Senior shortstop Brad Gorrie, who hit .359 with 36 RBIs and 33 steals in 1996, had three hits, three RBIs and scored five runs last weekend.

But there have been some surprises from the first weekend concerning a few transfer students. Aaron Braunstein, a sophomore from University of South Florida, went 3–9 with a home run, double and four RBIs at JMU. Fellow USF transfer Matt Wolcott, from Andover, started two games behind the plate last weekend.

The focus for next week for UMass will be to rack up a few wins and get some momentum going for the home opener, which will be Wednesday, March 26 against Holy Cross. But according to Coach Stone, next week's opponents are no pushovers.

"All the teams we're going to play are good, solid teams," Stone said. "It's good competition for us, [and] we have to be concerned with how we play."

The Minutemen do not have much experience against next week's opponents. UMass is 3–0 all–time against Pace, 2–0 against Bucknell, 1–1 versus Rider and they have never faced Canisius.

The warm weather will be a welcome sight to the Minutemen. UMass will play all its games at Terry Park, the former spring training facility of the Kansas City Royals.

Last year, Massachusetts went 5–1 on their annual spring trip, with wins over Bucknell (twice), Millersville and Niagra.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Muchie Dagliere and the UMass baseball team head to Florida for a seven game stretch.

UM to battle Crimson in womens lax opener

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Winter might still have its grip on the Pioneer Valley, but for the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team, spring has already started. Thankfully for the Minutewomen, their season opener versus Harvard (1–0) will not be at home on snow–covered Totman Field, but Ohiri Field in Cambridge (1 p.m.). Yet, Mother Nature will still have to be contended with, and as all of you native New Englander's know already, she can be as harsh and as a stodgy as an old school teacher with a ruler ready for your outstretched hand.

WOMENS LACROSSE VS
Harvard

But, it will be UMass looking to learn from the lessons already taught this year by coach Francesca McClellan, and also last weekend's scrimmages at William and Mary against some of the best in the country. The last two seasons have been as hard as 400 level Honors classes for the Minutewomen, going 7–20 in that time, while facing a schedule filled with the top teams of the regional and national lacrosse scene.

For McClellan, she is enthusiastic about this year's squad, and for good reason, because she finally has a good mix of players to work with. After a tumultuous 1995–96 campaign, with the loss of some of her top young prospects to personal and academic concerns, the coach has senior leadership, youth and bench depth at her disposal.

"It's really the first time that we've had both [experience and youth], and I think it's a really good formula for success, certainly for progress," McClellan said.

"With leadership, we've got the three Ridley kids [captains Erica Bryan, Michele Warrington and Kristen Hocker] who just continue to improve, and Stephanie Walsh has come back and really stepped up her leadership role.

"So, with that leadership, and Jen Bowen as our third captain in that [junior] class with Amy Leder and Jen Herker, the two classes have been showing a lot of the right attitude, and showing the right standard work ethic–wise."

The return of Laura Korutz on attack, who shared top scorer honors last season with Walsh (20g–8a–28pts), and Melissa Anderson and Paige Skiba in the midfield boosts the sophomore class. A large freshman class, highlighted by midfielder Stephanie Pavlick and defender Sara MacNabb, has challenged the upperclassmen in practice, and will get the time on the playing field this season as well.

"Then, we have the youngsters, and 12 out of our 23 players are freshmen, with a lot of ability and a lot of smarts," McClellan said. "I think we have a real smart team on the whole, and it shows.

"You watch us play and the passing and the ball movement is beautiful. We're creating opportunities to score, and a lot of positive things are happening."

This Saturday's opponent for UMass has a history with the team in more ways than one. Not only have the team's been playing one another since 1979, but Harvard is also the alma mater of McClellan during her own lacrosse days.

Turn to WOMENS LAX, page 3

UM looks to rebound; head to Seminole Invite

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

For the fourth consecutive season, the Massachusetts women's softball team takes its act south this weekend to Tallahassee, Florida to run with the big dogs at the Lady Seminole Invitational.

Of the 24 schools in attendance, there are five nationally– ranked teams, three of which will square up against the Minutewomen in pool play.

On Friday, UMass (3–8) opens up with No. 20 Louisiana Tech at 1 p.m. The Lady Techsters have jumped out to a 19–9 record behind the arms of standout pitchers Paige England and Rebekah Kilpatrick who boast dominating 1.01 and 1.02 ERA's, respectively.

SOFTBALL VS.
Louisiana Tech

The road doesn't get any easier for the Minutewomen at 7 p.m., when they mix it up with No. 16 Michigan State. The Spartans (18–4) are led by freshman phenom Margaret Hollis whose .373 batting average is tops on the team.

Friday night at 9 p.m., UMass closes out their day against a weak Furman squad who has mustered only 3 wins in 15 attempts so far this season.

The Minutewomen's stiffest challenge comes Saturday afternoon at 1 p.m. when they lock horns with No. 14 South Florida. The Bulls (19–5) have had little trouble with their schedule, dropping only 5 games, all at the hands of Top 25 teams. South Florida is led by sophomore Monica Triner's .448 batting average.

The Panthers of Northern Iowa round out the Minutewomen's pool play Saturday when the two schools hook up at 5 p.m. In limited action, Northern Iowa (3–3) has received strong play from junior Amber Sampson who owns a .526 batting average.

Despite their deceiving 3–8 record, the Minutewomen know they can contend with every team in the tournament. Three of UMass' losses were by one run, including decisions to No. 3 ranked Fresno State and No. 6 ranked South Carolina. The Minutewomen also fell to No. 13 Southwestern Louisiana. In fact, UMass' dreadful early season schedule is recognized by the RPI poll who ranks them as high as No. 13.

"It's difficult. We go out on the road three times in the early season before we know who we are and what we are," coach Elaine Sortino said. "And we play a very difficult schedule. Last year our softball schedule was 13th in the nation according to the RPI, and I have a feeling that this year's will be higher."

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 103 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, March 24, 1997

Tricky or treat?

Trip–hop king Tricky is back with new LP Pre–Millennium Tension. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Will it be one more year?

Tyrone Weeks had 16 points and 11 rebounds in UMass loss to Louisville last week. The senior could return for one more year with the team(see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Pakistan sends home 30 Indian children

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistan plans to send home 38 Indian children who have been detained for more than two years for allegedly fishing in Pakistani–controlled waters off the southern port of Karachi.

Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif ordered them released as a goodwill gesture before India and Pakistan — often hostile neighbors — hold their first talks in more than three years this week.

The children, ranging in age from 11 to 13 old, have been living in a shelter in Karachi since their arrests in early 1995. They were never charged with any crime or put on trial.

"The boys are so happy... finally they will go home," said Abdul Sakkar Edhi, the founder of Pakistan's only privately run emergency relief organization. "Throughout the night they didn't sleep. They were too busy celebrating."

Authorities turned the boys over to Edhi shortly after their arrests and ordered them detained in a shelter for homeless children.

India and Pakistan have not held talks in more than three years. Since announcing the fresh round of diplomatic talks, both countries have made conciliatory gestures.

NATION

Private investment in poor countries soars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private foreign investment in developing countries surged at a record rate last year, but official aid from governments declined sharply, the World Bank said yesterday.

"The growth of private capital flows should continue (in 1997), as more developing countries improve (economic) management and open their markets to competition. ...The stakes become higher for those countries that fail to undertake these reforms," James Stiglitz, the bank's chief economist, said.

He said private capital flows would be unaffected if the Federal Reserve Board decides this week to raise interest rates in the U.S. economy, because rates are likely to remain unchanged in Europe, where unemployment is high and economic growth slow.

Stiglitz, former head of President Clinton's Council on Economic Advisers, was commenting on a report from the World Bank that said private investment jumped $60 billion in poor countries last year to a record $244 billion.

Much of the private investment capital is going to building the infrastructures of the recipient countries, particularly in communications, the report said.

Investment in China rose by $7 billion to $42 billion, the report said. Significant advances also occurred elsewhere in Asia, notably in Indonesia and Thailand, and in Brazil and Argentina in Latin America.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tue	Wed
HIGH: 40 LOW: 20	HIGH: 45 LOW: 25	HIGH: 50 LOW: 35

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 11
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 12

Library shelves will be filled in seven years, says director

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

The shelves of the colossal W.E.B. Du Bois Library at the University of Massachusetts will reach full capacity by 2004, according to recent studies.

An interim report by the Research Library Council presented at the March 6 Faculty Senate meeting stated the stacks will be 85 percent full in just seven years.

Newly appointed Library Director Margo Crist commented on the problem and offered some possible solutions in an interview.

"We are in trouble," Crist said. "There have been some preliminary studies done, and we will be talking it over in the next months. We really need to have resolution in the next two years."

One solution would be a remote storage facility, where less–used materials could be kept and retrieved when requested.

"Certainly some libraries have solved this problem with remote storage areas for less accessed material," Crist said.

Crist said that materials for remote storage would be selected by circulation record and publication date, depending on the discipline.

"They will still be easy to get," Crist said. "Within 24 hours, they could be delivered back and charged out. Delivery time is certainly important."

The storage facility could be located either on campus or nearby. One possibility would be a shared Five College building.

"That way UMass doesn't have to pay the whole cost," Crist said.

Another partial solution to lack of shelf space is on–line access to journals and other resources.

"Technology should help us here," Crist said.

The Journal Storage Project (J–Store) is an example of recent undertakings to provide on–line access to journals and other research materials.

J–Store is currently digitizing 100 academic journals from their original publication to their most recent issues. The American Historical Review, The Journal of Politics, The Journal of Applied Econometrics and The Annals of Mathematics are some of the titles selected for digitization by J–Store.

"We hope to make the decision on subscribing [to J–Store] this spring," Crist said. If UMass decides to subscribe, the journals would be available as early as fall 1997.

Increasing sophistication in technological resources will necessitate training for students, faculty and staff. Crist said this will be an important consideration of the library staff, and pointed to a new tutorial available in the reference floor as an example of what is possible.

The new tutorial was designed to help undergraduates learn to use the library. It is accessible on a dedi–

Turn to LIBRARY, page 2

THANG VO\ COLLEGIAN

By the year 2004, the stacks at the W.E.B. Du Bois Library will be filled to capacity.

Chinese market boom spurs U.S. lobbyists to vie for favor

By Jim Drinkard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The investigation into whether China tried to buy influence in Washington has overshadowed Beijing's most effective lobbying force: U.S. businesses eager to tap the world's largest market.

Corporate America has hired lobbyists to urge favorable trade status for Beijing, underwritten trade missions and fact–finding trips for U.S. officials and enlisted the help of former diplomats, even a former president, to open doors.

Trade and foreign policy professionals say China fares best when it stays in the background and lets American businesses take the lead in promoting their mutual interests.

"I wish they'd stay the hell out of it," said John Motley, lobbyist for the National Retail Federation. "They are their own worst enemy, from Tiananmen Square to Taiwan to this ham–handed attempt to try and do something in the American political arena."

In lobbying reports for 1996, the issue of renewing China's favored trade status was among the most frequently mentioned issues for U.S. corporations — which spend hundreds of millions of dollars a year trying to influence policy in the nation's capital. Another issue important to China, admission to the World Trade Organization, also is a priority for U.S. firms.

The company with the most at stake, and the leader in keeping trade channels open, is aircraft maker Boeing. Company officials are traveling to China this week with Sen. Patty Murray, D–Wash. Vice President Al Gore, there on a separate mission, expects to sign a $1 billion deal for China to buy Boeing 777s.

"Almost every major company in the United States has an interest in China now," said Greg Mastel of the Economic Strategy Institute, a Washington research group.

Yesterday, a former Clinton administration economist said it's easy to understand the rush to China. "China is in fact our most rapidly growing export market, and it is 20 percent of the world's consumers," Laura D'Andrea Tyson, former chairwoman of the National Economic Council, said on Meet the Press. "If we don't stay engaged... we are going to lose over time to other national competitors."

Besides Boeing, the list of major players includes McDonnell Douglas, General Motors, Ford and Chrysler; Procter & Gamble, Amway, McDonald's and Coca–Cola; Motorola and AT&T; General Electric, IBM, Allied Signal, Pfizer.

China also represents a huge prospect for American wheat, soybeans, cotton and corn and for financial services like insurance, banking and investment.

American companies often enlist former U.S. leaders to open Chinese doors.

Last April, former President Bush flew to Beijing with Dean O'Hare, president of the Chubb Group of Insurance Cos. While there, Bush introduced O'Hare to Chin's president, Jiang Zemin, and brought him to meetings with the China International Trust and Investment Corp., the government's investment arm.

Other high–profile former government officials whose names carry weight in China include Henry Kissinger and Lawrence Eagleburger, former secretaries of state, and ex–national security adviser Brent Scowcroft.

Tokyo trip allows Gore to address key agenda

By John King
Associated Press

TOKYO — Adding a new dimension to relationships traditionally anchored by economic and security interests, Vice President Al Gore is trying to bring Japan and China more into his personal agenda of protecting the environment.

His discussions on reducing emissions of greenhouse gases offer Gore an opportunity to put his stamp on Clinton administration foreign policy with issues that have brought him a mix of praise and scorn back home.

In Tokyo on Monday, Gore was proposing that the United States and Japan take the lead in persuading industrial countries to significantly reduce levels of carbon monoxide and other greenhouse gases released into the atmosphere. Aides said Gore hopes the agreement can be completed in time for a global environmental conference in Kyoto, Japan, next December.

Gore's one–day visit to Tokyo included dinner with Foreign Minister Yukihiko Ikeda, a courtesy call on Japan's emperor and empress and meetings with Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto to discuss policies on China and trade as well as U.S. leases for military bases in Okinawa.

"Japan is America's key ally and closest partner in Asia," Gore said as he arrived yesterday. "There is no more important bilateral relationship in the world than that between the United States and Japan."

Given the attempts to bring North and South Korea together for formal peace talks, Gore said, "this would be the very worst time" for the United States to consider shrinking its military commitment in the region. That includes around 40,000 troops in South Korea as well as Navy, Marine and Air Force units in Japan. The environment also is high on Gore's agenda for four days of talks in China, during which the vice president and Chinese Premier Li Peng will discuss China's plans to quadruple its energy supply over the next decade.

Coal is China's most abundant energy resource. With many of its older power plants spewing sulphur dioxide into the air, China is on a path to pass the United States early next century as the largest emitter of carbon dioxide.

Already, five of the world's 10 most polluted cities are in China. More broadly, China's remarkable economic expansion has come at a high price to the environment. For the first time in China's 5,000–year history, Gore said, the Yellow River runs "bone dry for some periods in the year." Chinese crop yields are threatened by high soil acidity caused by the heavy reliance on coal, he said. Japanese officials complain of acid rain they blame on China's coal–dependent economy.

In the view of U.S. officials, China has ignored or denied its environmental problems for years. Gore began discussing the issue three years ago with Li and other Chinese officials and now says China has developed "a sophisticated level of expertise in how to address these problems."

Still, administration officials said improvements in China's environmental record are likely to come slowly. One obstacle: reluctance of the United States to share nuclear–energy technology with China because of the danger it will be used by the Chinese military or shared with countries the United States considers unfriendly.

Last week, China's State Council suggested that by lifting such restrictions, the United States also would ease its trade deficit with China.

Initially, economics was not a high priority for Gore on his week–long Asia trip. But new government figures illustrating that U.S. imbalances are growing with both China and Japan forced the prickly issue of trade and open markets into a more prominent role on the vice president's agenda.

UMass junior awarded fellowship in nursing, joins select nat'l group

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts student Julie Watson, a junior in the School of Nursing, was awarded the 1997 Fuld Fellowship for the state of Massachusetts in February.

"I was really excited just to be nominated, especially out of the entire School of Nursing. I had no idea I would be chosen—I was shocked," Watson said.

The fellowship is offered through the Helene Fuld Health Trust, one of the nation's most immense charitable trust foundations, which works exclusively to further education in the field of nursing.

Approximately 52 students from across the nation will be attending this fellowship program, one participant from each state and territory, including Guam and Puerto Rico.

By winning this prestigious award, fellows will be provided with an all expense paid trip to the International Council of Nurses (ICN) 21st Quadrennial Congress from June 15–20 in Vancouver, British Columbia.

This assembly, which will be frequented by fellowship winners from more than 112 nations, will provide opportunity for the students to participate in the ICN student assembly and to attend and partake in educational programs.

All 1997 Fuld Fellows will be components of the U.S. delegation under the leadership of the president of the National Students Nurses' Association.

Out of 250 nominees, Watson was selected precisely for the leadership she has demonstrated in the areas of accademics, community service and participation in student nursing organizations.

Prerequisities for the award require that students be nominated by their dean and have a minimum grade–point average of 3.4 with above–average standing in all clinical courses, as well as being an active constituent in Registered Student Organizations.

"We're all delighted for Julie and congratulate her on winning this much–deserved honor," said Brenda Millette, interim dean of the School of Nursing in a press release.

"She is a thoroughly remarkable young woman who has worked very hard and has availed herself of every opportunity to excel in all that she does," Millette said.

Watson is currently a member of the Alpha Lambda Delta honor society and is a member of the UMass, Massachusetts and National Student Nurses' Associations.

In the past Watson has also held the position of representative for the committee on academic matters for the School of Nursing, and presently is an active member of the University's judicial hearing board.

She has volunteered exclusively for a multitude of Pioneer Valley organizations, including AIDS Care of Hampshire County, Amherst Survial Center, the American Red Cross and the American Diabetes Association.

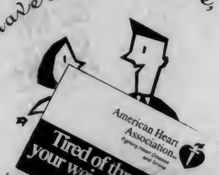
"Five students from UMass will traveling to the 45th National Student Nurses' Association in Pheonix, Arizona," Watson said. This event, slated for April 9–13, will recognize all nominees from the university. Yet, only Watson will travel to Vancouver in June.

According to Watson, "There have only been about 500 Fuld Fellows total, so this program is still rather recent, approximately 10 years running."

Because Watson was awarded the 1997 fellowship, she automatically becomes eligible for the award of Distinguished Fuld Scholar.

"We're asked to write an essay about our experiences during the week and the best essay out of all 250 participants will win," Watson said. "Upon my return from being a [fellowship] participant, I have to agree to educate faculty and students about my experiences. It was an honor just to be nominated."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Chris Conner
Copy Editor: Laura Stock
Photo Technician: Anna Feder
Production Supervisor: Lorraine Urbanski
Production Staff: Chris Lavin, Leon Latino



THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

Fishing Frozen!
Rob Desmarais of Potsdam, N.Y. and John Francis of Northampton try to keep warm while spending time yesterday afternoon fishing at Puffers Pond.

Dont just sit around.... read the Collegian!!

This Week in the Campus Center
INFORMATION, NEW PRODUCTS & SERVICES, AND SNEAKERS FROM THE CAMPUS CENTER/ STUDENT UNION COMPLEX

How to Behave on Dates One, Two, and Three

1. Laugh at his jokes, but don't [illegible]
2. Pretend your an actress making a cameo appearance in a movie.
3. Suggest the Hatch for deli-style subs with fresh sliced fixins, and a fountain soda with two straws.

The Hatch ... for that first date feeling!

University Store
Stop by for weekly specials!
Save 80% ALL PICTORIAL CALENDARS
Save 20%
• WOMEN'S STUDIES BOOKS
• GARDENING & NATURE BOOKS
• ALL New York Times BEST-SELLERS all the time!

Hurry in!
Last week to trade in your old UMASS hat - in any condition - for 20% off a new UMASS hat.

Check out our low prices on Health and Beauty Care products.
Special Sale Prices on selected items.
20% Off ticketed price on all staples and staplers.

THE CAMPUS SENDER 224 LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
Got to send a package? Bring this ad in for $1 off domestic shipping via UPS
Coupon valid until 4/30/97

Campus Center/Student Union
WEEKLY SPECIALS

■ library

continued from page 1

cated terminal in the reference section, and takes 15 to 30 minutes to complete.

Other issues brought up in the interim report of the Research Library Council include the library's lack of adequate staffing and the need to improve the physical conditions at the library.

"We are understaffed for the size of the library and the size of the campus," Crist said. "I am optimistic that it will be possible to see some increase in resources in the coming years."

The University will be seeking funding for the library from a variety of sources, including $5 million from Campaign UMass.

"We need to be creative and open in terms of where funding may come from," Crist said. "Different kinds of funding will fulfill different kinds of needs. There's an awful lot that's really on our plate right now and that we are thinking about."

Crist said that she will solicit opinions from students and faculty on what directions the library should move in.

"We will have focus groups in the spring or fall to talk with faculty and students about their thoughts on the library," Crist said. "We will try new things and get feedback."

The Research Library Council also noted that improving the physical conditions and the resources of the library are necessary to reach Chancellor David K. Scott's Strategic Action Plan goal of membership in the Association of American Universities (AAU) and the creation of an honors college.

"To achieve these goals will require a major campaign to improve the quality and facilities of the Library system and the accessibility of its resources for the benefit of the Honors College, the entire campus, the surrounding community and school systems, and the general public," the interim report said.

Hong Kong counts down hundred days remaining of Brit rule

By Raymond Chow
Associated Press

HONG KONG — With colonial rule ending in 100 days, thousands of marchers paraded through Hong Kong on Sunday, some waving flags proclaiming "Welcome return to China."

Ignoring a light drizzle and a small group of protesters, the marchers beat drums, blew trumpets and waved both the five-star flag of China and the post-colonial Hong Kong flag.

Other people welcomed the 100-day countdown to July 1 by joining in elaborate banquets or running in a celebratory jog.

"At last it's coming," said Lydia Lau, a secretary who took her 3-year-old son on the march.

Organizers said more than 6,000 people joined in the one-mile march, which began in a park named after Queen Victoria, who reigned when Britain set up the colony in 1841.

Near a bronze statue of the queen, the marchers passed by four demonstrators closely guarded by dozens of policemen.

"We support the end of colonial rule," said Lee Kin-yin, 19, one of the demonstrators. "But Hong Kong should return to a country that cares about the interests of its people."

"They are singing and dancing to cover up the gloomy future," said Lee, protesting what he said were China's plans to water down Hong Kong's human rights laws.

Chan Kam-hung, a jewelry shop salesman, clapped his hands while watching the march in front of his shop, on a street frequently used for pro-democracy rallies.

"Today's march is peaceful and fun to watch. I am tired of protest rallies. I worry that people would get too emotional and might take radical action," said Chan.

Meanwhile, Chinese officials opened a pavilion in Hong Kong's New Territories to mark the 100th day before the turnover. People also planted trees symbolizing wishes for a good future for Hong Kong. Big banquets were planned Sunday evening.

Not everyone was so festive, though.

Gov. Chris Patten urged China to honor its promise that Hong Kong can maintain a high degree of autonomy for 50 years.

He said on a government-run radio show that Hong Kong should be governed "with a light touch... You can't turn the clock back on what Hong Kong has become, any more than you can reverse the countdown."

Patten has been at odds with Beijing for his political reforms, made without China's approval.

After the changeover, a Chinese-organized provisional legislature will replace a democratically elected one and serve until new elections are held, probably in mid-1998. Controls on rights to demonstrate and have political links with foreign bodies, loosened in recent years, will be tightened again.

Patten's successor, Tung Chee-hwa, joined teachers and students in a jog around a sports stadium. More than 3,000 students joined in a relay run totaling 1,300 miles, equal to the distance between Hong Kong and Beijing.

In Beijing, a larger-than-usual crowd visited Tiananmen Square, where they posed for snapshots in front of a clock counting down the days to the turnover.

Check out the Collegian Online!
http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

~ NATIONAL/INTERNATIONAL ~

Fri. bombing may slow talks

By Dafna Linzer
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel's Cabinet was expected yesterday to suspend political talks with the Palestinians following a suicide bombing that killed three Israeli women, a top aide to Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said.

In Hebron, Palestinians bombarded Israeli troops with rocks and empty bottles for the third day in a row. Palestinian police formed human chains to keep the protesters away from Israeli-controlled areas where the city's 500 Jewish settlers live among 130,000 Palestinians.

Fearing new attacks, Israel stationed troops at shopping malls and parks where children and parents celebrated the Jewish holiday of Purim. At a checkpoint outside Jerusalem, border police shot and wounded two Palestinians.

Netanyahu was to meet Sunday afternoon with Cabinet ministers to discuss Israel's response to Friday's bombing by a Palestinian militant at a Tel Aviv cafe. Three Israeli women were killed. His aide, David Bar-Illan, told The Associated Press that the ministers would probably decide that contacts with the Palestinians could only continue in regard to security and preventing terrorism. "Until we see some movement on this level there will be no talks," he said.

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat accused Israel of destroying the peace process. Speaking to the Organization of Islamic Conference, he said condemned Israel for its plans to construct Jewish settlements in historically Arab east Jerusalem.

"Very serious events and developments concerning the peace process... have led us almost to a dead end that threatens the whole process," he said.

Relations between Israel and the Palestinians have deteriorated sharply following Israel's decision to go ahead with the Jewish Har Homa housing project in east Jerusalem. Arafat has refused to meet with Netanyahu, and last week's ground breaking for the project set off violent protests in Hebron and Bethlehem.

Sporadic contacts have continued despite the impasse, but an announcement by Israel that it was stopping talks would make it more difficult to bring two sides back to negotiating table. Before the breakdown, talks had been underway on unresolved issues from the peace agreements signed by Israel's previous governments — such as prisoner releases and travel between the West Bank and Gaza Strip — and Israel's promised troop withdrawals from rural areas of the West Bank. Talks on a final peace settlement — including issues such as the future of Jerusalem and Palestinian statehood — were supposed to start March 17.

Bar-Illan accused the Palestinians of failing to crack down on Islamic militants and of releasing leaders of the militant group Hamas instead.

Police set up roadblocks at the entrances to Tel Aviv and other coastal cities and Tel Aviv's main thoroughfare, Dizengoff Street, was closed to traffic. Palestinians were barred from entering Israel from the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Yesterday, Israeli troops opened fire on a Palestinian at a roadblock between Jerusalem and Bethlehem. Two Palestinians were wounded and taken to the hospital, police said.

The army also placed a curfew on the West Bank village of Zurif, where suicide bomber Moussa Abu Deiyah Ghneimat lived, and on the downtown area of Hebron where violent clashes erupted Saturday between Palestinians and Israeli troops.

Israeli troops sealed Ghneimat's home and barred reporters from the area. The army ordered the house demolished, but Israel radio said the family appealed the order to Israel's Supreme Court. Israeli cities decided to go ahead with planned Purim parties despite Friday's attack, but national police commissioner Hefetz called on the public to be on alert at all public events.

Haitian leaders assess struggle

By Michael Norton
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Politicians are blaming a month of violence that killed 50 people on a power struggle that has strengthened former President Jean-Bertrand Aristide and left his successor with even less clout to implement internationally-backed economic reforms.

"The insecurity has been planned. It's a struggle for power," said popular leader Chavannes Jean-Baptiste of the Papaye Peasant Movement. His association — one of the largest in the Caribbean nation — was influential in Aristide's election in 1990 under the banner of Lavalas, the grass-roots movement that swept him to power.

"Forces within the Lavalas movement are involved in the insecurity," Jean-Baptiste told the group's annual meeting last week.

Lavalas is split by divisions that began with a rift between Aristide and and his one-time protege Rene Preval at the 1995 election that Aristide could not contest.

Differences have grown since Preval became president and, with little choice since he inherited near-empty coffers, decided to implement economic strictures recommended by the International Monetary Fund.

They include cutting government spending, laying off thousands of workers from the bloated bureaucracy, privatizing state enterprises and opening the Haitian market to foreign imports. All are unpopular moves that have provided fuel for Aristide to inflame growing anti-capitalist sentiment against donors whose aid is tied to economic change.

"We're disappointed in Preval. The government hasn't done anything to help us. All we need is jobs," said Franklin Richard, 38, an unemployed slum dweller.

Aristide has returned to the hard-line anti-Western rhetoric that he had moderated temporarily after a U.S. military intervention in 1994 ousted the soldiers who had chased him from power three years earlier.

Haitian anger at the economic sacrifices demanded by Preval's Premier Rosny Smarth turned to outrage during a surge of violence against which the government and its police force appeared helpless.

Aristide charged that Smarth's U.S.-backed government was directing the crime wave.

"Insecurity is one means they are using to cow us and make us accept" an open-market economic policy, Aristide told grass-roots militants last week.

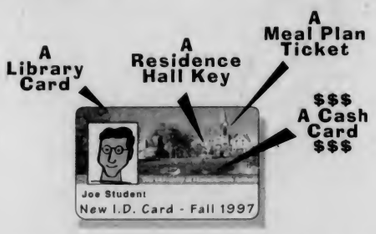
Others pointed their fingers at the former president, noting that the shantytown gang lords that began the violence with a drug turf war once were close to Aristide, who remains Haiti's most popular politician.

Fifty people were shot and killed within four weeks, including six police officers.

Elected officials of differing political hues have accused Aristide of masterminding a destabilization plot against the government through violence and street protests.

"Aristide would like to see a popular uprising appeal to him as the one and only alternative to the government," said former Port-au-Prince Mayor Evans Paul, who has fallen out with Aristide since he led his 1990 election campaign.

Some senators loyal to Preval also have blamed Aristide. Paul's rival, Port-au-Prince Mayor Mano Charlemagne, on Thursday accused Aristide's Lavalas Family of organizing the violence for political gain.



Last week, Preval said far-right army partisans might stage a coup if the violence continued.

Suddenly, on March 13, the killing stopped. But by then the government had lost so much support in the Parliament that Smarth was expected to receive a humiliating censure from legislators this week.

Aristide solidified the divisions in January when he formed a new party, the Lavalas Family, saying the government had lost touch with the people.

BE A GOOD NEIGHBOR
American Heart Association. Volunteer
Fun, fun, fun, fun, fun. with Collegian Graphics

THE NEW I.D. CARD'S GOT EVERYTHING... EXCEPT A NAME!

ENTER OUR CONTEST TO NAME THE NEW STUDENT AND STAFF ID CARD COMING IN THE FALL!

The name should identify the card with UMass and also suggest its many uses, because it's a lot more than an ID card. It'll also serve as a library card, a Meal Plan ticket, a residence hall key, and a cash card for on-campus purchases. Entries will be judged by a five-member panel of staff and students.

Any actively enrolled UMass Amherst student is eligible to enter. Bring your entry to the ID Office, Franklin Dining Hall or e-mail your entry to name-the-card@admin.umass.edu. Entries must be received by 5pm on March 27, 1997.

Three winning entries will be chosen:
1st Prize: $100 gift certificate for Travel
2nd Prize: $50 gift certificate from the University Store
3rd Prize: $25 gift certificate from the Top of the Campus

entry form
Name_____
Local/Campus Address_____
Local Phone Number_____
Name the New I.D. Card:
_____

DROP OFF YOUR ENTRY AT THE ID OFFICE AND WHEN YOU COME IN, HAVE YOUR PHOTO TAKEN FOR YOUR NEW ID CARD... AVOID THE FALL RUSH!

Task force targets cigarette labels

BOSTON (AP) — Trying to expand on the Liggett Group's agreement to label its cigarettes as addictive and carcinogenic, U.S. Rep. Marty Meehan said he wants to make all cigarette warning labels bigger and more blunt.

Meehan, a Massachusetts Democrat who co-chairs the Congressional Task Force on Tobacco and Health, said he would introduce a bill in the next two weeks to change the warning labels.

The labels would be placed on the front and back of cigarette boxes and pack a more powerful message: "Cigarettes Kill" and "Cigarettes contain nicotine, an addictive drug."

"If you're going to warn people, you might as well warn them accurately," Meehan told the Boston Globe in an article published yesterday. "This is long overdue."

The bill will be co-sponsored by U.S. Rep. Jim Hanson, R-Utah, Meehan said.

Their proposal follows last week's decision by Liggett — the Durham, N.C.-based maker of Chesterfield, Lark and L&M cigarettes — to settle 22 state lawsuits by putting warning labels on packs that say smoking is addictive and causes cancer.

Other major tobacco companies — Philip Morris, R.J. Reynolds, Brown & Williamson, and Lorillard — have refused to make the same concessions.

RJR spokeswoman Peggy Carter said she could not comment on Meehan's proposal until it is filed. But she said that the new labels "don't impart much new information in that people have known for decades that smoking may be difficult to stop." Public health advocates question how effective the new labels will be given that many smokers already claim to know about hazards the labels address.

Current warnings, which alert users to risks of cancer, heart disease and the effects of smoking on pregnancy have lost their bite, especially in younger people.

A Stanford University medical school study released last week found that "a sizeable portion of adolescents are not seeing, reading and remembering warning labels." It also found that those who understood the label did not cut back on their habit.

Meehan conceded that new labels alone will not stop young smokers. He backs a stronger campaign of advertisements dangers of smoking.

1000-plus rally for unity in Albania

By Merita Dhimgjoka
Associated Press

TIRANA, Albania — More than 1,000 people demonstrated in the capital yesterday to press for an end to the unrest that has traumatized Albania since popular high-risk investment schemes began to unravel.

Demonstrators held small wooden sticks inscribed with the names of Albanian cities, and called on Albanians to remain united. They shouted: "South and north, Albania is one!"

Albania has been gripped by chaos since February, following the collapse of the financial schemes in which most Albanians lost money. Many blame the government for not warning people, and some claim it profited from the funds.

Tirana is one of the few cities where police have managed to restore order. The government is trying to extend its authority beyond the capital, and for the second day in a row residents rallied to support its efforts.

More than 11,000 Albanians have fled to Italy since the turmoil turned into armed insurrection earlier this month, after anti-government protesters in the south began raiding armories and barracks for weapons.

Five would-be refugees were missing yesterday after a speedboat ferrying them to a larger craft ran out of fuel and they jumped overboard. The boat was carrying 23 passengers across the Adriatic Sea.

Two boats carrying about 200 Albanians reached the Italian port of Brindisi overnight, as the exodus from the poor Balkan nation picked up again. Bad weather and the start of Italian naval patrols had caused a lull.

In Italy, Foreign Minister Lamberto Dini suggested that a naval blockade might be imposed to bar illegal immigration, the ANSA news agency reported. He also said that if necessary, Italy, in agreement with Tirana, should control Albania's ports to keep a check on departures.

Albanian state media reported that more parts of the country were returning to normal, and police said yesterday that the port of Durres had resumed operations after more than a week.

But the chaos continues in much of the south, where gunmen prevent of fuel and they jumped overboard. food, medicine and other necessities from reaching much of the population.

Explosions and shooting were heard overnight in Berati, 30 miles south of Tirana, and armed gangs broke into stores and private houses, the ATA state news agency reported Sunday. There is no police presence in the city.

Italy's La Repubblica newspaper quoted Albanian President Sali Berisha as declaring he would not step down, as demanded by rebel leaders in the south.

THANG VO/ COLLEGIAN

Are we there yet?
Serena April, Callie Lindell and Scott Lindell take a stroll in North Amherst yesterday to enjoy the brisk and bright afternoon.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vedareva Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Presties Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

A small town gal grows up

My parents have moved to the big city.

After 30 years of living in the same, peaceful, idyllic New England town, they've packed it up and moved across the country to Texas.

So this past week, I paid my first visit to Texas, kind of with jittery feelings of small town girl heading off into the great unknown.

And it really was unknown because my knowledge of Texas is on the scanty side.

I know, size-wise, Texas would take up all of New England and New York state. I also know that it has bred such characters as David Koresh and Ross Perot.

As for history, I remember the Alamo and not much else.

A good friend would also helpfully remind me from time to time that poisonous creatures dwell in Texas, things like scorpions, spiders, snakes — you get the picture. Not pleasant little creatures to have in your in your backyard.

Popular legend has it that Texas is cowboy country, where big is better and rattle snakes are barbecued for dinner and served with a side of cactus salad. I also knew that this city replaced San Jose, Calif., as the high-mecca — the new Silicon Valley.

So when I stepped off the plane, I didn't know whether I'd be surrounded by lasso-wielding cowboys or lap-top toting computer jockeys.

Understand, I was little apprehensive.

The first thing I noticed about Texas is that it is big. Really big.

Now lots of people like big. I have several friends who think the bigger something is, the better it is.

They'd really like Texas.

Keep in mind you can drive three hours in any direction (mostly) and still be in Texas. Someone informed me that he had driven nine hours and hadn't reached the border.

As a small town girl, I like small. I like coziness. I like knowing where I'm going. I like knowing people, knowing who they are and where they are going. There is a cohesion to smallness: much like a puzzle with all the pieces fittin' together. Sure it may be dull and gossipy, but there's a place for you in a small town, whereas in a big city, you might spend the rest of your life looking for that little niche that is screaming your name.

Big city life doesn't exactly radiate small town charm. No little mom and pop stores here. Instead, stores pay homage to the idea of big. Every intersection is home to giant malls, boasting several Wal-Marts, Home Depots, Office Depots, Sam's Club — the list goes on. It's almost like a vision of retail heaven, where the parking lots are always full and the prices low.

In order to get to these shopping dreams, you have to drive. Driving in the big city versus the little town is quite the trick. In Texas, rodeo style driving rules apply. I've noticed that green light, red light — it's all the same. You want to go, you go. Signaling tends to be a fluke — people signal if they remember, but don't count on someone warning you they're turning into Wal-Mart.

And they drive fast here, really fast. I suppose that 60 mph in a residential zone is okay, when you consider that Texas is so gosh darn big that if you don't drive as fast as you possibly can, you're never going to get where you want to go.

As a result, insurance rates are incredibly high. Don't bother applying for insurance here unless you can produce eight forms of I.D., a spotless driving record (for the last 25 years) and don't forget to promise your first-born child to the insurance company either.

In small towns, the roads kind of meander their way through the town. There are hardly any traffic jams and when the lone light turns red, you all kind of stop and just wait patiently for it to turn green.

"My parents' new home, as the prototype big city, redeems itself by its friendliness. Nowhere else have people tried to say our last name and keep trying until they get it right."

Seema Gangatirkar

Not here in the big city. The honking starts the very same second the light turns green. And don't bother missing your turn, otherwise you may find yourself out of the country before you're allowed to turn around. Unfortunately in some big cities, like the one my parents moved to, you are forced to drive. Walking doesn't seem to be an option, since it appears that sidewalks are a luxury here. Also, a driver is likely to run you down in his attempt to get to work on time. And you're forced to drive, since anywhere you want to go is at the end of a long highway.

Most people will take their pick-up trucks when they are trying to get somewhere. Pick-up trucks are the vehicle of choice down here. Any presidential candidate trying to puck the gold mine of electoral votes that is Texas probably can carry the state by promising a pick-up truck in every driveway.

As for cuisine, a big city offers more ethnically diverse food than a small town would. In a single block, I spotted Tex-Mex, Italian, Japanese, Thai and Chinese restaurants. There are also all types of people here, all types of languages and all types of music.

A big city makes it easy for people to meet others of their background, to share ideas, culture and values, while a small town is hopelessly homogenous.

There is a blessed anonymity about the big city. No one knows who you are. In my hometown, I couldn't walk out of my door without meeting someone who I knew, someone who wanted to know what the heck I was doing with my life. It was almost like a recording: "Yes, Mr. Smith, I'm doing well, so is my brother."

In the big city, no one seems to care who you are. Everyone is going somewhere, everyone is doing something. And since there are so many people here, so many people doing things, you can just lose yourself in the crowd.

I suppose it could be lonely, but if you're prone to antisocial tendencies, you may want to move to the big city.

My parents' new home, as the prototype big city, redeems itself by its friendliness. Nowhere else have people tried to say our last name and keep trying until they get it right.

It might be the sunshine that keeps people so friendly, but I think it's possible, that maybe in your little niche of the big city, someone actually wants you to have a nice day.

So, have a good day, y'all.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

I had a dream...

Joe Fountain

I had a dream, that on a warm day in Atlanta, Ga. I met former President Martin Luther King at Ebeneezer Baptist Church.

I had a dream that M.L.K. was alive in 1997.

I had a dream that M.L.K. was once the President.

I had a dream that a rainy day in front of the Loraine Motel in 1968 never happened.

In that dream I was there in Atlanta on that cold November day interviewing one of the greatest presidents of all time. I was there to talk to him about the presidential election and to reflect on his campaign of 1976. He looked great for a man of 63, like he was ready to conquer the world, again.

His voice bellowed and it took me by surprise. He said he gave up giving interviews about candidates for public office but knew I was there for more.

We began to talk about the election of 1976 and how it was a cold November day in Atlanta when America went to the polls. He said that today in 1997 it was as cold as that day in '76 and how it reminded him so of that day... that he was the first black man to ever run for the presidency and was on the last legs of a journey that started in a Montgomery church in 1954.

It was then that a man and his destiny would be forever intertwined with the conscience of a nation. Martin Luther King had led the fight for desegregation, equal rights for blacks by gaining the right to vote, and a campaign for the poor. It was a great day on which M.L.K. became president because we were alive with hope for the future. His grandfather was born into slavery and now he was leading the nation that had oppressed him.

We talked about what he did in helping the poor and how he was able to get legislation passed for universal health care and a minimum standard of living. He said he was most proud of his domestic policy work, that the literacy rate of all Americans had risen to and is at 100 percent. More Americans today go to college than ever in our history and King was responsible.

Before he was President he was instrumental in ending the Vietnam war. He would often lament that if Robert Kennedy had lived, he would have stopped the war earlier.

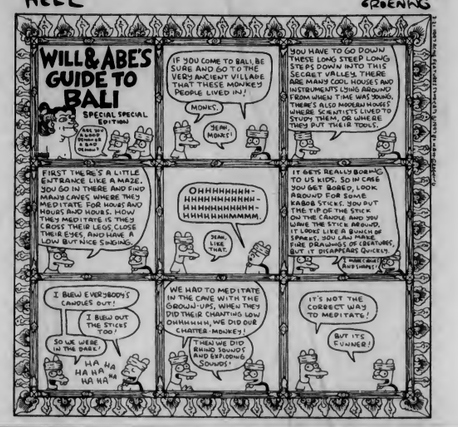
In the area of foreign policy he thought his work with normalizing relations with Cuba and the end of the Cold War were his two greatest accomplishments. Never again would the world fear nuclear holocaust. Never again would the world see war while democracy is flourishing.

While President, he helped end apartheid in South Africa. He helped Israel and Palestine form a joint government with peaceful coexistence. He helped the Iranians and prevented the oil embargo. He created the U.S. relief agency that has continued to help feed the world while exploring the ways of new farming techniques that has ended world hunger. He balanced the budget while increasing aid to the poor and doubled the GNP. Under his leadership we became the true moral leaders of the world. In 1984, at the end of his presidency, there was a cry that he should be able to run again.

He said diplomatically no man should serve more than eight years.

Where would we be today if he had lived? If that fateful day at the Loraine Motel was just a nightmare that had not happened? What if the attempt on his life failed? Would King would have forgiven James Earl Ray? Would he have continued his work?

M.L.K. was a man of destiny and we were robbed of him. If he were still alive there would never have been the problems with what to do next. Jesse Jackson, Ralph Abernathy... they failed in keeping the Dream Alive.



The problem with history and living after the death of someone great or one we love is that we must go on living and not know what they might have done — and the loneliness of the missing.

"Free At Last, Free At Last
Thank God Almighty
I'm Free At Last"

Joseph Fountain is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Letters to the Editor

Voting makes a difference

To the Editor:

While a majority of the students on this campus are not aware of it, elections for Student Government will be held [this week]. Your vote will make a difference in this election! Only five percent of the students actually vote in the elections. With so few voting, that means your vote is able to carry more weight. There are actually some people in Student Government who are happy with this percent. In fact, some (not all) have this misconception in their minds that students don't care, that's why they don't. Students do care, they're just not aware of what the issues or candidates on that ballot represent.

I encourage everyone to vote. Student Government is a wonderful organization that effects you. This is the governing body who can help to make campus life better. This is the governing body that allocates money to all RSOs and Student Businesses. With your vote, you can directly effect the representation in this association.

Take the time to find out what the candidates are representing, better yet, how they can serve you. That's why they're elected, to represent and serve the students of this University. Don't just vote for someone because you saw their flyer, make an educated vote. What if there's no one that appeals to you? Then write in someone who you know could make a difference — someone who would meet the challenge of standing up for the student body's interests. On your way to the polling booths, stop and ask one of those candidates: "What changes will you make? What are you going to do for me?" Let them earn their position, and don't let them forget why they're here, to represent you! There are good representatives in the senate, and then there are senators who have forgotten how they got there. I urge everyone to vote. Don't cast a blind vote, make one that will make a difference.

Chris Gasbaroo
Amherst

Bosnia coverage impressive

To the Editor:

As a UMass alumnus and a member of the of Friends of Bosnia I would like to thank the Collegian and Adam Klein for the excellent coverage you provided for the "Bosnia: Road to Recovery?" conference. From the article Mr. Klein wrote it is clear that he attended many sessions during the conference and took the time to learn about Bosnia before writing.

Our conference was attended by nearly 200 people, hosted two Pulitzer Prize-winning journalists and provided an important forum for grass-roots organizers. Mr. Klein's article was a great way to end an exciting conference.

Tom Balazas
Amherst

Where's the beef?

To the Editor:

In fewer than three publication days, the students at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst will be asked to choose their Student Government President and Student Trustee. The President and Student Trustee will act as the student face of the University for the entire state. Over the coming year, they will meet with University administration, state government officials and other student government representatives across the state. The two students chosen in next week's election will have a profound effect on student politics both on and off campus. In addition, there are two referendum questions on politics both on and off campus. One determines the reauthorization of the only statewide student environmental organization in Massachusetts [MassPIRG]; and the other could profoundly affect the face of UMass by advising on privatization of the Student Union.

In spite of the importance of the referendum questions and the positions of Student Government President and Student Trustee, coverage in the Collegian has been grossly inadequate. Not only haven't the issues or candidates been covered, but notice of the elections has been buried in the FYI section of the paper. The students at UMass depend on the Collegian to report on pertinent student issues and as a student newspaper, this is your responsibility. There is nothing more pertinent than who we choose to represent us.

Jennifer Mueller
Hadley

This letter was signed by 36 other students including 11 representatives from the Board of Student Businesses.

Hey! I am a minority too

To the Editor:

In response to the illegal occupation of the Goodell Building recently by an overly-vocal mob of students, I would like to share my testimony as well. Since I am a male and since there are more women than men in the world, that very fact by definition qualifies me as a minority. But that's not all: I am also a man of color. The color of my skin happens to be pink or tan. Furthermore, since I was born in the U.S. as were my parents and grandparents before me, that makes me a native-American. And since many generations ago my ancestors came to the U.S. from Germany, Belgium and England, I qualify as a European-American. And why did my ancestors come here? Some of them were fleeing from religious or political oppression. Therefore I should be able to sue the present-day citizens of those countries because their ancestors persecuted my ancestors hundreds of years ago. By the way, since I am 38-years-old and since the majority of people in this world are not 38-years-old, that makes me a minority on another count as well. Furthermore, I also speak Spanish. Finally, in case you haven't guessed by now, I'm conservative, too. The under-representation of 38 year old men, native-American, European-American, Spanish-speaking, conservative men of color at this University is a disgrace. On behalf of my brothers, I call on the administration of this school, Senator Kennedy and President Clinton to institute Affirmative Action policies so that my particular minority group will have equal opportunity for admission and hiring at this University. We have been oppressed too long.

Steve Parker
Amherst

More parking problems

To the Editor:

Because not all people having plane reservations show up at the airport, the airlines are allowed to overbook each flight. Should all the ticket holders arrive on time, those bumped are placated with the gift of a free ticket.

Because not all UMass employees are on the campus at any one time, more permits than parking spaces are sold for many parking lots. But if a lot is too greatly oversold, and arriving employees find an assigned lot filled, what is the outcome? Here is the treatment I suffered the other day.

I pay $70 for a space in Lot 62. I arrived 15 minutes before I was to meet my class of more than 400 students. Because way too many cars are assigned to this lot it was full (a daily occurrence), and drivers were circling and hoping a spot would open. I pulled the car onto the grass border, jumped out, and explained to the ticket office officer that the lot was full and I had to meet a class in a few minutes. "Keep circling or I'll have your car towed," was her unsympathetic reply. I tried to educate her to the fact that it was not my fault that the lot was oversold, and if she had my car towed she would be punishing an innocent person; the guilty here were those individuals who oversold the lot. I might as well have been talking to my hubcap. "My orders are to tow," was her response. I then tried explaining the University's raison d'etre: faculty are here to teach students, and 400 of the latter had paid for my presence in a few minutes. The guard simply repeated her mantra. In her mind, as in those of her superiors, the University's mission was not to take precedent over the campus parking policy. Out of desperation, I begged her just to ticket the car, feeling sure I could win a post-incident appeal. "Not a chance," was her answer, and with radio in hand she warned, "I have a tow truck on the way here right now." I was about to be fined as a law breaker and have my car seized.

Her threat was not a idle one: I have several colleagues who have been towed, and have heard of many others who have suffered the same fate. All have had, like myself, valid parking permits for their lots. Its costs $85 to get one's car out of impoundment.

This is a situation that should not exist. After years of studying the parking situation on campus, the Parking Office must have learned exactly how many permits should be issued for each lot. That being the case, the fact that some lots are now so heavily oversold gives every impression that the excess must be intentional, and if it is deliberate, selling an unrealistic number of parking spaces — spots that do not exist — fulfills the exact definition of fraud, and as such, violates the rule of law.

It is not unrealistic for us, after being forced to pay $70 for a permit, to feel we have the right to park in our designated lots. But that logic is not shared by the parking office. When — due to no fault of mine — a lot is full, if we try our own solutions it can cost us another $85 in fines and seizure of our cars. The lack of fair play and justice here is appalling.

How can such an arrogant, probably illegal and unintelligent situation be allowed to exist at a "house of learning." Must those of us attempting to carry out the University's fundamental mission have to struggle with this hurdle also? The administrators responsible for this insanity must be replaced by people with common sense, intelligence and the ability to recognize the difference between good and bad rules.

I doubt that corrections will be made. Employees and students have come to understand that the so-called Parking "Services" Office rules supreme on campus, and that any future policy changes will most likely be for the worse. Thus we are left with only hope; hope that the next time our parking-policy people are bumped by airlines, that the action will be followed by having them arrested for showing up at the airport with prepaid, valid tickets.

John D. Palmer
Professor of Biology

Indie-pendence Day

For the first time in 69 years Art House Films are recognized by the Academy

All bets are on for Showdown '97 Oscar trivia by the numbers The winners for Best Snubs are...

COURTESY LAWRENCE PASSERA

Obi-Wan Tricky?
British trip-hopper Tricky vies for mainstream success with new album Pre-Millennium Tension and spiffy Star Wars-esque robe.

Tricky trips into next Millennium

By Martin J. Keane
Collegian Correspondent

Often the simplest way for us to rationalize the relative unpopularity of our favorite pop music is to say that the performer is "ahead of his time." If there were ever an artist whose ambition and ego were suited by that rationalization, it's England's 28–year–old self–proclaimed superstar Adrian Thaws (a.k.a. Tricky). This genius–in–progress has moved beyond not only hip–hop but also trip–hop, the "alternative" scene in which he first made his name. Despite constant adulation from the press on both sides of the Atlantic, America's notoriously conservative music market has barely begun to appreciate Tricky's achievement —— what better proof of his importance could there be?

Tricky's brilliant debut album, 1995's Maxinquaye (Island), was one of the most critically revered records in recent memory, although it barely caused a ripple on the Billboard Top 200 chart. Songs like "Overcome" and "Pumpkin" fully realized Tricky's greatest gift — the ability to mesmerize and capture the listener through a series of drum 'n' bass beats interspersed with sampled soundbites from artists like Public Enemy and The Smashing Pumpkins. Throughout the 12 songs that comprise Maxinquaye, the complex palette of sounds and aural textures that Tricky visited was staggering. Each song afforded the listener a chance to hear Tricky's attempt to create a magical place where musical boundaries are constantly being challenged and broken down through sheer innovation.

Looking at Maxinquaye in retrospect, it turned out to be just a preview of Tricky's manic ambition. In the last two years, the scrawny scowler has produced, written and remixed songs for admiring peers ranging from Elvis Costello to Garbage. Also, he's released two collaborative side projects on his own brand–new label Durban Poison — a full–length CD with famous friends like Björk and Nena Cherry modestly titled Nearly God, and

Turn to TRICKY, page 7

Star Wars myth still holds true

Jonathan M. Place

A long time ago, in a galaxy far, far away...

You know the feeling. That sense of anticipation right before John Williams' orchestra kicks in and the title words "Star Wars" jump right out of the screen on to your lap, and you just want to leap out of your seat and scream, "Yeeeeeehaaaaaaa!" Your whole body tenses up when the screen goes black, then releases once the huge yellow words pan past your eyes.

"But with the blast shield down I can't even see..."

We've all talked about it before, and it's only right to address it again after all three movies have been rereleased. (Basically, I'm going to talk about it because I can.) It was better than I could of ever imagined. (Not even the Kiss Reunion tour can top this).

Once again, my old crush on Princess Leia was rekindled, and her outfit in the beginning of Return of the Jedi was just too much for any man to take. Oh, she was so hot before the cocaine...

"Well, I guess you don't know everything about women."

When I saw these movies again for the first time (sorry), my mind traveled back to my childhood and remembered my brother and I pretending that we were Luke and Darth Vader battling for the good of the galaxy, or at least, our backyard. (Don't laugh. You were probably pretending you were Koko B. Ware and the Junkyard Dog. At least my heroes are still cool.) I was always Luke, wielding my yellow Wiffleball bat as my light saber. Brandon's was black, to symbolize Vadar and evil. Of course, I always won, using my ultimate spin maneuver that no other Jedi possessed (or I would slash my brother's knuckles, which in that case constituted a victory).

"Impressive.....most impressive."

As far as the actual movies are concerned, some of the additions could of been avoided, and it was easy to see why the Jabba scene in Star Wars never made the original opening 20 years ago. And that computer animated Muppet Show–esque song during the beginning of Jedi went too far. But did you notice all the touch–ups and little extras that made the trilogy that much more spectacular? (It was awesome!) The color to the rocket boosters were enhanced and the light sabers looked sharper and more deadly.

"Look at the size of that thing!"

Let's go through all the additions. There were the extra landscape shots in all three movies, and more footage during the Jawa scene on Tatooine. I loved the added shots of the snow creature eating the taunton in The Empire Strikes Back (the meat dripping from its mouth was a nice touch, too). What about Bespin, Lando's city? Lucas added windows and sky shots to the sides of the buildings where there used to be walls, which made the scenes look less like they were done in a studio. But by far my favorite addition was the end

Turn to STAR WARS, page 7

COURTESY LUCASFILM LTD.

"Friends, Romans, Countrymen..."
Darth Vader preaches to whiny son Luke Skywalker during the climax of The Empire Strikes Back.

Read the Daily Collegian...

The
Edwin M. Rossman
Alumni Career Forum
BDIC

Bachelor's Degree with Individual Concentration Program
Job-Hunting Strategies for First-Time Job Seekers

Date: Tuesday, March 25
Time: 4:00 PM
Location: Campus Center 903

Sponsored by:
University Career Center
UMass Alumni Association

Alumni/ae Panelists:

Nancy Cohen '79 "Political Ecology"	News Director WFCR University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA
Maryann Davis '81 "Animal Behavior & an Evolutionary Approach to Human Behavior"	Assistant Professor Center for Psychosocial and Forensic Services Research Department of Psychiatry University of Massachusetts Medical Center Worcester, MA
Jim Kenefick '94 "Organizational Development"	Training and Organizational Development Specialist American Management Association New York, NY
Dusty King '95 "Creative Writing, Technical Communication & Document Design"	Senior Information Development Specialist Lucent Technologies (formerly Bell Labs) North Andover, Ma

For more information, please contact:
University Career Center 545-2225

Classifieds will make you smile. 545-3500

ALANA GRADUATE STUDENT FORUM
"Beyond Ebonics"
A Conversation with
Dr. Orlando Taylor
Dean of the Graduate School
Howard University
and
Dr. Walter Wolfram
William C. Friday
Distinguished Professor
North Carolina State University
Dr. Harry Seymour (Moderator)
Chair Department of Communication Disorders
Date: Wednesday March 26, 1997
Place: Room 101 Campus Center
Time: 11:30 am - 1:30 pm
SPONSORED BY:

Afro-American Studies	Communications Studies	Graduate Student Senate
ALANA Graduate	Communication	Linguistics
Student Network	Disorders	Women of Color Program
Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity	Graduate School	English Department
SGA	Women's Studies

Furtado's rolling guitar blues

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

TONY FURTADO
Roll My Blues Away
Rounder Records

Out in the music world, there are certain personalities that seem to just fly around between styles, while marketers for major record labels get headaches trying to pin them down like a person with a fly swatter. One of these artists is guitarist and banjo player Tony Furtado and his record label, Rounder, gives him plenty of air to breathe and no worries of being stuck in some category in which only part of him belongs.

Furtado's latest album for Rounder, Roll My Blues Away, is a mostly instrumental collection of some of the finest acoustic music to hit record stacks in a long time. Furtado, who has been pegged by most as a bluegrass musician, also turns his attention now to blues.

Furtado, however, does his blues in an almost impressionistic way — painting moods and textures instead of Bo Diddley–style riffing. "The Ghost Of Blind Willie Johnson," stands deep and guttural, with rising and falling slide sounds coming at you from all ends, providing a swampy feel as if you were stuck in the muddy Mississippi Delta itself. The traditional tune, "Boat's Up The River," with Kelly Joe Phelps lending some vocal duties, is a fine, open blues meditation with very motivated improvisational jamming, especially between Furtado on banjo, Tony Phillips on bass and Mike Marshall on mandocello.

Elsewhere on the album, moods just flutter in and out of Furtado's stylistic window like pollen on a late summer's day. "The Stark Raven" is a piece that stands alone in terms of genres. It is its own self, its own audible being, and with this ambiguity, it goes off in a few different directions in its almost five minutes time, but is never confusing. "Can You Hear The Rain?" is a romantic, lyrical tone poem, while "Song For Early," carries the listener on a reflective riff that feels like a deep breath of mountain air.

Finishing off this collection is "Crow Canyon." Its feeling of the open Western U.S. — Furtado is an Oakland, CA, native — allows a feeling where anything can happen under a big sky. The sounds of Stuart Duncan's fiddle helps provide an almost vocal presence to give the tune true direction.

Furtado has crafted here a fine structure of American music, and is one of the few artists who don't need words to express the magnitude of a fully comprehensive sound. The only flaw with the album is that a listener may get bogged down in so many instrumental tracks all taking on the same sound design which embraces mostly slide guitar, banjo, bass and some percussion. B+

■ Tricky

continued from page 6

a five–song EP with budding New York rappers and R&B singers called Tricky Presents Grassroots.

Pre–Millenium Tension (Island) crawls along the same barren lodge of clinical anomie as Nearly God, but makes that record sound like the extended jam session it was. Supported by the soulful Martina, Tricky once again mutters about racial inequities, betrayal, failed love and naked egoism in a set of caustic raps, murky drones and ghostly dirges. The sinister element in each song is unmistakable as often times it feels like Tricky is possessed and sent here to deliver the devil's message. All the while, there is an underlying force that beckons you to hear him out. Much of the lyrical rantings involve Tricky threatening the listener. On the album's first singly "Christiansands," he proclaims "I'll master your language, and in the meantime I'll create my own." Later, on the autobiographical "Tricky Kid," he challenges the listener to "Look deep in my mongrel eyes — God will receive us, got me like Jesus."

While not as immediately grabbing as its predecessors, Pre–Millenium Tension still adds something new to those previous efforts. The newly found lyrical maturity on this album and dark, sinister undertones more than make this a worthwhile album. The real pleasure in this record is how Tricky turns dead–end despair into a deeply satisfying buzz by weaving his nightmarish vision into blissful grooves — that is, into the trip–hop that he so adamantly disclaims.

Tricky's will to recreate himself anew every time out is laudable, and to some degree essential to the development of any artist. But the only way to achieve that is not to escape the here and now but to inhabit it in some unexpected way. In attempting to create a sonic blueprint for the new Millenium, he joins other electronic artists such as The Chemical Brothers, Underworld and DJ Shadow in challenging and reshaping the face of popular music through the fusing and deconstruction of genres in order to concoct something original.

■ star wars

continued from page 6

of Return of the Jedi. Instead of the tribal Ewok song and dance we were used to, a new concluding song was added and shots of other cities rejoicing over the destruction of the Empire made the circle more complete. If you look more closely to the Empire's major city celebrating the Rebels victory, you can see the people tearing down the statue of the Emperor and then beating up some poor storm trooper.

"I'm sorry I couldn't do more, but right now I've got my own problems."

I know, it's pathetic. I'm a Star Wars junkie, and I'm going through withdrawals as we speak, but how can you not be? It's the greatest story ever to cross the big screen, and a universal story at that. There's the classic theme —— Good vs. Evil, and a mystical religion which binds everyone. Don't forget, Yoda was teaching Luke long before Mr. Miyagi was teaching Danielson. What about Han Solo? Isn't he the quintessential cowboy with his trusty steed (the Millennium Falcon) and his partner in crime, Chewbacca.

"You've never heard of the Millennium Falcon?"

I only wish that the first time I saw these movies was in the theater. I did see Return of the Jedi in the theater, but I was only five and was content with seeing R2–D2 beep and Yoda talk backwards (for a five–year–old, the Ewoks were a nice touch). When I saw the trilogy this year, I had already seen each movie well over 100 times. So this time around, I was just looking for the new additions.

"Wait, Luke! It's too dangerous!"

A few of my friends had the luxury of viewing these masterpieces for the first time this year in the theater. Yes, I know, how the hell could you of gone this long without seeing these movies? Believe me, these people do exist and thrive in vast numbers.

"Why you no good smuggler. You've got a lot of guts coming here after what you pulled."

At least they now love the movies and respect them. And you can see a little bit of the force is growing within each and every one of them. One of them even has the soundtrack and has become frightened of Darth Vader's theme music.

"You don't know the power of the Dark Side."

The trilogy is one of the most beautiful things ever created in the twentieth century (I hope you have all come to except that). It symbolizes hope, and, of course, once everything is said and done, good will always conquer evil.

"But how will I know the good side from the bad?"

It took George Lucas 20 years to rerelease this series, and it was worth the wait. My only wish is that the new movies that are being constructed, as we breathe, will be handled with care and love and will have the same aura that the originals have had. There has never been a greater set of movies made, and I doubt there ever will be. I know there are some outstanding movies out there, but never before have three movies done what these movies have, or are still continuing to do so.

"The Force will be with you... always."

Hey! If you recognized all of these quotes and can tell me who said them, to whom they spoke, when, and which movie they were in, then "you truly belong with us among the clouds."

Jonathan M. Place is a Collegian staff member.

■ oscar

continued from page 5

had an equally mesmerizing character portrayal, but within a more serious circumstance. The relatively unknown Emily Watson for Breaking the Waves dwells in the shadows of veterans Diane Keaton and Kristin Scott Thomas. Keaton who is nominated for another independent film called Marvin's Room did not receive the hype needed to grasp the Oscar and plus she already has one on her shelf from Annie Hall. Also, if the Academy does decide not to give everything to The English Patient, then Kristin Scott Thomas will be the one to lose out. Like I said, the Academy owes more to Fiennes, which will thus push Thomas out of the ring.

And what more could I say about Shine! From the second the images take form on the screen to its very last instant,– Shine pours with utmost brilliance. Yet, its hope for the big one will be shunned with disappointment as it attempts to compete with its more stable contenders. Scott Hicks' masterpiece is destined for legendary status, although chances are it will come a close second place in the ballot boxes for all the major awards. Hicks' made the film for a mere $5 million and it has already racked up a most impressive $46 million in its world wide gross to date. Proof to the majors that it doesn't take a lot of money to make a lot of money and produce a quality film at the same time.

Geoffrey Rush played the part as the insane piano prodigy David Helthgort with frightening resemblance to the real life character. Yet, Billy Bob Thornton should also not be overlooked for his a role in Sling Blade (which he has also been nominated for in the Best Adapted Screenplay category) which stands as the antithesis of Forrest Gump. Unfortunately both don't stand a chance up against more "established" nominees.

As for Jerry Maguire, the only film in the category to be released by a major studio, Cuba Gooding, Jr. has the Best Supporting Actor nomination in the bag. The Academy has been under tremendous scrutiny as of late for its blatant disregard for minority representation. The main point is that they have to give Maguire something and Gooding's performance was excellent. Everyone who has seen the film could not easily forget the end when Gooding screams to his wife in the crowded locker room about how much he loves her.

If I could give out the award it would definitely go to Mike Leigh's Secrets and Lies. Not in years has a film genuinely touched me so deeply. Leigh who has had a long consecutively successful career in the international art house circuit deserves the Oscar for both Director and Best Original Screenplay. Secrets and Lies expresses the true art of film as a means of self expression and not as a money making medium to fame and fortune. With my parting words, may the best actors and filmmakers win and never before have there been such worthy contenders.

Adam Levine is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS...
We are here !!

Give Us Some Face!

Between March 24 and April 4, come to the Campus Center Concourse and have your picture taken for the new UMass I.D. Card; Monday-Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The photo is FREE, takes about 2 minutes, and you'll AVOID SOME BIG LINES IN THE FALL. The new card will be issued then, and it's going to make your life a lot easier! THE ALL-CAMPUS CARD can be used as your library card, Meal Plan ticket, residence hall key, and as a cash card for on-campus purchases.

I.D. Card photos are also taken in the I.D. Office, Franklin Dining Hall anytime during regular business hours.

Don't miss this photo opportunity!

We want you to write for us!
Call the Collegian at 545-3500

Never mind the critics — Lt. Gov. Cellucci's Oscar picks

BOSTON (AP) — The following are the Oscar selections made by Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci, a lifelong movie buff. They are listed by the award category, whom Cellucci thinks should win and whom, if different, Cellucci thinks will end up getting the Academy Award.

Best Picture
Who should win: Fargo — Who will win: The English Patient

Best Actor
Who should win: Geoffrey Rush — Who will win: Billy Bob Thornton

Best Actress
Who should win: Frances McDormand — Who will win: Frances McDormand

Supporting Actor
Who should win: Cuba Gooding, Jr. — Who will win: Cuba Gooding, Jr.

Supporting Actress
Who should win: Joan Allen — Who will win: Joan Allen

Art Direction
Who should win: The English Patient — Who will win: The English Patient

Cinematography
Who should win: Evita — Who will win: The English Patient

Documentary
Who should win: When We Were Kings — Who will win: When We Were Kings

Dramatic Score
Who should win: The English Patient — Who will win: The English Patient

Original Song
Who should win: Evita — Who will win: Evita

Live in New York City This Summer
NYU Summer Housing
May 18–August 9, 1997
Living in an NYU residence hall offers a safe and convenient home base while you are working, taking classes, or doing an internship.
• Minutes from New York's business and cultural centers.
• Apartment-style and traditional residences; single and double occupancy.
• Outstanding sports-recreation facility.
• Over 1,000 day and evening courses.
• Apply early to secure a space.
For more information, call toll free
1-800-771-4NYU, ext. 912
New York University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity institution.

DO YOU OR A FRIEND OR COLLEAGUE HAVE A PROBLEM WITH ALCOHOL OR OTHER DRUGS?
THERE ARE RESOURCES AVAILABLE TO HELP:
Self Help Groups On & Off Campus
Alcoholics Anonymous 532-2111
Narcotics Anonymous 538-7479
Alanon 253-5261
(for friends and relatives of alcoholics)
Adult Children of Alcoholics 253-5261
Information Provided by UHS — Mental Health Services 545-2337

WITH COUPON
KEEP THAT GREAT SUMMER LOOK!
$10 OFF package of 10 Sessions
ONE FREE TANNING with any salon service.
TANNING SPECIAL, 10 VISITS FOR $40 with coupon
Our WOLFF bed really works
We are your Full Service Salon from Head to Toe
We offer professional
Hair Care • Waxing • Facials • Nail Care
Make-up Applications • Wolff Tanning • Lash & Brow Tinting
Styles by Deborah
65 University Drive • Amherst, 549-5610

Softball faces tough field in Lady Seminole Tourney

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts softball team took a trip to Tallahassee, Fla., over Spring Break, but there wasn't much time to lay out in the sun.

The Minutewomen (7–13) had a grueling schedule as they competed in the Lady Seminole Invitational. They played in the toughest pool of the tournament as they faced three Top 25 teams, two of them on the same day.

Although they came back with a 4–5 record, the trip still has its successes. The women needed to improve in three areas: hitting, pitching and defense, and they managed to work on two of the three.

"I think we hit better, and we got a great effort from our pitchers. We just need to work on our defense," coach Elaine Sortino said.

The Minutewomen opened the tournament on March 14th with a tough three-game day. They started off against No. 20 Louisiana Tech and, despite getting 10 hits to Louisiana's four, lost 2–1. UMass put in the first run, with a RBI single from junior Kim Guiridge, but was unable to score again.

The Minutewomen then played against another ranked team, No. 16 Michigan State, the tournament's eventual winner. UMass fell behind 5–1, but had a three–run fifth inning. It wasn't enough, however, and the Minutewomen lost the game 5–4.

The women ended the day on a good note, beating Furman 3–2. Sortino got a strong pitching effort in the game using Liz Wagner, Sarah Watters and Danielle Henderson. Senior Chris Martens went 3–for–4 in the game to lead the Minutewomen at the plate.

On Saturday, UMass fell 2–1 to No. 14 South Florida, but beat Northern Iowa 2–1. Junior Tracy Osier tied the all–time career steal mark at UMass with a theft in the fifth inning. She had a total of three steals in the Invitational to give her 51 in her career, tying Sue Peters on the all–time list. Senior Stephanie Mareina put in a strong performance against Northern Iowa, hitting a double and a triple, including the game–winning run.

After the Invitational the Minutewomen remained in Florida for doubleheaders against Western Illinois and Northern Iowa. They split both doubleheaders, beating Western Illinois 4–1 in the first game and dropping the second 6–1. They then lost to Northern Iowa 4–1 in the first game and beat them in the second 10–5. Osier broke the all– time steal mark in the first game against Western Illinois, when she stole second base in the first inning.

Sortino is confident over the team's recent improvements.

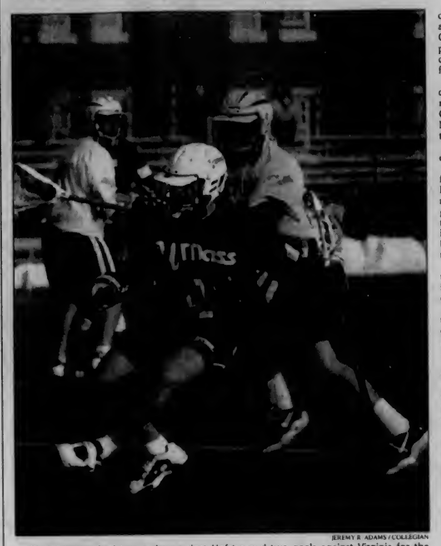
"Even though we keep losing, we're getting better. If we keep knocking on the door, we'll get there," Sortino said.

■ baseball

continued from page 12

Barnsby's first win of the year.

Rider finally pulled one out in the third meeting of the four game series. UMass led 1–0 in the top of the seventh, but Rider exploded for six runs to end to its three game losing streak to the Minutemen. Jeff Puleri held Rider scoreless for six innings on five hits, but couldn't get through the seventh. Northampton native Adam Robinson relieved Puleri and let up the final two runs of the ballgame.



Massachusetts catcher Jason Kudrikow put on a show in the final game against Rider on Thursday, going a career high 5–for–5 to lead UMass to a 13–3 win. Jason Bennett picked up his second win of the trip, throwing seven innings of one run ball to improve to 3–0 on the year.

After Friday's game with Canisius was rained out, UMass finished up the trip by outlasting Bucknell 8–6. Sophomore designated hitter Aaron Braunstein went 4–for–5, and Doug Clark pounded the game–winning home run, a 400–foot shot, to give UMass the win. Ryan Cameron picked up the victory in relief, allowing three runs and four hits in 4 2/3 innings.

Massachusetts returns to action on Wednesday, when it faces Holy Cross in the home opener at Earl E. Lorden Field. Game time is 3 p.m.

■ lax

continued from page 12

JEREMY R. ADAMS / COLLEGIAN
Chris Martens had two assists against Hofstra and two goals against Virginia for the UMass men's lacrosse team over break.

onds remaining in the first overtime, when he was assessed a one minute penalty for slashing. Freshman Chris Campolettano took over in the UMass net, stopping one shot, until Hofstra's timeout allowed UMass coach Greg Cannella to put Kasselakis back on the field.

Massachusetts played stride for stride with Hofstra defensively, never allowing the Dutchmen to lead by more than a goal. That fact was encouraging for Cannella, considering Hofstra has already put down No. 9 Brown (9–4) and No. 10 Towson State (13–10) this year.

"Defensively we played great," Cannella said. "The effort was there, it was a great effort. We played well."

Offensively, Massachusetts took charge in the fourth quarter. Twenty–one seconds after Kasselakis turned back an Alexander shot, senior midfielder Chris Grande tallied his first goal of the game. Grande collected the ball 35 yards out from the goal and sprinted past his defender before firing his shot. The score broke the game's tie and put UMass on top 5–4 with 11:07 remaining in regulation.

What the Dutchman defense did not catch the first time, slipped by it the second time. In near instant–replay fashion, Grande gave UMass a two–goal cushion with 9:51 left in the fourth.

That lead, however, was not safe. With 3:56 left on the clock, Hofstra took advantage of an extra–man opportunity to pull within one on a Mike Clark goal. Jarred Testa tied the game to force overtime with only 36 seconds remaining.

Mike DelPercio, Brendan Glass and Jason Heinze added UMass' other scores.

The game against Hofstra was UMass' second over Spring Break. The Minutemen travelled to Charlottesville, Va. earlier in the week to face off against Virginia.

Despite a pair of two–goal scorers in Grande and Chris Martens, UMass was not able to upset the then–No. 5 Cavaliers, falling 16–10.

Virginia took a 4–1 lead on three first–quarter goals from David Wren, but the Minutemen poured in seven tallies in the second to inch ahead of Virginia.

However, the Minutemen could only find the Cavalier net once in each of the final two quarters, while Virginia stayed hot on the attack.

Mike McKeefrey, Harold Drumm, John O'Connor, Jay Negus, Glass and Casey Costello also scored for UMass.

DAILY CLASSIFIED SPECIALS

Monday: Apartment for Rent
Tuesday: For Sale
Wednesday: Personals
Thursday: Auto for Sale

Call us at 545-3500 or visit us at our Newstand or at our Campus Center Basement Office

Student 10¢ a word

BLACK&DECKER®
Sales, Marketing, Event Marketing Careers with an Industry Leader
DEWALT High Performance Industrial Tools

For All SOM Majors. . . If You:
- Are interested in a sales/marketing career
- Have strong communication, organization, and interpersonal skills
- Have high energy

Join us for an Information Session
Tuesday, March 25 from 7:30 - 9:30 p.m.
in Campus Center Room 168

Interviews will be held Wednesday & Thursday at SOM

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
(888) 211-OCMP
Present

Dining Out
COMING MARCH 26
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants
For info & rates call 545-3500

■ hoop

continued from page 12

"They did a better job penetrating and getting into the lane [in the second half], especially Wheat, he took advantage when we stopped playing defense," Travieso said.

■ year

continued from page12

Travieso also reflected on his career with pride.

"We had some real good times there. When you look back at all the things that we've done we can't put our heads down. We were fortunate to get the opportunity to play [at UMass]."

The team's other senior, Tyrone Weeks, was put in a delicate situation after the loss. Because of a recent change to the NCAA's Prop 48 rules, Weeks has the chance to return to UMass for another year, because he is scheduled to graduate in June.

But the forward has not made up his mind just yet.

"I'm trying not to think about it right now, because I'm still kind of upset about the loss. It'll be soon because I don't want the University of Massachusetts to wait on me to make my decision."

■ Johnson

continued from page 12

with his in–game play. The Camden, N.J. native was the Cardinal catalyst — Louisville's "Can't–Miss Kid."

He poured in a game–high 21 points, which came on 5–for– 7 shooting from the field and a perfect 10–for–10 from the line.

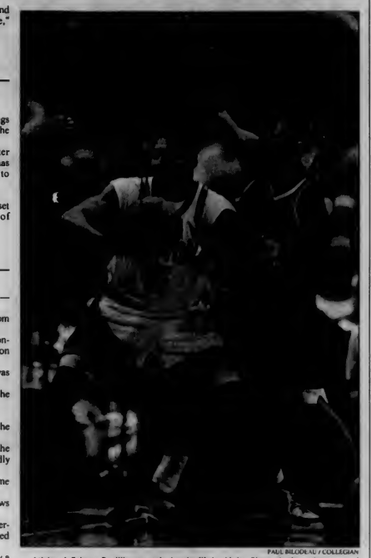
With 6:22 remaining in the game and Louisville leading by one, Johnson connected on a shot from behind the arc to give the Cardinals a four–point cushion 48–44.

"When he hit the three from the corner, that was as big a shot as there was in this game," Louisville coach Denny Crum said.

Two minutes later, Johnson hit both ends of a one–and–one that pushed the Louisville edge to 52–49.

Johnson was not finished.

UMass pulled within one when Charlton Clarke hit a jumper that made the score 52–51. Louisville inched further ahead to a 55–52 lead.



With just over a minute remaining in the game, Johnson took his place at the charity stripe and hit a pair. In the next 33 seconds, Johnson single–handedly iced the game with four more free throws.

"I was so proud of my freshman here," Crum said. "He came into the game ready to play. He concentrated and he did his job out there.

"He hit some key free throws for us coming down the stretch. It just shows that even rookies can get their job done out there if they're focused."

In the press conference following the game, Johnson was anything but nervous. The freshman sat before a sea of reporters with an excited but exhausted look on his face.

Any nerves he might have had were long gone, replaced by the feeling only a win can bring.

PAUL BELDEN III / COLLEGIAN
UMass' Edgar Padilla guards Louisville's Alvin Sims during the teams' NCAA first–round game.

Tar Heels beat Cardinals to advance to Final Four

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Dean Smith is taking his imposing records, a long winning streak and a pretty good basketball team to the Final Four.

Top–seeded North Carolina beat sixth–seeded Louisville 97–74 yesterday to win the East Regional and give the Tar Heels their 16th straight victory and 13th Final Four berth.

Eleven of those have been under Smith, who became college basketball's winningest coach last weekend and now has 879 career victories.

North Carolina (28–6) has been to the Final Four in each of the odd–numbered years in the '90s, with 1993 being Smith's second national championship.

The Tar Heels will play Southeast Regional champion Arizona next Saturday in Indianapolis.

Smith is also the winningest coach in the history of the NCAA tournament and win No. 65 seemed assured by halftime as the Tar Heels took a 54–33 lead. North Carolina shot 65 percent from the field in the first half, and held the Cardinals (26–9) without a field goal over the final five minutes, outscoring them 19–6. But Louisville, which trailed at halftime in all four of its NCAA tournament games, had other ideas.

The Cardinals started the second half with a 19–5 run and used a 3–point barrage to get within 69–66 with 8:19 to play. However, they went into another long scoring drought, and a 12–0 run over the next 4:45 increased North Carolina's lead to 81–66.

"That win came over a courageous, gutty team that was down by 21 points and came back," Smith said. "You also have to hand it to our players for the way they responded and played great over the last seven minutes. You have to admire that for a team that's been like that all year."

North Carolina lost its first three Atlantic Coast Conference games this season for the first time ever. The Tar Heels were being written off by many, but they haven't lost since January 29.

"This was a great feeling to cut down those nets after the way we started the ACC season," North Carolina forward Antawn Jamison said. "We came together as a team and put all our differences aside. It shows how hard we worked and that hard work pays off."

Louisville senior guard DeJuan Wheat, who sprained his left ankle in the regional semifinal victory over Texas and was considered doubtful for Sunday's game, started but was limited in what he could do.

The Cardinals' leading scorer and best ballhandler had one 3–pointer in five attempts in the first half and two of the the team's 11 turnovers. He finished with six points on 2–for–11 shooting, and had eight assists in a gutty 32 minutes.

Massachusetts women's lacrosse splits a pair to start season

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

WORCESTER — Rosy cheeks were not only had by the thousands of St. Patrick's Day celebrants in Worcester last Monday afternoon, but the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team had their share of them as well.

On top of a cold and blustery Mount St. James, UMass (1–1) closed out its first weekend of the season with a 11–2 rout of the Crusaders at Hart Omni Turf Field. Battling sub– freezing temperatures on one of the seven hills of Rome, the Minutewomen were powered by 10 different scorers, including two goals by freshman midfielder Rebecca Minaker.

It was not the only battle amidst harsh weather for UMass on this opening weekend. A trip to Harvard's Ohiri Field on March 15 was canceled due to snow. The season opener for the Minutewomen was then moved to Boston University's Nickerson Field, but the change in field conditions did not move the team to victory. Down by a 5–3 score at the half, UMass was not able to move past Harvard in the second stanza, and lost to the Crimson by a close, hard–fought final score of 6–5. The seniors led the way, with attacker Stephanie Walsh netting four goals (5 goals, 1 assist, 6 pts), and tri–captain Michele Warrington (2g, 2pts) also scoring for the Minutewomen.

For coach Francesca McClellan, the success of the offense, particularly against Holy Cross, was not the only measuring stick of their success. The defense is what stood out for her on the weekend, especially the last line in freshman goalkeeper Megan Haggerty (14 saves).

"We're excited about this start," McClellan said. "Our defense is playing tough, good ball, and our goalie is doing great for being young. [Haggerty is] making the saves she needs to make, and she's stepping up more and more each game she plays. Offensively, we're not quite as smooth. "What we've done, before each one of these games, is we've learned a new play specifically for the team we're playing against, and they have successfully executed those plays. So, I'm really excited about the fact that our offense is smart, and they're really beginning to start to read the defense well."

In the Holy Cross game, it was UMass that came out with the first half lead, and would not relinquish it. At the 5:13 mark, junior midfielder Jen Herker got the Minutewomen up early, rushing from her left to right for the first goal on Crusader goalie Julie Novak. After a goal by Walsh, the senior attacker assisted on Warrington's eventual game– winner at the 12:59 mark, putting UMass up 3–0.

A 5–0 score going into the second half was a little deceptive, because the game was already out of reach for Holy Cross. The Minutewomen's tough defensive strategy had clamped down on the Crusader offense from the start, and after three straight goals to start the second, the UMass bench took over the game.

Goals by senior tri–captain Erica Bryan, freshman midfielder Colleen Wales and attacker Meghan Magee in the first 10 minutes of the half slammed the door shut on Holy Cross. For sophomore Laura Kessler, UMass' second–leading scorer this season, hard work finally paid off in the 22:07 mark, putting the team up 10–0 on an assist from Magee. Two late goals by the Crusaders was purely academic, and the 11–2 final was had by the Minutewomen.

"I'm really liking what we have seen so far," McClellan said. "We're fit, we're outrunning teams to ground balls and we're deep. We have a bench that can perform, which is something that is new for us, giving our starters some rest to come back in fresh.

"I think we're going to get stronger, and finish more. Naturally, our mission is to finish with the ball in the net, of course, not over or to the side of the net, and that's what we've been working on."

The Massachusetts women's lacrosse team had no trouble with Holy Cross this weekend, as it beat the Crusaders 10–2.

EDUCATION MAJORS!!
DON'T JUST WORK THIS SUMMER, COME GROW PROFESSIONALLY AT AMERICA'S PREMIER BROTHER/SISTER CAMPS
WINADU FOR BOYS
DANBEE FOR GIRLS
IN WESTERN MASS
SALARY/ROOM/BOARD AND TRAVEL INCLUDED!!
COME VISIT WITH OUR REPRESENTATIVE
THURSDAY, APRIL 3RD
802 CAMPUS CENTER
10 AM - 4 PM
(WALK-INS WELCOME!)
FOR MORE INFO CALL
800-494-6234

University of Colorado at Boulder
USE SUMMER TO ACCELERATE
YOUR ACADEMIC PROGRESS
Summer session on the Boulder campus is something special. With over 500 campus courses to choose from, it's a relaxed, comfortable learning environment. Classes are smaller. And when you're not in class, you can soak up Boulder's mellow charm. Or explore Boulder's backyard, a high country playground that includes some of the country's most rugged and spectacular terrain.
Summer is a great time to get a jump on the next phase of your educational goals.
FOR EXAMPLE:
VISITING STUDENTS. Take advantage of CU resources to complete or enrich your own degree program.
HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS. Take a college course for experience, to enhance your college application, or to see if CU is the right school for you.
TEACHERS. Earn recertification credits and tap into everything the University has to offer.
PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT. Increase your knowledge base and build skills to enhance your capabilities.
ENRICHMENT. Give yourself the pleasure of an academic challenge at CU this summer.
FOR MORE INFORMATION.
Call 303-492-5146 or 800-331-2801 to request a Summer Session catalog. Or visit our web site www.colorado.edu/conted/Summer

Alfredo's
PHOTOGRAPHIC ART LOCAL
AMHERST PHOTOS MAKE GREAT GRADUATION GIFTS
SPORTS PHOTOS & POSTERS
39 S. PLEASANT ST 413 253 1707
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

A Branch Beyond
Silver Jewelry Specialists
Great Selection Low Prices
236 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 253-4997 Mon-Sat 11-6

Classe Cafe
eat hearty, eat light, eat sweet, eat smart
eat natural, eat veggie, eat meat, eat soup
EAT GOOD IT'S HERE
morningOnoonOnight
M-Sat. 7am-9pm
Sunday Brunch 7-3
wine & beer
OCMP
188 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2291

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Trying to quit smoking or chewing tobacco? Need help? Support Group meets every Wednesday from 7-8pm. in Campus Center Room 801. Free. Call 577-5181 for more information or just drop by.

Concerned about Sex, STD's, Alcohol, Drugs, Eating Disorders, Stress, HIV/AIDS or Smoking? Call Peer Health Connections at 577-5168 for answers to your questions Completely Confidential.

EMPLOYMENT

Delivery or Kitchen Help Must be able to work 20 hours/week. Apply at D.P. Dough

Amherst Leisure Services is now accepting applications for summer positions Aquatics positions: Pool Maintenance Supervisor, Canoe Instructors, Assistant Pool Manager, Lifeguards, Swim Instructors, and Cashiers. Day Camp Positions: Camp Counselors, Special Needs Coordinator/Supervisor in Mainstream setting, Special Needs Counselor/Aides in Mainstream setting, Camp Art Director, Camp Resource Manager. Sports Positions: Ball Field Maintenance, Youth Tennis Instructors. Applications are available at the Town of Amherst Human Resources and Leisure Services Offices. Return completed application by the preferred deadline of 3/31/97 to: Town of Amherst Human Resources Office, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst, MA 01002. An EO/AA Employer.

Legal Assistants Wanted- Fall 1997 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the Legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the Legal profession necessary— training provided. Stop by the office today and pick up an application. 922 Campus Center

Technical Support/ISP Looking for a great part-time job? We are a local, progressive, internet service provider that is looking for Quality, Energetic, and Reliable persons to join our team. Requirements: experience in Windows '95, Windows 3.1, Mac, Dialup Networking and TC PIP. Call our job hotline today! (413)587-4333 or e-mail jobs@crocker.com

Cruise Lines Hiring Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel (Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. (919)918-7767 ext. C180. (Member, Better Business Bureau CARE Program)

Alaska Employment Earn up to $3000-$6000+/month in fisheries, parks, resorts, airfare, food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180

Drivers Wanted Apply at Pinnochio's between 2:00pm. and 5:00pm. No phone calls.

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Summer Rental- West Hyannis Port Cape Cod three bedroom. Walk to Craigville Beach. Available 5/25-8/31. (508)778-6519

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses; Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

3 Piece Teak Bedroom Set $200, Xmas tree $25, clothes rack $20. 467-3084

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT 30 hours, $395 American Academy 1-800-808-Prep (please leave your name and number)

MUSICIANS

MUSICIANS DRUMMER WANTED Punk/Ska Band 25 Livers needs a drummer now!

MUSICIANS

We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming. Call Dave and Ryan 665-9112

SERVICES

Rental Problems Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Photophile? Me too. I'll pose, you shoot. Iris 587-0850

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Wow! It's my birthday too! Let's celebrate - maybe we could burn stuff!

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T Europe $169 O/W Fly the world dirt cheap. ONE WORLD TRAVEL

Party Weekend to Vermont April 4-6, only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus. $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Fort Lauderdale area, FL March 8-15, studio, $650/week (413)786-7133. Partial kitchen.

PERSONALS

PERSONALS

PERSONALS

PERSONALS

PERSONALS

Student Coupon

Use this coupon to get an extra special student discount on Collegian Classified ads — just 20¢ per word/day

No further purchase necessary. One coupon per customer per visit per day per ad. Not valid when combined with other offers. Not valid where void, prohibited by law, or generally redundant. See Classified section on page 10 for further details. No further purchase necessary. One coupon per customer per visit per day per ad. Not valid when combined with other offers. Not valid where void, prohibited by law, or generally redundant. See Classified section on page 10 for further details. No further purchase necessary. One coupon per customer per visit per day per ad. Not valid when combined with other offers. Not valid where void, prohibited by law, or generally redundant. See Classified section on page 10 for further details. Always read the fine print!

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be groomed by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals; this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the coupon order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not fit the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, MARCH 24

Poetry — Poet Laureate of the United States, Robert Haas, author of Field Work; Praise; Human Wishes; Sun Under Wood and other works, will be joined at a poetry reading by Branda Hillman, author of Coffee; 3 a.m.; White Dress; Fortress, Death Tractates; Bright Existence; and Loose Sugar, in the Main Lecture Hall of the Franklin Patterson Hall at Hampshire College at 8 p.m. Free and wheelchair accessible.

TUESDAY, MARCH 25

Lecture — UMass Hillel will hold a lecture and discussion on "St. Jean: New Immigrants of Israel in the 1990's, Absorption, Conflict & Racism," led by Shoshana Madmoni, instructor if Hillel course, Divisions and Conflict in Israeli Society, at 7:30 p.m. in the Hillel Recreational Room.

Meeting — Students Helping Area Reach-out Efforts (SHARE) will hold a general meeting at 6 p.m. outside 504 Goodell Building. New members are welcome. Free pizza.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 26

Dance — UMass Hillel will sponsor Israeli Dancing in the basement of Chadbourne Residence Hall. There will be a teaching session from 8:30-9:15 p.m. and review and request from 9:15-10 p.m. No experience required.

Discussion — Joe Salvatore, an M.F.A. Dramaturgy graduate student will hold a discussion on the presence of queer ideas and themes in late 20th century American theater, called "Peeking Out of the Closet Door," at 4 p.m. in the Rand Theatre. The event is free and open to the public, sponsored by UMass Theater Educational Services.

Lecture — Dr. Maria Nikolajeva of the University of Stockholm will present a lecture entitled "The Swedishness of Swedish Children's Literature" at 7:30 p.m. in Thompson Hall, room 102. The lecture is in English and is open to the public free of charge.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Prosemiar Lecture Series will feature Kathy Peiss, from the UMass history department, on "Producing a Consumer Culture: Women in the American Beauty Business," from 12:15-1:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174-176. Free and open to the public. Coffee and tea will be available. Feel free to bring a lunch.

Lecture — Zoe Perry will present a slide show involving her experiences as a lesbian at the Beijing Women's International Conference in the Campus Center (time to be announced). Part of the GLBT Cafe Series and sponsored by the UMass Stonewall Center.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coaltion will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will hold its meeting in room 304 in the University Health Services from 5:30-6:30 p.m. All are welcome to attend.

NOTICES

Elections — Elections for Student Government President, Trustee and local area government positions have been rescheduled to March 26 and 27 due to the student takeover of Goodell last week. Polling locations to be announced.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545-9484.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one-acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to department of comparative lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Band wanted — Amnesty International is looking for a Jazz Band to play for its upcoming fundraiser this spring. If interested, call the Amnesty office at 549-1925 or Babz at 546-3105 as soon as possible.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577-5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577- 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.

Pits are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

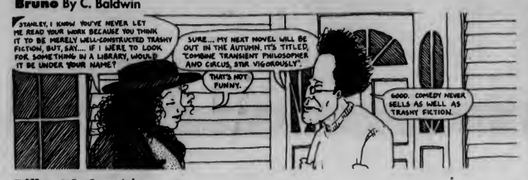
Member O.C.M.P.

"we accept all major credit cards"

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
19 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
28 BET
28 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music



WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

$1 drinks Vodka Tonic & always $1 Bud "light draft"

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 24, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	10	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Going Places (R)		American Experience		Fighter Pilot's Story (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 2) (R)		First Flights
WFSB	3	3	News (R)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am Journal	Cosby (R) (R)	Raymond	Cybill (R) (R)	Ink (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope "Liver Let Die"	News (R)	Late Show (R)
WBZ	4	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Cosby (R) (R)	Raymond	Cybill (R) (R)	Ink (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope "Liver Let Die"	News (R)	Late Show (R)
WCVB	5	5	News (R)	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R)	Barbara Walters (In Stereo) (R)		Academy Awards (In Stereo Live) (R)
WLVI	6		Full House (R)	Fresh Prince	Live From the Academy Awards (In Stereo Live)				Star Trek: Next Gener.			News	Jenny Jones (In Stereo) (R)
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Foxworthy	Foxworthy	★★½ "Hard Target" (1993, Drama)		Jean-Claude Van Damme (R)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		6	Fresh Prince	Martin (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Reel TV (R)	In the House	Malcolm-Edde	Sparta (R) (R)	Goode Beh.	News	LAPD	Nash TV (R)
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy (R)	Foxworthy	Foxworthy	★★½ "Hard Target" (1993, Drama)		Jean-Claude Van Damme (R)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	11	Simpsons (R)	Roseanne (R)	Home Imp.	Seinfeld (R)	Cops (R) (R)	Cops (R) (R)	Cops (R) (R)	Cops (R) (R)	News		Coach (R) Babylon 5 (R)
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Foxworthy	Foxworthy	★★½ "Hard Target" (1993, Drama)		Jean-Claude Van Damme (R)	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	40	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Going Places (R)		American Experience		Fighter Pilot's Story (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 2) (R)		Charlie Rose
WGGB	39	28	News (R)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Ent. Tonight	Barbara Walters (In Stereo) (R)		Academy Awards (In Stereo Live) (R)
WSBK	38		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld (R)	NHL Hockey:	Boston Bruins at Montreal Canadiens. (Live)				News		Med Abo. You Real TV (R)
WTBS	42		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	★★ "Nanny" (1994, Suspense)		Les Patrick		★★½ "The Star Chamber" (1983, Drama)		Michael Douglas.
A&E	41		Quincy "A Test for Living"		Equalizer "Past Imperfect"		Biography: Charles Manson		Poirot		Miss Marple (Part 2 of 3)		Law & Order (R)
CNN	43	23	WorldView (R)		Moneyline (R)	Crossfire (R)	Prime News (R)	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live (R)		World Today (R)		Sports Illus. Moneyline (R)
COM	53	36	Tick (R)	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	★★½ "Irreconcilable Differences" (1984, Comedy)		Ryan O'Neal.		On Delivery Dream On		Daily Show Comic Relief
DISC	44		Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings "Avenger" (R)		Wild Discovery: Australians		Ultimate Guide: Snakes (R)		Who's Afraid of ... Bears		Wild Discovery: Australians
ESPN	31		Basketball	Sportscenter	Women's College Basketball:		NCAA Tourn. Midwest Final				Women's College Basketball:	NCAA Tourn. Midwest Final	Sportscenter Basketball
LIFE	45		Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	"Triumph Over Disaster: The Hurricane Andrew Story" (1993)				"The Flood: Who Will Save Our Children?" (1993)		Joe Spano.
MTV	46		Ren & Stimpy	Roundtable	Singled Out	Ideal Savants	Prime Time	Roundtable	Prime Time (In Stereo)		Road Rules Daria	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	52		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug (R)	Rugrats (R)	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	Love Lucy (R)	Bewitched	Newhart (R) Odd Couple (R)	Taxi (R)	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	55		Odyssey (R)	Sci-Fi Trader	Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)		Tekwar (In Stereo) (R)		Forever Knight "The Fix" (R)		V (R) (In Stereo) (R)	Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)
TLC	57	26	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Extreme Machines		Aliens Invade Hollywood		Future Fantastic "Alien" (R)	Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	59		In the Heat of the Night (R)		In the Heat of the Night (R)		WCW Nitro (Live) (R)				Adventures of Robin Hood	WCW Nitro (R) (R)
USA	60		Renegade (In Stereo) (R)		Highlander: The Series (R)		World Wrestling Federation Monday Night Raw				La Femme Nikita "Charity" (R)	Wings (R)	Wings (R)
HBO	61		"In the Line of Duty: The Price of Vengeance" (1994, Drama)				★★ "Vampire in Brooklyn" (1995, Comedy) Eddie Murphy.				★★ "Someone to Die For" (1995, Suspense) Caitlin Bernsen. (R)		Sports-Screen
MAX	63		6:45 ★★½ "Sabrina" (1995, Comedy) Harrison Ford. (R)				★★ "Lit the Academy" (1960) Nori Leitzman. (R)				★★ "Girl of (1998, Drama) Theresa Randle. (In Stereo) (R)		Flight (1929)
SHOW	65		★★★ "Bill Cosby -- Himself" (1982, Comedy) Bill Cosby. (R)				★★½ "Mo' Money" (1992) Damon Wayans. (R)				"Night Terrors" (1993, Horror) Robert Englund. (R)	★★ "Relative Fear" (1994) (R)

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

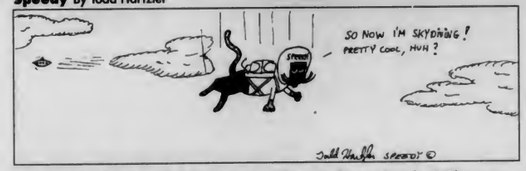
Non Sequitor By Wiley

Robotman By Jim Meddick

University® By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin



LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Burgers or Something	Burgers or Something	Stone Willy's Pizza	Stone Willy's Pizza
Salad	Salad	Salad	Salad
Cereal	Cereal	Soup	Soup
Lunch Surprize	Dinner Surprize	Lunch Surprize	Dinner Surprize

Hampshire — Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Two All Beef Patties	Sandwiches	Sandwiches	Nachos
Special Sauce, Lettuce	Salad	Salad	Taco Supreme
Cheese, Pickles, Onions	Spam	Spam	Capaccino
On a Sesame Seed Bun	Dinner Surprize	Lunch Surprize	TP for your Bunghole

Oops! No Menu Today! Worcester. Try 545-2626. It's fun!

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
The subtle approach to a difficult situation may prick your conscience, but it will save heartache in the long run. Just make certain that you are completely honest down the road with yourself, and with everyone involved.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
A clever remark makes you think. Follow up on whatever ideas you come up with—there may be a real diamond in the rough there. Great strides can be made if you make the extra effort.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
Past-thanking action prevents a minor disaster from becoming a major one. You ought to consider taking the initiative more often. A new idea turns out to be OK after all.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
Visiting an old friend is a good idea. You'll reforge old bonds, which could be useful in the future. Besides, you might have fun. A good day for other communications efforts, also—should you write a letter?

LEO
July 23–August 23
An unusual assortment of co-workers or friends could help you solve a problem you thought was impossible. Lavish them with appreciation if things work out, and be ready to return any favors in kind.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
An unexpected long distance phone call brings welcome news. Pass it along and make another's day, but don't gossip. A work-related dispute comes to a head over an unrelated issue.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Your enthusiasm and leadership create an ideal environment to accomplish great things this week. Allow an intellectual to take the lead, and you'll go even further.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
An innovation on an old routine may seem threatening, but it's a change for the better. Ease into the new pattern slowly, and you may be surprised at how easy it is to adjust.

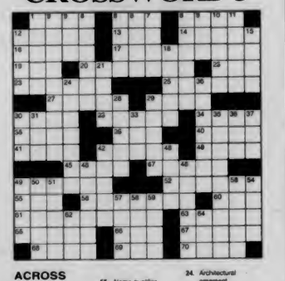
SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
A club meeting is a good forum for tackling a complicated subject—in theory. Be careful that the ideas you come up with are practical before you try to put them into action. It might be wise to wait awhile.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
A frivolous acquaintance gets on your nerves with their chatter, but be careful not to complain directly. Rather, distract them with an excuse, and then get back to work. You'll be more productive in a quiet environment.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
Set up an appointment with an expert to discuss a problem that's been worrying you. Your difficulties may be more easily solved than you think, so it's worth the expense to calm your mind.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
A sporting event is fun for a larger group, but beware a group member who may not value moderation as you do. A tactful approach will prevent embarrassment.

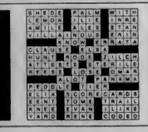
Close to Home By John McPherson



Quote of the Day

"I usually just wait until somebody says something stupid"

–Overheard regarding "quote of the day"



CROSSWORD 3

ACROSS
1. Detroit
5. Pled
8. Hudson River School landscapist
12. High boot
13. Participant in "The Thrills in Manila"
14. Parts of loaves
18. Lisa a surprised person's mouth
17. Popular chaser (2 wds.)
19. RMN's party
20. Prodigal ones
22. "I'll ___ You In My Dreams"
23. Catch in a snare
25. Listen
27. Artery
29. ... and chips
30. Pokes
32. Row
34. ___ facto
36. Perry's creator
38. Actress Charlotte
40. Equestrian's enforcer
41. Daily fare
42. Tailor
44. Illustrator Atwater
45. Emulates Bill Robinson
47. Clan emblem
48. Hinder
52. Flower segments
55. Name qualifier
56. Terms of Endearment musts
60. Business apparel
61. Meeting
63. Fatin
65. Word on a door
66. Papal name
67. Landing spot for E.T.
68. Word sung while drinking
69. Election add-on
70. Easter purchases

DOWN
1. On the ___ (sober)
2. Flexible
3. Pot party
4. Before hostilities
5. Clothing for Alger's Dick
6. Hit the runway
7. Hydra's head count
8. Bureaus
9. Above, to a bard
10. Hertz or Avis contract
11. Barten of films
13. Conduct, as war
15. Future vegetable
16. Holy cup
21. High-rise dwellings (abbr.)
24. Architectural ornament
26. Danae growth of trees
28. TV's "Green ___"
29. Follow the ___ (Adams-Rogers film)
31. A TV Clampett
31. First name in Greek tyrannts
33. GMC union
35. Early
36. Pugsley, to Morticia
37. Select
42. Item on Kenya's flag
43. Lanyard
46. Cling
46. Veteran
49. Playwright Williams
50. Wherewithal
51. Trifling
53. Tips
54. Horologist Thomas
57. Christie's Death on the ___
58. Place for a jeans patch
60. Borodin's prince
62. Clara Clack, e.g.
64. Painter-photographer Mark ___

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Leold (leold@javanet.com) by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

Dear Lynn,

I was gazing out my window this morning. It was lovely and I thought of you.

I was washing my face last night. As I stared into the mirror I thought about you.

I stubbed my toe and I thought about you.

I poked my dog 30 or 40 times until she bit me and I thought about you.

How've you been?

Leold

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS WEEKEND

Monday, March 24, 1997

▼ SPORTS THIS WEEK

MEN'S	WOMEN'S	MEN'S	WOMEN'S	MEN'S	WOMEN'S
Lacrosse	Lacrosse	BASEBALL	SOFTBALL	TRACK	TRACK
Mar. 25 vs. Boston College Mar. 29 @ Army	Mar. 26 vs. Yale Mar. 29 @ Temple	Mar. 26 vs. Boston College Mar. 29 @ Virginia Tech (DH) Mar. 30 @ Virginia Tech	Mar. 27 @ Princeton Mar. 29 vs. Dayton Mar. 30 vs. St. Bonnie	Mar 29 vs. Hartford, Maine & Vermont	Mar. 28-29 @ Raleigh Relays

Basketball's '97 rollercoaster halted by Louisville

Flint, guards look back, while Weeks looks ahead

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

PITTSBURGH — As Massachusetts men's basketball coach James "Bruiser" Flint spoke to reporters outside of the post-game interview room at the Pittsburgh Civic Arena following his team's NCAA Tournament first-round loss to Louisville, there was not a negative word to be heard.

There was no talk of what could have been done better. There was no mention of whose defense could have been tighter. There were no comments about whose shot selection was off.

Instead, as the rookie coach walked away from the last official press gathering of his first year, there were only words of praise and thanks.

"I just want to thank my team, they made my first year special," Flint said. "They helped me get out of a hole. They gave us a chance to get into the NCAA Tournament, which was one of my dreams.

"[The seniors] were fantastic. We've got a lot of young guys on this team that didn't necessarily know what this was about or what they should do. Those guys led by example, they helped us reach our goals."

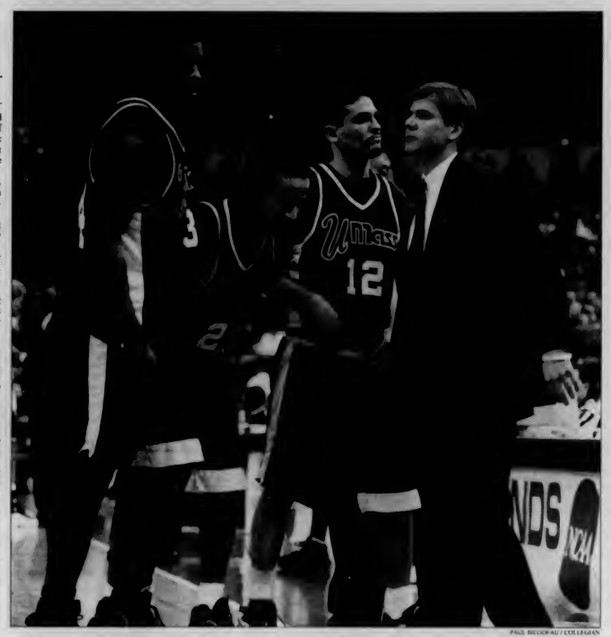
Flint also talked about the highlight of his first year.

"We always talk about 'Refuse to Lose' at UMass," Flint said. "This season was definitely about refusing to lose, because we were dead at one point. Our guys rose up and they decided to make a good season out of this, to keep fighting.

"That's what I'm going to remember most from our first season, that our guys kept fighting and showed great character."

The end of Flint's first year at the Massachusetts hoop helm also drawn the collegiate careers of Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso to a close.

The pair, noted for their accomplishments in leading UMass to the 1996 Final Four, and for playing together on the Puerto Rican Olympic team this past year, reflected on their time at UMass after the Louisville loss.



Padilla spoke about taking what he grew at UMass and looked toward the future.

"I think it's been a great experience going through these four years at UMass," Padilla said. "We won a lot of games, we got better as persons and players. Hopefully we can take this to the future and do some things."

Travieso agrees with Padilla, noting that he too matured while at the school.

"I don't ever regret picking the University of Massachusetts," he said. "I thought my four years were a learning experience. I grew as a person and I got better as a basketball player."

Turn to YEAR, page 9

PAUL BECKFORD/COLLEGIAN

UMass' three seniors — Tyrone Weeks, Carmelo Travieso and Edgar Padilla — leave the floor in the final seconds of UMass' NCAA loss to Louisville.

Johnson leads way for Cards against UMass

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

PITTSBURGH — Playing in his first NCAA Tournament, it was understandable to think that Louisville men's basketball freshman Nate Johnson would be a bit nervous when his Cardinals took the floor against Massachusetts in the teams' March 14 first-round game.

If there were any butterflies, however, they certainly did not show. Johnson took control of his nervous energy and took control of the game, leading Louisville to the second round courtesy a 65–57 win over UMass.

"It wasn't that I was nervous," Johnson said after the game. "I was just focusing and concentrating on this game and what I had to do to help my team win.

"I knew I just had to be focused and go out there and play my hardest, do whatever I had to do to help my team win."

When the Minutemen found out that the Cardinals were to be their opening opponents, it was not Johnson who commanded the most attention. Instead it was Louisville's standout senior point guard, DeJuan Wheat.

It was understandable that Wheat was the most talked about of UMass' individual opponents. One of the 12 finalists for the 1997 Boost/Naismith Player of the Year award, Wheat earned top Cardinal scoring honors with his 18.1 points per game average.

But Johnson deserved his fair share of the attention. Going into the tourney, the Conference USA Freshman of the Year averaged 9.8 ppg and 5.1 rebounds per game.

If he was lacking for pre–game attention, Johnson made up for it

Turn to JOHNSON, page 9

Louisville dominates the inside game to put down UMass in NCAA Tourney

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

PITTSBURGH — This year's Massachusetts men's basketball team likes to excite. First it turns around a 6–9 record to win 12 of its last 13. Then, the Minutemen place themselves on the NCAA Tournament bubble, and eventually land a spot on Selection Sunday.

Louisville	65
Massachusetts	57

In true heart–stopping Minuteman fashion, UMass fought down to the wire in the NCAA appearance before coming up short.

The Minutemen came out hot, yet despite leading by as much as nine points on four occasions in the first half, they fell to Louisville 65–57 in the first round of NCAA Tournament action at the Pittsburgh Civic Arena.

In the final minutes of the first half, UMass secured the lead 26–17 on a Carmelo Travieso pull–up jumper with 3:28 to go. However, the Cardinals closed out the first frame with a 7–0 run of their own finishing it off with a DeJuan Wheat 3–pointer as the clock wound down, which cut the Minuteman lead to three, 28–25.

It was a dogfight the rest of the way.

Seconds into the second half, Wheat struck again, swishing a trey that knotted the game at 28. UMass recaptured the lead when Lari Ketner took it strong over Louisville's Beau Zach Smith for a one point advantage 37–36.

Wheat, who finished the game with 16 points, tied it up at 40 when he tallied a layup at 11:25.

The Minutemen knotted it one last time at 42 when Tyrone Weeks, who led UMass in the first half with 10 points and finished the game with 16 points, grabbed the offensive board and put it back for the score with nine minutes remaining in regulation.

Charlton Clarke took it the length of the court for the hoop and one to give UMass the lead once again 49–48. This was the last time the Minutemen would hold the advantage.

The rest of the way, the Cardinals capitalized on the strength of their foul shooting, as freshman Eric Johnson went a solid 10–for–10 from the charity stripe.

"They posed mismatch problems at the two and the three. We knew they were going to try to post their guards because they are pretty much famous for that," Massachusetts coach James "Bruiser" Flint said after the game.

"Johnson had a great game. He went to the line and knocked down some foul shots and did a great job getting it inside and posting the ball."

With the exception of Weeks, who was the lone UMass force inside, Louisville suffocated the Minutemen's play in the paint.

"I think it was more of their ball pressure than it necessarily was their big guys," Flint said. "They did a good job of pushing us out and giving us bad angles with their ball pressure.

"They really made it crowded in there when we tried to go high–low, they rushed our guys. They did a good job in the high–low putting pressure on the ball to keep us from lobbing it in to Lari."

Travieso, a player Flint has touted as the best defensive player in the country, did an outstanding job with Wheat in the first half. However, in the second frame, the six–foot Louisville senior tore it up with 13 points.

Turn to HOOP, page 9

Lax falls to Virginia, Hofstra over break

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — Five different times the No. 7 Hofstra men's lacrosse team held a one–goal lead in its matchup with No. 15 Massachusetts. Unfortunately for the Minutemen, one of those times when the teams shook hands at the game's end.

UMass rallied to pull even with the Flying Dutchmen four times, and even held a two–goal advantage late in the game. But after pushing the contest to overtime, Hofstra sent home the winning strike in the second extra period to claim the victory, 7–6.

Hofstra	7
Massachusetts	6

After calling timeout, which allowed UMass to reinsert junior goaltender John Kasselakis into the lineup, the Dutchmen attacked the UMass zone. They got the ball to Tony Alexander, who beat Kasselakis with a shot by the goalie's feet. The score came at 1:25 of the second sudden death period.

"I thought I saw it," Kasselakis said. "I'm taking full responsibility for this one. I lost my head for a minute in the first overtime and it changed the momentum."

Kasselakis was forced out of the game with 29 sec-

Turn to LAX, page 8

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

UMass goalie John Kasselakis was strong in the net, but came up just short in an overtime loss

Baseball puts down Rider, wins five on Florida trip

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts baseball team completed a successful spring break road trip in Florida this past week, taking three of four from Rider and beating both Pace and Bucknell to finish 5–1 on it's annual spring trip.

The Minutemen are now 6–3 on the season, and await their home opener on Wednesday against Holy Cross.

UMass opened the trip with a 13–4 pounding of Pace. Shortstop Brad Gorrie had four hits and drove in two runs and catcher Brian Samela had three RBIs, including a home run. Senior Jason Bennett went seven innings for his second win of the season.

Massachusetts made it two in a row last Sunday, beating Rider 10–7. Third baseman Brian Mazzaferro had three hits and three RBI for the Minutemen, who pushed across four runs in the seventh inning for the win. Sophomore Bill Cooke went the distance, scattering 15 hits to pick up his first win of the year. Gorrie added two hits and scored two runs, and Pete Gautreau recorded two RBI and three stolen bases.

UMass cruised to its third win in a row on Tuesday, knocking in 15 runs behind six innings of two–hit shutout pitching from junior Scott Barnsby to crush Rider 15–2. Mazzaferro had another great day for the Minutemen, going 4–for–5 with a double, a triple and five RBIs. Muchie Dagliere and David Giglio each drove in two runs in

Turn to BASEBALL, page 8

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 104 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, March 25, 1997

Sexual desire and car accidents

David Cronenberg's latest thriller, Crash, explores society's fascination with sex and how it relates to automotive destruction, (see Arts & Living, page 5).

The Eagles have landed

Today, senior Brendan Glass and the UMass lacrosse team hosts Boston College at 3 p.m. on Garber Field (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Scientists who cloned sheep look to pigs

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP)— The company that helped clone Dolly the sheep said yesterday it hopes to clone pigs with hearts suitable for human transplant.

PPL Therapeutics, which is collaborating with the scientific team that cloned Dolly, said it hoped the research would ultimately ease a massive shortage in donor organs and save millions of lives. Scientists already are studying using pig hearts, livers and kidneys because there aren't enough human organs available for people who need them.

But some have raised concerns that transplants from animals could introduce new viruses to the human population. A study by British scientists published this month supports these concerns: It concluded that a virus apparently found in healthy pigs can infect human tissue.

Despite a moratorium in Britain on using animal organs in humans, PPL Therapeutic's managing director, Ron James, said he plans to go ahead with the research.

NATION

Alabama ruling may block smokers' suits

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)— On the same day Liggett Group settled with 22 states suing over tobacco–related medical costs, the company also turned a little noticed case here into a potential barrier to all future smoking claims.

A proposed settlement in the Mobile lawsuit, tentatively approved by a state judge on Thursday, would require the dismissal of pending or future lawsuits filed by smokers, their survivors and victims of second–hand smoke.

It also would create a "settlement fund board" to determine who gets how much in payments, according to court documents. It was not yet known how much money would be in a settlement fund. The proposal was tentatively approved by Circuit Judge Braxton Kittrell on Thursday, the same day Liggett admitted smoking is addictive and agreed to settle lawsuits filed by 22 states to recover costs of treating Medicaid patients with tobacco–related illnesses.

A hearing is scheduled for July 11 to determine if the pact in the Mobile case is fair. Some lawyers are already lining up against it, saying their clients would not recover much money because Liggett is struggling financially.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thurs.
HIGH: 50 LOW: 30	HIGH: 50 LOW: 45	HIGH: 55 LOW: 30

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 12

UM career services reorganized; system based on network model

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Campus Career Center yesterday held a gala reception in honor of a new program that will decentralize the career services from the Mather Career Center to a number of on–campus locations.

According to Joan Stoia, director of Career Services, "The University is engaged in a complete re–design of its existing Career Center into a new Campus Career Network."

Stoia attributes the impact of technology and organizational change in the job market to the transition from a centralized model to a network model.

These advancement services include newly acquired databases, placement programs and the hiring of new staff members. Students will be able to peruse field–related career options on–line for co–op's, internships and part and full– time jobs.

The new services, which will be implemented in the fall of 1997, were invented primarily in response to continual complaints about the inconvenient Career Center location.

"The building's location was a terrific obstacle. We really felt we had to do something substantive and dramatic to take students from their first year through their senior year," Stoia said. "It's an intimidating journey to the perimeter of campus."

The program will re–locate the basic services offered by Mather and expand them to within seven academic areas including Arts and Humanities, Social and Behavioral Sciences, Food and Natural Resources, Management, Education with Nursing and Health Sciences, Engineering and Natural Sciences and Math.

Along with reestablishing services in major academic buildings around campus, a team of two career specialists will be hired in each of the seven areas to provide career and job placement assistance to students and consulting for faculty.

Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Thomas R. Robinson, opened the reception.

"We're committed to the concept of lifelong learning," Robinson said. "We're interested in preparing students for life after college.

"It's an exciting time. This is the beginning of a journey to make this transformation happen," Robinson said.

Arlene Cash, director of Undergraduate Admissions, addressed the crowd as well.

"Career services is the number one issue on the list of students looking for ways to prepare for their future," Cash said. "Traditionally, we've worked very well, but to have a program integrated into the different colleges is a milestone for us."

The teams in each of the academic areas will embody a career advisor and a field experience coordinator with related background in the respective college.

Career advisors will provide one–on–one coaching to students along with educational and mentoring programs, employer tours and presentations, career courses and instruction in field of study job searches.

Field experience coordinators will cultivate employers, coordinate students' experiences throughout their four years, help students construct individualized portfolios and develop their own networks of professional contacts.

"We are convinced we need to offer different career services to different types of majors. What works

Turn to NETWORK, page 2

Say "cheese!"

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

Jane Williams and Cassia Ponusky, employees at the Campus Card Office, take pictures for the mandatory new student identification cards in the Campus Center yesterday.

SGA candidates to face off in pre–election TV debate

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Candidates running for Trustee and President of the Student Government Association (SGA) will debate various election issues tonight from 7–8 p.m. in the UVC–TV 19 studio.

The candidates will face a panel consisting of representatives from UVC–TV 19, WMUA and the Massachusetts Daily Collegian. Panelists will have the opportunity to compile a list of questions to ask the candidates, the time limits which will be monitored by Elections Chancellor Jodi Bailey.

Set up in standard debate form, the candidates will be required to answer questions in an allotted amount of time, and will also be given time to rebut statements made by other candidates.

"All candidates will have an opening and closing, a set time to answer questions, and a rebuttal time," Bailey said.

Candidates for the office of Trustee are R.I. Lemar, Rob McDonald and Brian Tirrell. Candidates for the office of SGA President are Brian McManus and Lia Wong. Lemar and McManus are running as an unofficial ticket, as are McDonald and Wong. Brad Davidson, previously running for President, dropped out of the race yesterday.

Along with the races for Trustee and President, there will also be two referendum questions on tomorrow's ballot.

Question one will concern student opinion on potential privatization at the University of Massachusetts. Voters will be asked how they would rather see the University invest in a new Student Union building — by opening its doors to private companies, or by continuing to secure and mandate that all services remain publicly provided, sponsored and maintained.

Question two concerns the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG). It asks voters if they are in support of the continued existence of the MassPIRG chapter at UMass Amherst. The chapter is funded through a $5 per student per semester waivable fee. Any student choosing not to support MassPIRG may waive the fee.

Stacey Shackford, UMass Amherst chapter chair of MassPIRG, is confident that the question will pass.

"MassPIRG is a statewide movement with over 23 campus chapters. We pool our resources so we have statewide impact. The stuff we do really does make a difference," Shackford said.

SGA election polls will be open tomorrow and Thursday from 11 a.m.–2 p.m. and from 4:30–7 p.m.

Polling stations for Orchard Hill Residential Area students will be located in the Franklin Dining Hall.

Students living in Sylvan and Northeast Residential Area will be required to vote in Worcester Dining Hall.

Residents of Southwest South (Cance, John Quincy Adams, Pierpont, Moore, Patterson, MacKimmie, Washington and John Adams Residence Halls) will vote in Berkshire Dining Hall, while residents of Southwest North (Thoreau, Coolidge, James, Emerson, Kennedy, Melville, Prince and Crampton Residence Halls) will vote at Hampshire Dining Hall.

Commuter and Greek Area students are required to vote in either the Newman Center or the Hatch.

Administrators negotiate after Goodell occupation

By Christine Soh
Collegian Staff

The first negotiating meeting between administrators and students since the occupation of Goodell took place yesterday in the Campus Center.

The agenda covered logistical information regarding future negotiations and lightly touched upon some of the commitments made during the protest. Three administrators of the original seven were present to discuss the issues with nine student negotiators.

According to student negotiator Deepika Marya, "The administrators did not even call [everyone for the meeting]." Mayra said that only five minutes before the meeting began, she ran into Ombudsman Bob Ackermann who said he had not heard about the meeting.

The first item that was to be discussed regarded academic study programs such as Irish studies, Asian American studies, Native American studies and Latin American studies. This topic was put on hold until a future unspecified meeting date due to the fact that Acting Provost Patricia Crosson could not attend. According to Associate Chancellor for the Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity (AAFO) Fred Tillis, Crosson had a "serious illness on the part of her husband," as well as "personal reasons."

Next Marya asked that clarification be given to item nine of the 21 administrative commitments from the University to the students' "Living Document." Item nine reads, "Hiring a UALRC counselor with the next new counseling position; est. $40,000 base budget addition."

Deputy Chancellor Marcellete Williams specified that the budget for the fiscal year '98 would probably include a budget request for this position. "At which time," Williams said, "we will make a strong recommendation [for it]."

A question was then posed by student negotiator Daniel Lizana regarding the forwarding of the commitments and information surrounding it to other administrators and faculty. Williams then acknowledged student expectations of values and administrative responsibilities and told those present that these commitments would not slip through the cracks as they did in 1992.

"This is not '92," the Deputy Chancellor said.

Royster Hedgepath corroborated Williams' statement by mentioning that progress is being made on item 19 of the 21 administrative commit-

Turn to GOODELL, page 2

Prime minister of Zaire resigns as government struggles with rebels

By Beth Duff-Brown
Associated Press

KINSHASA, Zaire — Zaire's prime minister resigned yesterday, bowing to pressure from lawmakers who blamed him for mishandling an insurgency by rebels who have captured a third of the country.

Leon Kengo wa Dondo's departure came a day after his mentor, President Mobutu Sese Seko, emerged from seclusion, promising to make clear "within 48 hours" his plans to reunite the country.

"The prime minister met the president of the republic... and he was obliged to present his resignation," said Zola Kinkela, secretary-general of Kengo's Union of Independent Democrats. Mobutu accepted Kengo's resignation and asked him to do everything he could to allow a new transitional government to take power, state TV reported.

Mobutu, who returned Friday from an extended stay in Europe, himself did not appear on TV or issue any statements yesterday. Parliament had voted a week earlier to oust Kengo, accusing him of being soft on the Tutsi-backed rebels because his mother is a Rwandan Tutsi. The Mobutu regime initially rejected the vote, saying it was unconstitutional because not enough legislators were present for a quorum.

Mobutu's decision yesterday to accept his hand-picked prime minister's resignation underscores the power struggle within the government as it struggles to deal with the rebel march across eastern Zaire.

Opposition lawmakers planned to meet today to discuss a transitional government and urged all members of parliament to join them.

Supporters of Etienne Tshisekedi, a popular opposition leader and longtime Mobutu foe, say he should take over as prime minister and begin talks with the rebels. Parliament elected Tshisekedi prime minister in 1992 but Mobutu refused to confirm him and instead backed Kengo for the job.

Tshisekedi has pledged to negotiate with rebel leader Laurent Kabila, form a coalition government and prepare the country for its first multi-party elections.

Saudi bombing suspect detained in Canada

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Saudi suspected of having driven a vehicle during a bombing of U.S. military housing in the Arab kingdom came through the United States on his way to Canada, law enforcement officials said yesterday.

Rather than a blunder by U.S. authorities, that brief transit through the United States may turn out to be a lucky break that produces a chance for FBI agents to question the 28-year-old directly about the truck bombing last June that killed 19 U.S. servicemen near Dhahran, according to these officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Hani Abdel Rahim Al-Sayegh, 28, who was arrested in Canada last Tuesday, came through the United States last August at Boston on his way from Saudi Arabia to Canada, these officials said. At the time he fled to Canada, Sayegh was not the subject of U.S., and possibly not even of Saudi, suspicions, the U.S. officials said.

But since Saudi officials detained up to 40 suspects in the case last fall, authorities have come to suspect that he may have driven either the truck that carried the bomb or a getaway car used by the truck driver to flee before the blast at a U.S. military housing complex, these officials said.

On Saturday, the FBI praised the government of Saudi Arabia "for invaluable assistance leading to the identification and location of Sayegh." One U.S. law enforcement official said the U.S. suspicions about him come solely from Saudi information. Sayegh did not stay long in the United States and may not have even encountered U.S. immigration authorities, U.S. officials said. Many passengers on international flights that refuel at U.S. airports en route to other countries never leave an international arrivals area, don't go through U.S. customs or immigration and don't technically enter the United States.

Canadian officials, who arrested him on suspicion of engaging in terrorism and being a threat to Canadian security, will try to deport him this week or next, the U.S. officials said.

He could be deported to his homeland, Saudi Arabia, or to the country from which he entered Canada, which was the United States, the U.S. officials said. They thought he might choose to be sent into the U.S. legal system rather than into Saudi Arabia's. U.S. officials said they would like to question him in Canada if he is not sent to the United States.

Details of the case against Sayegh will be kept confidential until a federal judge hears his case, a spokesman for the Canadian Security Intelligence Service said.

The FBI said Saturday, "The assistance of Saudi Arabia represents another positive step forward in our mutual efforts to solve this tragic act of terrorism."

Recently, Attorney General Janet Reno and FBI Director Louis J. Freeh openly criticized Saudi Arabia for shutting FBI agents out of active participation in the investigation.

In particular, Freeh has sought permission for FBI agents to interview the suspects detained by the Saudis. He has complained of getting only summaries of Saudi-gathered evidence. Despite three visits to the kingdom by Freeh, there is no indication that such interviews have occurred.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Mark McGrath
Copy Editor: Suzanne Barber
Photo Technician: Kenneth W.P. Scott
Production Supervisor: Matt McCarthy
Production Staff: Joylyn Lombard, Kelvin Torres

■ network

continued from page 1

for students in the humanities is very different from what works for engineers," Stoia said.

"New customers–graduate students, ALANA, students with disabilities, older students, gay and lesbian students, foreign and both recent alumni and mid-career professionals require more sophisticated approaches than the old structure can provide at present. The Career Center is attempting to serve a much larger and more complex customer base than its size, configuration and location were designed to handle," wrote Stoia, Robinson and Interim Assistant Vice Chancellor Kenneth Burnham in the University Career Services Network publication.

The Mather Career Center will prevail as the central office of the University's career department. Remaining in the center will be employment services including on-campus interviewing and electronic resume referral, job development and alumni services.

"UMass Amherst is reinventing itself for a new century of teaching, learning and service in preparation for a world where the student body is more diverse, experience counts, parents are concerned about their students' job prospects and education and training take place across the life span," Stoia said. "We recognized for many years that we have to be part of the academic experience."

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Scrub-a-dub-dub

Annette Quail, a senior biology major cleans up at Earth Foods after a smooth day.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
March 14
A two vehicle accident occurred on Commonwealth Avenue.
A minor two vehicle accident occurred on Kennedy Road.
March 20
A two vehicle accident occurred on Massachusetts Avenue.

Alarm — Fire
March 23
A car fire occurred in Southwest Residential Area circle.

Annoying Behavior
March 14
Derogatory flyers were placed under residents' door in Leach Residence Hall.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
March 18
A vehicle was broken into in the Campus Center Garage.

Health/Safety Hazard
March 18
Water was dripping through a light fixture in Worcester Dining Common.
March 23
An abandoned car battery was removed from parking lot 40 on Hicks Way.

Larceny
March 18
Illegal entries using codes of individuals were made on a computer in Lederle Research Center.
March 21
Two lamps were stolen from an office in Whimore Building.
March 23
A coat was reported stolen from Kennedy Residence Hall.

Suspicious Person/Activity
March 16
Joshua K. Finlay, 19, was arrested on North Pleasant Street for trespassing.

Vandalism
March 14
Four vehicles in parking lot 13 on Authority Way had their windows smashed.
March 16
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.
March 21
A windshield was smashed on a vehicle in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.

■ Goodell

continued from page 1

ments — "Convening a Task Force on Child Care in March 1997."

"Number 19 of the commitments is one that affects me and my staff directly," Hedgepath said. "I've met with some of my staff and they know that [child care] is a high priority."

Student negotiator Rodina Cave brought up the issue of ALANA (Asian, Latin American, African and Native American) student recruitment. She presented to the negotiating team the publications currently used by the Admissions Office and suggested the production of specific and updated information packets to target the individual ALANA student groups.

Tillis responded positively saying, "This is basically what we do in the Arts Department." No resolution was made on this issue.

"I knew it couldn't be resolved today because they didn't have specific information. It is very disappointing that we always have to remind them like that," Cave said.

"We have as much power as we had in Goodell and we have just as much leverage. But we would like more student participation like we had while we were inside. This effects every student of color on campus and we would like to have students voice their opinions, inform the administrators, and stress the point," Marya said.

American Heart Association
If you are what you eat, why not cut back on fat?

American Heart Association
Tired of throwing your weight around?
Exercise

Buck Stewart
$100.00 Includes:
2-8 x 10 B+W
2-5 x 7 B+W
2-3 x 5 B+W
4-B+W wallets
549-5454

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits
NO ONE-WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

WEEKLY UPDATE
UNIVERSITY CAREER CENTER
MATHER BUILDING 545-2224

It's not too late for COOL Summer and Fall placements!
New positions received each week!

While you enjoyed Spring Break, the Field Experience Staff filled books with the following new positions...

Nokia	hardware/software/R&D
Allyn and Bacon	ENGL/COMM
Wyman Gordan	PHYSIC
Xitec	EE, CSE
Spectrum Analytical	ENVISCI, CHEM
Cape Cod Commission	CE
New Seabury Co.	SPTMGT, HRTA
The Mount	(Edith Warton's home) HIST, LIBART, ED
Overly Publications	ART
Toxikon	CHEM
Amrec	CHEM/CEE
KmChng	ENVISCI, CHEM
Dudley Sports Marketing	SPTMGT

CBS Sports Summer Internship with the Olympic Unit

FREE FISH if you co-op with BIO SHELTERS in Amherst! Accounting and liberal arts students apply for these and other cool scientific positions!

FREE AIRFARE TO COLORADO if you co-op with BLUE MOUNTAIN ARTS! If you are interested in editing and creative designs of greeting cards apply today!

For more information visit the Field Experience Office or call 545-6265.

MERC inc.
Looking for a position in education K - 12?
Come to Massachusetts Education Recruiting Consortium orientation meetings held in Mark's Meadow Auditorium:
Tuesday, April 15, 1997 from 4:30 - 6:00pm
Wednesday, April 16, 1997 from 6:00 - 7:30pm

ALANA GRADUATE STUDENT FORUM
"Beyond Ebonics"
A Conversation with
Dr. Orlando Taylor
Dean of the Graduate School
Howard University
and
Dr. Walter Wolfram
William C. Friday Distinguished Professor
North Carolina State University
Dr. Harry Seymour (Moderator)
Chair Department of Communication Disorders
Date: Wednesday March 26, 1997
Place: Room 101 Campus Center
Time: 11:30 am - 1:30 pm
SPONSORED BY:

Afro-American Studies	Communications Studies	Graduate Student Senate
ALANA Graduate	Communication Disorders	Linguistics
Student Network	Graduate School	Women of Color Program
Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity	Women's Studies	English Department
SGA

U.S. TB cases at historic low

By Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The number of new tuberculosis cases in the United States dropped last year to the lowest level since record-keeping began in the 1950s, the federal government announced yesterday.

It was the fourth straight year of decline, suggesting the nation is recovering from a rise in TB from the mid-80s to 1992, officials said.

"We're on the right track toward the elimination of tuberculosis in this country," said Dr. Ken Castro of the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. "We now have the rare opportunity to eliminate tuberculosis in the United States." However, he and others at a New York news conference cautioned against relaxing the fight against the disease, saying that's what made TB surge in the 1980s after a long decline.

Castro noted that 20 states and the District of Columbia showed no reduction or even had increases from 1995 to 1996, and that sporadic outbreaks of drug-resistant TB continue to be reported. Last year's nationwide count of new TB cases was 21,327, down nearly 7 percent from 1995. That's the fewest cases recorded by CDC since it started national surveillance in 1953. Over the same period, the total population has almost doubled.

Officials credited programs that seek out people with infectious tuberculosis, diagnose them and make sure the patients take their full course of therapy. To be cured, a TB patient must take drugs for six months or longer, even after symptoms are gone.

The TB case total in 1996 was about where it would have been a decade earlier if the TB resurgence hadn't interrupted years of decline, Castro said.

From 1985 to 1992, TB cases rose almost 20 percent, said Dr. Charles Felton, speaking on behalf of the American Lung Association. The reason is that federal funding aimed specifically at TB control had been replaced with general public health block grants to states, which led many states to cut back their anti-TB efforts, Felton said.

Congress restored much of the anti-TB money by 1992, he said. "If we do not continue to support TB control efforts, we will face an inevitable rise in tuberculosis cases once again," Felton said. "And the next time, the fight against TB will be much more costly."

Among the areas reporting TB increases or no change in 1996 were the District of Columbia, up 36 percent, and Oregon, up 22 percent, Castro said.

He said it would take further study to determine why they and 19 other states bucked the nationwide trend. Many are probably still rebuilding their anti-TB programs, he said. And some may simply be getting better at detecting the disease, he said.

Castro also noted that an increasing proportion of this nation's cases is being found in people born outside the country. They accounted for 37 percent of cases in 1996, up from 22 percent a decade before, and two-thirds of them were born in Mexico, the Philippines or Vietnam, he said.

Part of that trend is due to an influx of immigrants, he said. Many people diagnosed with TB probably entered the country with harmless, latent infections of TB germs, Castro said. These infections can turn active after years of dormancy.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

What's in the case?

Rajit Seth, a senior communications major, takes a break from business and reads Bucho's Revenge on the Campus Center steps yesterday afternoon.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Steady... Steady

Pete, Shaun and Snoopy from Kleeberg Sheetmetal lower an exhaust fan for the refrigeration evacuation system in the lower library yesterday.

Lawmakers "Get Tough" with slumlords

By Lawrence L. Knutson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's top law enforcement and housing officials announced a joint crackdown yesterday against private landlords who enrich themselves on federal subsidies while allowing the apartments they manage to crumble and decay.

Attorney General Janet Reno and Housing and Urban Development Secretary Andrew Cuomo targeted the 50 big cities from New York to Los Angeles in which most of the nation's federally assisted low-income rental housing is located.

They announced a $50 million "Get Tough" campaign in which the government will send investigators into the field, identify violators, take enforcement actions and, when warranted, file civil or criminal cases against them.

They also proposed legislation to prevent landlords from using the bankruptcy laws to stall foreclosure on mortgages and to make people convicted of illegally pocketing federal housing subsidies liable for all losses suffered by the government.

"The message is simple," Cuomo said. "If you misuse federal resources we will find out, we will track you down, we will make you pay."

"If the housing isn't safe, clean and decent, then you have a serious problem," he said.

"It is illegal, it is wrong, it must end — and beginning today it will," Cuomo said.

At a news conference, Cuomo showed video and still photographs of federally assisted private housing that is seriously run down, infested with vermin, and have poor heat and plumbing systems. Reno said that typically such badly deteriorated housing is a breeding ground for crime.

Cuomo said the department will examine some 446,000 HUD-assisted housing units occupied by about a million low- and moderate-income people in the 50 cities.

Overall HUD pays $9 billion each year to subsidize rents for the 4.3 million people who live in some 2.5 million privately owned apartment units. Many of the occupants are elderly or disabled. None of the units involve public housing owned and operated by state and local housing authorities.

Cuomo said the majority of landlords running subsidized housing are not to blame but that the exceptions were causing "intolerable" conditions.

He said he did not know what percentage of the targeted federal housing may be in violation of federal regulations or laws or how much federal subsidy money is at risk. But the problem is clearly significant, he said.

BE A GOOD NEIGHBOR
American Heart Association
Volunteer.

The
Edwin M. Rossman
Alumni Career Forum
BDIC
Bachelor's Degree with Individual Concentration Program
Job-Hunting Strategies for First-Time Job Seekers
Date: Today, March 25
Time: 4:00 PM
Location: Campus Center 903
Sponsored by:
University Career Center
UMass Alumni Association
Alumni/ae Panelists:

Nancy Cohen '79 "Political Ecology"	News Director WFCR University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA
Maryann Davis '81 "Animal Behavior & an Evolutionary Approach to Human Behavior"	Assistant Professor Center for Psychosocial and Forensic Services Research Department of Psychiatry University of Massachusetts Medical Center Worcester, MA
Jim Kenefick '94 "Organizational Development"	Training and Organizational Development Specialist American Management Association New York, NY
Dusty King '95 "Creative Writing, Technical Communication & Document Design"	Senior Information Development Specialist Lucent Technologies (formerly Bell Labs) North Andover, Ma

For more information, please contact:
University Career Center 545-2225

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
and
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
(888) 211-OCMP
Present
Dining Out
COMING MARCH 26
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants
For info & rates
call 545-3500

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1992
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Simsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Presties Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The candidates speak out

Today's Ed/op page is dedicated to this year's candidates for SGA President and Student Trustee. Each of the candidates have been granted space to present their views and ideas.
In tomorrow's paper look for features on all of the candidates and the Collegian's endorsements.
Elections are being held tomorrow and Thursday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 4:30 to 7:00 p.m.

Candidates for SGA President

Brian McManus

Have you ever looked down on your dinner tray and found a scrod staring back at you? Or waited anxiously in line to find out if they were serving chicken slimy, chicken squishy, or chicken smelly? Have you or one of your friends ever been carried out of the D.C. on a stretcher? Or maybe noticed the labels on the food cartons in the kitchen:"Grade D Meat — Not Fit For Human Consumption" If you answered "yes" to any of these questions, you want to vote for R.J. Lemar for Trustee and me, Brian McManus for President. If you like the food, then we're probably not your guys — we're going to change it.

You might ask how we can succeed where the SGA has been trying and failing for years. The problem is, they've been too caught up in their political games to make a serious effort to deal with the issues that really matter. The student leadership has been taking what the administration has given them calling it a triumph. Instead of making a real effort to improve the food, the SGA proudly announced that we'll have an extra guest meal next year (Applause). If we are going to have better food we need to break the University monopoly. The food will improve after we force the D.C.'s to compete with private businesses (like Antonio's in Southwest) on campus that accept the new all campus card coming next year. While the SGA should have been protecting the Student Businesses by involving itself in the negotiations for the new card, they were negotiating to buy a dozen new $400 chairs for the SGA office so they could look "more important."

Instead of trying to look more important, the SGA should be working toward important accomplishments. The obvious number one priority of the SGA should be improving the quality of food and other services on campus by opening the door to privatization while protecting student businesses. I ran for Senate last fall on a pro-privatization ticket, and I have fought with paranoid special interest groups that oppose change. Protecting Student Businesses is very simple — we won't allow any company into UMass if it provides goods and services currently being provided to us by student businesses.

Instead of the SGA fighting over who should be allowed into the Senate, the SGA should be fighting for things worth fighting for; like lowering our tuition, improving safety, fixing the parking fees and ensuring a successful spring concert. The political games within the SGA must end and we need to get serious about listening to students and helping them where it matters. The SGA can be so much more than a playground for political science majors. It's up to the voters to make that change — R.J. Lemar and I have tried to accomplish this from the inside but we need your help. The same people have been running the SGA for a long time and they will pull out every trick in the book to mislead you. If you're frustrated with the way things have been going, Vote for Brian McManus, R.J. Lemar, and privatization on Wednesday and Thursday. Your vote is important so use it.

Brian McManus is a candidate for SGA President.

Lia Wong

UMass-Amherst is full of possibilities. I have found the importance of the students' voice and the power the students hold. I realize that this University is not all it is cracked up to be, and I have decided to do something about it. I joined the executive board of Asian American Students Association, the Asian American Studies Coalition, the ALANA Caucus and the Student Government Association.

I also know that it is not an "I", but a "We". Student Government must be closer to the students. We can not get stuck on personal agendas that fail to serve the interest of the student population.

We must improve the quality of life of every student on this campus. I will work to build bridges of understanding between all elements of the University community.

I will focus on three key areas of student life on this campus: tuition and fees, Housing Services and Food Services. Additionally, I will hold administration accountable and ensure that it lives up to the agreements that it has made with students, including the commitments they made to students in the Goodell Takeover '97. With the better utilization of current University funds, these changes can occur without digging deeper into students' pockets.

Parking fees should not be raised. It is not the responsibility of the students to have to pay for the deferred maintenance of $600 million on this campus. The state is responsible for this. It should be the one paying for improving the sour state of conditions our parking lots are currently in.

Privatization is an issue that effects all students. It encompasses and affects many aspects of the institution: student business, food services, employments, etc. A simple "yes" and "no" is not enough. Student involvement is vital and should be in all decision makings regarding any type of privatization. Students must have a say from the beginning to the end of all discussions and negotiation in establishing and implementing any form of privatization on our campus. This is our university and is for the students, not McUniversity belonging to corporations who are not here to serve the interest of the student body.

Tuition and Fees have always been a major issue and continue to be so. We should not be one of the most expensive flagship institutions in the country. There is a definite need for continued tuition rollbacks for all students. I will fight for an increase of funding allocated for financial aid to ensure that monetary difficulty will not prevent any student from obtaining a higher education.

Housing services and Food Services must continue to improve. Policies and actions which invade students' rights, such as rooms sweeps, must not exist. Administrative excuses are not acceptable. They must take responsibility to provide us with quality services at reasonable prices.

As your President, I will ensure that students are taken seriously. I can not do this alone. It will take hard work and dedication of the entire student body to send Whitmore a message: Students will not be taken for granted. We are the reason why the University exists. Our voices will not be ignored!

Lia Wong is a candidate for SGA President.

Candidates for Student Trustee

R.J. Lemar

As students of this University, we are subjugated to exorbitant fees on top of one of the nation's highest tuition rates for a public education. Both in and out of state students feel a financial burden that rivals that of private institutions. For this we receive limited services, terrible food, an unsafe campus, little accessibility to classes and disregard from an administration that works for us. We all complain about these and other problems, but for some reason, students on this campus have been unwilling to initiate change. Our apathetic nature has allowed our voice to be ignored.

As student issues advocate for Gov. Weld, and as an SGA Senator, I have worked this past year to push our concerns to the foreground of the policy agendas in our educational system. As your Student Trustee, I will continue to represent each student equally. I will not allow myself to become a puppet to strong special interests groups on campus, and I will not place a personal agenda ahead of concerns for the entire university.

There are many issues that this campus needs a Student Trustee to address, issues such as:

1. Rollback Tuition for Out-of-State as well as In-State Students:

We must continue to make the University accessible to all. The five percent reduction for Massachusetts residents is a great start, and it must continue. We must also reduce the $17,000 bill the out-of-state students face.

2. The Administration Must Honor All Agreements with Students:

Regardless of personal views, we must assure that the administration is responsible for upholding agreements with all groups, (i.e. ALANA Affairs, Greek Affairs, Jewish Affairs, RSOs, GLBTA, etc).

3. Quality of Dining Services:

Simple — our food sucks, and we pay too much for it! Either make dramatic improvements, or privatize.

4. Opening the Door for Privatization, while Protecting Student Businesses:

Allow private companies (Antonio's, McDonald's, Barnes & Nobles, etc.) to move in and give students greater selection. We must be responsible in this endeavor in order to protect existing student businesses, and assure that their service is not lost.

5. Continue the Fight for a Safer Campus:

Since 1977, the administration has been aware of potential "high risk" danger areas on campus, but they have done hardly anything to improve these problems. The Escort service also needs substantial improvement in service accessibility.

I know that many of these issues that I have briefly mentioned affect almost all of you. I have heard the complaints focusing on all of these problems for over two years. They will be my major concerns as Student Trustee. On tomorrow and Thursday, vote for strong leadership that will improve this school, and reduce our unheard uncomplaining.

Vote Brian McManus for SGA President and R.J. Lemar for Student Trustee.

R.J. Lemar is a candidate for Student Trustee.

Rob McDonald

If elected to the Trustee position for the University, my goal will be to work entirely for the student body. The issues I believe affect students the most are within the areas of tuition and fees, food services and housing services.

I feel that the University of Massachusetts is too expensive as it is currently the fourth most expensive public flagship University in the country. In the past two years, in-state students received 5 percent rollbacks in both tuition and fees; I will make this my goal for next year for both in- and out-of-state students. In the past, I have worked at reducing tuition and fees by lobbying at the Statehouse in Boston.

Throughout my educational career here at UMass I have heard and experienced how awful the food is here. Over the years I have worked at making both the quality and service of Food Services better. Since the food is still not at the level it should be, it will be my goal to continue working at the improvement of food here at the University. I have worked on improving the standards of food served on campus, i.e. bagels and Stonewilly's Pizza. I have also worked on making the Dinning Commons more accessible to the students by working with the Student Government Association, I have enabled Food Services to implement a 10-meal plan that students can use to eat with on weekends, beginning next year.

One of the areas that affects student lives the most is Housing Services. Areas that need improvement in Housing Services are the cable channels offered, the candle and incense policy and the cancellation fee that can be charged when a student moves off-campus. Until this year, there have been no cable channels for students at all. After working with Director of Housing Services Michael Gilbert, I was actually able to attract the channels we have now. I know that many students prefer MTV and ESPN, and I have fought hard to get those for this year, however, because the idea of having cable channels for the dormitories was relatively new, there was not enough money in the budget to receive them. I will work to get these channels and many others that the students want for next year. Secondly, the fact that a student cannot have candles and incense in his/her room for religious purposes is wrong. I do not feel that a public institution should have the right to restrict one's religious beliefs.

The last of many more issues dealing with Housing Services I would like to work on is the cancellation fee. Housing Services has started a fee where a student is charged if he/she does not notify them that he/she intends to move off-campus by a certain date. Currently, this date is before the majority of off-campus housing becomes available. I do not believe it is fair that a student can be charged something before he/she even has the ability to look for a place to live.

In conclusion, if elected Trustee, I will fight for these and many other Issues. However, I can not work towards making these changes without your help and involvement here at the University. If we work together, we can make the University the best place it possibly can be. Therefore, please vote for me, Rob McDonald, this Wednesday and Thursday. Together we really can make a difference.

Rob McDonald is a candidate for Student Trustee.

Brian Tirrell

In the past three years, I have worked on many issues that concern students. I helped negotiate an on-campus polling place that had only been talked about for more than 20 years, served on the SCERA board that oversaw the "UMass Votes" project that registered many thousands of students to vote and confirmed 10,000 students registered. I was a member of the SATF task force that has already obtained $200,000 for Student Activities, stopped housing from doing illegal room searches of floors and entire buildings and served on the committee that revised the policy to prevent future infractions of student rights; successfully lobbied state legislators for increased funding to UMass; stayed in the Goodell building for six days to promote issues that were getting nowhere through the regular administrative process.

Issues such as financial aid, child care, recruitment and retention, (ALANA students specifically and all students generally) and allowing greater student participation on important committees. I have been a student government senator and the associate speaker of the senate.

I am currently a member of the Campaign cabinet for "Campaign UMass," the to dream, to act, to lead people who are raising $130,000,000 for new buildings, including an expansion of the Student Union to provide desperately needed space for student organizations and clubs. I am currently a member of the Student Legal Services advisory board. I am the Speaker of the undergraduate student senate and am working to stop the parking fee as well as housing fee increases, moving (through the bureaucracy) toward better food, getting ATMs at the munchie stores. I will also seek to improve safety by providing adequate lighting, call boxes and expanded escort services to bring you to your dorm, not the last to southwest horseshoe and will bring a sick student to Health Services. I will ensure that the administration does not destroy the student businesses by refusing to provide card readers for the new debit card system next semester and make sure they don't have terrible glitches in their system that will cost students money.

New issues that I would like to tackle include:

• One stop shopping at Whitmore to make all of the offices able to handle any transaction you need to make. No more shuffling students from financial aid to the bursar to the registrar and back again.

• Easy access to your records, including financial aid and grades over the phone and Internet.

• Review and support Student Information Systems (SIS) and Administrative Redesign (ARD) that rightfully make students the customers and navigating Whitmore and the rest of the Administration easier for students.

Most importantly, the student voice needs to be maintained through a strong and continuous presence on Beacon Hill, where the legislature decides our budget and ultimately how much every student must pay to attend this school, the Board of Trustees, where students at this campus have only one vote every three years.

Brian Tirrell is a candidate for Student Trustee.

Doonesbury Flashbacks BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Doonesbury Flashbacks BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Arts & Living

Tuesday, March 25, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

"Ink" finally makes prime time

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — "My head is pounding! Why did I take this job? Sometimes the pressure is just insane!"

That's Mary Steenburgen as Kate Montgomery, harried managing editor of the New York Sun, on a recent episode of the comedy "Ink."

But you might well imagine it's Diane English speaking instead. After all, it was she who, amid last summer's dog days, took over the sitcom under siege conditions after four lackluster episodes had been shot, then scrapped.

Less than two months later, the English edition of "Ink" premiered on CBS' Monday night lineup (it currently airs at 9:30 p.m. EST, with a TV-PG rating).

What remained from the original version was little more than the newspaper setting and the co-stars — Steenburgen and her real-life mate Ted Danson, who plays Sun columnist Mike Logan (and Kate's ex-husband).

The pressure was just phenomenal," recalls English, echoing Kate.

But over tea on a visit to Manhattan not too long ago, she chuckles at the memory rather than, as Kate might, letting out a moan.

"I don't want this to sound like I'm tooting my own horn," English says, "but I'm an unbelievably organized person. I don't really get ruffled under pressure."

Let's recap the chronology of what didn't ruffle her:

On Aug. 25, English got that desperate call from the network and production company.

"It really blew me against the wall," she says, conceding surprise, "because our company (Shukovsky English Entertainment) had really chased Ted. We came very close to signing him, then lost him to DreamWorks. Then his show landed back in my lap."

Forty-eight hours later, she signed on — "I really wanted to work with him."

With English an executive producer along with Danson and Steenburgen, the first reformulated "Ink" was shot Oct. 8. "Ink" finally premiered Oct. 21.

"In between, we had to write scripts, put a crew together, create new sets, assemble a supporting cast from scratch," says English, who had gone through this routine at a much younger pace when she created such sitcoms as "Love & War" and "Murphy Brown." This is usually a five-month process."

How did she do so much so quickly?

For one thing, by adopting a reverse approach to the casting chore: Instead of matching actors to preconceived characters, many of the supporting players (who include Christine Ebersole, Charlie Robinson and Saul Rubinek) were chosen from a hastily compiled "wish list" of actors who were both good and instantly available. After they were brought on board, English molded characters to fit them.

But even once the show debuted, the pressure didn't let up. Having resumed production so far behind schedule, "Ink" is stuck in catch-up mode.

"I just try to stay healthy," English explains, when asked how she copes with a system where each episode is wrapped only days, not weeks, before its air-date.

"No drinking, no caffeine, no drugs, no sugar," she says. "I try to be in bed by 10:30 every night, and get eight hours of sleep if I can. I try to get to the gym early in the morning. I got a flu shot this year.

"It's kind of a boring lifestyle," she says with another rolling chuckle, "but I just really get off on the work." Good thing. The workload is only likely to increase for English next season, as she rejoins "Murphy Brown" for its 10th and almost certainly final season, after several years' absence. She will take the title of executive consultant.

Meanwhile, English's much-cherished budding project, a sitcom titled "Lawyers," is being discussed as a CBS mid-season entry. Despite her success, English doesn't fit the image of a comedy writer, if for no other reason than her smartly turned-out look and Chanel wardrobe ("I'm not a jeans-sport-shirt-grungy person"). But declaring "I love comedy, I love the camaraderie in the writer's room," she paints a vivid picture of the sanctuary where "Ink's" scripts come to life:

"There's no political correctness and nobody censors themselves, or you can't be funny. We laugh so much at the stuff that flies out of the writers' mouths! It's the hottest show in town.

"We spend half our time saying, 'How can we clean this up? How can we find another way to make the joke just as funny without the word (unprintable here, dear reader) in it?' Then we decide it can't be done, and we abandon that joke and move on."

Just as well. Back at the New York Sun, "Ink" is always facing a deadline.

Major studios left out of Oscar night spotlight

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP)— The major studios were uncharacteristically snubbed in last night's Oscar awards, as many of the major players could only watch at smaller independent films took away most of the hardware.

The only major award for Hollywood studios went to Cuba Gooding , the football star who repeatedly asks his faltering agent to "Show me the money!" in Jerry Maguire. He won the supporting actor Oscar.

After hugging Jerry Maguire star Tom Cruise on his way up to the stage, Gooding shouted out thankyous and I-love-yous and jumped around like he had just caught a game-winning touchdown. The Shrine Auditorium audience loved his exuberance and applauded as he yelled out thanks to his family and everyone connected to the movie.

"I know I have a little bit of time so I'm going to rush and get in everyone. You can cut away, I won't be mad at you," the excited Gooding warned the audience as he exceeded the 40-second acceptance speech limit.

Another award The English Patient didn't get went to Billy Bob Thornton, for his adapted screenplay of Sling Blade, in which he also starred and directed.

Besides McDormand's award, Fargo also won for original screenplay.

Oscar specializes in sentiment, and a high point was reached when the documentary feature Oscar was presented to the producers of When We Were Kings, which depicts a key fight in the career of former boxing champion Muhammad Ali.

When the producers gave credit to Ali, who was seated in the audience with his wife, the crowd applauded wildly in a standing ovation.

Ali, who has Parkinson's syndrome, made his way hesitantly to the stage along with one-time opponent George Foreman, who is also in the film.

"Well, thank heavens there wasn't a song in The English Patient is all I can say," said Andrew Lloyd Webber as he and Tim Rice collected the original-song Oscar for "You Must Love Me" from Evita.

Before the show, the contenders for top honors were largely unknown to most Americans.

Except for Cruise, Diane Keaton, Bacall and a couple of others, most of the 20 acting nominees have gotten much play in Peoria , in fact, three were nominated for their very first movies: Emily Watson, Breaking the Waves; Edward Norton, Primal Fear; and Marianne Jean-Baptiste, Secrets and Lies. Fourteen others were never before nominated.

And in the best picture category, four of the five nominees were independent films with relatively small audiences: The English Patient, Fargo, Shine and Secrets & Lies. Only Jerry Maguire was released by a major Hollywood studio. But the scarcity of big names and blockbuster movies among this year's Oscar contenders didn't dampen enthusiasm for Hollywood's 69th rite of spring.

"We're going to see some stars!" said Elmer Armstrong, 54, of St. Louis, one of hundreds of fans who had camped outside the Shrine Auditorium since Saturday. "We have some wonderful seats here."

After a three-year absence, comedian Billy Crystal returned as host of the three-hour-plus ceremony, telecast live on ABC. He received a standing ovation for an opening act that put him in scenes of the night's big films.

In a previously announced award, Michael Kidd, who created the dances for Seven Brides for Seven Brothers, Guys and Dolls and other musicals, received an honorary award for career achievement.

This year's nominations reflected a growing attitude among the Hollywood superpowers: Let the foreigners and independents make their human dramas with little box office appeal; we'll aim for the blockbusters.

That philosophy makes sense to the studios. If they can combine some big-name stars and a sure-fire concept, they might produce a Mission: Impossible or a Ransom. One such moneymaker might be enough to keep a company in the black for a year — and guarantee the jobs of studio heads.

Veteran screenwriter William Goldman (Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, All the President's Men) proclaimed 1996 "the worst year in Hollywood history."

"The most startling and depressing thing about the recent Academy nominations is not that Jerry Maguire was the only studio film to get a Best Picture nod," Goldman wrote in a recent magazine article. "The crusher is that Jerry Maguire was the only studio film that got to get a Best Picture nomination."

COURTESY TRISTAR PICTURES

Tom Cruise was denied an Oscar at last night's award ceremony.

Premium Law School Education
Without a Premium Price

For over two decades law school academics have claimed that a law school must be expensive to be good, and that it can be good without teaching students the skills they need in practice. These propositions are untrue. But they have led to a median law school tuition in New England of $17,740 this year, and to a dearth of courses in practical skills.

MSL illustrates that high quality legal education need not be that expensive and should include extensive education in practical skills. At MSL, up to one-half the courses you take during your career can be skills courses if you wish, and annual tuition for full time study is $9,000 this year (part time is $7,200).

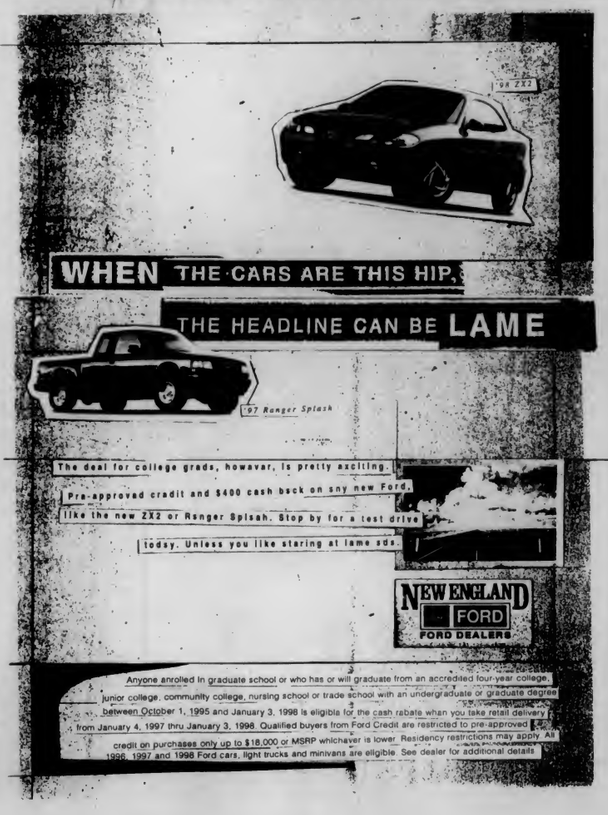
The difference this makes is that MSL students are paying approximately $25,000 to $30,000 less in tuition during their law school careers, and are much better equipped to practice when they graduate.

We ask you to compare both prices and training. Personally ask schools how many practical skills courses their students realistically can take. Only personal inquiry can enable you to learn about courses. And check tuitions at individual schools – you will find that MSL's tuition usually is 40% to 60% less than tuitions at other schools.

MSL graduates are eligible to practice law in Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine and Massachusetts, as well as California and other selected states.

For a catalog or more information, please call 508-681-0800

Massachusetts School of Law
500 Federal Street, Woodland Park, Andover, MA 01810
Visit our video: www.mslaw.edu



EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS,
AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT

MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK

• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING

256-8157 256-1385

53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

Access to computer porn debated

BOSTON (AP) — Mayor Thomas Menino says he's happy with a compromise to place filters only on computers accessible to children in the city's public libraries. Other terminals available only to adults will remain unfiltered.

Menino originally wanted to filter pornography from all of the city's library Internet terminals, but a free-speech debate threatened to ensue.

"All I wanted to do was make sure the children wouldn't get on those pornographic sites," Menino said.

Menino ordered the library to bar access to online pornography last month after learning that children were browsing nude pictures at some of the library's 26 branches.

A police officer in the Dorchester section of the city contacted City Councilor Maureen A. Feeney after receiving complaints from two irate parents.

But library president Bernard Margolis said he was concerned a total ban could prevent some people from conducting legitimate research on controversial topics.

So Menino and Margolis agreed to install a software program to block out objectionable Internet sites on all computers available to children. "It appears the Internet question is all worked out now," library spokesman Arthur Dunphy told The Boston Globe. "We'll be installing the software."

The program, called Cyber Patrol, will allow the library to choose what it censors from a list compiled weekly by a team of monitors who scan for sexually explicit and violent material.

Dunphy said the library's Internet committee is investigating how much to filter. With Internet access booming over the past few years, towns, libraries, schools and employers have been forced to deal with pornography using the new medium. In Florida, for example, the Orange County library system hired a computer company to block porn on its computers.

The American Library Association, the largest organization of public librarians in the country, opposes such moves along with the Electronic Privacy Information Center in Washington, D.C.

The privacy center successfully challenged the Communications Decency Act — which banned certain types of Internet materials in a federal court in Philadelphia. That case is now before the U.S. Supreme Court.

"We don't support the use of software filters," Director Marc Rotenberg said last month. "We feel a library has to make a commitment to protect intellectual freedom."

Government discusses Internet censorship

By Scott Lindlaw
Associated Press

BURBANK, Calif. — If the U.S. Supreme Court strikes down a law criminalizing indecency on the Internet, Congress probably will draft another, an influential senator said Saturday.

But Sen. John McCain (R-Ariz.) said any new measure that resembled the Communications Decency Act probably would not survive the Senate Commerce Committee that he chairs.

Last week, the Supreme Court began weighing the constitutionality of the law that would make it a federal crime to put indecent or "patently offensive" words or pictures online where they can be found by children.

President Clinton signed the act last year, but a three-judge federal panel blocked it as an unconstitutional restraint on free speech. The high court is expected to rule by July on the law.

At a news conference, McCain said it was "entirely likely" that Congress would try again if the act is struck down. "But it's not clear whether something like that would pass," he said.

McCain, whose committee oversees telecommunications, told a conference on the media, technology and politics that he voted against the act, and said it is vague and smacks of censorship.

"I'm the father of small children, they all are far more computer literate than I am," McCain said. "I've seen some of the stuff that they see and it disturbs me terribly.

"But I didn't know how you would implement that [law]. I didn't know who would decide what's decent."

McCain said he favored other means of keeping indecent material out of children's hands, such as an electronic blocking device or providing parents with information on Internet content.

Sale ends March 29,1997.
STORE HOURS: MON-THURS: 10AM-9:30PM; FRI-SAT: 10AM-10PM; SUN: 11AM-7PM
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, (413) 582-0410•Newington Commons Plaza, Newington, (860) 594-7272
Stateline Plaza, Enfield, (860) 253-4777•Crossroads Buckland Hills, Manchester, (860) 648-5870
81 8301-037

COURTESY FINE LINE FEATURES

James Spader and Holly Hunter share an intimate moment in the back of Spader's crashed car in David Cronenberg's new film, Crash.

Sex and psychosis collide in Crash

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

CRASH
Directed by David Cronenberg with James Spader, Elias Koteas, Holly Hunter
Playing at Pleasant St. Theater

The sign on the poster said in bold yellow letters: Sex and Car Crashes. What possibly do these two extremes have in common? (Other than each are so often perceived as dangerous.) According to David Cronenberg, sex and car crashes share a tremendous bond and for some, a common goal. From within his character's psyches lie an obsession with impact — the impact of a car collision and of an orgasm. To these people these words are synonymous. Crash is a unique exploration into their particular psyches, offering no apologies nor explanations for this peculiar, yet frighteningly disturbing behavior.

In 1991, Cronenberg did the absolute impossible by transforming William S. Burroughs' unintelligible Naked Lunch into a true cinematographic achievement. Perhaps out of sheer cockiness, he has now attempted more of the same with J. G. Ballard's 1971 underground semi-autobiographical novel Crash. The story's freaky absence of plot "narrative" deals with the mental fascination society has with destruction — in this case, car accidents. Sexual intercourse is added to heighten the intrigue, thus creating a dark, haunting look into our most hidden and unhealthy desires.

The film version of Crash is as equally anti-climactic, relying more on shock value than any sense of traditional linear narrative. Cronenberg allows his camera to carefully follow the images he is recording from a safe distance. The audience watches the film's situations as spectators, mesmerized with awe at what they are witnessing. As the audience, we must set ourselves apart from the circumstances on screen. To indulge too closely could be considerably harmful to one's stability as a viewer. Yet, Cronenburg's imagery is so captivating that, at times, one could forget they are watching a movie. Viewers must struggle to recapture their bearings and not allow themselves to become too emotionally involved. Viewers may discover that through this fear, they recognize aspects of this insanity lying within themselves.

It is for these reasons that Crash is a far better film in theory than in actuality. There is an apparent criticism of technology that Cronenberg has examined before in films such as They Came From Within, The Fly and most specifically, Videodrome. Former John Hughes stock actor Elias Koteas, whose character is named Vaughan, serves as the liaison into the realm of sex and car crashes and explains that the car accident is the source toward the transformation of the human body through modern technology.

Any trace of a plot can be analyzed from this statement as we see Rosanna Arquette bound in leg braces (which appear more like an S & M outfit) and covered with scars that clearly symbolize the female sexual anatomy.

James Spader plays Ballard, a yuppie T.V. producer who, on his way home one night, skids of the road into the oncoming traffic. The impact of the crash with the other car sends the other driver flying out of his car and right through Ballard's windshield.

The wife of his victim, Dr. Helen Remington, is played strangely enough by Holly Hunter, who not only forgives him for the murder of her husband, but sets out on a reckless sexual relationship introducing him to the eroticism of car accidents. Remington introduces Ballard to Vaughan, a sort of self-proclaimed prophet-type, who performs real- life reenactments of famous movie stars' fatal accidents. One of the film's most engaging moments is when Vaughan displays a step-by-step performance of James Dean's 1955 crash.

Cronenberg feels no obligation to explain anything about the narrative, and thus most of the story appears jumbled and confusing. We are left with no understanding of why the characters think or act the way they do. What makes Crash almost dangerous, though, is that absolutely no moral judgements are made on the characters or their situations. We witness excessive infidelity and mental abuse, and it is portrayed in a most "matter of fact" manner. The characters neither grow as individuals nor do they pay for the sins of their obsessive sexuality.

Yet Cronenberg does not glorify their behavior, either— instead he creates a very uncomfortable and straightforward portrait of the sort of desire that is not easily talked about. Crash is almost a documentary in the most untraditional sense of the term— or perhaps just a story told for no other reason to inflict fear.

Crash is not the sort of film that is easily judged whether it is "good" or not. Rather, it transcends such limited semantics. To dismiss the film as such is careless, as it deserves an honest and critical analysis. At times it seems that there is nothing more than light pornography occurring with a beautiful woman rubs her naked body against a well polished airplane. Later, though, the pornography becomes more psychotic and allows the true complications to occur. Whenever there is a crash, whether on T.V. or in reality, the characters engage in fits of mutual masturbation. Although it appears distasteful to the average innocent eye, one can not ignore the artistic inclinations involved in such obscenity. Even though Crash may not sit well in one's stomach, Cronenberg has created a masterpiece of smut and psychosis. Like it, hate it or just respect its absurdity, but do not deny Crash as potentially the most controversial film of our time. (no grade given)

DAILY CLASSIFIED SPECIALS

Monday: Apartment for Rent
Tuesday: For Sale
Wednesday: Personals
Thursday: Auto for Sale

Call us at 545-3500 or visit us at our Newstand or at our Campus Center Basement Office

Student 10¢ a word

Permanent Job Opening: Pratt & Whitney

[illegible] Representatives [illegible] on campus tomorrow, Wednesday, March 26. [illegible] should contact the Mather Career Center to sign up [illegible]

JOB TITLE: [illegible]
OPENINGS: [illegible]
LOCATION: [illegible]
Start Date: [illegible]

JOB DESCRIPTION:
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

■ baseball

continued from page 12

binge, stealing 41 bases in two weeks. He'll break down in tears after stealing six bases in one game, and fast therapist Ian Hooks will run out to the field and carry him off. The crowd will go nuts, and Nike will make millions.

White Sox (87–75)

Prediction: Albert Belle will beat up an entire 4th grade class taking a field trip to Comiskey Park after the kids start chanting, "Albert's got a big butt." Belle will then go on 20/20 and break down in tears, telling Barbara Walters that he's "misunderstood."

Minnesota (82–80)

Prediction: After signing free-agents Bob Tewksbury and Terry Steinbach, the Twins players revolt when their paychecks bounce. Minnesota management has to borrow money from Barry Bonds to cover their debts.

Milwaukee (82–80)

Prediction: Upon realizing that they have to beat both Cleveland and Chicago to win their division, the Brewers jump into the big vat of beer reserved for their mascot in the outfield, and don't return until late July, complaining of a massive hangover. Surprisingly, it doesn't affect their play.

Kansas City (71–91)

Prediction: The Royals July 4th celebration at the local sports bar is cancelled when it is discovered that half of their roster is under 21.

AL West

Seattle (90–72)

Prediction: Alex Rodriguez and Ken Griffey Jr. will combine to bat .470, with 180 home runs and 600 RBIs, and Randy Johnson will lead the league in ERA at a tidy 5.97.

Angels (83–79)

Prediction: Daffy Duck will beat out Jim Leyritz as the starting catcher, and Disney will insist that the playoff system be changed so that the eight teams with the highest marketing revenue, not the eight best records, make the playoffs. Proposal actually passes at the next winter meetings.

Rangers (79–83)

Prediction: John Wetteland will quit his new team when he finds that the Texas trainer mistakenly washed his lucky hat. The Rangers coax him back by insisting that they won't wash anything of his ever again. Wetteland proceeds to save 50 games, and garner the nickname "Pigpen."

Athletics (68–94)

Prediction: A's ownership goes nuts when they find out they actually have to hire a pitching staff. Manager Art Howe, remembering he pitched once five years ago, asks Jose Canseco to be their opening day starter. Canseco's 5–22 record and 8.65 ERA will end up leading the team.

AL Wildcard: Chicago
MVP: Ken Griffey, Jr.
Rookie of the Year: Todd Walker, Minnesota
Cy Young: Charles Nagy, Cleveland
AL Champ: Seattle

National League
NL East
Atlanta (96–66)

Prediction: The opening of the new Ted Turner Field is delayed when the 80-foot statue of Jane Fonda slated for the centerfield bleachers isn't ready for opening day. The Braves will play their home dates for the first half of the season in the parking lot of the former Fulton County Stadium, and still win the National League by 20 games.

Florida (91–71)

Prediction: After spending $89 million on free agents over the winter, Florida owner Wayne Huizenga raises ticket prices to $280 for box seats, $180 for bleacher seats. When fans complain that Huizenga is out of control and that owning every team in town is unethical, Huizenga counters by threatening to bring back Orestes Destrade. Fans withdraw complaint.

Montreal (84–78)

Prediction: Ownership forces talented young players like Rondell White and Vladimir Guerrero to wear "For Sale" signs on their back when the Expos draw 4,000 fans for the home opener. Manager Felipe Alou once again does the best managing job in baseball, but has to coax brothers Matty and Jose out of retirement when his outfield is sold to the Yankees for Graeme Lloyd and $37.

Mets (71–91)

Prediction: FBI officials finally solve the mystery of TWA Flight 800 when they discover that the crash was caused by a baseball hit by Todd Hundley last summer. Bud Selig then finally admits that the ball is juiced.

Phillies (71–91)

Phillies management holds a "Name three Phils, win a new car" contest. Nobody wins.

NL Central
Reds (90–72)

Prediction: They'll get consistent starting pitching. Deion Sanders will energize the offense and they'll capitalize on a weak division. (Sorry, but without Marge Schott, there are no Reds jokes.)

Cardinals (89–73)

Prediction: St. Louis, still stunned from letting up 32 runs to the Braves after taking a 3–1 lead in last year's NLCS, will experience a group flashback during their first appearance in Atlanta. Todd Stottlemyre is taken off in a straightjacket, muttering to himself, "No more Ryan Klesko, no more Ryan Klesko."

Astros (77–85)

Prediction: Houston will try to trade Derek Bell to the camp I work at when they find out that the best two pitchers in the Houston area are the Ginsburg brothers, who are 12 and 10 respectively and pitch for me during the summer. I eventually trade them for Shane Reynolds and Donnie Wall, and finally win the elusive "Berkshire Championship."

Cubs (79–92)

Prediction: Cubs management sends a one sentence memo to the cross-town rival White Sox with the words "Na, na, na na na!" after learning that despite the fact that the Cubbies lose 22 more games than the Pale Hose, they outdraw them by 500,000 at the gate.

Pirates (58–104)

Prediction: Pittsburgh owner Kevin McClatchy is forced to sell the club when he comes up short on his dinner bill at a local restaurant. After washing dishes for two hours and giving the restaurant the Pirates, his bill is cleared.

NL West
Dodgers (93–69)

Prediction: Mike Piazza will hit 50 home runs, Karim Garcia will be the sixth straight Dodger to win Rookie of the Year, and they'll choke in the playoffs. Dodger management will insist that "we're still maturing as a ballclub."

Padres (82–80)

Prediction: Ken Caminiti will play most of the year with two broken legs and one eye, and still be the best third baseman in the game. The rest of the team will jump on his back, literally, causing Cammy to throw his back out and miss the end of the season. Padres fall apart.

Rockies (80–82)

Prediction: The Rockies will score more than the Broncos, and let up more runs then the Jets. The cries of "Red Sox West" will only get louder.

Giants (78–84)

After lending Minnesota the money to meet payroll, Barry Bonds will plead with the world that it proves he's a "nice guy." That assertion falls apart when it is revealed that Bonds actually owed them the money anyways, because he made a bet with Twins management a few years back saying that he'd never make more than an entire team.

NL Wildcard: Florida
NL MVP: Gary Sheffield, Florida
Rookie of the Year: Scott Rolen, Philadelphia
Cy Young: Greg Maddux, Atlanta
NL Champ: Atlanta

Expect tight races in the NL East, where Florida should mount a challenge to incumbent champ Atlanta, and the AL East, where four teams (yes, I'm counting the Red Sox) could win the division. The Dodgers will make the playoffs, but inexperience will kill them, again. The White Sox could break a record for HR's hit in a season, but lack of depth in the rotation will prove to be their Achilles heel. Look for Seattle, with the addition of Scott Sanders and Jeff Fassero, to put it all together and reach their first ever World Series. They'll see Atlanta, and in what could be the last hurrah for that pitching staff, watch the Braves take their second World championship back to the Peach State.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

■ NHL

continued from page 12

with the addition of Adam Oates. Rick Tocchet (who actually has got off his butt to play) and Bill Ranford, the Caps should barely hang on to their spot. A different story is in store for the Habs, and it will take a big effort by a club that's still reeling from a midseason slump caused by the knee injury of forward Saku Koivu.

Tampa Bay has been hot, even without ex-RPI goalie Daren Puppa, so if any team can take over the last playoff spot, they will. Ottawa and Hartford should be concentrating on their draft picks, but, oh, wait a second. The Bruins have Hartford's pick again this year due to the trade in 1994 of former Boston defenseman Glen Wesley to the Whale. That's what you get for acquiring someone who misses an open netter in the Stanley Cup finals!

Now, the B's just have to learn to draft correctly.

OK, let me get it off my chest.

The Bruins are not going to make the playoffs, and thirty years of making them is almost assuredly at an end.

There... I said it, and believe me, that was tougher than you think. But, I am a rational man, and like what Jeff Goldblum said in The Big Chill, "Rationalization is better than sex." A lot of rationalizing has been going on this season for both the Black and Gold, and their more than- dedicated fans.

And besides, when was the last time you went a week without a rationalization?

Answer: Certainly not a defenseman. Ask Hartford, they definitely excel in picking non-defensmen.

Jorma Kansanen is a Collegian columnist.

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

At this point of the season, the only way the B's can beat Ottawa in the playoffs is with their fists, as the Bruin's Rob Dimaio and Ottawa's Denny Lambert show here.

UMass

STILL TIME TO ENTER
Softball (M/W/C).....A.S.A.P.
Soccer (C).....A.S.A.P.
Spring Volleyball (C).....A.S.A.P.

GET THOSE FORMS IN BY
Badminton Doubles (M/W/C)....3/31

PAID OFFICIALS NEEDED FOR SOFTBALL AND SOCCER.
CALL FOR CLINIC DATES.

INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Don't Miss The Action
For entry forms and info
545-2693
545-0022

American Heart Association.
Fighting Heart Disease and Stroke
If you are what you eat, why not cut back on fat?

American Heart Association.
Fighting Heart Disease and Stroke
Tired of throwing your weight around?
Exercise

Summer '97 at UMass Boston

See why we're one of the most popular programs in New England!

You'll benefit from
- our distinguished faculty
- morning, midday, afternoon, and evening classes
- over 400 course sections
- our convenient Boston Harbor location
- sessions starting May 27, June 30, and July 14
- mail, phone, fax, or walk-in registration
- and costs you can afford.

Here's how to get in touch!
Tel: 617 287-7904
Fax: 617 287-7922
Email: dce@umbsky.cc.umb.edu
Web: www.conted.umb.edu
Mail:
UMass Boston Summer Sessions
Division of Continuing Education
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125-3393

Name
Street address
City, state, zip

UMass Boston

Discover a leader in technology and a world of opportunities with Sanders, A Lockheed Martin Company.

At Sanders, we are a recognized leader in the defense and commercial electronics industry with the strengths and resources of the Lockheed Martin Corporation. We have 250 active, ongoing projects and over 100 positions available for college graduates in Computer Science, Electrical Engineering and Computer Engineering.

Join us at our Engineering Open House on Thursday, March 27th, 4-8pm at the Sheraton Tara Hotel in Nashua, NH. You'll be able to meet directly with our hiring managers and see firsthand how our current projects can lead to unlimited career potential and advancement opportunities for you.

So, if you're ready to take on a world of new challenges, you need to attend our Engineering Open House. If you are unable to meet with us on Thursday, send your resume and salary requirements, in strictest confidences, to:
Sanders, A Lockheed Martin Company, Attn: 7504-CR, P.O. Box 2029, Nashua, NH 03061-2029; Email: kdunn@mailgw.sanders.lockheed.com

For information on additional opportunities, visit our home page at: http://www.sanders.com

The Sanders' Engineering Open House
Thursday, March 27th; 4pm-8pm
Sheraton Tara Hotel,
Tara Boulevard, Nashua NH
Bonus available for individuals hired from this special, one day event.

Applicants selected may be subject to a government security investigation and must meet eligibility requirements for access to classified information. Sanders is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

Directions to the Sheraton Tara Hotel:
From the North: Take exit one off the Everett Turnpike (Rte. 3). Take a right at the end of the exit onto Spitbrook Road. At the 2nd set of lights, take a right onto Tara Boulevard.
From the South: Take exit one off the Everett Turnpike (Rte. 3). Take a left onto Spitbrook Road. At the third set of lights take a right onto Tara Boulevard.

SANDERS
A Lockheed Martin Company

Calipari offends press, apologizes

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — John Calipari and the New Jersey Nets have apologized for an incident last week in which the coach called writer Dan Garcia a "Mexican idiot."

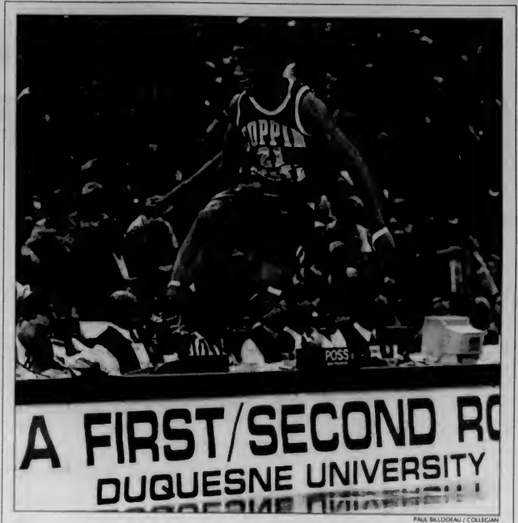
Calling it "an inappropriate way to push Garcia's buttons," Calipari's agent Craig Fenech said the coach apologized for making the remark, but meant it as a joke.

The Nets issued a statement saying the organization "deplores any racial or ethnic remarks by any member of the organization or anyone else." The Nets also said they supported Calipari, and his apology put the incident behind them.

The incident took place on Thursday, after the team finished a practice at Ramapo College in Mahwah. Calipari was being interviewed by New York Post reporter Fred Kerber when he gestured toward Garcia, a writer for The Star-Ledger of Newark, who was talking to another Nets official 30 yards away.

Garcia would not comment on the incident other than to admit it happened. But Kerber said that Calipari was complaining about media coverage, and said "Mexican idiot" loud enough for Garcia to hear.



Kerber said that started a scene that lasted for about 10 minutes, where Garcia said, "I don't appreciate any ethnic remarks," and Calipari responded, "You can't take a joke? If I've offended you, I apologize."

Calipari also asked Garcia if he thought he was doing a good coaching job, to which Garcia apparently responded, "No, I think you're a 5-year-old coach."

Kerber said the answer enraged Calipari, who said Garcia deserved to be punched for the comment.

Garcia, a Mexican-American who has covered the Nets for nine seasons, reported the incident to the NBA. Brian McIntyre, an NBA spokesman, said yesterday the league had yet to receive the letter and would not comment on the incident.

An editor at the newspaper said it had written to Nets president Michael Rowe immediately after the confrontation. "Obviously we were appalled," said sports editor Kevin Whitmer. "We can only hope the coach was sincere in his apology, and it's our hope that Dan can do his job in the future without being harassed."

PAUL BILODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Coppin State surprised hoop fans around the nation when it upset South Carolina in tourney action last week.

Arizona underdogs in Final Four

By Paul Newberry
Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Well, this sounds familiar.

Arizona will show up at the Final Four in Indianapolis as the clear underdog in a field that includes three No. 1 seeds, Kentucky, North Carolina and Minnesota. In other words, the Wildcats should feel right at home.

"We leave the favorites and underdogs to the people in Vegas," said guard Miles Simon, who equaled his career high with 30 points Sunday as Arizona won the NCAA Southeast Regional with a 96-92 overtime victory over Providence. "That doesn't have anything to with this team."

Arizona (23-9) finished fifth in the Pac-10 conference with a talented, but untested team. This was supposed to be the year the Wildcats got a token taste of the NCAA tournament.

By now, they were supposed to be looking ahead to next season and the prospect of having one of the top teams in the country. But this is a persistent bunch. Arizona stunned top-seeded Kansas in the regional semifinals, then escaped against Providence after blowing a seven-point lead in the final 1:15 of regulation. "We came into this season just worrying about growing and maturing as a team," sophomore guard Jason Terry said. "Some people thought we were a year away, but we're here now."

Inexperience has its advantages and disadvantages. Against Kansas, the Wildcats weren't the least bit intimidated by a supposedly superior team, a trait that will serve them well when they go against Dean Smith and the Tar Heels.

Against Providence, though, Arizona frittered the lead away by shooting quickly in the final minute instead of running the clock as coach Lute Olson had ordered.

"We've had to grow up quickly this year, and we're still growing," said Olson, who is making his third trip to the Final Four with Arizona after going once with Iowa. "It's OK to be confident, but you've got to use your head along with being confident."

G–Town's Page NBA bound

By Joseph White
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Victor Page, the Big East's leading scorer this season, has dropped out of school and will become the second sophomore in two years to leave Georgetown early for the NBA draft. The university announced yesterday that Page will follow the trail blazed last year by Allen Iverson, the first player in coach John Thompson's tenure to turn pro before graduating.

"I understand Victor's decision, particularly with the academic demands of Georgetown," Thompson said in a statement released by the university, "and we wish him the best of luck in his future endeavors.

"We all recognize that in today's society, the individual has the freedom to examine non-traditional options in planning his future."

A streaky shooter with unrefined raw talent, Page shouldered most of the offensive burden for the Hoyas this season, averaging 22.7 points and leading Georgetown to the Big East 7 regular-season title. A late run got the Hoyas a bid to the NCAA tournament, and Page said he made his decision to turn pro after a first-round loss to North Carolina-Charlotte.

"It was after the season, after we lost in Tucson," Page said in a brief interview with The Associated Press. "I talked to Coach Thompson and my grandmother and then made the decision myself. When I told Coach and my grandmother, they both said they would support me 100 percent."

While Page often struggled through cold-shooting streaks (16-for-57 at this year's Big East tournament), the larger battle was his attempt to balance basketball with books. A Washington, native, he attended four high schools in three states and the District of Columbia over five years, and spent an extra summer session at a boarding school in New York to get his high school diploma.

Once at Georgetown, he admitted to the difficulties of the dealing with the higher standards of discipline.

"It was real tough, man," Page said in an interview after an exam period earlier this season. "Practicing as long as we do, then being tired, then have to go and study. It was real tough. "But if you want to get there, you have to do it. Coach don't worry about what time it is. As long as you get the work done, he's satisfied."

Thompson ordered Page to skip a week of practice in January to catch up on his schoolwork. By the end of the season, however, the sophomore appeared to have come to terms with the academic rigors and said he would stay at the school until graduation.

"(The tutors have) been helping me so good this year compared to last year. That makes me want to stay more," Page said after the Big East tournament. "... The NBA is not on my mind right now."

■ lacrosse

continued from page 12

"Offensively they have some people who we'll really have to play well, including both of those people, their returning leading scorers," Cannella added.

Just like BC, which has dropped decisions to Duke as well as Harvard, Massachusetts has had its struggles with the nation's best already this season. UMass dropped close games to No. 4 Virginia and No. 7 Hofstra on the road during spring break.

The Minutemen played strong defense against the two top– 10 opponents, limiting the potent Flying Dutchmen offense to seven goals in the overtime loss. Against Virginia, UMass hung tight with last year's NCAA finalists, trailing the Cavaliers by a 9–7 tally through three quarters of play.

"We played tremendous defense against Hofstra and Virginia," Cannella said. "We'd love to score more goals. The way the game went, the tempo of the game, we put ourselves in position to win the game."

Cannella insists that the back–to–back losses this past week are not indicative of poor play or lack of discipline.

"We've played well in all of our games," Cannella said. "Unfortunately we've come out on the losing end at Virginia and Hofstra.

"We have great chemistry. This is a team that really has committed itself, it really sticks together," Cannella added. "It's just a matter of that chemistry coming all together."

The strength of chemistry has come in the form of a strengthened defensive unit and balanced scoring, including both senior leadership and a healthy proportion from the underclassmen.

Senior midfielder Chris Grande leads the Minutemen with nine goals, scoring two or more in each game. Senior attacker Brendan Glass has notched seven goals on a team record 35 shots.

Junior Mike DelPercio has netted four goals and made two assists from his spot at middie, and sophomore transfer attackman John O'Connor has scored five times, four in the win over Fairfield.

The University of Massachusetts–Boston College game will be broadcast live on WMUA (91.1 FM) in Amherst. Patrick Sheeran will provide play–by–play action, with the pregame show beginning at 2:45 p.m., face–off at 3 p.m.

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD--
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

FAMOUS FOR... 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
I always get Fish n' Chips at Pete's
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
YEAR 'ROUND
http://www.javanet/~mburger/

INSTITUTE FOR STUDY ABROAD
BUTLER UNIVERSITY
UNDERGRADUATE STUDIES IN GREAT BRITAIN
AUSTRALIA
IRELAND
NEW ZEALAND
Fully integrated study at British, Irish, New Zealand and Australian universities
FALL OR SPRING SEMESTER • FULL YEAR
INTERNSHIPS
Study Abroad Information Session
Representative: Tom Roberts
Date: Wed. March 26
Location: 10:00 – 12:00 At Table Campus Center Concourse
For further information please contact: Your Study Abroad Office on campus or the Institute for Study Abroad, Butler University, 4600 Sunset Avenue, Indianapolis, IN 46208, Tel: 317/940-9336 or 800/858-0229 Fax: 317/940-9704

STUDY THIS AD
This is not a test...It's an opportunity. An opportunity to manage a fun, productive team while establishing relationships and gaining experience for the future. Examine these benefits:
- Hours designed around your class schedule
- Full time hours available during semester break
- $500 Hiring Bonus
- Learning management skills you can use for a life time
- Advancement opportunities after graduation
- Positions available in Easthampton, Northampton, Hadley

The prerequisites? Ambition, effective people skills, proven leadership ability, and good academic credentials. If you think you can make the grade, send/fax your resume or apply in person at: Burger King; attn: Bob Turner, 353 Russell St., Hadley, MA, 01035 Fax: 413-527-7654
"Working Together...To Be The Best"
F.P.S. Inc is an Independent Franchisee of Burger King Corporation.
BURGER KING

Hewlett-Packard — Performer of the year.
We like the sound of that.
Hewlett-Packard, the world's most admired technology company, is also Forbes magazine's 1995 Performer of the Year. We are a world leader in the design, manufacturing and distribution of computer and electronic test and measurement equipment because of a core set of performance-based values we call "The HP Way." Currently, we have employment opportunities available for Electrical Engineering majors (BS, MS, or Ph.D) in the following departments:
- Research and Development
- Manufacturing
- Marketing
- Technical Support
- QA
- Custom Solutions

Successful candidates must have excellent interpersonal, problem solving, and written/verbal communication skills. Individual must be self-motivated, detail-oriented, and able to work in a team environment.
Interested candidates please contact the University Career Center and meet with our hiring managers on campus April 8, 1997. Anyone interested in meeting with the hiring managers are invited to attend a social gathering Monday, April 7th. It will held in Room #803 from 6:00 pm to 8:00 pm. To learn more about HP and our employment opportunities, visit our Homepage on the World Wide Web at: http://www.jobs.hp.com
Hewlett-Packard Company is an equal opportunity employer dedicated to affirmative action and work force diversity.
HEWLETT PACKARD

Summer learning at UMass Boston ranges far and wide.
In Vietnam
Vietnam Today: Culture, History, Politics
In Mexico
In Ireland
Ireland Today
On Nantucket Island
Playwriting and Performance
Along the New England Coastline
Exploring the Coastal Environment
On Nantucket Island
Marine Biology
For Information about these programs and courses available this summer, contact:
Division of Continuing Education
University of Massachusetts Boston
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125-3393
Tel 617 287-7915
Fax 617 287-7922
Web www.conted.umb.edu
Approved as an event by the Commonwealth.
UMass Boston

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Looking for a home away from home? Come to Sigma Kappa Open Rush Mon. 3/24 5-7pm. (Dinner), Tues. 3/25 6-8pm. Thurs. 3/27 6-8pm. Please call 256-6887 to RSVP. Located behind Hillel House.

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1984 Ford T-Bird auto trans, A/C, 5.0L V8, 59,500 miles. Telephone (413)253-7036 $2000 or B/O

EMPLOYMENT

Drivers Wanted College students, anyone to sell Good Humor-Ice Cream from one of our vending trucks. Work outdoors this summer. Be your own boss. RTS available in your area. Earn $750-950/weekly. Male or Female. Apply now. Call Mon.-Sat. 9am-3pm only (203)366-2641 or (800)888-1009

EMPLOYMENT

Crabapple White Water Looking for one person to greet trips. Work in restaurant and retail store. Full-Time Summer Job. Some positions. Looking for multi-talented, friendly person. (413)625-2288

$Opportunity$ Looking for several exciting, enthusiastic, and dedicated people to expand an already lucrative market. Great opportunity for those who are serious. Interested persons call Todd at (413)739-4669

Summer In Maine- Camp Androscoggin for boys needs staff to teach tennis, soccer, lacrosse, baseball, swimming, sailing, archery, photography, nature, fishing, mountain biking, art, ropes, radio. HAVE FUN! Have an impact. Write, E-mail, or call collect: 501 West Street, Harrison, NY 10528 (914)835-5 8 0 0 http://www.coolworks.com/showme/camp/andro

Earn great money and valuable Sales/Marketing experience. Memolink's Memoboards are coming to UMass! We need one highly motivated individual to direct our sales project. Contact David at (800)563-6654

EMPLOYMENT

Delivery or Kitchen Help Must be able to work 20 hours/week. Apply at: D.P. Dough

Amherst Leisure Services is now accepting applications for summer positions: Aquatics positions; Pool Maintenance Supervisor, Canoe Instructors, Assistant Pool Manager, Lifeguards, Swim Instructors, and Cashiers. Day Camp Positions: Camp Counselors, Special Needs Coordinator/Supervisor in Mainstream setting, Special Needs Counselor/Aides in Mainstream setting, Camp Art Director, Camp Resource Manager, Sports Positions: Ball Field Maintenance, Youth Tennis Instructors. Applications are available at the Town of Amherst Human Resources and Leisure Services Offices. Return completed application by the preferred deadline of 3/31/97 to: Town of Amherst Human Resources Office, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst, MA 01002. An EO/AA Employer

Legal Assistants Wanted-Fall 1997 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the Legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the Legal profession necessary— training provided. Stop by the office today and pick up an application. 922 Campus Center

Technical Support/ISP Looking for a great part-time job? We are a local, progressive, internet service provider that is looking for Quality, Energetic, and Reliable persons to join our team. Requirements: experience in Windows '95, Windows 3.1, Mac, Dialup Networking and TC P/IP. Call our job hotline today! (413)587-4333 or e-mail jobs@crocker.com

Cruise Lines Hiring Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel (Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary (919)918-7767 ext. C180. (Member, Better Business Bureau CARE Program)

Aleske Employment Earn up to $3000-$6000+/month in fisheries, parks, resorts, airfare, food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180

Drivers Wanted Apply at Pinnochio's between 2:00pm. and 5:00pm. No phone calls.

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Sugarloaf Estates Ultra modern, two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Now leasing Spring and Fall. Call 665-3656

Summer Rental- West Hyannis Port Cape Cod three bedroom. Walk to Craigville Beach. Available 5/25-8/31. (508)778-6519

FOR RENT

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 19th Birthday JBurt Love, Your 7th Floor Wannabe

HOUSE FOR RENT

Uptown, Great location! Corner of Kellogg St. Downstairs, great for two people. $500/month. 549-9265 Summer/Fall

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT 30 hours, $395 American Academy 1-800-808-Prep (please leave your name and number)

MUSICIANS

DRUMMER WANTED Punk/Ska Band 25 Liars needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming. Call Dave and Ryan 665-9172

PERSONALS

Sisters,

Congratulations on your initiation into Alpha Sigma Sigma. Get ready for a spring of fun-filled days and pub-nights. Thanks for pledging- Alison, Briana, Myah, Kerry, and Christine.

Love Your Big Sisters,

Tammie and Marie

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Photophile? Me too. I'll pose, you shoot. Iris 587-0850

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T Europe $169 D/W Fly the world dirt cheap ONE WORLD TRAVEL 587-0001

Party Weekend in Vermont April 4-6, only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus. $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Your ad could be here.... !

Collegian Classifieds

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be processed by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified ad.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exception is for birthday or engagement announcements, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals (this means dorm room numbers as well).
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, rent roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad. The Collegian reserves the right to request to see and/or provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE!
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, MARCH 25

Lecture — UMass Hillel will hold a lecture and discussion on "St. Jean, New Immigrants of Israel in the 1990's, Absorption, Conflict & Racism," led by Shoshana Modmani, instructor of Hillel course, Divisions and Conflict in Israeli Society, at 7:30 p.m. in the Hillel Recreational Room.

Meeting — Students Helping Area Reach-out Efforts (SHARE) will hold a general meeting at 6 p.m. outside 504 Goodell Building. New members are welcome. Free pizza.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 26

Dance — UMass Hillel will sponsor Israeli Dancing in the basement of Chadbourne Residence Hall. There will be a teaching session from 8:30–9:15 p.m. and review and request from 9:15–10 p.m. No experience required.

Discussion — Joe Salvatore, an M.F.A. Dramaturgy graduate student will hold a discussion on the presence of queer ideas and themes in late 20th century American theater entitled "Peeking Out of the Closet Door," at 4 p.m. in the Rand Theatre. The event is free and open to the public, sponsored by UMass Theater Educational Services.

Lecture — Dr. Maria Nikolajeva of the University of Stockholm will present a lecture entitled "The Swedishness of Swedish Children's Literature" at 7:30 p.m. in Thompson Hall, room 102. The lecture is in English and is open to the public free of charge.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series will feature Kathy Peiss, from the UMass history department, on "Producing a Consumer Culture: Women in the American Beauty Business," from 12:15–1:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174–176. Free and open to the public. Coffee and tea will be available. Feel free to bring a lunch.

Lecture — Zoe Perry will present a slide show involving her experiences as a lesbian at the Beijing Women's International Conference in the Campus Center (time to be announced). Part of the GLBT Cafe Series and sponsored by the UMass Stonewall Center.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold this week's meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 911. Anyone interested in listening to or reading poetry are free to attend. New members are always welcome. For more information, contact Tim at 546-0562 or Kaye at 546-1459.

Meeting — There will be a meeting of the Biracial/Multiracial Student Association at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 811–15. We will be discussing the communities we identify with as people of mixed race.

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will hold its meeting in room 304 in the University Health Services from 5:30–6:30 p.m. All are welcome to attend.

Workshop — There will be a Hotel Group planning workshop for University Center 2000 in the Campus Center, room 168–C from 11 a.m.–1 p.m. All students, faculty, staff and administrators are encouraged to be a part of creating a vision for the future of the Campus Center/Student Union.

NOTICES

Elections — Elections for Student Government President, Trustee and local area government positions have been rescheduled to March 26 and 27 due to the student takeover of Goodell during the week beginning March 10. Polling locations to be announced.-

Dance — The UMass Ballroom Dance Club invites everyone to come dance with us. Meets every Tuesday and Thursday, 5:15–7 p.m. in the Totman Gym. Newcomer/beginner Tango/Rumba instruction starts March 27.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545–9484

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one–acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation in addition to the submission to Department of Comparative Lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Band wanted — Amnesty International is looking for a Jazz Band to play for its upcoming fundraiser this spring. If interested, call the Amnesty office at 549–1925 or Babz at 546–3105 as soon as possible.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

PS: any student group announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Member O.C.M.P.

"we accept all major credit cards"

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN 2 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
19 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

$1 drinks Vodka Tonic & always $1 Bud "light draft

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 25, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Secret of the Wild Child"		Frontline "Angel on Death Row"		Death by Design (In Stereo)		Going Places (R)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am Journal	St. Jude: A Story of Hope		"A Husband, a Wife and a Lover" (1996, Drama) Judith Light,		News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land (In Stereo)		"A Husband, a Wife and a Lover" (1996, Drama) Judith Light,		News		Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Roseanne	Ellen (R)	Home Imp.	Spin City	Practice "Part IV" (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WLVI		Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		7th Heaven "Now You See Me"		Buffy the Vampire Slayer		News		Jenny Jones (R)	In Stereo
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo. You	Javt Shoot Me	Frasier (R)	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Moesha (R)	Social Studies	Burning Zone	"Death Song"	News		LAPD	Real TV
WVIT		Full House	Fresh Prince	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Mad Abo. You	Mad Abo. You	Frasier (R)	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	★★½ "Housesitter" (1992, Comedy)		Steve Martin,	(In Stereo)	News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abo. You	Just Shoot Me	Frasier (R)	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "The Bombing of America"		Frontline (R)		Death by Design (In Stereo)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Roseanne	Ellen (R)	Home Imp.	Spin City	Practice "Part IV" (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	Moesha (R)	Social Studies	Burning Zone	"Death Song"	News		Martin	Mad Abo. You
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	Figure Skating	Three Masters on Ice (R)			★★½ "The Ernest Green Story" (1993, Drama)		Morris Chestnut,
A&E	40	Quincy		Equalizer "Trial by Ordeal"		Biography "Judy Garland: Beyond the Rainbow" (R)				Sherlock Holmes Mysteries		Law & Order
CNN	29	World View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	35	Talk	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	Paul Reser-From Home		Tompkins Square (R)		Comic Relief	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	42	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings "Russian Giants" (R)		Wild Discovery: Red Desert		Mystery Univ.	World-Wond	Who's Afraid of... Wolves		Wild Discovery	Red Desert
ESPN	31	Up Close	Sportscenter	College Basketball:		NIT Semifinal -- Teams TBA		College Basketball:		NIT Semifinal -- Teams TBA			Sportscenter
LIFE	45	Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Prison of Secrets" (1997, Drama)		Stephanie Zimbalist,		Final Take	Mysteries
MTV	33	Ren & Stimpy	Road Rules	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)		Unplugged (In Stereo)		Buzzkill	World Tour (R)	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	53	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Teen	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	55	Twilight Zone	Masters	Time Trax "Selma Is Missing"		Viewers' Choice				VR.5 "Send Me an Angel"		Time Trax "Selma Is Missing"
TLC	26	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Treasures	America	UFOs and Alien Encounters		U.F.O. (R)		Treasures	America
TNT	65	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball: Minnesota Timberwolves at Houston Rockets. (Live)					Inside-NBA	"Uptown Saturday Night" (1974)
USA	62	Renegade (In Stereo)		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote		Boxing. Derral Coley vs. Kippy Diggs. (Live)				Wings	Wings
HBO	63	★★ "Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls" (1995)		Jim Carrey. PG-13		★★★ "Primal Fear" (1996, Suspense)		Richard Gere. R		Talked to Death (In Stereo)		Comedy Jam	"DNA" (1997)
MAX	67	★★ "In the Line of Duty: Siege at Marion" (1992)		Ed Begley Jr.		"The Grave" (1996, Suspense)		Craig Sheffer. R		★★½ "Outbreak" (1995, Suspense)		Dustin Hoffman. R	Erotic
SHOW	69	★★★ "Forget Paris" (1995, Comedy)		Billy Crystal. PG-13		★★★ "While You Were Sleeping" (1995)		PG		★★½ "Punchline" (1988, Comedy-Drama)		Sally Field, Tom Hanks. (In Stereo)	R

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

University By Frank Cho

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
Abrupt mood swings may mean there's something unexpected bothering you. Time to put a closer friend to help you sort out a complicated issue. Also, don't neglect health issues. That's another potential source of trouble.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
Listening to a killjoy at work makes you want to scream, but the patient approach works wonders. Ignore this person as much as possible, and focus on the things you enjoy most to help you get through the week.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
An insensitive omission may have you feeling depressed. Try to keep your chin up and ask yourself: Are these the sort of people you want to be your friends? Try to develop a thicker skin.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
A cheerleader contribution may be redirected to a cause you don't approve of. Your values are important, so don't allow yourself to be railroaded. A misunderstanding at home may be causing stress.

LEO
July 23–August 23
Careful attempts at communication clear up a misunderstanding you thought was terminal. See—it really wasn't your fault. Someone you love very much is planning a surprise.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
What you thought was a joyful piece of news is a source of consternation for someone close to you. Don't worry—they'll come around. Planning for large social events goes well.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
A distant friend is thinking of you. Make the effort to get in touch, and you could make them very happy. Indulge this weekend in some relaxation. You're long overdue for some serious snoozing.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
A small gesture hits home and really makes your day. Pass the favor along—it's a good way to make a new friend. A carefully worded criticism may still sting, but see if you can pull it together and make a diplomatic reply.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
A narrow-minded individual says something you don't agree with. It may be impossible to argue with them directly, but a more subtle approach may work wonders.

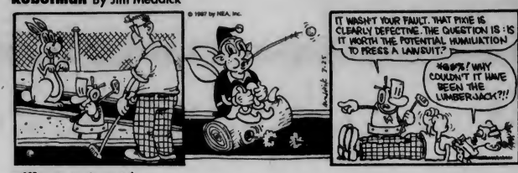
CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
Any conflicts you encounter this week are likely to escalate, so either steer clear, or use your strongest diplomacy. A close friend may need support during a difficult time.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
An enthusiastic companion makes an evening outing extra special. If you go out with a group it could be even more fun, but watch a tendency to overspend. Maybe you should leave the credit cards at home.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
A silly joke may offend you, but if you speak privately to the jokester, you may make a lasting impression. Be careful that it's not a bad one—try not to make a scene.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson



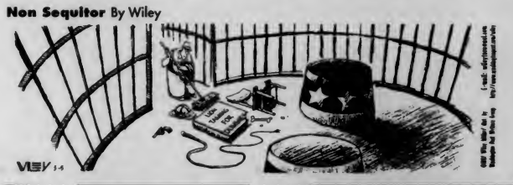
"It's just like they always say — a new car depreciates 30 percent the second you drive it off the lot."

Quote of the Day

"I am unalterably opposed to all who are absolutely right."

–Albert Camus

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Social Norm By Mr. K

Non Sequitor By Wiley

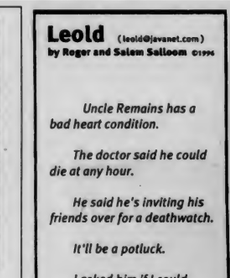
Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Scrod	Scrodball Grinder
Burgers	Burgers
Chicken Puck	Chicken Puck

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Scrod	Vegan Burgers
Burgers	Chicken Puck
Chicken Puck	Rastabilities



Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Burgers	Burgers
Chicken Puck	Chicken Puck
Mandarin Scrod-fry	Scrod Kiev

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Burgers	Burgers
Chicken Puck	Pineapple Upside
Scrodabilities	Down Scrod

THIS IS NOT A REAL MENU! WE DON'T HAVE ONE! TRY 545-2626

ACROSS
1. Put on
5. What those immune to a hottest walk on
10. Actor Dourif of Wise Blood
14. In the year (Lat.)
15. Coin of Pakistan
16. "Don't Bring ___"
17. Extremist's diet
18. ___ mandarin
20. Very long time
21. Regular
22. Midsections
24. Supercilious one
26. Tells on a certain cat
27. Governor Richards of Texas
29. Crescent creature
32. Father of King David
35. TV's Tony
36. Follower of Thurs
37. Greasy
38. His music is featured in 10
39. Spreads out, as cards
40. Significant time
41. Parker's money aster
42. "What hath god wrought?"
43. Inscribed
46. "The Bell ___"
48. Culprit
47. Saturday morning fare
51. British fuel
54. Like a dessert
55. Daisy ___ of Dogpatch
56. Feedback, of a sort
57. Homesick one's feeling
60. Court order
61. Thrill to pieces
62. "___ Carried Away" (tune from On the Town) (2 wds.)
63. Phoenix cagers
64. Restrain
65. Highlander's gal

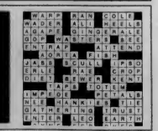
DOWN
1. Methane and neon
2. Composer Rubinstein
3. Silly
4. Eur. nation
5. Opposite of lion-hearted
6. The ___ Banks
7. ___ you could hear ___ drop (2 wds.)
8. Baseball's Durocher
9. Guard
10. Loud trumpet sounds
11. Participates in a race
12. Member of the stix section
13. Treasurer's collection
18. Five Weeks in a Balloon author
23. ___ about (approximately) (2 wds.)
25. Unchallenging
26. River to the Gulf of Guinea
28. Plunged
29. Where the lovelorn worship
30. Vases
31. Move skyward
32. Old Testament prophet
33. Irish periodical
34. Trellis part
35. Spud
36. Did up the sleeping bag again
39. Beeton
41. Office note
42. Part of a French cheek
44. Certain cards
46. Turnkey
47. Minotaur's stomping grounds
48. 24th Greek letter
49. Gobi areas
50. Hotbeds
51. Congregation's places
52. Tan, to a couturier
53. Scraggy
54. Med. school course
58. Music to a matador's ears
59. Zilch

Leold (leold@javanet.com) by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

Uncle Remains has a bad heart condition.

The doctor said he could die at any hour.

He said he's inviting his friends over for a deathwatch.



It'll be a potluck.

I asked him if I could invite my little cousins who've never seen anyone die.

He said, "Sure, but no heckling."

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Women's gymnastics team defends Atlantic 10 title

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's gymnastics team defended their Atlantic 10 Championship title last Saturday, beating George Washington, Temple and Rhode Island with a score of 194.350.

This was the second straight A-10 title for the Minutewomen. In addition to their first place team finish, senior Lianne Laing took first place on the floor exercise (9.850) and senior Tara Swartz claimed first place for the second consecutive year on the uneven bars, tying her own school record with a 9.950. Sophomore Anita Sanyal won the balance beam with a 9.875.

"We hit 19 routines, and they were 19 incredible performances — I was real pleased with that," UMass Coach Dave Kuzara said. "The thing that was good about this Atlantic 10 meet was that even though we didn't hit 24 for 24, we didn't flatten out. We were able to pick ourselves up and have some really outstanding performances."

The Minutewomen got off to a great start with a fantastic vault by junior Penny LeBeau, who scored a career best of 9.825, helping the Minutewomen set a new school record of 49.075 on vault. Junior Karen Maurer also scored a career high, leading off on the balance beam with a 9.75.

"Nobody's talked about my juniors all year. They each did one event, but in my opinion, they won the meet for us," Kuzara said. "Penny starts off with 9.825. You have to be fearless in the lead-off position. Penny and Karen don't have big egos, they leave them at the door."

Other solid performances were given by freshman Mandy Mosby who scored a 9.825 to finish second on floor. Sophomores Michelle LoPresti, Betsy Colucci and Denise Johnson rounded out the team with their consistent impressive routines.

Despite some shaky performances on bars and beam, the Minutewomen carried at least a point lead throughout the meet. According to Kuzara, there was never a real question as to whether the team would come out on top.

"I pretty much knew the whole time, especially since we started so strong on vault," Kuzara said. "We were basically up a point the entire meet. I knew that on bars we were counting a fall, but I also knew that GW had fallen twice on beam, I could see that out of the corner of my eye. We had four really good performances on bars, so I felt that picked us up a notch.

"Then we go to floor and what has been traditional with our team is that we never quit. And that's what I said to them right before floor, 'We've never quit in the four years I've been here and I don't want this to be the first team to ever quit.' We had the meet pretty much won."

The Minutewomen's A-10 winning score is the second highest in conference history. (West Virginia scored 195.500 in 1995.) The team proved once again that they are a force to be reckoned with, and are pleased with the outcome and score of the meet.

"I don't think that we are ecstatic, because obviously we had some breaks, but the A-10 Championship is a win that will, as every day goes by, mean more," Kuzara said. "We were the best team there. There is no doubt about that."

In addition to the team trophy, Mosby was awarded the Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year.

"I was kind of surprised, I guess, I didn't really expect it," Mosby said. "I didn't even know what awards they gave out. It was a thrill."

Mosby's performance has steadily improved all season, and with a 39.050 last weekend against West Virginia, she became only the third woman in UMass history to score over a 39.00 in the all around.

"I usually improve as the year goes on," Mosby said. "It all comes together and you get more comfortable with your routines and you get adjusted to everything you're doing."

Kuzara was also the recipient of an award. He was named Atlantic 10 Coach of the Year for the second year in a row.

"It's easy to coach when you have great talent," said Kuzara. "I have a great team this year. I have probably the best captains I have ever been associated with. I've got two juniors that I can't say enough about — they are consummate team people, seven sophomores who are extremely talented and who have really learned from their freshman year. And then I follow up with two of the best freshman I have ever had."

The win came just a week after the Minutewomen finished third against host West Virginia and George Washington, beating only Rutgers. However, the loss didn't hinder their performance in any way, in fact, it may have helped them.

"Obviously we were pretty upset about the loss, but in my opinion it was better to lose by .500 the week before than to win by .500 because I think that complacency would have set it," Kuzara said. "GW is a good team, they almost beat us the first meet, they did beat us at West Virginia. It's so easy to say, but if we hadn't lost, I don't know if we would have performed as well [in the A-10's]."

The Minutewomen have only one more hurdle to overcome on their quest for the national title — next Saturday's Regionals in Columbus, Ohio. According to Kuzara, they will use the next two weeks to prepare mentally for that meet.

"Obviously, I wish we would have hit more, but we're going to work the next two weeks to just try and take the pressure off," Kuzara said. "It just seems like we're trying to win the national championship every meet now, and we just need to take it one routine at a time."

UMass goes into Regionals as the number two seed, behind Ohio State. Both Kuzara and Mosby foresee the team performing well.

"We were going in [to A-10's] hoping to win and we did that so we are really happy," Mosby said. "And now we're going to Regionals and hopefully Nationals. We know we can do it."

TABI CAGAN / COLLEGIAN
The Minutewomen won their second straight Atlantic-10 championship last Saturday.

LISA M. OLIVERI / COLLEGIAN
Sophomore Betsy Colucci helped the team with her floor exercise score of 9.775.

Baseball's back... predictions for '97

It's the pitching, stupid.

That, in a nutshell, is what the 1997 season will be all about. Hitting won't be a problem for anyone, except maybe Pittsburgh or Kansas City, so anyone who wants to dethrone the Yankees better have a strong pitching staff and a middle relief core that can both eat up innings and bolster the 80 percent of starters in the league who will be lucky to see the sixth inning, in this, the decade of the longball.

LUKE MEREDITH ON BASEBALL

Below are guesstimated records, order of finish and a little something extra from me, 'cause I love you guys.

AL East

Baltimore (88–74)

Prediction: Owner Peter Angelos will trade Jeffery Hammonds, Rocky Coppinger and the rights to Lenn Sakata to Wendy's for those spit guards they have above the salad bar. Angelos connects them all, places them above the grandstand and declares Camden Yards a "spit-free, family ballpark."

Toronto (86–76)

Prediction: Roger Clemens will start his first appearance in Fenway Park in a Jays uniform by throwing the first pitch into the press box, clunking Red Sox GM Dan Duquette in the head. Clemens will insist it "just slipped."

Yankees (84–78)

Prediction: The New York Post will use the words "Cecil Fielder" and "chubby" in the same headline by early May, and George Steinbrenner will fine Darryl Strawberry for refusing to shave his sideburns.

Red Sox (79–83)

Prediction: John Valentin will play second to a relative degree of efficiency, someone will play left, John Wasdin and Butch Henry will surprise more than a few people, and they'll still go nowhere. Oh— and somewhere in New England someone will refer to Tom "Flash" Gordon as "Flash in the Pan" Gordon.

Tigers (67–95)

Prediction: Detroit will invite Mickey Lolich, Denny McLain and Chet Lemon back for an Old-Timer's game, and then shock baseball by signing them to contracts. Tigers will then proceed to be better than they were last year.

AL Central

Indians (94–68)

Prediction: Kenny Lofton, in the first stage of "I'm not fast" denial, will steal only three bases in April, and then break down in early May and go on a fast

Turn to BASEBALL, page 8

Men's lax home opener today

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

In any sport, the Massachusetts — Boston College rivalry is as lively and serious as any in the nation, and men's lacrosse is no exception. When the tête-à-tête resumes today at Richard F. Garber Field at 3:00 p.m., there will be no love lost between the two in-state foes.

BC comes into Massachusetts' home opener having already lost the battle for greater Boston bragging rights this season. The Eagles fell to Harvard at home in a 18–9 drubbing on the ides of March. No. 15 UMass is the only other high-profile Division I men's lacrosse program in the state, so the results of the matches among the three teams are important factors in deciding which New England teams are given NCAA tournament berths.

The last meeting between the neighborly warring factions was last season when the Eagles entertained the Minutemen at Chestnut Hill. Massachusetts continued its dominance over BC with a 15–9 schooling, increasing the lopsidedness of the all-time series to 23–0 in UMass' favor. The Minutemen hope to keep their record unblemished against the Eagles by taking advantage of their edge in experience.

"I think we match up well with them," Massachusetts coach Greg Cannella said. "They're a very athletic team, you look up and down their roster and see they're a very young team.

"It's difficult, as we've seen in the past, for a young team to go out and play against the top-notch level schools," Cannella added.

Boston College returns its top two scorers, both capable of wreaking serious havoc upon opposing defenses and goalkeepers, as shown in their multiple goal performances this season. Senior midfielder Mark Trowbridge scored five of his seven goals in a 15–14 loss to Stony Brook, and junior attackman Kevin MacLane has notched a four-goal game and two hat tricks already this season.

"They have, in particular, a couple of real good players. One of them is Kevin MacLane on attack, he was their leading scorer last year as a sophomore (38 goals, 29 assists) and he's a junior now," Cannella said. "Marc Trowbridge (39 goals, 12 assists) is the best athlete on the team. He's got great size and speed and he's a tremendous shooter.

Turn to LACROSSE, page 9

JEREMY ADAMS / COLLEGIAN
The men's lacrosse team hosts Boston College on Garber Field at 3 p.m. today.

Slow week in NHL, B's have no chance

JORMA KANSANEN ON THE NHL

And the race is on, and here comes pride up the back stretch, heartache is coming down the inside...

Pride is the key word for the rest of the NHL season with nine games and some change remaining for most of the teams out there in Puck Land. A potpourri of playoff spots are still open, with a total of ten teams within three points of each other in both the Eastern and Western Conferences.

Man, that's as close as a shave with a chain saw that leaks oil and is ready to blow. More bloody than close really, but that's what the stretch drive of this season has in store — six spots centered around one of the closest playoff battles in recent NHL history.

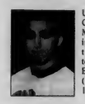
• In the West, four teams of the five in the playoff race already have their water in the water. But, positioning will be the key, and it is a matter of playing Colorado in the first round, a dodgy proposition at best, or someone a little bit more beatable like Phoenix. Edmonton and Anaheim should make the postseason (73 points), but Chicago is treading water with Calgary at 70 points, and both are just one point behind St. Louis.

It looks bad for the Blackhawks, playing six of their last nine games against teams they're already battling with down the stretch (Edmonton, St. Louis and two with Anaheim and Calgary). But, it's worse for the Flames with games against Colorado and Detroit (i.e. pretty much quality opponents), and two with Chicago.

After the firing of ex-ogre Mike Keenan, the Blues have been giving teams the blues instead of singing "Back on the Chain Gang," and should make it to the Promised Land. Calgary is a surprise after an anonymous season, and it won't be a surprise to see them get jumped by Chicago. Defense wins playoff spots, at least, and the Hawks have the edge.

For the Flames, just one question: What the hell is a Zarley Zalapski? — answer at the end of the column.

• In the East, Washington and Montreal (66 points apiece) hold the last two playoff positions for their own, but Hartford, Tampa Bay and Ottawa are within striking distance. One of the keys to this battle is that the top two teams have nine games left, while the others have 10 games left. Do the math. For both the Capitals and Les Habitants, the rest of their schedule holds some tough teams.



Montreal faces Pittsburgh and Philadelphia (both at home), with games against contenders like Washington, Ottawa and Hartford (two games) still on the docket. The Capitals have the worst of the deal, though, with seven of their last nine opponents either fighting for a playoff spot (Chicago, Ottawa and Montreal), or already hold a playoff spot (Philly, Buffalo and Florida).

But, in my inadmittable, I mean, inimitable opinion,

Turn to NHL, page 8

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 105 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, March 26, 1997

BC lacks in lax

UMass' Chris Grande, the Minutemen's leading scorer, netted two goals as his team rolled over the Eagles yesterday (See Sports, page 10).

Milo Goes To Northampton

Pop-punk legends the Descendents perform tonight at Pearl Street, so get a cup of coffee and check out our preview (See Arts & Living, page 5).

WORLD

Alabanian Premier tries to end anarchy

TIRANA, Albania (AP) — With foreign aid trickling in yesterday, Albania's caretaker government tried to find ways to safeguard the humanitarian supplies from looting mobs that have plunged the country into anarchy.

Restoring a semblance of order is the top priority for Premier Bashkim Fino's government as it struggles to get the help it needs to rebuild Albania, shattered by weeks of chaos.

"Time is needed to restore order. We not only hope, but know, that the Interior Ministry will try to reorganize the police, but even in this it needs the assistance of Europe," Agriculture Minister Hashai Alliko said yesterday.

Albania has been wracked by mob violence since February, when Albanians impoverished by the collapse of high-risk investment schemes turned their anger on the government.

The protests grew into armed insurrection after anti-government protesters in the south began raiding armories for weapons. Many of the southern rebels have turned to crime, robbing and terrorizing the population.

The violence has led nearly 12,000 Albanians to seek refuge in Italy by crossing the Adriatic in rickety vessels.

NATION

Albright & Helms becoming friends

WINGATE, N.C. (AP) — Call it a goodwill visit to the lion's den. Or maybe the domestic version of a State Department engagement with a potential foreign foe.

While Vice President Al Gore was in Beijing meeting national leaders and encouraging good relations, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright did much the same thing yesterday with Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Jesse Helms, (R-N.C.) on his own political turf.

Near the end of their day together, Albright said the two were "developing a pretty good friendship" and Helms declared in a joint news conference that he was ready to negotiate Senate ratification of a chemical weapons treaty — one of the highest priorities of the Clinton administration. Until now, Helms has blocked the treaty, which is set to go into effect without U.S. participation April 29.

"If they sit down and be realistic about it, there's certainly a chance we'll get a treaty," said Helms, who has previously insisted on State Department and U.N. reform as well as changes in the treaty before he'll let it go to the Senate floor for a ratification vote.

"It's an overrated treaty. It's not going to do one thing... to protect Americans," Helms said when asked about his previous rock-solid opposition. "It maybe has some good points that are sort of hard for me to find. But I'll go ahead and look for them, particularly with the secretary."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 50	HIGH: 50	HIGH: 60
LOW: 25	LOW: 25	LOW: 30

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 8
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

SGA elections today, tomorrow

President & Trustee candidates square off during televised debate

By Victoria Groves and Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

Last night's Student Government Association (SGA) President and Student Trustee candidate debate was more of a question and answer session where the nominees did respond to panelists' questions, but did not have the opportunity to address each other in true debate fashion.

The debate, which was filmed for live broadcast in the UVC-TV 19 studio, consisted of candidates' opening and closing statements, as well as approximately 45 minutes of responding to questions posed by a panel of three reporters, each from UVC, WMUA and The Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

Questions presented to the Trustee candidates R.J. Lemar, Rob McDonald and Brian Tirrell, and SGA President candidates Brian McManus and Lia Wong, covered such topics as the student occupation of Goodell Building and potential privatization on campus.

A total of 21 questions were presented to the candidates, each regarding separate issues. However, only one issue prompted differing opinions among the candidates, and that was the question posed to the Trustee hopefuls regarding their support of raised academic standards for University admission and the creation of an Honors College on campus.

R.J. Lemar responded to the question of how a raise in academic standards could affect Asian, Latin American, African, Native American (ALANA) enrollment.

"ALANA enrollment needs to be protected," Lemar said. "With increased academic standards there needs to be increased recruitment, ALANA and all students."

McDonald agreed with Lemar, regarding recruitment of ALANA students.

"I believe this is a University of the Commonwealth," McDonald said. "Yes, I support raising academic standards, but we have to focus on recruitment and retention of students... in order to increase academic standards, not just raising SAT [Scholastic Aptitude Test] scores."

While both Lemar and McDonald supported raising academic standards and the creation of an Honors College at UMass, Tirrell was opposed to both ideas, based on the fact that a public university should not place such restrictions on prospective students.

"I don't necessarily support raising academic standards," Tirrell said. "The vision for UMass is that it is for the Commonwealth, and we should not make it so only elite could come here."

Tirrell did say he supported UMass President William Bulger's plan for offering free tuition to the top two graduates in each class in Massachusetts high schools.

All candidates discussed the controversial issue of privatization during the debate. However, when presidential candidates Wong and McManus were asked: "Have you contacted any student businesses about how they will be affected by the possible privatization of UMass, and what are your plans to secure their livelihood?" they did not specify what they would do to protect student-run businesses.

"I have contacted student businesses, and they are very concerned about competing business," Wong said. "I told them they will be involved in every aspect from beginning to end."

While McManus supports privatization, he said it must be "done responsibly" to protect student businesses.

"Most [student businesses] are adamantly opposed to privatization," McManus said. "I agree that if it's done irresponsibly they do have a lot to lose."

With regards to privatization, Wong said it was not a "yes or no issue." McDonald's stance is similar, in that he supports privatization with the stipulation of student involvement.

Tirrell said he will only support privatization if that is what students want, as long as jobs and student businesses aren't sacrificed in the process.

The panel also asked the presidential candidates about what role they played in the Goodell takeover and whether or not they felt it was productive.

"I think it was very productive in that it got students involved in the University," McManus said. "The ALANA community in particular has a lot of problems, with administration breaking promises.

"I attended several rallies, but didn't go in," McManus continued. "I didn't feel it was an appropriate political environment."

Wong, who was in Goodell during the takeover and acted as a student negotiator, stressed that the event was not simply for ALANA students and that it came about because of "issues the administration failed to address."

"The takeover was not just an ALANA, one group issue," Wong said. "There were over 2000 stu-

Turn to DEBATE, page2

LAUREN ROSEN \ COLLEGIAN
The Ocandidates for SGA President and Student Trustee at the UVC 19 debate last night.

BRIAN McMANUS
For SGA President

Brian McManus, a sophomore double major in political science and history, has been active in politics since high school. Serving for two years as a staff member for congressman Ed Markey before arriving at UMass, McManus has held the position of Deputy Attorney General within the executive cabinet of SGA and is currently a senator representing Southwest Residential Area.

McManus feels that his biggest accomplishment within SGA was the formation of the Dining Services Committee.

"The Dining Services Committee is responsible for reviewing every aspect of dining services at UMass. I think that students and administration can work together as a team to effectively make changes at this University," McManus said.

Among the issues that will be targeted first during his administration should he get elected, McManus cited food services, safety on campus and social segregation.

"There are very few call boxes within the main campus areas and there are large areas with poor lighting," McManus said.

"Within the social circuit, white students go to parties with white students, and black students go to parties with black students. There isn't a great mixing with individuals," McManus said. "I would want to encourage ALANA organizations to continue diversity and end the social segregation that exists at UMass."

When asked about the current state of SGA itself, McManus felt that members need to remember that they are working for the students.

"SGA needs to be reminded regularly that they are working for students. Students elected them to help represent fellow students, not themselves," McManus said.

One of the main issues of the election concerns privatization and

Turn to MCMANUS, page 2

LIA WONG
For SGA President

Lia Wong, a junior communications major, became an SGA senator her sophomore year as a member of the ALANA caucus, and since then has been a senator for Northeast Residential Area, Chair of Public Policy and is currently Assistant to the SGA President.

Focusing on safety on campus, Wong is concerned about the lack of lights and call boxes near the Haigis Mall.

"One of the issues I'm concerned about is safety," Wong said. "There are places around Haigis Mall where there are no lights or call boxes. The escort service is inadequate. By the time you get to the Horse Shoe [in Southwest], you might as well have gotten mugged."

Wong would like to address the state of SGA and how she would help repair it if she is elected President.

"SGA needs to focus more on repre-

Turn to WONG, page 2

R.J. LEMAR
For Student Trustee

R.J. Lemar, a sophomore double major in political science and sociology, says that the most important issue of this campaign is to make sure that all students on campus are treated equally.

"The most important issue is the equality of students. We need to make sure administration keeps its deals with students," Lemar said. "We need to make sure tuition rolls back for in- and out-of-state students, deal with the accessibility of classes and make sure there is fair representation within all governing bodies."

Lemar has been active in Massachusetts state government in the past, working on Governor Weld's senate campaign over the summer, serving as a link to college students.

"It was my responsibility to call students and be the liaison between college students and the governor's office," Lemar said.

As a senator representing Orchard

Turn to LAMAR, page 2

ROB McDONALD
For Student Trustee

Rob McDonald, a first-year senior majoring in political science, served in the Executive Cabinet this year as Secretary of Administrative Affairs. In the past he has served as lieuterant governor and governor of Central Area Government, as an SGA senator and as a campus organizer for Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA).

The most important issues at hand in this election are tuition and fees, Housing Services and Food Services, according to McDonald.

McDonald cites his most important efforts in SGA as advocating for the 10 meal plan on weekends, lobbying at the State House for an increase in the state budget and working on a motion to end the cancellation fee charged to students moving off campus.

"UMass is the fourth most expensive flagship university in the nation. We can reduce the cost and still attain

Turn to MCDONALD, page 2

BRIAN TIRRELL
For Student Trustee

Brian Tirrell, a junior political science major, has served in the SGA since his freshman year, filling the positions of senator, Associate Speaker and is currently serving as Speaker of the Senate.

Feeling that students need more of a voice on campus, Tirrell plans to work towards more student and administration interaction.

"My whole philosophy in student government is you need to have students' voices heard. A lot of people want to ignore students and they perceive the University as administration," Tirrell said.

Tirrell's major efforts at formulating this change have been running the UMass Votes campaign, opposing the parking fee increase, being instrumental in the new Student Union proposal and getting a polling place on campus.

"It [an on campus polling place] has been talked about for 20 years. We finally did it. It was key to having students heard in town," Tirrell said.

When asked what issues he would tackle first if elected, Tirrell cited safety on campus, food and Administrative Redesign (ARD).

"We're attempting to design a one-stop place to process information even if you're at the Bursar's Office and you have a problem with the Registrar's. The students will be happier, and with the technology, there's no excuse to be bounced around," Tirrell said. "You can't just be a number. I want to be in that process and be very involved. They [students] are not here to navigate a maze of administration, they're here to get an education."

Tirrell has an extensive view on privatization, stating the many different areas of consideration, should UMass decide to privatize.

"I think the University should buy a franchise if it's determined by the students that they want one. But we need to include in this process student businesses, the students who have to eat the bad food, Auxiliary Services, which has

Turn to TIRRELL, page 2

Poll information for elections

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Elections begin today to decide the offices of Student Government Association (SGA) President, Student Trustee and area government positions for the 1997–1998 academic year.

The only contested race within area government is for Governor of Orchard Hill Residential Area, between Michael Dlott and Arvind Khanna.

The main issues fueling the Presidential and Trustee campaigns have been privatization, campus safety and tuition and fees. All of the candidates see the need for more student activism on campus as an integral part of completing their agendas, should they be elected.

Two referendum questions will also appear on the ballot concerning privatization and Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG).

Election polls will be open today and tomorrow from 11 a.m. –2 p.m. and from 4:30–7 p.m.

Polling stations for Orchard Hill Residential Area students will be located in the Franklin Dining Hall.

Students living in Sylvan and Northeast Residential Areas will be required to vote in Worcester Dining Hall.

Residents of Southwest South (Cance, John Quincy Adams, Pierpont, Moore, Patterson, MacKimmie, Washington and John Adams Residence Halls) will vote in Berkshire Dining Hall, while residents of Southwest North (Thoreau, Coolidge, James, Emerson, Kennedy, Melville, Prince and Crampton Residence Halls) will vote at Hampshire Dining Hall.

Commuter and Greek Area students are required to vote in either the Newman Center or the Hatch.

The winning candidates will be announced by SGA officials on Friday.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Mike Burke
Copy Editor: Lisa M. Oliveri
Photo Technician: Lauren Kosky
Production Supervisor: Marc Dionne
Production Staff: Matthew P. McCarthy, Liz Brown
Special Guest Star: Mr. Mark McGrath

■ debate

continued from page 1

dents supporting it."

Student apathy and SGA gridlock were also topics raised by the panelists. When asked how they would deal with bi- partisan bickering in the senate, the presidential nominees discussed recruitment ideas.

"I would recruit students to get involved [in SGA]," Wong said. "Students in Goodell [takeover] showed interest in getting involved, which I feel, is a trend that will continue."

Wong also said, as President, she would place advertisements with all media on campus to garner student participation.

McManus said that "political games" would have to cease in the senate for students to want to participate in SGA.

"If you pick up a Collegian on Thursday, all you read about is the games that occurred Wednesday night [in the Senate meeting]," McManus said. "We have to stop the games through responsible leadership."

UVC-TV 19 may rebroadcast the candidates debate throughout the elections. Contact the station for schedule information.

■ McManus

continued from page 1

whether it belongs at UMass.

McManus's stance is that if it is done in a orderly manner, it will benefit both students and the University.

"The students at UMass have been historically unhappy with food services at UMass," McManus said. "For the past 20 years the University has made promises to improve, which it hasn't fulfilled.

"I believe if private companies are brought in carefully without destroying student businesses, that the quality of life on campus will significantly improve.

"I understand the fear of student businesses, and the importance of them, however, with University support I believe private and student businesses can coexist effectively and benefit all students on campus," McManus said.

McManus says he is dedicated to fighting for diversity and will work to "force administration to uphold every agreement it makes with students."

■ McDonald

continued from page 1

University goals," McDonald said.

At the privatization rally held last month in the Student Union, McDonald came forward against privatization, but has since changed his stance.

"I'm in favor of privatization so long as there is student involvement," said McDonald.

As Trustee, McDonald explained that he will make the concerns of UMass Amherst students known at trustee meetings.

"As Trustee, advocating on tuition and fees, one of my plans is not to just advocate on the board, but make myself known at the State House as Trustee of UMass Amherst," McDonald said.

Recognizing that he will need student input to present campus opinions to the board, McDonald says he will frequently ask for student views.

"I think that there is really only so much I can do as one person, and students need to help me out by communicating with administration," McDonald said.

He agrees that efforts need to be made to increase diversity and tolerance at UMass and within SGA as well.

"The University is no where near where they say they are in terms of diversity," McDonald said. "I have seen things happen and it discouraged me.

"As far as SGA is concerned we need to start moving forward and start pro-student activism. This year's cabinet has been very strong, the cabinet for next year needs to continue its work," McDonald said.

McDonald is also interested in appointing students to University wide committees so that there is more student input on University issues.

"I want to have students on University wide committees so students will understand some of the processes of administration, and administration will see students thoughts and concerns," McDonald said.

■ Tirrell

continued from page 1

the job of supervising food distribution and the unions who, if privatization is done in the wrong way, could lose their jobs or their standards of living will go down," Tirrell said.

Asian, Latin American, African and Native American (ALANA) students are in need of more resources as well, according to Tirrell.

"ALANA students need to have additional resources and specific offices that they can approach to help solve problems with administration and in general," Tirrell said.

Tirrell hopes students will become more active in the running of the University in the future.

"Students aren't really that apathetic if you take the time to tell them the issues," Tirrell said.

■ Wong

continued from page 1

senting the students' voice on campus. We somehow deterred from that. Goodell was the beginning of the turnaround," Wong said.

Running on an unofficial ticket with Rob McDonald, Wong supports privatization as long as the safety of student- run businesses is preserved.

"I support privatization on the condition that jobs won't be affected," Wong said. "Students who will be affected will have full voice throughout the process. I would keep a tab on administration, I would talk to Chancellor Scott to make sure student businesses be on board."

If elected, Wong states that she will work to appoint more students to University-wide committees.

"There are numerous committees on campus that numerous students are interested in being on. As President, I will appoint and fill all committee seats," Wong said.

As a student who participated in the Goodell takeover, Wong says that she will inform the campus of what progress the administration is making towards the agreements.

"I want to provide weekly reports to campus. That way students will know what administration is doing and what SGA is doing. I'm definitely going to do this. I want to hold administration accountable for what they said in Goodell," Wong said.

As the only female and minority student running for the position of SGA president, Wong feels that this will be an important step for all minorities at UMass.

"I think that when I become President, it will set a precedence because I will be the first Asian American woman to fill that position," Wong said. "I think just by being actively involved and standing up for the rights of students, I will set an example for all people of color, regardless of gender, that anything is possible and that student involvement is vital to student voice."

■ Lamar

continued from page 1

Hill, Lemar feels that the most important motions he has worked on include increasing handicapped accessibility to the Mullins Center and allowing Jewish students to burn candles in their dorm rooms during Hanukkah.

If elected, Lemar states his goals for Trustee as making sure tuition and fees continue to roll back for everyone and assuring that issues of equality are adequately addressed.

"The Trustee needs to take issues his campus wants and present them to the Board of Trustees. We need to decide whether or not a public institution should set goals that may exclude underprivileged or traditionally overlooked students," Lemar said.

The issue of privatization remains a central issue in the McManus/Lemar campaign, and Lemar supports allowing privately run businesses to establish themselves on campus.

"I'm for privatization, but not against student businesses," Lemar said. "This is one of the few campuses that has successful student businesses. We can not have them [private businesses] directly competing with student businesses."

Within the SGA senate, Lemar would like to devote special attention to recruiting under-represented groups as senators.

"Women and minorities have not been represented in senate and we need to concentrate on hearing their voices," Lemar said.

Lemar explained that this will be accomplished through a reorganization of the senate so that senators represent their constituency more completely.

"Right now, it's so politically oriented that the benefit to students isn't clear. We need to reorganize and have more communication between a senator's constituency. Most people don't know who to go to if they have a problem on this campus," Lemar said.

Live life to the fullest!
A metal sculpture in Amherst displaying some important aspects of life.

A Branch Beyond
Silver Jewelry Specialists
Great Selection Low Prices
236 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 253-4997 Mon-Sat 11-6

We want you to write for us!
Call the Collegian at 545-3500

ATTENTION STUDENTS INTERESTED IN CROSS-CULTURAL EXPERIENCE!!

The International Programs Office is looking for motivated students to work either as 1, Peer Advisors for the 1997-98 academic year or 2, Orientation Week (August 24-29) student workers.

1. Peer Advisors. In this position, students will serve as mentors for new international students and UMass students who plan to study abroad. Additional responsibilities include work during orientation week as tour leaders for a variety of trips, as well as discussion leaders for a variety of workshops planned for 1997-98. The following is information on eligibility and the application process. To be eligible, you must be enrolled as a full-time student AND must plan to be enrolled as a full-time student in1997-98. All students- regardless of country of citizenship - are welcome to apply; preference will be given to upperclass (juniors/seniors) and graduate students. Work study eligibility is a plus. In addition:

You must be in good academic standing and continue in this status in 1997-98

International students must be in a visa status which permits on-campus employment.

U.S. students must have international experience (education, work or living abroad)

You must be available for an interview, a weekend retreat in April,1997, and you must agree to return to the University one week prior to the start of classes for the 1997 Fall Semester. You must also be available to work the full week of our orientation program, 23-29 August, 1997.

You will be expected to work 40 hours during the week of Orientation for new international students. You will also be expected to accompany new students on a trip to Boston on the Saturday immediately following Orientation Week. Additional responsibilities will be spread throughout the academic year.

You must have good communication skills.

Salaries will be small but expenses for trips and social event will be covered.

2. Orientation Week Workers. A small number of students will be hired specifically to work during the week of August 24-29, 1997. Please see Orientation week details as listed for Peer Advisors.
Salary for this week: $5.25/hour, up to 40 hours for the week.

APPLICATION PROCESS

*If you are interested in applying for either position, stop by our office, Room 469 Hills South, to pick up an application. Deadline for submitting applications is April 4, 1997,

WORDS & PICTURES MUSEUM
Last chance to see
Fax From Sarajevo
by Joe Kubert
Exhibit ends April 6th

Restless Joy Paul Mavrides
April 10th - June 1st
Thursday, April 10th
6:30-8:30 PM
Paul is the guest speaker at 2nd Creators' Forum
Saturday, April 12th
10:30 AM
Paul will conduct a tour of his exhibit for Museum Members and answer questions about his work
12 PM: Museum opens to the public
1-4 PM: Paul Mavrides signing - 4th Floor
6-9 PM: Restless Joy opening reception

140 Main St.
Northampton MA
01060 586-8545

A doggy, dog world
A dog sits in front of a restaurant waiting for his owner yesterday afternoon in Amherst.

Flames erupt from inmate's head

By Ron Word
Associated Press

STARKE, Fla. — A condemned murderer's black leather face mask burst into flames as he was electrocuted yesterday, prompting the attorney general to warn killers to stay away from Florida "because we may have a problem with the electric chair." The governor said the state will consider changing its method of execution after the grisly death of Pedro Medina, a Cuban refugee convicted of stabbing a teacher who had befriended him.

"We've had an occasion of smoke before," Gov. Lawton Chiles said. "But the question is really, 'Is this something that is torturous or painful?'"

However, Attorney General Bob Butterworth said Medina's gruesome end would be a deterrent.

"People who wish to commit murder, they better not do it in the state of Florida because we may have a problem with our electric chair," Butterworth said.

Medina, one of nearly 125,000 Cubans who came to the United States during the 1980 Mariel boatlift, was executed for stabbing a woman to death in 1982.

It was the second time an inmate's mask has burst into flame during a Florida execution. The first time, in 1990, executions were suspended for three months.

While there was no visible reaction from yesterday's 39 witnesses, some later said they were nauseated by the sight and the smell.

"It was something entirely out of the ordinary. I have witnessed 11 executions and have never seen anything like what we saw this morning," said a visibly shaken Gene Morris, spokesman for the Department of Corrections.

Medina, 39, had appeared calm, pursing his lips and looking up while he was strapped into "Old Sparky," the three-legged oak chair built in 1923. He never looked at the witnesses seated in front of him on the other side of a window.

"Pedro was somewhere else when he was in there," said the Rev. Glenn Dickson, who spent the night outside Medina's cell. "He told me he was not afraid of dying."

Medina's last words were: "I am still innocent."

Then the black leather mask was lowered over his face to conceal his expression from the witnesses, and 2,000 volts of electricity were sent through his body.

There was a small flicker on the right side of the mask and then orange and blue flames up to a foot long erupted and burned for about 10 seconds.

Tighter regulations on piercing proposed

By Trudy Tynan
Associated Press

CHICOPEE — This city is the latest Massachusetts community to regulate body piercing establishments and some now say it's time the state got involved.

Currently, you can get your nose, navel, eyebrows or tongue pierced in most Massachusetts cities and towns without anyone checking the cleanliness of the facilities and needles used.

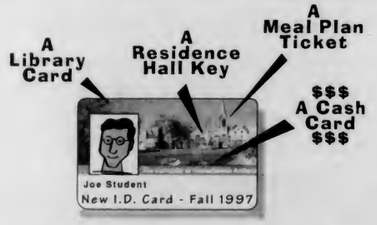
"There needs to be some regulation for the protection of the public," said state Rep. Michael Bellotti, (D-Quincy), who is sponsoring a bill directing the state Department of Public Health to come up with some guidelines.

At the same time, Bellotti said yesterday, he is wary of some of the local rules that have been adopted, contending they are aimed more at discouraging the craze among young people.

"We need to regulate a business that is sorely lacking in regulation, but at the same time we need to be reasonable about it," Bellotti said. "I intentionally didn't get too explicit in my bill, because I want the state health department to set its own standards. It has information that is not available to me."

Within the past two weeks, state legislatures in Alabama, Arizona, California, Delaware and Maine have debated regulations on body piercing. Bellotti said he expected committee hearings to be scheduled soon on his proposal.

Body piercers are outraged at some of the restrictions enacted by Massachusetts communities.



"It's nothing but a witch hunt," said Mik Miller, who owns a Quincy body piercing establishment. He is challenging the legality of portions of a Quincy law, adopted last month that would shut him down until he completes a 15-week anatomy course and serves an internship under a licensed body piercer.

"Of course, there isn't anyone with a license for me to study under," Miller said. "And I've been doing this for 20 years.

"It's a shame, because the industry needs regulations," Miller said. "But they shouldn't be written by people who are against it from the beginning and want to put us out of business."

ALANA GRADUATE STUDENT FORUM
"Beyond Ebonics"
A Conversation with
Dr. Orlando Taylor
Dean of the Graduate School
Howard University
and
Dr. Walter Wolfram
William C. Friday
Distinguished Professor
North Carolina State University
Dr. Harry Seymour (Moderator)
Chair Department of Communication Disorders
Date: Wednesday March 26, 1997
Place: Room 101 Campus Center
Time: 11:30 am - 1:30 pm
SPONSORED BY:
Afro-American Studies
ALANA Graduate Student Network
Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity
Communications Studies
Communication Disorders
Graduate School
Women's Studies
Graduate Student Senate
Linguistics
Women of Color Program
English Department
SGA

THE NEW I.D. CARD'S GOT EVERYTHING... EXCEPT A NAME!

ENTER OUR CONTEST TO NAME THE NEW STUDENT AND STAFF ID CARD COMING IN THE FALL!

The name should identify the card with UMass and also suggest its many uses, because it's a lot more than an ID card. It'll also serve as a library card, a Meal Plan ticket, a residence hall key, and a cash card for on-campus purchases. Entries will be judged by a five-member panel of staff and students.

Any actively enrolled UMass Amherst student is eligible to enter. Bring your entry to the ID Office, Franklin Dining Hall or e-mail your entry to name-the-card@admin.umass.edu. Entries must be received by 5pm on March 27, 1997.

Three winning entries will be chosen:
1st Prize: $100 gift certificate for Travel
2nd Prize: $50 gift certificate from the University Store
3rd Prize: $25 gift certificate from the Top of the Campus

entry form
Name_____
Local/Campus Address_____
Local Phone Number_____
Name the New I.D. Card:
_____

DROP OFF YOUR ENTRY AT THE ID OFFICE AND WHEN YOU COME IN, HAVE YOUR PHOTO TAKEN FOR YOUR NEW ID CARD... AVOID THE FALL RUSH!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Simbeliner Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prester Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Vote Wong & Tirrell

Today marks the first day of elections to choose the new Student Government President and Student Trustee. We hope students take the time to educate themselves on the individual candidates and issues, and cast their ballots.

The Collegian urges students to vote for Lia Wong for SGA President and Brian Tirrell for Student Trustee. Both students have continually proven their dedication and commitment to the betterment of students, from their terms in SGA to their recent participation in the Goodell occupation.

Wong has extensively prepared for her role as President by acting as Assistant to current SGA President Maurice Caston, as well as serving as the Chair of Public Policy and as a member of the ALANA Caucus.

The Collegian supports Wong's view on privatization and we commend her pledge to increase safety on this campus.

Like Wong, Tirrell has also been actively involved in campus politics; currently he serves as Speaker of the Senate, one of the most important and demanding jobs in the SGA.

Tirrell has already improved student life in numerous ways and we expect him to continue if he is elected. Examples of his on-campus activism include establishing an on-campus polling place and helping to register 10,000 students to vote as part of SCERA's campaign, "UMass Votes."

We urge UMass to vote for Lia Wong and Brian Tirrell.

The referendum questions

Besides the election of SGA President and Student Trustee, this year's ballot contains two referendum questions that deal with MassPIRG and privatization on campus [See page 3 for complete questions].

Question One: Privatization in the Student Union.

The Collegian urges students to circle #2 on the referendum which, at this time, would maintain a publicly run Student Union.

Before any definite decisions are finalized on this issue, greater discussion is needed.

Most importantly we must remember to protect student-run businesses such as Campus Design & Copy which would quickly go under if a corporation such as Kinko's was allowed into the Student Union.

UMass' primary function is to educate students and there is little question that students involved in a cooperatively run student business such as Earthfoods will learn far more than if that same student was microwaving Big Mac's for McDonald's.

But protection is only needed for student-run businesses. Allowing a Barnes & Noble to compete with the Textbook Annex should only help the University under the assumption that these private companies make a commitment to the University that all student workers are students first and workers second.

Question Two: MassPIRG

We do support the existence of MassPIRG on campus but we do not back the waivable fee as it currently stands and for this reason we urge students to vote "No" on Question Two.

There is little question that MassPIRG is a much needed organization in Massachusetts; and the local chapter is a part of a statewide network that has consistently advocated for environmental and social activism.

On the other hand, we can not endorse MassPIRG's waivable fee. We feel that the organization should seek a different means of funding such as a positive check off.

Referendum questions, such as this, do not accurately measure the actual support for MassPIRG; while a positive check off on tuition bills would serve this purpose.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian's editorial board

Our dying hospitals

Sam McAfee

The movement of the subway train was hypnotic as Jose stared out the window at the gray sky. The ride home from school never deviated from the norm: even the tone of the Orange Line announcer's voice seemed as though it was always the same.

Today had been an exciting day, since Jose had qualified for a scholarship that would enable his family to send him to Northeastern. His grades were good, which had already gained him acceptance to the university, and whatever the scholarship did not cover, his job at the video store would probably suffice as a payment option.

Jose lived in a run down tenement building on School Street in Roxbury, a few blocks from my house in fact, and I saw him almost everyday on the train ride home. His father had been killed long ago in an industrial accident at a GE plant in Lynn. Jose's mother worked two jobs to keep food in the mouths of Jose and his little sister. That and Jose's own employment secured the rent.

No one in the family had medical insurance. When Jose's sister had an ear infection several months ago, her mother took her to Boston City Hospital for treatment, because it was the only facility that would treat emergencies without approval from insurance providers. BCH was widely used by poor families in Boston.

"Jackson Square, next stop Stony Brook," the announcement wailed in its usual monotone.

Jose stood up and walked out into the muggy June air. He ascended the steps, passed through the turnstile and strolled out onto Center Street. It was a hot overcast afternoon, and since Jose was not in any hurry, he decided to walk up Columbus Ave. to Egleston Square for a soda, before turning down School Street.

It was busy in the square this afternoon, people bustling about, kids playing on the side walk. There was a pleasant feeling displayed on most faces. Jose was just about to enter the corner grocer when several loud cracking noises rang through the air, and something that felt like a hot knife hit him in the back and threw him to the sidewalk.

He could not see what was going on around him, but he could hear children crying, people yelling, the clinking of glass and the screeching of tires. He could not feel the pain just yet. His back was wet with his own blood, and he was beginning to feel cold even though it was 84 degrees.

It would be 20 minutes before paramedics would arrive on the scene and inform him that a .22 caliber bullet was lodged in his shoulderblade.

I step away from this scene, which I learned about the next day at school, to look from a slightly different angle at this problem. I mentioned that Jose does not have medical insurance. What do you think will happen to him?

As of this summer, the former Boston City Hospital was merged into the facilities of Boston University. It was hotly protested by the Service Employees International Union who represent the nurses and other service workers at the facility. Their contracts were in danger due to John Silber's anti- union policy. I was present at an event at Boston City Hall where union members and community activists performed an occupation, not unlike the student protest at Goodell, to pressure city officials not to approve the merger.

The story of BCH is replicating across the country all the time. In addition, the rise of HMOs (Health Maintenance Organizations), giant corporate health providers, will ensure that while people are dying in the streets, all that will guarantee proper treatment is the money to pay for it.

This, ladies and gentlemen, is what privatization is about, making money, not providing services. As with food services, so it is with health care. When hospitals are laying off physicians and hiring assistants to provide care, because it lowers costs, a doctor decides you don't need an important test because he can't justify the expense to his expense, that is bad management for the sake of saving a few bucks.

It is not necessary for the purposes of this column for you to find out the fate of young Jose. In fact the only reason you might care is that I have taken the time to introduce him to you. But the fact is that kids like Jose get gunned down in cross fire everyday. In addition to that, people in low income communities have medical emergencies all the time that without insurance, private hospitals will not treat. Privatization in health care is a cruel and greedy scheme that reeks of neoliberal economic interpretations of people's everyday need. We can allow our health to be translased into a matter of preserving the bottom line.

Sam McAfee is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

It's only a game

Mark McGrath

What a difference a year makes. Last March, you, me and almost every other UMass student were giddy with anticipation of the Final Four. Remember when we saw Marcus Camby as the toast of the town, not some second-rate clown? Remember when we thought Coach Cal was the man to end all men? Remember when all those rich people started giving us, the poor students of UMass, thousands of dollars for our tickets to the big game?

Those were the days.

Oh, what we didn't know, or should I say what we didn't acknowledge.

Since the high-water mark UMass basketball reached in the Meadowlands, much of its mystique has come crashing down before our very eyes. Shortly after the season ended, Camby flew the coop, leaving behind a mess that involved, among other things, blackmail, gold pendants, large sums of money and shady agents. And did I mention the hookers? It remains to be seen whether he also left a forfeited season which could take UMass basketball out of the record books for good.

Now Camby is sitting pretty across the border, playing basketball in Toronto, for a team called, get this, the Raptors. With the millions of dollars he's making, he can now afford his own gold pendants and hookers.

Calipari isn't doing so badly himself, outside of the fact that he has to work in New Jersey and has to deal with "Mexican idiots" [Calipari's own words]. Once revered as God by our campus and virtually the entire Western Massachusetts area, he high-tailed it out of town as soon as the roof started giving way, joining his buddy Marcus in the ranks of the NBA. How's that for loyalty?

And all those ticket-grubbing rich people could give a rat's ass about UMass.

Oh what a difference a year makes.

I cried when the basketball team bowed out of the tournament to Kentucky on that chilly Saturday evening a year ago. After that, I got drunker than I've ever been in my entire life. Then I cried more. We were so close. We had it in our fingertips, and then it was gone.

It's kind of funny how sports are able to do that, how they affect people the way they do. The basketball team captivated a college campus, an area, a state and eventually a whole region, pulling on emotional strings that haven't been reached in an awfully long time. I mean we hit the whole spectrum — pride, joy, ecstasy, sadness, disbelief, and eventually anger, which resulted in the Southwest rioting, causing over $10,000 in damage.

Watching bits and pieces of the tournament this year, I experienced mixed emotions. I remembered how nice it was to be on the top of the pile, but I also wonder if it was worth it. All the emotions we spilled were apparently spilled over the fate of a bunch of crooks with some good guys mixed in. Why do we allow this to happen for the sake of five tall men running around in silly uniforms?

Being swept up in the hype of the Final Four is not a phenomenon unique to our University. I see the same thing happening to the fans from Kentucky, Minnesota, North Carolina and Arizona as they make their way into Saturday's Final Four games. I wish I could tell them that it's not worth all the fuss, but as far as they're concerned basketball is the only thing in the world that really matters.

This year, the UMass community will not be riding the roller coaster, and for that the team's early exit may be seen as a gift. Instead, we have the opportunity to observe the effects of Final Four fever on the previously mentioned universities. They will paint their faces and their bare chests. They will be making lots of noise and many will call them a bunch of yahoos, but we will know better. If anybody knows how ordinary people turn into yahoos, it's the fans of UMass.

Eventually three of the four teams will reach the end of the line, and their fans will reach some of the very same realizations that UMass fans came to after last season, that their dream ride was too good to be true.

And folks in Arizona, and Kentucky, and Minnesota and North Carolina will be crying, and more will be getting really drunk, and maybe, just maybe, a few will stop to realize that after all, it's just a game.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Baby, I'm gonna miss you

Luke Meredith

This is the story of the passing of a tooth. My tooth. Tooth #23.

I'll start by giving a little background on the champ of all teeth, Tooth #23. It's the middle tooth on the bottom. Whether that's a bicuspid, a molar or whatever, I'm not sure. All I know is that it was on the front lines. It came to play every day. Every meal, it was there. Chewing, separating. Whenever I ate sunflower seeds, Tooth #23 was the one cracking it open. When I was a kid, it ripped open countless candy bar wrappers, chewed countless pieces of Bazooka, munched on countless Flavor-Ices.

It didn't share the glory of Tooth #7 and Tooth #16, who had the ability to open beer bottles (not exactly the brightest idea, but I could never get the lighter trick down), or Tooth #12, which got a filling when I was nine and was in the spotlight for a while. But Tooth #23 always got the first bite. It was always there for me.

I guess that's what makes it so hard to believe it's dead.

The story begins last Tuesday. I wake up in the middle of the night, because my front tooth hurts. I'm reasonably miserable, but this is nothing. I go downstairs, watch a little TV, go back to bed. Not too bad.

Wednesday. Tooth is getting worse. I spend the night playing NHL '96 and worrying about the tooth. But when I go to bed, I'm hoping it'll go away.

It doesn't go away.

1:00 a.m.. Wake up in a lot of pain. Take two Advil, go back to bed.

5:30 a.m. Wake up, it's even worse.

(By the way, do you know that Judith Light, the mom in "Who's The Boss", now hawks "Miracle Cream" on a late night infomercial? Apparently she had acne, and "Miracle Cream" fixed it, compelling her to tell the world. How far the mighty have fallen, I say.)

4:30 a.m. I go to Health Services. They give me some codeine and send me home.

Thursday. I see a dentist (By the way, how do you become a dentist? Do doctors pick on you? And, who's higher on the pecking order. Podiatrists, ophthalmologists or dentists? Just random thoughts), who tells me the problem is that I'm grinding Tooth #23 in my sleep. She says that it's caused by stress, and if I relax, the problem will go away.

Easy enough. I take the day off, go to the mall, buy something, come home and chill. Play more NHL '96. Tooth is starting to feel better. Kinda.

Friday. Tooth ain't better. I tried to ignore it, but when I drink a beer and the pain prevents me from finishing it, we have problems. Go to Health Services again, get more codeine. Codeine isn't enough by now.

Saturday. Pain is intense. I'm taking six Advil every two hours. My housemates are back from spring break, so of course I screw the pain and drink many beers with Slump.

Beer makes the tooth feel better (Actually, I was too drunk too feel much of anything).

Sunday. Pain is beyond belief. (Imagine someone seering your gums and thinking, "Hey, let's hang up a poster," and sticking the tacks in your gums.) I go to Health Services again, they prescribe pain killers. They do nothing. I have to go again at 7:30, because I have tears in my eyes from the pain. I finally get what I need. The nurse says, "Take off your pants, we have to put the shot in your butt." (I still think they were just checking me out, but that's another matter.)

Five minutes later, I'm in what I'd like to call "Happy Land." All of a sudden the room is floating, and I'm on a cloud. I can't see why both nurses and my housemate Sammy just laugh at me every time I speak. I go home and drift to sleep. My body is numb.

My teeth still hurt.

Monday. Wake up, guess what hurts. Yup, Tooth #23. By now, my gums are twice the size of my face, and I'm talking like Elmer Fudd, though I'm still in "Happy Land."

Go to the dentist in horrific pain. They take X-rays of the Tooth.

"We've found the problem, Luke. You tooth is dead."

And there it was. Tooth #23 is dead, and it was starting to kill the other teeth. It had to be dealt with.

So I had a root canal Monday. It wasn't that bad, except for the hole in Tooth #23 that was excreting dead tissue every five minutes. (I'm sorry guys, that was a little nasty.) I have to go back today so they can finish the job.

The pain has gone away for the most part. I can eat again, and I might go to class today. But Tooth #23 will not be forgotten. There's too much love for Tooth #23.

It was a good tooth. It never bit anyone. It did all it could to help the cause, and because I used it too much, it's dead. Oh sure, it's still there, like a dead tree, but it's not the same.

The physical pain of the tooth is gone, but the emotional pain remains, like the mournful ballad straining in the wind, struggling to...

OK, OK, it was just a tooth. But dammit, I'm still going to miss it.

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

McManus on Wong: "She can barely speak English"

To the editor:

This letter is regarding SGA Presidential candidate Brian McManus. I thought everyone should know about the incident that occurred on Monday. I was in the lobby of John Adams and Brian McManus and a friend of his were walking through. The friend asked if he [McManus] was worried about the debates that were to take place on Tuesday night. McManus replied that, no, he wasn't because, "she can barely speak English," referring to Lia Wong, the other SGA Presidential candidate. I just wanted anyone that was planning on voting in Wednesday's and Thursday's elections to be aware of this incident, and to take it into consideration when deciding whether or not Brian McManus is the type of person they want as their President.

Katie Stewart
Southwest

MassPIRG defends their existence

The Massachusetts Student Public Interest Research Group [MassPIRG] is a non-profit, student directed, student funded, statewide organization that works on environmental, consumer and democracy issues. For the past 25 years, MassPIRG has been representing students as citizens in the state and local community.

Last semester at UMass, students gathered over 1,500 signatures for a Toxics-Right-To-Know bill, collected over three tons of trash from the Amherst Conservation Area, raised over $2,000 for hunger and homelessness charities, and worked with the SGA and SCERA to register over 8,000 students to vote.

This semester, the MassPIRG chapter is working to increase recycling by updating the Massachusetts Bottle Bill and continuing our efforts to fight hunger and homelessness. The chapter is also working on a Clean Air and Alternative Transportation campaign and is coordinating a Five College Earth Day Celebration on the Amherst Common.

Because MassPIRG is a statewide network, the efforts of UMass-Amherst students are joined by the efforts of students at 23 other state, community and private colleges. The students at these campuses learn essential organizing skills while working to make a real impact on state issues. MassPIRG is coordinated statewide by the State Board of Directors. The Student PIRG board is made up of elected representatives from each campus to make decisions on campaigns, issue positions, and budgetary concerns. A major strategy of the State Board has been to hire campus organizers to work with campus students. You may have met the UMass campus organizer, Melanie Undem. We think she's great. Melanie is a trained professional capable of teaching us skills needed to be effective on issues we care about as well as motivating the chapter as a whole.

MassPIRG is funded through a $5 waivable fee on the tuition bill. Every two years students decide whether or not to continue supporting the UMASS chapter through a vote during Student Government elections taking place March 26 and 27. This allows the majority of students to effectively fund the organization while allowing the minority to chose not to support and waive the fee. Any organization can go through the referendum process and put a waivable fee on the bill.

One of the decisions the UMass Chapter is most proud of is the decision to pool our resources statewide. We know that UMass, acting alone, could never accomplish our goals, like passing the Updated Bottle Bill. We also know that UMass has an abundance of resources and can help support several other chapters in addition to our own. By pooling our resources statewide, all chapters benefit from an effective student network for students' concerns as Massachusetts citizens.

UMass Amherst–Board of Directors Representatives of MassPIRG

Doonesbury Flashbacks

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Punk godfathers hit Pearl St.

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

The Descendents are back. Of course, the common question following such a statement is "Who the hell are they?" To say that they were just another '80s punk band is to do them a grave injustice; the Descendents' influence has played a large role in determining the course of alt-rock in the '90s. To put it bluntly, if the Descendents had never designed the blueprint for catchy, melodic pop-punk, bands such as Green Day and the Offspring would simply not exist.

The Descendents emerged from Orange County, Calif., in the late '70s. Formed by drummer Bill Stevenson, the band's first release was the "Ride The Wild" single in 1978. However, the addition of singer Milo Aukerman in 1980 completed the Descendents' creative axis. Milo's "anyone can sing" vocal style and "everyman" persona coupled with Stevenson's caffeinated, relentless drumming defined the band's sound and set the precedent for the remainder of their career.

Along with Milo came the concept of "All" — the total extent. Using copious amounts of coffee as fuel, the band began to write seconds-long songs about fishing and food in addition to adolescent rants about girls and how they couldn't get any. Their first two releases with Milo, the Fat EP and 1982's full album, Milo Goes To College, featured such blasts of "All" as "I Like Food" and "Weinerschnitzel," as well as the anthems "Hope," "My Dad Sucks," and their scathing condemnation of Southern California's homogenous middle-class wasteland, "Suburban Home."

After a three year hiatus (Milo, in fact, did go to college), the Descendents returned in 1985 with I Don't Want To Grow Up, perhaps the finest punk album of the decade. The raw thrash of their earlier releases was tempered with a large dose of pop nirvana; from the unabashed sentimentality of "Silly Girl," "Good Good Things" and "In Love This Way" to the lifestyle reaffirmation of "Pervert," "My World," their theme "Descendents" and the title track, "Grow Up" still stands as their masterpiece.

1986 saw the release of Enjoy!, which would match its predecessor if not for the thin scatological humor of the title track and the two "Orgo" entries. "Kids" is further testimony to the mystical power of the coffee bean; "Green," "80s Girl," and the thrashy "Hurtin' Crue" continue the social condemnation theme evident throughout all their work; "Cheer" and "Get The Time" are both endearingly poppy odes to girls; and "Sour Grapes" is perhaps one of the greatest put-downs of a member of the opposite sex in the rock n' roll canon. Throw in an ace cover of the Beach Boys' "Wendy" and Enjoy! truly lives up to its name.

One of the defining characteristics of the Descendents was their ever changing line-up. Although Aukerman and Stevenson remained constant, the guitar and bass personnel changed almost annually. In late '86, though, Salt Lake City natives Stephen Egerton and Karl Alvarez took over the instrumental duties and provided the band with their strongest sound yet, as evidenced on 1987's All LP.

All could have been easily titled Milo Goes Back To College, since that's what he did shortly after the album's release. However, the Descendents' swansong featured some of their best moments. From the one-second long title track to the self-deprecating "Coolidge" ("I'm not a cool guy anymore/as if I ever was before") and an ode their "D–o–d–g– e–R–a–m" in "Van" through the pop bliss covering the good and bad side of relationships ("Cameage" and "Clean Sheets," respectively), All sounds much more assured than their previous releases. And the concept of "All" is laid out in the "All–o–gistics," a list of commandments to follow in one's Allular quest. Most important: "Thou shalt not partake of the dreaded decaf." Amen.

However, after '87's Finall tour, Milo left the band to pursue a degree in biochemistry. Two live albums from the last tour were released the following year; Liveage is a dynamic collection of "greatest hits" and Hallraker fills in the remaining gaps. 1991's Somery is a more conventional best–of compilation, featuring tracks from 1980 through 1987. But the big surprise was last year's Everything Sucks, a bona–fide Descendents reunion album.

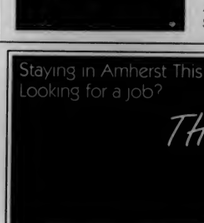
Shortly after Milo left the Descendents in '87, the band replaced Milo and continued on under the surprising moniker of All. Although All's output was generally solid, it never matched the intensity or had the charismatic appeal of the vintage Descendents catalogue. Thus, when word appeared that the now PhD–holding Milo was coming back to the fold, skepticism ran amock.

All (um...) fears were washed away with the release of the album, though. Everything Sucks doesn't, to say the least. Instead, all of the old topics are revisited. "She Loves Me" "Hateful Notebook" and "Rotting Out" are the prerequisite "girl" songs; "This Place Sux" deals with Milo in the drearily adult workplace; "We" is a genuine love song; and "Coffee Mug" is, as the song says, "liquid proof" as to what keeps four guys well into their thirties so damn hyper. Musically, the band has never sounded as tight, blending melodic pop sensibilities with manic punk roar. Nearly 10 years after their demise, the Descendents returned with an album stronger than most of their original work.

COURTESY EPITAPH RECORDS

Ladies and Gentlemen, the Descendents — Left to right: Milo Aukerman, Shephen Egerton, Karl Alvarez and Bill Stevenson.

And what better way to announce said return than with a tour? The Descendents are even more impressive on stage than record. Milo is still the same bespectacled geek he was as a teenager, and the band's complex interplay is tighter than ever. Their show in Providence last December left me speechless. The Descendents seems to be the best show to come up the pike all semester (thank you, Beck). And this is one gig which is not to be missed. Don't pass up the chance to see a legendary band touring behind what was this writer's pick as the best album of '96 — after all, you never know when Milo might decide to get another degree.



The Descendents are playing tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton with The Suicide Machines and Shades Apart. Doors open at 7:30. Call the club for ticket information at 584–7810.

Grad School?
Yes. The Graduate School at UMass Lowell.
Lowell? Why Lowell?!
Choices, quality affordable. They're connected to industry and doing mega research.
What about Getting a job?
I'll finish with a very competitive advantage, have industry connections and begin a career, not just a job.
...Hmm...
THE GRADUATE SCHOOL
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS LOWELL
ONE UNIVERSITY AVENUE • LOWELL, MA • 01854
800-656-GRAD
gradsch@woods.uml.edu • www.uml.edu/grad
Complete Graduate Catalog at Web Site

When You Shop at Atkins, Your Easter will be Pretty, Nutritious & Delicious
Pretty is from our FLORAL DEPARTMENT
Traditional Easter Plants & Colorful Blooming Spring Plants
Lots to Choose From!
EASTER LILIES, TULIPS, HYACINTHS, PRIMROSES, AZALEAS, HYDRANGEAS!
Beautiful BASKET ARRANGEMENTS with Spring Blossoms & Pussywillows
Delicious Beatrix Potter's PETER RABBIT Flower Pot Bouquet
NUTRITIOUS IS FROM... PRODUCE
Asparagus, Strawberries and All the Traditional plus SPECIALS 3/21-3/27
SWEET CALIF CARROTS 99¢ 3-lb pkgs
Young, Tender SUMMER & ZUCCHINI SQUASH 49¢ lb.
New Crop, Young, Tender GREEN BEANS 99¢ lb.
Fresh Ground DOMIN'S HORSERADISH 99¢ 6 oz.
SWEET POTATOES 39¢ lb.
Fresh BEETS 49¢ lb.
ATKINS FARMS Country Market
Corner of Bay Road & Rte. 116, South Amherst 253-9528
Open Daily 8AM-7PM
CLOSED EASTER SUNDAY
DELICIOUS FROM OUR BAKERY
Hot Cross Buns, Babka Bread Cream, Meringue & Fruit Pies, Dinner Rolls
Whole Grain Breads, Coffeecakes, Muffins & Donuts, Assorted Pastries
Decorated Cakes of Baskets, Eggs, Bonnets & Rabbits, Cheesecakes
MORE NUTRITIOUS & DELICIOUS FROM ... MEAT & SEAFOOD
Scallops, Salmon, Scrod, Shrimp, Haddock & Pollock
COB SMOKED HAMS
SPIRAL CUT HONEY HAMS AND...
SPECIALS 3/21-3/27
Atkins Angus BOTTOM ROUND $1.99 lb.
Atkins Extra Trim LAMB LEGS $3.49 lb.
Partyka or Blue Seal EASTER KIELBASA $2.49 lb.
Triple M Shankless EASTER HAMS $2.39 whole $2.59 half
DELI
Veggie Stuffed PEPPERS $2 ea.
TOFU SALAD $3.25 lb.

Campus Activities Presents
"Something Every Friday"
Comedian
Michael Dean Esters
March 28, 1997 8pm
Bluewall Cafe • FREE
Michael's energy creates a high speed delivery that relies on a twisted intellect and good material without using bad language to captivate audiences.

For more information check out our website:
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calendar.htm

The movie "Mars Attacks" will be shown immediately after the performance.

This program made possible by a Grant from the Auxiliary Services Office, the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs and the Daily Collegian.

Staying in Amherst This Summer?
Looking for a job?
THINK SCH!
Full & Part Time Jobs Are Available Working For Summer Conference Housing

SMART CHOICES FOR Summer
Work with UCS in Providing Residence Hall Accommodations to over 70 Conference Groups Meeting at Umass This Summer
Many Different Types of Jobs are Available
Applications and Job Descriptions are Available at the Conference Services Offices Room 918-Campus Center Ninth Floor
Completed Applications are Due By Friday, April 11, 1997

With revamped lineup, UK back

By Mike Embry
Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Kentuckians have a penchant for giving nicknames to their favorite University of Kentucky basketball teams.

It started in 1948 with the Fabulous Five. Along came the Fiddlin' Five in 1958. Rupp's Runts captured their hearts in 1966. The Unforgettables emerged in 1992. And then the Untouchables from last year's national championship team.

And this season?

"Somebody gave me this nickname, I think it's more the Unbelievables because I don't think I quite believe it," said Kentucky coach Rick Pitino, who picked up the label from a Danville (Ky.) Advocate-Messenger sports writer.

It does seem unlikely that the Wildcats, who play Minnesota in the semifinals Saturday night in Indianapolis, would be in position to defend their national title.

Four players from last year's team that finished 34-2 are playing pro ball. Another player from that team was redshirted and another transferred. And midway through the season, leading scorer Derek Anderson went down with a knee injury.

But Kentucky (34-4) is two games away from becoming only the second team since UCLA in 1973 to repeat as national champion. "This team has played a top five schedule, and being young, I think they've accomplished more than any basketball team I've coached," said Pitino, who has his third team in five years in the Final Four. "The only one that would rival this team is Providence" in 1987.

Even the players are surprised by how they progressed during the season.

"We've come through it all and we're in a position now that nobody thought we would be in, especially when Derek went down," said guard Cameron Mills. "If we can pull off two more victories, then I would definitely agree with that nickname."

"I think when Derek went down everybody started doubting us," Allen Edwards said.

"It's pretty unbelievable. A lot of people didn't think we could do it."

Through the NCAA tournament, Pitino has reminded the Wildcats that they should play like defending champions.

"He says, 'You're the defending national champs, and until they beat you, you're still going to be that," said forward Scott Padgett.

"I think he's been focusing in on letting us know that everybody on this team is talented, and if we go out there and focus in shutting the other team down, then we can win this thing again."

Now the Wildcats return to the site where they opened the season with a 79-71 overtime loss to Clemson.

"The five weeks before that game and right after that game I thought we were in serious trouble," Pitino said.

"I thought it was going to be a .500 season or a little bit better, because we'd come on at the end of the year.

"We were very green and didn't practice well. From that point to this point, I'm very, very pleased. I'm very proud of how the players dedicated themselves to be a great basketball team."

MLB on a trading frenzy

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

Kevin Elster had seen his share of ballplayers, having spent time in eight different big league systems in the past five years. That, however, did not prepare the shortstop for what he saw — or didn't see — when he walked into the Pittsburgh clubhouse for the first time. The Pirates had 70 players in camp, most in the majors, yet Elster did not recognize a single face.

"It's been a strange spring, but I'm getting used to that," said Elster, who had 99 RBIs for Texas last season.

Because as Elster and everyone else in baseball knows, it's hard to keep track of who's where these days.

The big names, that's simple. Even casual fans probably know that Albert Belle signed with the Chicago White Sox, Roger Clemens took off to Toronto and Jose Canseco is back in Oakland.

The most active teams were easy to track, too. The Florida Marlins signed Bobby Bonilla, Moises Alou, Alex Fernandez and manager Jim Leyland. The New York Yankees lost World Series MVP John Wetteland (to Texas), Jimmy Key (to Baltimore) and Jim Leyritz (to Anaheim).

And the big trade Atlanta and Cleveland made Tuesday was major news. The Braves sent David Justice and Marquis Grissom to the Indians for Kenny Lofton and Alan Embree.

But what about Luis Polonia? OK, it's a trick question — he just signed with the expansion Tampa Bay Devil Rays, who assigned him to Mexico City while waiting to join the AL next season.

All in all, though, it takes more than a scorecard. New Pirates manager Gene Lamont stuck a printed roster in his back pocket, helping him identify his young club.

Pittsburgh moved so many players in the offseason that it confused outfielder Al Martin.

"I reported on the first day of spring training, looked around and wondered where everybody was," he said. "It was like I'd been traded to another team."

Plenty of players were on the go this winter.

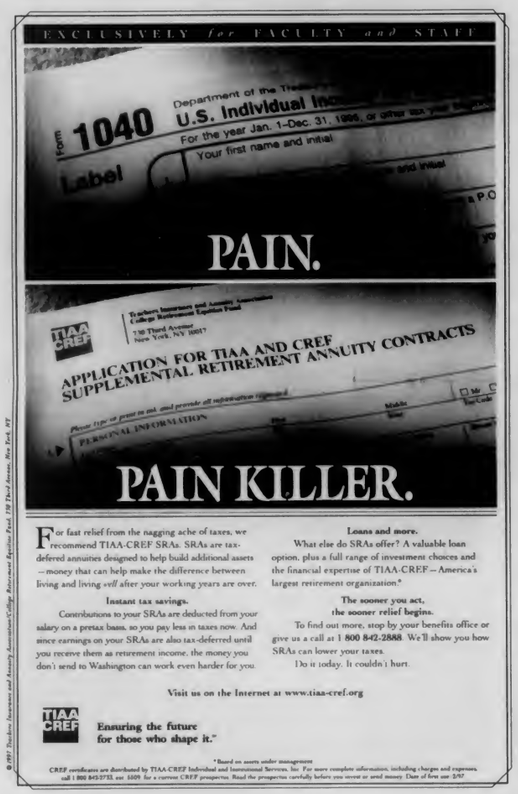
Matt Williams was traded to Cleveland by San Francisco, which completely rebuilt its infield with J.T. Snow, Jeff Kent, Jose Vizcaino and Mark Lewis. Former AL batting champion John Olerud was traded from Toronto to the New York Mets and Chili Davis was swapped from Anaheim to Kansas City for Mark Gubicza.

Among the free agents, Delino DeShields is St. Louis' new leadoff man, Steve Avery is pitching for Boston and Terry Steinbach is catching for Minnesota. Mike Bordick is in Baltimore, playing shortstop with Cal Ripken now at third base.

Eddie Murray took his 500 home runs and 3,000 hits to Anaheim. Lee Smith and his record 473 saves signed with Montreal, which lost closer Mel Rojas to the Cubs.

Deion Sanders (Cincinnati) returned from the NFL and Shane Mack (Boston), Scott Cooper (Kansas City) and Darrin Jackson (San Francisco) came back from Japan.

Clemens' new teammates in Toronto include Benito Santiago, plus three players the Blue Jays got in a trade with Pittsburgh - Carlos Garcia, Orlando Merced and Dan Plesac.



"It's different," said Clemens, who had spent his whole 13-year career with the Red Sox. "I've seen most of these guys, but there are a few new ones I'm getting to know."

Jay Bell and Jeff King had the benefit of knowing each other when they were traded from Pittsburgh to Kansas City for a package that included Joe Randa.

Bell and King have played together in the majors and minors since 1989, and their wives and children are best friends. Bell's 5-year-old daughter, Brianna, began weeping when she heard they were moving to a new city. Then he was told King and his family were going, too.

"She immediately stopped crying and asked what the color of our new uniform was," Bell said.

End Adv weekend editions, March 29-30.

For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets – money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.

Instant tax savings.
Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pretax basis, so you pay less in taxes now. And since earnings on your SRAs are also tax-deferred until you receive them as retirement income, the money you don't send to Washington can work even harder for you.

Loans and more.
What else do SRAs offer? A valuable loan option, plus a full range of investment choices and the financial expertise of TIAA-CREF – America's largest retirement organization.*

The sooner you act, the sooner relief begins.
To find out more, stop by your benefits office or give us a call at 1 800 842-2888. We'll show you how SRAs can lower your taxes.
Do it today. It couldn't hurt.

Visit us on the Internet at www.tiaa-cref.org

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.

*Based on assets under management

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2733, ext. 5509, for a current CREF prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money. Date of first use: 2/97

© 1997 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Fund, 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY

Summer Financial Aid Application Information

Are you a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass Amherst?

DO YOU NEED CASH?

Will you be taking summer classes through Continuing Education?
Are you going on an approved summer international exchange program through IPO?
Will you be working on a graduate dissertation this summer?

If the answer is Yes, and you would like to apply for summer aid, stop by Financial Aid Services to pick up an application. Deadline: April 18, 1997. Late applications will not be accepted.

Financial Aid Services, 243/255 Whitmore Administration Building, Amherst MA 01003, (413) 545-0801.

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS

STILL TIME TO ENTER
Softball (M/W/C).....A.S.A.P.
Soccer (C).....A.S.A.P.
Spring Volleyball (C).....A.S.A.P.

GET THOSE FORMS IN BY
Badminton Doubles (M/W/C)....3/31

PAID OFFICIALS NEEDED FOR SOFTBALL AND SOCCER. CALL FOR CLINIC DATES.

Don't Miss The Action
For entry forms and info
545-2693
545-0022

DAILY CLASSIFIED SPECIALS

Monday: Apartment for Rent
Tuesday: For Sale
Wednesday: Personals
Thursday: Auto for Sale

Call us at 545-3500 or visit us at our Newstand or at our Campus Center Basement Office

Student 10¢ a word

TOC Bowl & Grill
11TH FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER (413) 545-3511

Promo Night At The TOC
Tonight at 9:00 PM

&

★★★★★
THE BEST BEER IN AMERICA

11th Floor Campus Center Hours: Mon-Fri 4:00-12:30 Sat 5:00-Close

■ hokey

continued from page 10

Unfortunately for BU, the hare smoked the tortoise when these teams met last year. The early bird got a big juicy worm that could make any fly fisherman jump for joy. Just 4:57 into the game BU was down two-love and searching for shelter. The Terriers tried a comeback, but in the thick of the evening when the dealing got rough, [Michigan] was too pat to open and too cool to bluff.

Expect the same this year. Shawn Bates can only have so many short-handed breakaways. Chris Drury can only get so many three-on-three overtime goals. Michigan has 11 players who have already been drafted by NHL teams, and seven players with 21 or more goals, both of which have to be some sort of record.

A more experienced BU team will fare better than in last year's epic shutout, but expect the lower line matchups to settle the titanic East–West dispute. BU lacks depth this year while no collegiate hockey team and three quarters of the NHL teams don't have depth like Michigan, which should overpower the Terriers in the end. Scarlet Begonias are a touch of the blues after all. In this case, the scarlet will be a more Dylanesque tangled up in blue.

It could be an illusion, but I might as well try: This is precisely what so many New Hampshire and Clarkson players, now residing in insane asylums felt, when looking at wide open top right hand corners of net against CC. Judd Lambert awed the Worcester Centrum crowd at the East Regionals with one of the best glove hands this side of Ken Griffey Jr. He carried the arm low all weekend, taunting opposing snipers only to show them up like Susan Lucci at the Emmys.

Make no qualms about it. CC is a tremendously talented team that's exceptionally well-balanced in a classic pro-form style. But, without Lambert's stellar effort, and NHL-caliber glove hand, all CC would be seeing of Milwaukee this week is a "Laverne & Shirley" rerun and cans of MGD.

I had one of those flashes, I'd been there before: En route to claiming last year's title Michigan defeated Minnesota in the quarterfinals, BU in the semis and CC in the national championship game.

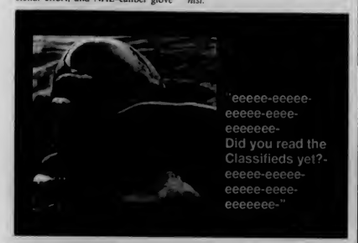
This year the Wolverines again knocked off their rivals from the Twin Cities to advance to their fifth final four in six years, where they will again meet the Terriers. The Tigers could again be Michigan's final opponent, provided they take the fight out of the Sioux.

• More deja vu came out of this year's tourney back East, where the Pioneers of Denver blazed a familiar trail. In 1995 DU got shipped East to play a UNH team that had been upset in its conference tournament and faced a two–week layoff. DU crushed the 'Cats 9–2 and then lost narrowly to Hockey East champion Maine the next night.

Last weekend, DU shocked the 'Cats of Vermont, a team given two weeks off after getting bounced from the ECAC tourney early by Princeton, before falling narrowly in overtime to HE champ BU the next night.

The sky was yellow and the sun was blue: So in summary, Michigan might not claim the national title Saturday afternoon. So what if they've won their five CCHA and NCAA playoff games by a combined score of 36–8 — a rare strain of the Ebola virus might break out in Milwaukee. Fire, flood, earthquakes, locusts, tornados or a Richard Simmons locker room speech would take care of it.

But, in all seriousness, the following is a list of reasonably conceivable ways the Wolverines will get their hopes shreaded:



Enough said.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

The boys of summer?
While it may not feel like baseball weather yet, the UMass squad returns to Earl E. Lorden Field tomorrow when they face Holy Cross at 3 p.m.

COLLEGIAN FILE

"eeeee-eeeee-eeeee-eeee-eeeeeee-
Did you read the Classifieds yet?-
eeeee-eeeee-eeeee-eeee-eeeeeee-"

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

TONITE
LIVE MUSIC
Featuring
TRICK KNEE
-The Music of Sex-
9:30-1:00

Drink Specials
Captain Morgan & Coke - 16 oz - 2.00
Sloe Gin Fizz - 16oz - 2.00
Rolling Rock -12oz Bottles - 1.50
Red Dog - 16 oz Draft - 1.50

fun food spirits THE PUB
15 East Pleasant St.

Today's Baseball Game Against Holy Cross will be played tomorrow at Earl E. Corden Field at 3 P.M.

Hit a HOMERUN for SPORTS!

Alfredo's
PHOTOGRAPHIC ART-LOCAL AMHERST PHOTOS MAKE GREAT GRADUATION GIFTS
SPORTS PHOTOS & POSTERS
39 S. PLEASANT ST. 413 - 253 - 1707
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

Hewlett-Packard — Performer of the year.

We like the sound of that.

Hewlett-Packard, the world's most admired technology company, is also Forbes magazine's 1996 Performer of the Year. We are a world leader in the design, manufacturing and distribution of computer and electronic test and measurement equipment because of a core set of performance-based values we call "The HP Way." Currently, we have employment opportunities available for Electrical Engineering majors (BS, MS, or Ph.D) in the following departments.

- Research and Development
- Manufacturing
- Marketing
- Technical Support
- QA
- Custom Solutions

Successful candidates must have excellent interpersonal, problem solving, and written/verbal communication skills. Individual must be self-motivated, detail-oriented, and able to work in a team environment.

Interested candidates please contact the University Career Center and meet with our hiring managers on campus April 8, 1997. Anyone interested in meeting with the hiring managers are invited to attend a social gathering Monday, April 7th. It will held in Room #903 from 6:00 pm to 8:00 pm. To learn more about HP and our employment opportunities, visit our Homepage on the World Wide Web at: http://www.jobs.hp.com Hewlett-Packard Company is an equal opportunity employer dedicated to affirmative action and work force diversity.

HEWLETT PACKARD

QUIT FOOLING AROUND!!

Feeling LOST and CONFUSED?

Come on down to the Collegian's SPORTS... We'll show you the way!

ZANNA downtown Amherst

VILLAGES
FULL SERVICE HAIR SALON
Special Student Rate on Fridays!
Shampoo, Cut, Blowdry Normally $20.00 for Students W/ I.D. ONLY $15.00
Located in Thorne MarKet Northampton 586-5500

Knowledge Grows Here!

Summer Session at Stony Brook

Terms start June 2 and July 14
260 courses in 40 subjects
Day and evening classes
Low NYS tuition
Live on campus or commute

Please send me the 1997 Summer Session Bulletin, or check out our web page at Http://www.sunysb.edu/summer/

Name
Street/Box No.
City State Zip
Telephone Area of interest
School currently attending Anticipated year of graduation

STONY BROOK STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK

Mail coupon or call 24 hours 1-800-559-7213.
E-mail: summerschool@ccmail.sunysb.edu
Or write: Summer Session Office, Dept. CN
University at Stony Brook, Stony Brook, NY 11794-3370

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Looking for a home away from home? Come to Sigma Kappa Open Rush Mon 3/24 5-7pm (Dinner), Tues 3/25 6-8pm , Thurs 3/27 6-8pm Please call 256-6887 to RSVP. Located behind Hillel House.

AUTO FOR SALE

1992 Ford Explorer 4x4, A/C, 5-speed, 7 door, 90K, looks and runs excellent. $9500. 549-6994

1984 Ford T-Bird auto trans, A/C, 5.0L V8, 59,500 miles. Telephone (413)253-7036 $2000 or B/O

EMPLOYMENT

Sales Reps Expanding company seeks motivated people to earn extra money. Full or Part Time. Will train (413)732-0699

Leasing Agents Full and Part Time for the busy summer season. Must be outgoing, friendly, and willing to work many hours. Responsibilities include collecting rent, processing applications, answering phones and general clerical work. Please apply in person at Cliffside Apartments between 1-4pm. No phone calls please. EOE

College Students!
Summer Airline Positions
Excellent pay/benefits
Call today for more information
(504)429-9229 Ext. 5016A11

Crabapple White Water Looking for one person to greet trips. Work in restaurant and retail store. Full-Time Summer Job. Some positions. Looking for multi-talented, friendly person. (413)625-2286

EMPLOYMENT

$Opportunity$ Looking for several exciting, enthusiastic, and dedicated people to expand an already lucrative market. Great opportunity for those who are serious. Interested persons call Todd at (413)739-4869

Summer in Maine- Camp Androscoggin for boys needs staff to teach tennis, soccer, lacrosse, baseball, swimming, sailing, archery, photography, nature, fishing, mountain biking, art, ropes, radio. HAVE FUN. Have an impact. Write, E-mail, or call collect: 601 West Street, Harrison, NY 10528 (914)835-5800 http://www.coolworks.com/showme/camp/andro.

Earn great money and valuable Sales/Marketing experience. Meremink's Memoboards are coming to UMass! We need one highly motivated individual to direct our sales project. Contact David at (800)563-6654

Delivery or Kitchen Help Must be able to work 20 hours/week. Apply at D.P. Dough

Amherst Leisure Services is now accepting applications for summer positions. Aquatics positions: Pool Maintenance Supervisor, Canoe Instructors, Assistant Pool Manager, Lifeguards, Swim Instructors, and Cashiers. Day Camp Positions: Camp Counselors, Special Needs Coordinator/Supervisor in Mainstream setting, Special Needs Counselor/Aides in Mainstream setting, Camp Art Director, Camp Resource Manager. Sports Positions: Ball Field Maintenance, Youth Tennis Instructors. Applications are available at the Town of Amherst Human Resources and Leisure Services Offices. Return completed application by the preferred deadline of 3/31/97 to: Town of Amherst Human Resources Office, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst, MA 01002. An EO/AA Employer

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Assistants Wanted- Fall 1997 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office, get hands-on experience in the Legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the Legal profession necessary— training provided. Stop by the office today and pick up an application. 922 Campus Center

Technical Support/ISP Looking for a great part-time job? We are a local, progressive, internet service provider that is looking for Quality, Energetic, and Reliable persons to join our team. Requirements: experience in Windows '95, Windows 3.1, Mac, Dialup Networking and TC PIP. Call our job hotline today! (413)587-4333 or e-mail jobs@crocker.com

Cruise Lines Hiring Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel (Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary ($19)918-7767 ext. C180 (Member, Better Business Bureau CARE Program)

Alaska Employment Earn up to $3000-$5000+/month in fisheries, parks, resorts, airfare, food/lodging! Get all the options. Call ($19)918-7767 ext. A180

Drivers Wanted. Apply at Pringche's between 2:00pm. and 5:00pm. No phone calls.

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group., 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. CS0017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Sugarloaf Estates Ultra modern, two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Now leasing Spring and Fall. Call 665-3856

Summer Rental- West Hyannis Port Cape Cod three bedroom. Walk to Craigville Beach. Available 5/25-8/31. (508)778-6519

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Water-front houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

HOUSE FOR RENT

Uptown, Great location! Corner of Kellogg St. Downstairs, great for two people. $500/month. 549-6265 Summer/Fall

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT
30 hours, $395
American Academy
1-800-808-Prep
(please leave your name and number)

MUSICIANS

DRUMMER WANTED
Punk/Ska Band 25 Lire needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming. Call Dave and Ryan 665-9112

MISCELLANEOUS

Fundraiser- Motivated groups needed to earn $500+ promoting AT&T, Discover, gas and retail cards. Since 1969, we've helped thousands of groups raise the money they need. Call Gina at (800)592-2121 ext. 110. Free CD to qualified callers.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Two bedroom apt. ASAP! Mill Valley Estates. Rent negotiable. Call 253-0582

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at: 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Photophile? Me too. I'll pose, you shoot. Iris 587-0850

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

3 bedroom Puffton available 6/1. 549-5941

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T Europe $169 O/W Fly the world dirt cheap. DNE WORLD TRAVEL 587-0001

Party Weekend in Vermont April 4-6, only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

ALL ARE WELCOME
FREE ADMISSION
FREE COMMUNICATIONS

SUMMER CAMP COUNSELORS!!

OVER 100 POSITIONS OPEN IN BASEBALL, BASKETBALL, GOLF, GYMNASTICS, HOCKEY, LACROSSE, SAILING, SOCCER, SWIMMING, TENNIS, WATER-SKI

AMERICA'S PRE-MIER CAMPS WINADU FOR BOYS DANBEE FOR GIRLS IN WESTERN MASS

SALARY/ROOM/BOARD AND TRAVEL INCLUDED!!!

COME VISIT WITH OUR REPRESENTATIVE
THURSDAY, APRIL 3RD 809CAMPUS CENTER
10AM-4PM
(WALK-INS WELCOME!)
FOR MORE INFO CALL 800-494-6938

FAST BREAK VALUES

SAVE! WITH COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as listed on on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 26

Dance — UMass Hillel will sponsor Israeli Dancing in the basement of Chadbourne Residence Hall. There will be a teaching session from 8:30-9:15 p.m. and review and request from 9:15-10 p.m. No experience required.

Discussion — Joe Salvatore, an M.F.A. Dramaturgy graduate student will hold a discussion on the presence of queer ideas and themes in late 20th century American theater, called "Peeking Out of the Closet Door," at 4 p.m. in the Rand Theater. The event is free and open to the public, sponsored by UMass Theater Educational Services.

Lecture — Dr. Maria Nikolajeva of the University of Stockholm will present a lecture entitled "The Swedishness of Swedish Children's Literature" at 7:30 p.m. in Thompson Hall, room 102. The lecture is in English and is open to the public free of charge.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series will feature Kathy Peiss, from the UMass history department, on "Producing a Consumer Culture: Women in the American Beauty Business," from 12:15-1:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 174-176. Free and open to the public. Coffee and tea will be available. Feel free to bring a lunch.

Lecture — Zoe Perry will present a slide show involving her experiences as a lesbian at the Beijing Women's International Conference in the Campus Center (time to be announced). Part of the GLBT Cafe Series and sponsored by the UMass Stonewall Center.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will hold this week's meeting at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 911. Anyone interested in listening to or reading poetry are free to come. New members are always welcomed. For more information, contact Tim at 546-0562 or Kaye at 546-1459.

Meeting — There will be a meeting of the Biracial/Multiracial Student Association at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 811-15. We will be discussing the communities we identify with as people of mixed race.

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will hold its meeting in room 304 in the University Health Services from 5:30-6:30 p.m. All are welcome to attend.

Workshop — There will be a Hotel Group planning workshop for University Center 2000 in the Campus Center, room 168-C from 11 a.m.-1 p.m. All students, faculty, staff and administrators are encouraged to be a part of creating a vision for the future of the Campus Center/Student Union.

NOTICES

Elections — Elections for Student Government President, Trustee and local area government positions have been rescheduled to March 26 and 27 due to the student takeover of Goodell last week. Polling locations to be announced.

Dance — The UMass Ballroom Dance Club invites everyone to come dance with us. Meets every Tuesday and Thursday, 5:15-7 p.m. in the Totman Gym. Newcomer/beginner Tango/Rumba instruction starts March 27.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon-2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545-9484.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one-acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to department of comparative lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Band wanted — Amnesty International is looking for a Jazz Band to play for its upcoming fundraiser this spring. If interested, call the Amnesty office at 549-1925 or Babz at 546-3105 as soon as possible.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6-7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577-5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577- 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPIRG. 545-0199 or stop by the office at 423-A Student Union Building.

PYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Member O.C.M.P.
"we accept all major credit cards"

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
$1 drinks Rum & Coke & always $1 Bud light draft

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 26, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Survival ⓒ		Live From Lincoln Center "New York City Opera: Puccini's La Boheme"					Encoral
WFSB	3	3 News ⓒ	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Nanny (R) ⓒ	Temporarily	Feds "Missing Pieces" ⓒ		EZ Streets (In Stereo) ⓒ		News ⓒ	Late Show ⓒ
WBZ	4	4 News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Nanny (R) ⓒ	Temporarily	Feds "Missing Pieces" ⓒ		EZ Streets (In Stereo) ⓒ		News	Late Show ⓒ
WCVB	5	5 News ⓒ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ⓒ	Grace Under	Coach ⓒ	Drew Carey ⓒ	Arsenio ⓒ	Primetime Live ⓒ		News ⓒ	Nightline ⓒ
WLVI	6	Full House ⓒ	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Sister, Sister	Sister, Sister	Jamie Foxx ⓒ	Wayans Bros.	News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo) ⓒ
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	Newsradio ⓒ	Single Guy ⓒ	Wings (R) ⓒ	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	9	Fresh Prince	Martin ⓒ	Judge Judy ⓒ	Real TV ⓒ	Sentinel "Private Eyes" ⓒ		Star Trek: Voyager "Warlord"		News	LAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV ⓒ
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy ⓒ	Newsradio ⓒ	Single Guy ⓒ	Wings (R) ⓒ	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons ⓒ	Roseanne ⓒ	Home Imp.	Sentinel ⓒ	Best-of Beverly Hills, 90210		Party of Five "A Little Faith" ⓒ		News		Coach ⓒ	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	Newsradio ⓒ	Single Guy ⓒ	Wings (R) ⓒ	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo) ⓒ		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Live From Lincoln Center "New York City Opera: Puccini's La Boheme"					Jews of Boston		Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	News ⓒ	ABC News	Seinfeld ⓒ	Ent. Tonight	Grace Under	Coach ⓒ	Drew Carey ⓒ	Arsenio ⓒ	Primetime Live ⓒ		News ⓒ	Nightline ⓒ
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld ⓒ	NBA Basketball	Boston Celtics at Washington Bullets. (Live)				News	Martin ⓒ	Mad Abo. You	Real TV ⓒ
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	NBA Basketball	Detroit Pistons at New York Knicks. (Live) ⓒ				Inside-NBA		★★ "Action Jackson" (1988)
A&E	51	Quincy "Images"		Equalizer "Lullaby of Darkness"		Biography "Debbie Reynolds"		American Justice (R)		20th Century (R)		Law & Order "Silence" ⓒ
CNN	29	World View ⓒ		Moneyline ⓒ	Crossfire ⓒ	Prime News ⓒ	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live ⓒ		World Today ⓒ		Sports Illus.	Moneyline ⓒ
COM	53	Tick ⓒ	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	Paula Poundstone		Paula Poundstone		Comic Relief	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	52	Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings "ME 109: The Legend"		Wild Discovery "Death Valley"		Discover Magazine (R)		Who's Afraid of... Cats		Wild Discovery "Death Valley"
ESPN	50	Up Close	Sportscenter		Vitale PTPers	Final Four	Men's Final Four			March Madness: The Finals		Baseball	Sportscenter ⓒ
LIFE	49	Supermarket	Debt		Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		("Visions of Murder" (1993, Suspense) Barbara Eden.				Living	Mysteries
MTV	33	Ren & Stimpy	Sports (R)		Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Prime Time (In Stereo)				Get Up, Stand	Jenny M.	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	55	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon		Doug ⓒ	Rugrats ⓒ	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	Love Lucy ⓒ	Bewitched	Newhart ⓒ	Odd Couple ⓒ	Taxi ⓒ	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	63	Twilight Zone	Darkside		New Edge	Masters	Viewers' Choice				Sightings (R) (In Stereo) ⓒ		New Edge (R)	Masters
TLC	72	28 Furniture	Renovation		Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	SeaTek (R)	Pop Science		Equinox	Alien Encounters		SeaTek (R)	Pop Science
TNT	62	In the Heat of the Night ⓒ			In the Heat of the Night ⓒ	"The Hunchback" (1997, Drama) Mandy Patinkin, Richard Harris					★★½ "Sophie's Choice" (1982, Drama) Meryl Streep
USA	31	Renegade "Lion's Paw" ⓒ			★★½ "Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home" (1986, Science Fiction) William Shatner. ⓒ			★★ "Star Trek V: The Final Frontier" (1989) William Shatner. ⓒ					Wings ⓒ
HBO	91	Five American Handguns		Comedy Hour: Sinbad		★★★ "Murder in the First" (1995, Drama) Christian Slater. R ⓒ					Tracey Takes	Larry Sanders ⓒ	★ "Fair Game" (1995) R ⓒ
MAX	92	★★½ "Grumpier Old Men" (1995, Comedy) Jack Lemmon. PG-13 ⓒ				★ "Friday the 13th, Part VI: Jason Lives" (1986)		★★½ "Darkman III: Die Darkman Die" (1996) R					★★★ "Black and White in Color"
SHOW	93	★★★ "Educating Rita" (1983, Comedy) Michael Caine. PG				★★ "The Twilight of the Gods" (1997, Drama)				★★★½ "Get Shorty" (1995, Comedy) John Travolta. R ⓒ			Poltergeist

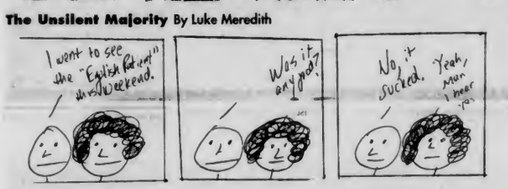
Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

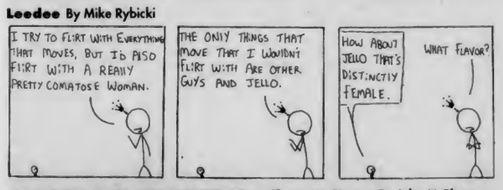
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

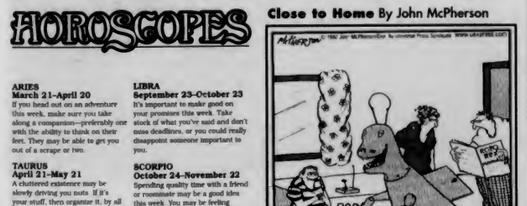
Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick



Speedy By Todd Hartzler



Non Sequitor By Wiley



University® By Frank Cho

The Unsilent Majority By Luke Meredith

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Close to Home By John McPherson

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
If you head out on an adventure this week, make sure you take along a companion—preferably one with the ability to think on their feet. They may be able to get you out of a scrape or two.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
A cluttered existence may be slowly driving you nuts. If it's your stuff, then organize it, by all means, but if it's another person's, consider an indirect approach to change their behavior. Whatever you do, don't just yell.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
You can turn a great deal from a studious person. Some of their strengths would be valuable assets for your own future. It's also a good time for big decisions, so go for it.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
If you've been feeling guilty lately, dig a little deeper for the reasons why, and then take action! You don't have to be miserable. Plan ahead, so that you're working for the results you want.

LEO
July 23-August 23
An impulsive start to a fun activity could make you forget to check your wallet. Squandering resources this week could be disastrous. You don't want to go into debt just to impress someone.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
An outdoor activity is a great way to meet someone wonderful today. Plus, you'll get some invigorating exercise. Beat the heat by talking to a friend in a cool place, especially if you haven't heard from them in a while.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
It's important to make good on your promises this week. Take stock of what you've said and don't miss deadlines, or you could really disappoint someone important to you.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
Spending quality time with a friend or roommate may be a good idea this week. You may be feeling lonesome and they may be feeling neglected, so you can kill two birds with one stone.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
An impulse to spoil your sweetie may manifest if you overestimate your resources. Don't worry—you are beloved just as you are. Besides, you may be able to increase your income soon.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Postponing chores is not a good way to create quality time for something else. You'll just be robbing Peter to pay Paul. Reassessing your priorities may be the way to go this week.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A conflict you're experiencing may be a sign that lines of communications are frayed between you and someone dear. Make an extra effort to really listen to them before you get too angry.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
An old dream may suddenly seem possible once again. Try to evaluate your risks carefully, but once the decision is made, don't hesitate. You may have waited too long already.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

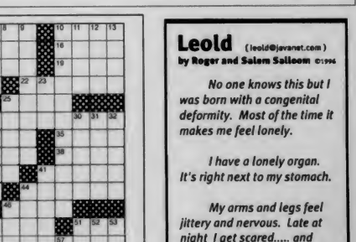
LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Puck	Beans & Rice
Meatball Grinder	Grilled Chicken Sand.
Wheatball Grinder	Roast Beef
Turkey Bacon Pita	Turkey w/Citrus Glaze

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Tacos	Pastabilities
Hungarian Noodle Bake	Roman Rice & Beans
Ziti	Turkey w/Citrus Glaze
Veggie Taco	Tortellini

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hambuger	Roast Beef
Chicken Puck	Turkey w/Citrus Glaze
Tacos

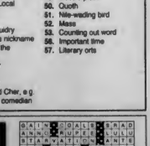


Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Taco	Turkey w/Citrus Glaze
Veggie Taco	Veal Parmesan
	Roman Rice & Beans
	Roast Beef

Quote of the Day

Hypocrisy is the homage we pay to what we know is right.



–Howard Ziff

ACROSS
1. Filters
5. Liquid measure
10. Nautical word
14. Farewell
15. Go afield
16. Wheedle
17. Called
19. What "Open sesame" opened
20. Dramatist-actor Shepherd
21. Boston ___ Orchestra
22. Shows contrition
24. ___ a plea
25. Jordon exclamation point
26. In abundance
29. Most lithe
33. Render suitable
34. Healthy hangouts
35. Toe the line
36. Nightingale's symbol
37. Corrupt
38. Like a basso's voice
39. Walker Evan's collaborator
40. Shake ___ (2 wds.)
41. Menu
42. Like a bread knife
44. Slogans
45. Is the right size
48. Pilaf ingredient
47. Swift product
50. Fodder locale
51. Swell relief
54. He loved an Irish Rose
55. Sank
58. Wall Street panic order
59. Actor Estrada
60. Merging
61. Pay attention to
62. Ward and Ozzie, on TV
63. Sepid

DOWN
1. College-entrance tests (abbr.)
2. Rand Corp. commodity
3. Motion picture
4. Lil E ___ (1992 Derby winner)
5. ___ Your Local Sheriff
6. Plummets
7. Ely and Guidry
8. Hartman's nickname
9. Winner at the Olympics
10. Do a favor
11. Credit
12. Icicle spot
13. Sonny and Cher, e.g
18. Ski-nosed comedian
23. Jaunty headwear
24. Hero of an autobiographic novel
25. "Word up," e.g.
26. Fetes
27. Axiom
28. Less satisfactory
29. Glimpsed
30. Rotund reviewer Roger
31. Take care of (2 wds.)
32. Sorts
34. Venditions
37. In need of repair
41. Pie variety
43. ___ Mail (John Ford film)
44. Actor O'Shea
46. Chances
47. It's often cut at a celebration
48. Have ___ in one's bonnet (2 wds.)
49. Mosaic piece
50. Ouzels
51. Nile-wading bird
52. Mess
53. Counting out word
56. Important time
57. Literary orts

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Leold (leold@jovanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

No one knows this but I was born with a congenital deformity. Most of the time it makes me feel lonely.

I have a lonely organ. It's right next to my stomach.

My arms and legs feel jittery and nervous. Late at night I get scared..... and desperate.

My stomache aches. Sometimes I even groan and hold my stomach.

My mother doesn't like me telling people about this.

I think she's just jealous I have an extra organ.

Lax smacks Boston College 12–5

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

The 12-5 result may look like a run-of-the-mill, been happening every year since 1974, Massachusetts men's lacrosse win over Boston College (1–4), but the victory is as important as any other the No. 15 Minutemen may get this season.

MASSACHUSETTS	12
BOSTON COLLEGE	5

The win improves UMass' record to 3–2, ending a two game dry spell.

The Minutemen endured a spring break road trip that included close losses to top 10 opponents Virginia and Hofstra, the second of which was a one-goal overtime heartbreaker.

"We've lost two games that were tough, but we have a lot of big games coming up," senior captain Brendan Glass said. "We've got Army this week, and Loyola, Notre Dame and Syracuse coming down, so we've got a big season ahead of us."

"It's very important that we got that win today," Midfielder and leading scorer (11 goals) Chris Grande said. "We've got to carry that confidence into West Point."

The seven point advantage held by UMass at the final whistle was not indicative of the close battle that carried on through the mid-point of the third quarter.

The Eagles put up a fight, especially in the second frame, the only quarter in which BC out–shot UMass (8–7). Sophomore attacker Pat McCavanagh notched a true hat trick for BC in that quarter, scoring three consecutive goals which tied the game at four with 7:41 to go in the second period.

However, later in that period, UMass emerged from its rut to break the tie. Senior Casey Costello passed the ball to sophomore midfielder Jay Negus behind the net. Negus cut around the BC cage to Eagle goaltender Anthony Cirri's right side, and proceeded to beat his defender sending a low shot far side with :38 seconds remaining before the half.

The Minutemen followed with a strong third quarter, outscoring the Eagles 4–1 in that period. Costello put his own number up on the scoreboard 4:14 into the third when he scooped up a loose pass in the BC zone and fired a shot over two lunging Eagle defenders before being flattened by a third.

Glass followed the eventual game–winner by Costello, notching his second of the contest at 8:11. The Senior attacker received a crossing pass from Jim Kennedy, leaving the BC zone defense little time to shift to their right and cover the All–America candidate. Glass sent a low underhanded shot at Cirri, who conceded the goal between his legs as he moved from the left post to square up on Glass.

Junior attacker Kevin MacLane brought the Eagles back to within two goals of the Minutemen just under a minute later. MacLane took a feed down low at the crease from midfielder Tim Jandovitz and won the point–blank battle with UMass goalie John Kaselakis to make it 7–5.

Junior Chris Martens and freshman Jason Heinze rounded out the scoring in the third on assists from Mike DelPercio and Negus. Heinze's tally was a one–on–one deek–fest against Cirri, in which the BC keeper fell for a far–side shot fake and left Heinze and open near–side to net his third goal of the season.

The fourth quarter was all maroon and white. Ken Sussi matched his first quarter assist with a goal at 9:45 of the fourth. The senior attacker circled around the BC cage and fired a shot across the goal to the lower left. John O'Connor scored the remaining two goals to bring his season total to seven, and push the score to 12–5, sealing the UMass win.

The late rally by the Minutemen was similar to their first quarter surge, in which Grande scored twice and Glass and DelPercio each added one to take a 4–1 lead early on the Eagles.

The Minutemen will be back in action on Saturday, March 29, when they meet No. 13 Army at West Point.

JEREMY ADAMS / COLLEGIAN

Jim Kennedy (No. 11) chipped in two assists in yesterday's 12–5 win over Boston College.

Grande day for UM, middle offense leads

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

If there is one name opponents associate with the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team this year it is Brendan Glass. However, opponents may soon be very familiar with the name Chris Grande.

Chris Grande

Grande has broken out as UMass' early scoring leader, tallying 11 goals through yesterday.

"Chris is playing with a lot of confidence. That's something he's lacked in the past," UMass coach Greg Cannella said. "He's got all the physical tools and all the mental tools, and I'm very happy to see him stepping it up as a senior and putting it all together. He's playing with a lot of confidence."

Confidence has indeed bolstered Grande's play. He has scored at least two goals in every UMass (3–2) game this year. Last week against Hofstra, he tied his career–high single game goal total with three goals.

Yesterday against Boston College, Grande was the first of nine different Minuteman players to successfully fire on the Eagle cage. His first goal was a straight shot on the goal from 25 yards out with 12:35 remaining in the first quarter that put UMass up 1–0.

Grande's second tally came with 5:11 left in the same period. The middle swept in from BC goaltender Anthony Cirri's right to beat the keeper and give the Minutemen a 3– 1 advantage.

"I'm pretty confident on my ability, but if they give [the ball] to me I'll take it," Grande said.

The work the senior midfielder has done on opponents' nets has taken some of the pressure off of attackman Glass. The two–time All American has been hampered by shin splints that caused him to miss 10 days of preseason practice.

"I'm getting old," Glass said with a laugh.

The fact that Glass, UMass' top returning scorer this season, has been slowed a bit by injuries makes what Grande has done even more important to the team and Glass was quick to credit Grande for his work and improvements.

"That's what we need. He's a senior, and that's exactly what he's been doing, he's been rising to the occasion," Glass said. "He's going to start becoming a marked man out there, and he's going to have to deal with that."

"But he's doing a heck of a job, and I think all the other seniors and other midfielders should be watching him," Glass continued. "He's been taking it upon himself and it's great to see. It's great to see a lot of pressure off our attack too."

Grande, though, is interested in the team aspect of his play, caring more about wins than goals.

"As long as I'm doing my job, as long as we continue to win games, I don't care about the 11 goals. I just want to win," he said.

Women's lacrosse hosts Yale in season home opener at Totman

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

If there ever was a distinct case of two sides to a story, than today's home opener for the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team (1–1) would be the prototype. The Elis of Yale University will be going up against the Minutewomen today at Totman Field (3:30 pm), and the two teams could not be on different sides of the spectrum.

Yale has been one of the top teams in the region the past few seasons, and again will be in the hunt for both the Ivy League Championship and an NCAA berth. On the other hand, UMass has been gradually developing as a program since it's reinstatement in 1993 — better than lower caliber teams, but on the losing side versus higher caliber teams.

For UMass coach Francesca McClellan, there are two sides to her own story concerning this game. Before UMass, she coached Yale for eight seasons, and she is both cautious and confident about this game: two sides to two stories that hopefully will translate into a singular win.

"This is a midweek game, so we're not certain how we're going to come out against Yale," McClellan said. "But if we can maintain the intensity from our games with Holy Cross and Harvard, we should play a very good game. Yale is not as strong as it was before, and we're getting stronger. So, our talent level's are getting pretty even at this point.

"Yeah, it was tough the first year [facing Yale], but I have got over it, and the last class I recruited there graduated last season."

True, the competitive gap between the two teams are becoming closer and closer every year; especially this season, with an Eli squad minus their two leading scorers from last season, and third–team All–American defender Michelle Murray.

Five players will have to shoulder the scoring load for Yale this season, led by senior Ali DeLaCruz, who tallied 19 goals and four assists last year. Sophomore Erin Porta will be the playmaker, scoring a goal and 22 assists last year in nine games before being sidelined with a knee injury.

Senior Betsy Hagmann, and juniors Amanda Cox and two– sport star Laurie Bellveau (hockey and lacrosse), will round out the five–some coach Amanda Leary will count on for offense this season. On the other side of the field, sophomore Alison Cole won the goalie job as a rookie in a landslide, compiling a 7.20 goals–against–average and a .690 save percentage, good for second best in the nation.

For UMass, two consecutive recruiting classes have given the team a solid matrix on offense and defense to work with, and those truths have already been self–evident for the Minutewomen. This season, the team is looking to make the jump from the middle of the road to the private cul–de–sac of the top teams in the region.

Veterans like attacker Stephanie Walsh (5g–1a–6pts) and defender Michele Warrington (2–0–2) were key in their close 6–5 loss to perennial regional foe Harvard, and ten different scorers, including freshmen Rebecca Minaker and Meghan Magee (2 points each), were the catalysts in their 11–2 rout of Holy Cross.

The X–factor for UMass this season, though, is between the pipes, and the team does not have the reliable luxury of one of the nation's best. Freshman Megan Haggerty has had to step up into unfamiliar territory, but has been making the saves needed to be made so far this season.

A luxury the Minutewomen do have is junior and senior experience in the midfield and defense to help Haggerty shoulder the defensive burden. Junior Amy Leder, and the Ridley High trio of Erica Bryan, Kristen Hocker and All– America candidate Warrington combine for a solid defensive nucleus, and have teamed up with their goalie to allow only 3 goals in their last three halves of play.

"We're excited, and the kids want to continue that excitement," McClellan said. "Each game is a whole different ball game now, and there are no old conceptions of what was happened before. We've gone into each game this season with a fresh attitude."

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Women's lacrosse coach Francesca McClellan hosts her alma mater Yale in her squads home opener today on Totman Field.

COURTESY MICHIGAN MEDIA RELATIONS

Last year Michigan rolled over BU en route to the National Championship and expect the same result when the two meet in a national semi–final tomorrow night.

Hockey's Final Four: Michigan will win

LEIGH TORBIN ON COLLEGE HOCKEY

Oh, I hate this.

Not hockey you ding–bat, but having a song stuck in my head the entire day. At some point before I wrote this in the dingy Campus Center basement office that the Collegian calls home yesterday, "Scarlet Begonias" by the Grateful Dead embedded itself in my mind.

So rather than fight such a peaceful melody, I'll just incorporate it into a discussion of why divine intervention is the only thing that can stand between Michigan and the college hockey championship at this weekend's final four in Milwaukee.

Once in a while you get shown the light in the strangest of places: Why would you ever want to go to Grand Forks, North Dakota? What the hell would you ever do there? So, ever the curious wise–ass, I called the Chamber of Commerce.

After mentioning the North Dakota Museum of Art, the lady at the Visitor's Bureau had to put me on hold to search for some events that might interest a 21–year old coming to town. A minute's pause brought the revelation that for whatever weekend I mentioned, a Winnipeg powwow would be highlighting that weekend on campus. In other–words, I might be happier going the 70 miles to Fargo and just getting killed, eh.

Not the ideal place for a college hockey power, but coach Dean Blais has built a team that might sneak away with the title. Led offensively by David Hoogsteen's 24 goals, (someone I'm totally unfamiliar with but love the name), the WCHA champion Fighting Sioux can not be counted out.

A year after losing high–scoring forward Teeder Wynne (another great name!), the Sioux are 3–1–1 this year against Colorado College, their semifinal opponent, including a 5–1 scalping of the Tigers two weeks ago in the WCHA semis.

I ain't always right but I've never been wrong: It all comes down to matchups when talking about how Boston University doesn't have a prayer against Michigan. This one, despite BU being a tremendous hockey club, ranks right up there with The English Patient experiencing a box office surge on the "duh, that's a safe bet" scale.

BU's general strategy that it employed all year involves pacing itself during the early stages and exploding late to secure the victory. BU's first period goal total is dwarfed by its second and third period totals.

Michigan, on the other hand, jumps on you early and just throws it into cruise control. In Sunday's NCAA West Regional final, the Wolverines went up 5–0 on No. 3 Minnesota just 57 seconds into the second period, before backing off in a 7–4 win.

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 106 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, March 27, 1997

There's no place like home

Jeff Puleri and the Massachusetts baseball team thrashed Holy Cross yesterday in the Minutemen's home opener (see Sports, page 12).

Spicing up the music scene

International singing sensations The Spice Girls have released their debut album, Spice. Check out our review (See Arts & Living, page 5).

WORLD

Railway blasts raise fears of IRA campaign

LONDON (AP) — Three explosions in Britain and Northern Ireland yesterday raised fears of an IRA bombing campaign in the days before Britain's May 1 general elections.

After twin explosions at a major British rail artery yesterday morning, a man fired an explosive device late yesterday at a police station in Coalisland, a town in central Northern Ireland, police said.

Police returned fire, hitting a 19–year–old man, who was in serious condition with a gunshot wound to the abdomen, said a spokesman for South Tyrone Regional Hospital in nearby Dungannon. It was not immediately clear if he was the man who fired the device.

Two women also were admitted to the hospital after being hurt in an ensuing scuffle, said the spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity. One was treated for a minor back injury and the other for shock. The morning blasts, in Willmslow, 160 miles north of London, occurred hours after a telephone warning from a man claiming to represent the Irish Republican Army, and a day after Scotland Yard warned of possible pre–election IRA attacks.

NATION

Designer fires back at Internet accusations

NEW YORK (AP) — Stung by baseless cyberspace allegations of racism, fashion designer Tommy Hilfiger has launched an e–mail campaign to assure minorities that they remain valued customers. In a six–paragraph memo posted on internet sites with anti–Hilfiger rants, the internationally known designer shoots down an "ugly rumor" that he made racist remarks about Asians and blacks.

"The facts are simple and incontrovertible," the e–mail says. "Tommy Hilfiger did not make the alleged inappropriate racial comments... Whether these rumors are part of a misunderstanding or a deliberate act of malice, they have absolutely no basis in fact."

The message comes in response to postings detailing a pair of fictitious television appearances. The first tale asserted that Hilfiger appeared on CNN's "Style with Elsa Klensch" and said that Asians did not look good in his clothes. The second claimed that Hilfiger appeared on "Oprah," made similar comments about blacks and was thrown off the show.

The truth: Neither event ever took place. Spokeswomen for both shows said neither CNN's Klensch nor Oprah Winfrey has ever even met the designer.

"We're doing everything we can to set this straight," spokeswoman Catherine Fisher said yesterday.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 30	HIGH: 65 LOW: 45	HIGH: 55 LOW: 45

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 12

Two UM students die over break

Sutton native dies from injuries during car crash

Dennis R. "Den" Bellville, 21, of Sutton died March 14 from injuries suffered when the car he was driving in the hazardous weather slid across Route 20 in Oxford and collided with an oncoming vehicle. Bellville was a junior at the University of Massachusetts. He was returning home for spring break.

Bellville was currently enrolled as a pre–med major at the University and lived in Brett Residence Hall. He was an active participant in the intramural basketball–league at UMass and played in summer basketball leagues in Sutton.

He was born in Worcester and resided in Sutton for most of his life. He was a 1993 graduate from Sutton Junior/ Senior High School where he was a member of the National Honor Society and team co–captain and starter for the varsity basketball team in his senior year. Bellville attended Bridgewater State College before enrolling at UMass.

Bellville was a member of the First Congregational Church of Sutton and its Pilgrim Fellowship.

He leaves his parents, Robert H. and Barbara Bellville of West Millbury Road in Sutton; a brother, Robert R. Bellville of Worcester; a sister, Robin E. Bellville of Millbury; uncles and aunts; and a niece.

The funeral service was held on the morning of March 18 in Paradis Funeral Home in Oxford. Bellville was buried in North Cemetery, Oxford.

Memorial contributions may be made to the New England Chapter, Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America, 220 Boylston St., Chestnut Hill, MA 02167.

— Christina Poletto

Former UMass student dies in NJ car accident

Shant Khorozian, 20, of Oradell, N.J., died March 19 from injuries sustained in an auto accident. Khorozian was a junior at the University of Massachusetts living in Coolidge Residence Hall.

Khorozian withdrew in December 1996 to transfer to St. Peter's College in Jersey City, N.J., where he was majoring in business.

In addition to Khorozian, who was driving a 1992 Mercedes Benz 190, his uncle John Shenloogian, 43, a physician from Sparkill, N.Y. and father of two young children was also killed in the accident.

The two men were killed instantly shortly before 9 p.m. when Khorozian's car left the southbound Palisades Interstate Parkway about a half–mile north of Exit 2 in Alpine said Detective Lt. Michael Carlino, a senior investigator in the Bergen County (N.J.) Prosecutor's Office.

Carlino said the vehicle slid off the road into a clump of trees but why Khorozian lost control of his car is under investigation.

The two men were on their way to pick up Shenloogian's car which was in a shop for repairs when the accident occurred.

Khorozian is survived by his parents Krikor and Irene Khorozian; one brother, Ara; and his maternal grandparents Carnig and Virginia Shenloogian.

Funeral arrangements were made by Frank A. Patti and Kenneth Mikatarian Funeral Home. A wake was held for Khorozian on Sunday at which approximately 2,000 family members and friends attended. He was buried at George Washington Memorial Park in Palisades on Monday.

— Leigh Faulkner

Governor Weld sees way around his two-term pledge

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

BOSTON — For months now Gov. William F. Weld has said a major hurdle to him seeking a third term would be his earlier pledge to serve only two terms as the state's chief executive. But now the governor is offering the first glimpse of how he might justify running one more time.

Weld told WGBH–TV's "Greater Boston" on Tuesday that serving a total of 12 years as governor would be consistent with his calls for 12–year U.S. Senate terms, since the offices of senator and governor have similar "heft."

He also argued that running again would be consistent with his support for the state's new term limits law — since it would technically allow him to seek one more term.

"I'm the same place I was before: I'll make a decision [about running] in or around September. Those are just points that had been suggested to me by supporters of mine who are also supporters of term limits," Weld said yesterday in a follow-up interview with the Associated Press.

When Weld was elected governor in 1990, he pledged to serve only two four-year terms. He even signed on as a national co-chairman of U.S. Term Limits.

Weld, however, has been weighing the idea of running for a third term ever since he lost his U.S. Senate bid last fall. Publicly he has said he is afraid that a Democratic governor would roll back many of the social and financial reforms he has made over the past six years.

Privately, he has told aides he would relish a matchup with U.S. Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy II, a likely contender for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Beating a member of the famed Kennedy political family could help restore Weld's national reputation in the aftermath of his Senate loss.

The principal stumbling block, however, has been Weld's fear that he would lose credibility if he reneges on his term limits pledge. Next to his vow to never raise taxes, it has been one of his political hallmarks.

'Pumpkin Man' pleads guilty to sexual contact charges

By Victoria Brett
Associated Press

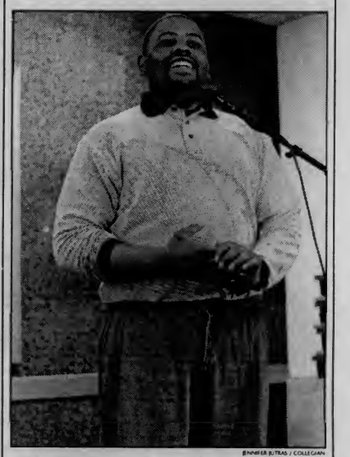
ALFRED, Maine — Before pleading guilty to two counts of unlawful sexual contact yesterday, former prep school teacher David Cobb changed out of his bright orange prison garb so he would not resemble the "pumpkin man" who had so traumatized his victims, Justice Paul Fritzsche accepted Cobb's plea agreement that includes an 18–month jail term to be served concurrently with the 8– to 15–year sentence he is serving in New Hampshire.

"Everything is done. Now there is closure as to the charges," said Cobb's lawyer, Thomas Connolly, who requested that his client be allowed to change out of his prison clothes so he wouldn't be the same color as a pumpkin.

Cobb, 60, was indicted in York County Superior Court last June on two counts of unlawful sexual contact from a 1985 incident involving a girl, 9, and a boy, 12, both from Lebanon.

The Maine indictments came a month after Cobb was convicted of attempted sexual assault and hundreds of child pornography charges in New Hampshire.

The girl, now 21, cried as she spoke at Cobb's sentencing hearing.



"It has been said he is a wonderful teacher. What he is a despicable child molester," she said. "He's been a teacher of deception and evil."

Cobb was an English teacher at the prestigious Phillips Academy in Andover, Mass., when he was arrested in August 1995 while walking with a boy in downtown Farmington, N.H. He was carrying a backpack containing children's underwear, a pumpkin mask, hundreds of pornographic photos, a bottle of hand lotion and a pay scale for "helping pumpkin" perform various acts.

The publicity of the trial prompted several Lebanon residents to come forward with charges that Cobb had approached them in a similar fashion when they were children.

On July 3, 1985, Cobb approached four children playing by a river in Lebanon that divides Maine and New Hampshire. He told them he would pay two of them $5 each to help him remove sand from a retarded person's bathing suit.

Caston bids farewell; election, privatization discussions continue

JENNIFER ALTMAS / COLLEGIAN

SGA President Maurice Caston gave his final speech to the Student Senate last night.

By Victoria Graves
Collegian Staff

Student Government Association (SGA) President Maurice Caston Powe gave his final address to the undergraduate senate at last night's SGA meeting.

Caston Powe thanked many SGA members past and present that he has worked with through his term, and then had the senate members stand with their hands in the air and eyes closed as he spoke to them.

"I know it's been real rough for this body over the past three months. I know you guys wanted to throw your hands up in frustration... think about all the students who have thrown their hands up because students government hasn't represented their needs," Caston Powe said.

Caston Powe showed the senate a funnel to demonstrate the University's dealings with students.

"The University is constantly trying to process students by pouring us through. When we simply process motions, we are doing that. We don't appreciate sacrifices students make when they enter this body," Caston Powe said. "In my heart I believe this body can turn itself around.

"We have a job to do... I believe in you guys, that's why I joined this organization. The game time is over. So let's just jump in the process and keep going."

Members of the Board of Student Businesses were present for part of the meeting addressing election concerns.

Amy Howland, from Earthfoods, spoke before the senate citing campaign flyers for Trustee candidate R.J. Lemar and SGA presidential candidate Brian McManus as stating false information about privatization.

"They said they have ways to protect student businesses. They have never approached us. [Privatization] has nothing to do with the D.C.s and it has nothing to do with Antonio's," Howland said.

In response to this concern, Lemar insisted that he and McManus have sought the input of student businesses and that an anti–privatization vote will negatively affect Antonio's in Southwest Residential Area.

"We've answered all these questions to the Election Commission and we feel A ntonio's and the D.C.s will be substantially hurt if an anti–privatization decision

Turn to SGA page 2

SGA elections are extended today; ballots for referendum questions were stolen from SGA offices

JENNIFER ALTMAS / COLLEGIAN

Students waited in front of the Hatch yesterday afternoon to vote in SGA elections.

By Laura Stack
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association (SGA) election polling hours have been extended today as a result of delayed poll openings and lack of referendum question ballots yesterday morning.

According to Jodi Bailey, chair of the SGA Elections Commission, 2000 referendum question ballots were stolen from the SGA offices between 10 and 11 a.m. yesterday morning. As a result, polling booths in the dining halls were forced to operate until 1 p.m. without the ballots.

During those morning hours, students could vote In the SGA President and Student Trustee election, however they could not vote on Questions One and Two, which deal with privatization at the University of Massachusetts campus and funding for the UMass chapter of the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG), respectively.

"For anyone who missed voting on the questions, we will open polling booths from 11 a.m.–7 p.m. [today]," Bailey said.

The previously scheduled polling hours were 11 a.m.–2 p.m. and 4:30–7 p.m. Bailey said she hopes the extra two and a half hours, as well as posted notification of the circumstances, will allow everyone who did not get to vote on the referenda to return to the polls.

Bailey also said she will submit a list of everyone who voted yesterday on the candidate race and not the referendum questions to polling workers so that students will be able to return and vote fully.

When asked how the SGA plans to safeguard potential stuffing of the boxes with the stolen ballots, Bailey said the questions stolen were color–coded, and any ballot received in those colors will be cancelled.

SGA officials are currently investigating who stole the ballots.

The polling locations for elections will remain the same: Orchard Hill Residential Area students must vote in the Franklin Dining Hall; Sylvan and Northeast Residential Area students must vote in Worcester Dining Hall; Southwest Residential Area–South (Cance, John Quincy Adams, Pierpont, Moore, Patterson, MacKimmie, Washington and John

New SGA election polling times

Polling booths will be open from 11 a.m. – 7 p.m. today. They will not close between 2 and 4:30 p.m. as previously scheduled.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor:
Jacob W. Michaels

Copy Editor:
Laura Stock

Photo Technician:
Jennifer Jutras

Production Supervisor:
Josh Sylvester

Production Staff:
Sam Smullin
Leon Latino

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Taking a break
Fred Hautala, a first year theater major, played pool in the Student Union yesterday afternoon.

SGA

continued from page 1

comes down," Lemar said. "Any questions, we've answered them. They [the Board of Student Businesses] have launched a campaign against us."

Howland asked the SGA to support the student businesses on campus and said the board will be appealing the vote.

"Student businesses have been operating for the last 25 years. We want to know if SGA supports us and how they will in the future. We plan to appeal this vote... we need to stop the lies, I'm here so we can support each other," Howland said.

A motion was also passed unanimously last night regarding the deadline for students to leave the dorms for scheduled breaks.

"We are asking that the University extend deadlines for leaving dorms in situations hazardous to students safety. Because of University policy, students died," Senator Resa Singleton (ALANA Caucus) said.

The motion states that under circumstances including hazardous weather conditions, should students feel it unsafe to leave campus they should be allowed to remain in the dorms.

It also states that the requests of the students shall only be denied if a Residential Director has appealed to the Housing Director. Students would be allowed to stay in their room during this process.

"Last week they were kicking people out of the doors with no regard to safety. Peoples lives are more important than paying people money to stay an extra day. If you run into an RD who thinks your point isn't valid, right now there is no University policy that says they have to allow you to stay later," Singleton said.

Other motions passed last night included having Plexiglas surroundings at the Pioneer Valley Transit Authority (PVTA) bus stops, and having the $81 Intercollegiate Ticket Athletic Fee portion of the mandatory $361 "service fee" be made an optional fee.

"We're getting so screwed over by this fee. I'm specifically going after the ticket fee portion. A lot of students can't make the games. Should they be forced to pay for these tickets? No way," said Sen. Bill Ramsey (Commuter Area).

UM prof to examine funding

Econ prof elected to commission seeking alternative funding

By Julliette Doro
Collegian Correspondent

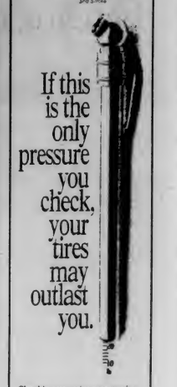
University of Massachusetts professor of economics Robert Costrell will examine alternative sources for public school funding in the state as part of an 11-member commission appointed by Gov. William F. Weld.

The group called the Tax Alternative Commission will take a look at how other states and countries fund public education for kindergarten through grade 12.

"We are going to try to benefit from other states' experiences whether negative or positive," Costrell said.

Currently, local property taxes, where each town sets a tax rate on the value of homes, are the primary source of funding for public schools. The state also gives aid to supplement local revenues based on a formula for a greater degree of equalization between districts.

He said that one of the options the commission will examine is the sales tax system that Michigan has recently implemented.



Costrell said he is keeping an open mind. The commission will consider many alternatives although continuing with the current system is one possible recommendation. He said that it is too early to make any judgements since the commission hasn't had a substantive meeting yet.

"I'm going to bring my economist's viewpoint to this," Costrell said.

Costrell has worked on economic analysis of educational standards for the past 7-8 years. He said that this research will be interesting because of the complex issues involved, such as equity and incentives with regard to the localities.

The commission is made up of three gubernatorial appointments and eight legislators, including Sen. Stanley C. Rosenberg (D-Amherst) and Rep. Ellen Story (D-Amherst). The commission's findings, which will be reported by February 1998, will only be a recommendation to the Legislature.

American Heart Association.
Fighting Heart Disease and Stroke

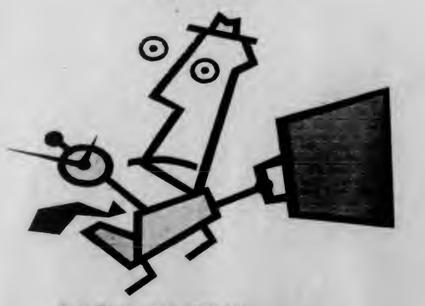
If this is the only pressure you check, your tires may outlast you.

Checking your tire pressure is a good idea. Checking your blood pressure is an even better one.

High blood pressure greatly increases your risk of heart attack and stroke. And those are harder to deal with than a flat tire.

To learn more, contact your nearest American Heart Association at 1-800-AHA-USA1 or online at http://www.amhrt.org

This space provided as a public service by this newspaper and the American Heart Association



DAILY CLASSIFIED SPECIALS

Monday: Apartment for Rent
Tuesday: For Sale
Wednesday: Personals
Thursday: Auto for Sale

Call us at 545-3500 or visit us at our Newstand or at our Campus Center Basement Office

Student 10¢ a word

Top of The Campus
RESTAURANT
We Do Lunch TO GO!!!
If you're in a hurry, call and we'll have lunch waiting for you.
545-3216

Hours: Monday - Friday 11:30 - 1:30
11th Floor of the Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center
WE NOW TAKE OCMP!

Campus Activities Presents
"Something Every Friday"
Comedian
Michael Dean Esters
March 28, 1997 8pm
Bluewall Cafe • FREE

Michael's energy creates a high speed delivery that relies on a twisted intellect and good material without using bad language to captivate audiences.

For more information check out our website:
http://www.umass.edu/campact/events/calendar.htm

The movie "Mars Attacks" will be shown immediately after the performance.

This program made possible by a Grant from the Auxiliary Services Office, the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs and the Daily Collegian.

Student Affairs Special Services and Undergraduate Registrar

Important Information For Seniors Commencement Program Listings

The names that will be listed in the Undergraduate Commencement Program book will be based on seniors of record/Class of 1997 as of Thursday, April 3, 1997.

Because of printing deadlines, it is unlikely that names can be added after that date. However, if you are eligible to graduate, your graduation status is not affected even if your name is not listed.

You must immediately contact a member of the "Senior Staff", Undergraduate Registrar's Office (207 Whitmore, 5-0555):

1. if you are unsure of your eligibility, have not declared a major, and/or anticipate changing your date of graduation;

2. if there was an error in the recent mailing from the Registrar's Office concerning your diploma name and/or graduation date, and you have not corrected it;

3. if you did not receive the mailing and are expecting to have all degree requirements completed by May 25, or by September 1.

Copies of the Undergraduate Commencement information brochure were mailed at the end of February. Copies are available at the Visitors Center.

Florida lawmakers opposed to changing manner of executions

By Jackie Hallifax
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida lawmakers showed little interest yesterday in changing the state's method of execution, even though flames shot from an inmate's mask during his electrocution.

Gov. Lawton Chiles said yesterday he would consider switching to another method of execution, possibly injection, and Attorney General Bob Butterworth proposed a law making injection an option. But legislators opposed giving up the electric chair, saying switching to another method such as injection would just delay executions and not be fit punishment.

"A painless death is not punishment," said Locke Burt, the Senate's Republican Majority Leader. "I think it's important that there is a deterrent and a punishment element."

The Vatican called Tuesday's electrocution of Pedro Medina "barbaric" after flames shot from the right side of his black mask. Witnesses later said they were nauseated by the sight and smell of burning flesh.

The problem probably came from a synthetic sponge in the helmet, officials said.

Medina was executed for the 1982 murder of Dorothy James, a teacher who befriended the Cuban immigrant after he arrived in the United States in 1980.

"That witness was stabbed 10 times, a rag stuffed in her mouth and left to die. We often forget the victims," said Senate President Toni Jennings.

Burt said switching from electrocution to injection, which is used by 34 of the 38 states with capital punishment, would just slow down executions. Texas, for example, saw its number of executions drop from 18 in 1995 to two last year because of a change to injection, he said.

Maine lawmakers pass gay marriage ban

By Glenn Adams
Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Maine — Maine lawmakers approved a ban on same-sex marriages yesterday, avoiding what was shaping up as a contentious referendum campaign on the issue in the fall.

The Senate's 24-10 tally came a day after the House voted 106-39 for the ban. Gov. Angus King has said he would not veto the measure. Maine becomes the 18th state in the past year to ban same-sex marriages.

Because the bill was initiated by a petition drive, a vote by the Legislature to kill it would have automatically triggered a November referendum.

Republican Sen. John Benoit said he voted for the ban because his constituents don't believe society is ready for same-sex marriages, but also to avoid a long, nasty debate.

"I don't want to see people at each other's throats... hashing this out," Benoit said.

Sen. Joel Abromson, also a Republican, said he too wished to avoid a rancorous campaign, but he dismissed the ban proposal as "mean-spirited."

"I shall pray it will be declared null and void by the third branch of government," he said.

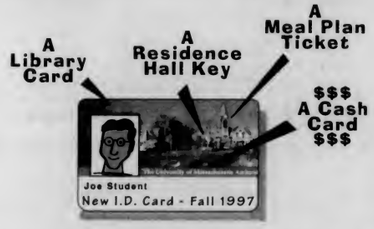
Carolyn Cosby, leader of Concerned Maine Families, the group that organized the petition drive, said lawmakers had "wisely moved to protect the institution of marriage from the marauding of opportunistic gay activists."

Sen. Susan Longley, a Democrat who voted against the ban, challenged whether the state has a compelling interest in promoting traditional monogamous marriage between a man and woman.

"The definition [of marriage] is changing," said Longley, adding that the fitness of a person to be a parent "has nothing to do with sexual orientation."

She also said the ban is not needed because a similar federal law is already on the books.

President Clinton in September signed the Defense of Marriage Act, which allows states to declare themselves off limits to same-gender marriages.



JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

Teamwork...
Tom (top) and Leon Terault, both from the physical plant, built a wood covering over the front door at Memorial Hall yesterday afternoon.

Join the legion...
Read the Collegian

THE NEW I.D. CARD'S GOT EVERYTHING... EXCEPT A NAME!

ENTER OUR CONTEST TO NAME THE NEW STUDENT AND STAFF ID CARD COMING IN THE FALL!

The name should identify the card with UMass and also suggest its many uses, because it's a lot more than an ID card. It'll also serve as a library card, a Meal Plan ticket, a residence hall key, and a cash card for on-campus purchases. Entries will be judged by a five-member panel of staff and students.

Any actively enrolled UMass Amherst student is eligible to enter. Bring your entry to the ID Office, Franklin Dining Hall or e-mail your entry to name-the-card@admin.umass.edu. Entries must be received by 5pm on March 27, 1997.

Three winning entries will be chosen:
1st Prize: $100 gift certificate for Travel
2nd Prize: $50 gift certificate from the University Store
3rd Prize: $25 gift certificate from the Top of the Campus

entry form
Name_____
Local/Campus Address_____
Local Phone Number_____
Name the New I.D. Card:
_____

DROP OFF YOUR ENTRY AT THE ID OFFICE AND WHEN YOU COME IN, HAVE YOUR PHOTO TAKEN FOR YOUR NEW ID CARD... AVOID THE FALL RUSH!

Haigis on Hoopla
Presented by the UMass Sport Management Program
VOLUNTEERS ARE NEEDED!!!! COME JOIN THE HAIGIS HOOPLA TEAM.
WHAT: A non-profit, 3-on-3 basketball festival organized by the University of Massachusetts Sport Management Program
WHEN: April 25-27, 1997
WHERE: Haigis Mall on the University of Massachusetts Campus

POSITIONS AVAILABLE
- Campus Center Table
- Goodie Bag Stuffing
- Registration
- Site Set-Up
- Court Monitor
- Booth Monitor
- Take Down
- Hospitality

There will be three volunteer training meetings prior to the event. Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer should attend a brief meeting at one of the listed times:
April 1st • 4:00 • Barlett 65
April 1st • 7:00 • Herter 231
April 2nd • 4:00 • Herter 231
Call 256-5473 for more details or stop by the Haigis Hoopla Office located in the Curry Hicks Building

All volunteers will receive a free staff uniform, meals while working at the event and be invited to a pizza party prior to the event where prizes will be awarded in an exclusive volunteer raffle.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.F. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stumm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prentes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majcrowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the Collegian Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

A message from the editor:

Yesterday, a flyer, put out by MassPIRG, appeared on campus. The flyer had the Massachusetts Daily Collegian's nameplate, along with a letter from the UMass Amherst– Board of Directors Representatives of MassPIRG published in yesterday's paper. The flyer did not identify the text as a letter.

The Collegian wishes to make sure students understand this flyer in no way reflects the opinion of the paper. In fact, the Collegian editorial board believes students should vote no on Question Two.

The board wrote, in an editorial published yesterday, that, despite the important advocating work done by MassPIRG, their funding should come from a positive checkoff, not a negative one.

Furthermore, it is disturbing that MassPIRG should choose to print this flyer this way. There seems to be little purpose behind omitting the "Letters to the Editor" banner and the headline included with the piece other than making it appear the position in the letter came from the Collegian. The back of the banner clearly shows MassPIRG does have many supporters on campus, and the group should have used their names in their campaign, not the Collegian's.

Jacob W. Michaels
Editor in Chief

Fear and loathing in Phoenix

The six degrees of separation theory? It's a piping hot load of sloth dung, and now I've got proof there's scarcely one degree, courtesy of a sports bar, in downtown Phoenix.

If you read my column on the Thursday before Spring Break, you'll remember I was planning to spend the vacation in Arizona. You'll also be happy to know that the only thing even close to a snake I saw was the shedded skin of one such creature while out on a distance run.

I did, however, proceed to cruise back to the hotel at two- minute mile pace upon seeing said reptile remains.

Yet this episode did not rank as the most frightening for the trip; in fact, it took the bronze, bested by the surreal Tammy Faye parade of overmade women one witnesses in the Dallas/Ft. Worth airport and the aforementioned bar encounter.

To elaborate on the latter, I had just strolled over from America West Arena, where the Phoenix Suns had just received a thorough thrashing from the Los Angeles Clippers. In retrospect, that Rod Serling–esque event alone should have tipped me off that this would be one of those kooky evenings.

I happened upon a sports bar in the downtown area, propped myself upon a stool and, like any virtuous Division One athlete, fulfilled my craving for a nice, cold glass of milk. It was the perfect night: a pro game, SportsCenter on several giant television sets and a refreshing mug of cow juice to cap it all off before beddy–bye. And best of all, no one I knew within hundreds upon hundreds of miles.

Or so I thought.

I was down to my last sips of lactose when a familiar figure from UMass sauntered into the establishment. Instantly a Casablanca paraphrase leapt to mind. "Of all the sports bars..." My holiday solitude had been snatched away by one man's random urge to drink in this random saloon. Curse my weakness for the sweet nectar of bovine teat!

On the drive back to the hotel, it became apparent to me that this occurrence was not the fault of a gent who probably just wanted to relax with Keith, Dan and the rest of the ESPN crew like any red–blooded American, nor could it be blamed on my addiction–in–denial to the white stuff (preferably skim, the way Gooden and Strawberry ingested it).

C. Taylor Connor

We meet too many freaking people. That's just It — too many folks shake too many hands, kiss too many lips (or rear ends in some sycophantic cases) and say too many hellos in their lifetimes. Is it any wonder why all of a sudden we can't wander into an Estonian Taco Bell without running into somebody's a) girlfriend, b) cousin or c) proctologist?

(Note to self: Use of word "proctologist" in above sentence marks the umpteenth anal reference in last two columns. Analysis by Freudian therapist may be something to consider.)

It's gotten to the point for most of us that a 50–meter walk through the Campus Center has become a challenge roughly akin to running the "American Gladiators" gauntlet with a grain alcohol hangover — a dizzying, deafening dash. I can recall so few prenames that the casual observer might think all of my peripheral acquaintances' names are either "What's shakin'?," "What's up?" or "Hey."

You have to wonder if there's any clear remedy to this phenomenon of social discomfort. One could reinvent oneself to be the Helen Keller of the hollow conversation arena, pretending not to see or hear any fringe contemporaries, thus allowing only real chums and lovers the pleasure of our full and undivided attention.

But where would that get us? The flip side of the dilemma is that, of course, we all need to kill time, hook up or, quite frankly, use the hell out of someone at some time.

Honestly, there are at least 1,477 worst things in the world to ponder, but in a college environment where faces have a regurgitant tendency to pop up in the same place at the same time each and every day, sometimes you can only wish you were somewhere in some remote bar enjoying a tall one of the alabaster drink a la vache.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

Southwest: What happened?

Editor's Note: On May 8, the Collegian celebrates its 30th anniversary as a daily newspaper. To commemorate this occasion the Collegian will be publishing editorials spanning the last 30 years. Today we feature a column originally published Sept. 14, 1967.

1967 - 1997

The hotel concept of the Southwest "high–rise" buildings is acceptable enough to us. The interior design, in fact, brings us pleasantly back to the era of grandiose old hotels of New York, with the deep blue and green and red carpets, the distinctive lounges, the individual room telephone service, the common toilet.

The rooms fit in with the hotel idea. It is possible to reserve the traditional double–occupancy room, or, upon request, to hire a single room, or, if you are a dignitary of sorts, to secure a suite.

Each of the five 22 story buildings is furnished with three public lounges. More private lounges are on each of the 18 other floors. Each public lounge is divided into several areas, by floor–to–ceiling sheets of plate glass, in some cases. There is a main lounge and a TV lounge. There are separate rooms for private gatherings. There is the date nook — an area walled off from the main lounge — two of which are hidden from each public lounge.

The elevators are automatic, though, and we sometimes greet the morning sun with slightly hunched shoulders, feeling in a way, the absence of "Eleventh floor! Going down!" drowned that awakening way.

The absence of the newspaper–magazine–gum–candy–cigarette–counter, although noticeable to the degree that we notice a letter in our mailbox, is nothing that concerns us. In our otherwise complete hotel, this void exists, we are certain, because the racks for the provisions haven't arrived yet. Much to our immediate fulfillment, though, we regard the vending machines as temporary installments in rooms that were first designed with small cocktail lounges in mind. And as we are not the person to criticize others for delaying, we can wait.

The lobby is the lifeblood of any hotel, with the elegant entrance, the desk clerk, the tropical plants, the hundreds of mailboxes, the people. At any hour of the day or night we choose, we are welcome to come down from our room, plop ourselves in one of the over–stuffed chairs and observe, over our newspaper or magazine, people whom we should like to meet.

And while we are waiting for the finishing touches to our hotel, we think of the building as more of an office building — the walls dreary, the people solemn.

Paul Robert Hallock was a former Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury Flashbacks

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

An appreciation

I started college in Florida. I was naive and had a vision of studying under palm trees, bathed by a cool Caribbean breeze, sipping Pina Coladas and laughing while my friends suffered through Northeastern winters.

What I got was an off–campus rich kids dorm filled with snotty girls only concerned with their tan–lines and dudes who paired their existence with their BMWs and pectoral muscles. Lost in the lights of the cheesy clubs and blinded by the glare reflecting off my dorm's pool, I knew I'd be better off at a real University. And here I am, about to graduate.

Like many of you, I went to Florida over spring break. I didn't go to any of the MTV hot–spots, but rather hung out with my cousins in West Palm Beach. Once again in the murky quagmire that is Florida, it was quickly apparent why I left.

My exile was instantly justified when I stepped foot into the many clubs of Southern Florida. Lost in a steamy room of ubiquitous flesh, pounded by the electronic doom of techno music, and ripped off by the rapacious, pony–tailed bartenders, my only hope was to get smashed to forget this dimension of dementia I had entered.

After–hours the drugs came into full view. Ecstasy, GHB, crystal meth, cocaine and Special K were thrust up the nostrils of the absurdly beautiful Floridians as I observed from my alcohol cloud. The DJ spinned more nightmarish techno as buff dudes break–danced from the chemical inspiration they received. Body–builders cuddled Playboy bunnies in superficial harmony as the sun rose and I waited for Alligators to swarm out of the canals and devour us all...

During the day I cruised the long, straight boulevards and observed the crumbling moral decay that is Florida. I stared out my window at huge "Adult Video Warehouses," saw countless pawn shops with neon signs of guns and diamonds in the window, and noticed "Beverage Discount Centers" advertising cheap, syrupy malt liquor on every corner. Blockbuster Video and other corporate nightmares dominated the bleak, flat landscape and seemed to eye me pugnaciously as I stared in horror.

I was glad to get back to the pseudo–utopic world of Amherst. My New York driver instincts get frustrated when I have to yield to slow– moving pedestrians in town but it's nice that we brake for each other here.

Jeremy Hurewitz

The class structure was an obvious dichotomy from my passenger seat. At stoplights we'd pull up to a handsome guy in a Mercedes, dressed sharp, adorned with gold, and flanked by a startlingly beautiful girl. My cousin would lean over the wheel of his sports car and the two would trade knowing, nefarious smiles.

The poor people, of all races and creeds, walked along the sides of the boulevards. They seemed to crawl out of the bushes and prickly crab grass along the sides of the roads in mass numbers. The men staggered along with stained armpits or no shirt, hairy fat bellies hanging over dirty jeans, sweat dripping on to their bare feet.

They wore styrofoam baseball caps and their eyes were lodged deep within their sad wrinkled faces as they stumbled to the nearest "Beverage Discount Center" for another 40 oz. The women meandered along dragging enormous bags of God–knows–what. Their hair was always disheveled and they seemed to be smiling at the sun in a supine daydream.

I shuddered at everything and felt good, despite my hangover, to be flying out of that state. Visit someplace that's not a vacation resort and take a look at a map to see its position in relation to the other states and I think you'll agree that Florida is just a swampy turd stuck to the butt of America.

I was glad to get back to the pseudo–utopic world of Amherst. My New York driver instincts get frustrated when I have to yield to slow–moving pedestrians in town but it's nice that we brake for each other here. I don't quite trust coffee–house mentality but I like the fact that people are congregating at little establishments to ponder life's big questions.

I like the way people put their ideals into action the way they did at Goodell recently. I look around at the eclectic people, marvel at the academic opportunities available and generally take in the natural splendor of the Pioneer Valley and I thank God that I escaped the shallow decay that is Florida.

Jeremy Hurewitz is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Searching for a student leader

To the editor:

I attended Tuesday night's debate in the hopes that a future student leader would be present. After asking them my questions, none were to be found. What are the issues? The same thing that everyone complains about every year: the need for better food, adequate public safety and lower tuition. Every candidate for president and trustee for the past four years [has] been saying that they will fight to improve those main issues for the next year, but they never tell us how they will accomplish them.

Some of the candidates are concerned about the lack of call boxes on campus and say that the campaign for better public safety will be a long and hard one in order to get funding from the administration. None of them knew that there are 36 call boxes in cold storage and that it will only take about $20,000 to install them on campus.

In addition, do any of these "student leaders" know what privatization really is? Have they researched the facts and brought it to the student body's attention? No. Most of the candidates were poorly prepared for the debate and didn't know the facts behind the issues. Students don't care what your issues are; they want to know how you will accomplish them.

One candidate wanted to put a student business in the Hatch. This displaces union workers. The candidate was for installing a student business in the Hatch, eliminating union labor, and in effect, put the student business by privatization. These candidates don't know that it's the poor management of union labor in the Hatch and the Bluewall that creates their bad image. If the Auxiliary Services management used union labor efficiently, then the Bluewall and the Hatch could offer better food and service.

Some students don't want UMass to become a McUniversity. Even if McDonald's was let on–campus, I hope that it never happens, do the candidates really think that students who eat at Earthfoods will now bring their wallet to McDonald's? The problem with this election is education, education about the issues. None of the candidates have researched any possible answers to the campus' problems. They haven't educated themselves of the campus. That's why people think that "Wong McDonald" is one person, not two. So all students going or thinking about voting please take this advice. Don't vote for candidates based on the number of posters you see, don't vote because they were at Goodell, vote because you think the candidate is a good leader. A good leader should know how the University is run and will try to manage SGA well. Don't vote for the referendum questions unless you know what they're about. Make the educated vote.

Arik Colbath
Mill Valley

Privatization is a bad idea

To the editor:

Students are voting this week on an advisory question as to whether the University should privatize certain services on campus, particularly food services in a newly renovated Student Union. Privatization would essentially mean bringing in private outside companies to provide and operate these services for a profit.

For reasons which have a lot to do with the administration's inability to manage and operate such services in a quality manner and at a reasonable cost, the administration has been pushing these ideas for several years now. Each time they fail to convince student leaders that this is a good idea, or fail to overcome Student Union opposition, they wait for the next group of students to make their pitch again. However, this is not simply an issue of better food or other services — privatization would have a number of serious negative consequences, including the following:

1. Loss of local control by students and the community over these services.

2. Replacement of jobs with decent pay and benefits by jobs with low wages and few or no benefits, and possible loss of student employment and student–run services such as Earthfoods.

3. Decline in the local economy through loss of profits to distant corporate headquarters, to pay high executive salaries and returns to wealthy investors.

4. No guarantee of improved quality of services (many private products and services are not good quality for the money; and many university–run services, here and elsewhere, even food services, are of very good quality).

We Americans, and particularly young people, are constantly bombarded by commercial messages designed to make people "want" or "need" something. This manipulation usually works well, or advertising would not be the multi– billion business that it is. But really, does the golden arch on that wastefully–packaged burger really make it taste better or more nutritious? In many ways, this question raises the issue of free choices versus social and psychological manipulation by corporate media.

Again, if food and other services are currently inadequate, this is primarily a problem of poor management. The University is currently engaged in a number of initiatives to improve quality and customer satisfaction of various campus services, and is expending considerable resources to do so. So why are they pushing privatization? If students, workers and administrators work together in good faith to solve problems, there is no reason that they cannot be solved, and quality improved.

Please think carefully about these concerns. And please support your fellow students, workers and the local community by voting "No" on the privatization question.

Tom Coish
For the UMass Amherst Professional Staff Union, Local 509, Services Employees International Union

MassPIRG responds to Collegian piece on question #2

To the Editor:

I would like to respond to the editorial about the MassPIRG referendum question. If an editorial is going to be written, the author(s) ought to get the facts straight. I am treasurer, board representative, and coordinator of Hunger and Homelessness and I personally know that not one Collegian representative talked to the MassPIRG office to get all of the information and potential repercussions of vote NO on #2.

The Collegian does support MassPIRG's work, yet encourages the destruction of it. That is quite a contradiction. If students vote NO, then MassPIRG will NOT exist on campus. What about the positive local and state–wide projects that they do for environmental, social, and consumer issues? They work with 23 other schools to achieve great feats. Voting YES will keep this on the UMass campus. It is a student run, grassroots organization that welcomes new student volunteers and campaign ideas. This is one [of] the most successful groups for student activism and empowerment in existence.

Does the Collegian therefore support bureaucracy? Is student activism a taboo? If I remember correct, the Collegian is just another student–run organization. Their stand on question #2 will ultimately only weaken student empowerment groups like themselves.

The Collegian's main problem with MassPIRG is the waivable fee on the tuition bill. It is waivable. Therefore students who do not support MassPIRG have the choice to waive the fee. Once again, students are in direct control.

Journalism should be objective, but taking a stand on Student Government election and referendum questions is hardly objective. The facts should also be accurate in order to keep an open and honest line of communication between students on this campus. The Collegian should have included in the editorial what would happen to MassPIRG if students vote NO on question #2. It would be counter–productive and would weaken student empowerment. Vote YES to keep activism alive.

Veronica MacDonald
MassPIRG Student Representative

IRON HORSE
ALL AGES ALL THE TIME
thursday, mar 27 HONEYBOY EDWARDS & COREY HARRIS acoustic Delta blues • $10 adv • 7 pm friday, march 28 • VIPERHOUSE with FOXTROT 7pm tuesday, april 1 • 7 pm TRAILER PARK barbecue funk dance party • $6 adv.
wednesday, april 2 • HARALD HAERTER & DEWEY REDMAN friday, april 4 • 10 pm • $8 adv. JERRY granelli's UFB (un-F-believable) BAND shredding jazz grooves from Berlin, GERMANY saturday, april 5 • 10 pm LORD HILL AND freebeerandchicken come down, it's not really free • $5 adv.
sunday, april 6 RAY anderson's pocket brass
mon&tues, april 7&8, 7 pm $18.50 BEAUSOLEIL LOUISIANA'S FINEST CAJUN DANCE MUSIC wednesday, april 9, 10 pm GREYBOY ALLSTARS deepest grooves west coast funk $10 adv.
MUSIC SEVEN NIGHTS A WEEK
Coming Soon for ... Amherst ... Mountain ... Army
TICKETS F I R E
Northampton B e r k s h i r e

Arts & Living

Thursday, March 27, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

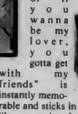
The Spice Girls prepare to conquer the U.S.

By Martin J. Keane
Collegian Correspondent

SPICE GIRLS
Spice
Virgin

The Spice Girls, England's latest (and best looking) musical export, are a vastly different group than the traditional bands that have been crossing the Atlantic to America recently. Instead of anthemic guitar–based rock like Blur or Oasis, the Spice Girls do not play instruments. In fact, only one song on their debut album, Spice (Virgin Records America), utilizes live guitar.

Many in this country have likened them to a female version of the infamous New Kids On The Block, which is not exactly flattering company. Critics have almost unilaterally dismissed their music as the latest flavor–of–the– month, totally lacking in substance. It seems that these detractors have failed to dispense with the silly pretenses and just enjoy the Spice Girls for what they are, fun party music.



Spice is an album that is best enjoyed while listened to on a Friday night after a long week of classes while you are getting ready to go out partying. The album's inherent appeal lies in that the listener need only press play to be instantly gratified through the masterful pop songwriting that Spice contains in abundance.

The album already boasts four number–one singles in the United Kingdom and the current hit "Wannabe" has topped the charts in 31 countries, including the U.S. Potentially, every song on the album is a hit single. With the hit–creating machine (otherwise known as MTV) frolicking in Spicemania and playing the "Wannabe" video non–stop, it is only a matter of time before a Spice Girls T.V. movie airs on FOX. With a summer tour in the works and an upcoming appearance on Saturday Night Live (April 12), takeover seems to be imminent, resistance futile.

The Spice Girls' only musical ambition is to craft catchy, danceable pop songs that grab the listener and magically transport them to their own private party. The closest thing to a social commentary is when the girls encourage condom use in "2 Become 1." This approach works extremely well throughout almost all of Spice, save for a couple of sappy ballads entitled "2 Become 1" and "Naked," and one horrid TLC impersonation, "Last Time Lover." For what the Spice Girls do, they do it quite well. It also does not hurt album sales when all five members of the group are young, sexy, and beautiful.

Beginning with everyone's guilty pleasure "Wannabe," the party atmosphere is clear from the outset. The chorus of "If you wanna be my lover, you gotta get with my friends" is instantly memorable and sticks in the listener's head like crazy glue. Later tracks such as "Say You'll Be There," "Who Do You Think You Are" and "Love Thing" continue the album's overriding theme of ultra–catchy R&B tinged dance/pop tunes.

Perhaps more interesting than the songs are the girls themselves. While musically dissimilar to Oasis, the Spice Girls have been known to engage in a little rock n' roll debauchery on occasion. In England, the girls named Spice are a daily fixture on the front pages of supermarket tabloids with sordid stories detailing wild nights with groupies (!) and naked photos of Sexy Spice (a.k.a. Geri Halwell) in wide abundance. So popular are they in their native land that a recent phone–in poll asking people their favorite Spice Girl generated an amazing 100,000 responses.

The Spice Girls, while clearly the result of a brilliant marketing campaign, are memorable and worth checking out not just because of their looks and carefully crafted image that each girl projects. Ultimately, it is the songs that are the most rewarding aspect of these saucy newcomers. With a current shortage of pop songs not sung by Celine Dion on the radio, the Spice Girls seem to have struck a nerve in people across the globe that should ensure a long, fruitful career. A–

COURTESY VIRGIN RECORDS

Seeing benefits of Equal Vision

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

Equal Vision Records just dropped a bomb on the hardcore community and the beneficiaries are all the kids who love hardcore. I know you're probably thinking "with the departure of Shelter, 108, and Shift left who does EVR have left?" Ten Yard Fight, Hands Tied, Refused, and One King Down, that's who.

• Hands Tied — seven–inch or CD Ep. Say the name Hands Tied really slowly and then say it again until you've got it memorized because this is a band on the cusp of greatness. Combine Gorilla Biscuits, Sick Of It All, Faith, Minor Threat, and later–period Mouthpiece and you have Hands Tied. This is in your face, youth crew, SXE (straight edge), finger pointing hardcore that doesn't let up for a second. They also offer SXE as a positive alternative lifestyle and judging from their lyrics you can tell that they love hardcore. Just check out the lyrics to "Nothing Can Compare."

"There's a feeling in the air, nothing can compare. Not a time. Not a place. It surrounds everywhere. Can't just sit back and take up space. Gotta move up front, move at my own pace. Nothing can compare. I'll watch out for you. You watch out for me. Gotta keep it together. Cooperation is the key." Yeah, positive hardcore.

• Ten Yard Fight — Hardcore Pride Ep. When vocalist Anthony Moreschi sets this off by screaming "Hardcore Pride" the only thing that comes to mind is Ray of Today. Okay, so the Fight's brand of SXE posicore sounds exactly like Youth Of Today. They're still a lot of fun to listen to. You get the six new songs from the Hardcore Pride Ep and the 1995 Goal Line Stand demo. The demo has surprisingly good sound quality and the hilarious lyrics that combine SXE with football are a throwback to the sense of humor exhibited by Gorilla Biscuits in their prime. It's not original but it sounds great and will make you want to yell Go!

• Refused — Everlasting Ep. This seven song Ep by Europe's leading SXE band is bound to keep Refused at the top of the hardcore world. Okay, the first song "Burn It," which rips, sounds exactly like the Snapcase song on the "Anti" compilation and the rest of the CD does sound like Snapcase. This disk is still worth investing in. Refused play groove oriented hardcore with enough tempo shifts, time changes, and fast parts to keep you interested. The excellent, intelligently written political lyrics are also noteworthy. Don't dismiss this band because they're from Europe as they hold their own with most American bands.

• One King Down — Bloodlust Revenge Lp. All–out metal that sounds like Earth Crisis circa the "All Out War" Ep. Okay, this style of music has been done to death and I'm not really a big fan of it, but the production of this album combined with the heaviness and intensity of One King Down is enough to keep you interested between breakdowns. The lyrics are a little heavy handed but nothing that will make you want to slit

Turn to JAZZ, page 6

Wanna drive on the sidewalks with this really cool van...deliver for the Collegian.
If interested, call Alycia Hines @ 545-3500 or stop by the Collegian at 113 Campus Center Basement

Must Be Available Between 8:00am to 11:00am Monday - Friday
Drivers Wanted for Morning Paper Delivery

www.umass.edu/rso/collegian The Massachusetts Daily Collegian ONLINE Go there

Loonar Piercing
Quality Piercing & Best Prices in the Valley
413 - 585 - 1199
100% Sterile Environment
Rt.9 Hadley, MA • hrs. W-F 3 to 8 Sat 1 to 8 Sun 1 to 6

NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY
COLLEGE FINANCING 101
Each year thousands of college students are forced to drop out. The problem is not with their academic standing, it is their financial status. They can't pass or CLEP out of "College Financing 101". The Massachusetts Army National Guard has over $21,000 available to each student who qualifies. Through programs such as the Montgomery G.I. Bill and 100% Tuition Waiver, students can concentrate on grades, not bills. The Tuition Waiver is good at 28 participating state colleges, community colleges and universities.
All it takes is about two days a month and two weeks a year. Serving your country and community today can help build a better tomorrow.
For more information about the Massachusetts Army National Guard call today:
1-888-NGPRIDE
(1-888-647-7433)
MASSACHUSETTS ARMY NATIONAL GUARD YOU CAN

PUB PROMO NIGHTS
Thursday March 27 10 - Midnight Miller Lite
Friday March 28 10 - Midnight Crown Royal
Friday March 28 10 - Midnight Easy - Wider Papers
Thursday April 3 10 - Midnight Yukon Jack
WIN PRIZES - T-SHIRTS
THE PUB on campus
FRIDAY APRIL 4: Giant Iguana Mountain Bike give - away from AXLER's Bicycle Corner 10 - Midnight
SATURDAY APRIL 5: Molson Night Shoot for the Gold with WHMP LIVE 10 - Midnight

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
starts FRIDAY -Only Area showing- LIMITED RUN
Curtain daily 7:00 PM (see ticket info. below)
"★★★★ BRANAGH BURNS THROUGH THIS FILM LIKE A FLAMING ARROW." "A TOWERING ACHIEVEMENT!"
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET
A KENNETH BRANAGH FILM
Due to the 4 hour running time of this film
TICKETS AVAILABLE ALL PERFORMANCES IN ADVANCE
Box Office DAILY from NOON – EASTER from 3:00 P.M.
Film must start promptly at 7 P.M. regardless of ticket line
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Cinema Treasures 584 8335

PUB SPRINGFIELD
382 Dwight St. • Springfield, Ma • 413-734-8123
Largest Gay Entertainment Complex in Southern New England
9pm 2am
Dance DOWN UNDER Club!!
ALL MALE REVIEW FRIDAY NIGHTS
Dancers and Bartenders Wanted Call Bob

Summer learning at UMass Boston ranges far and wide.
In Vietnam: Vietnam Today: Culture, History, Politics
In Mexico
In Ireland: Ireland Today
On Nantucket Island: Playwriting and Performance
Along the New England Coastline: Exploring the Coastal Environment
For information
On Nantucket Island: Marine Biology
Division of Continuing Education, University of Massachusetts Boston, 100 Morrissey Blvd, Boston, MA 02125-3393
Tel 617 287-7915 Fax 617 287-7922 Web www.conted.umb.edu
Appears at no cost to the Commonwealth.
UMass Boston

Mobley inspires Grand Central

Not one of the most remembered saxophonists to ever have lived, Hank Mobley (1930–1986) did, however, make his mark on the jazz world with a sound that swung between tender and soulful and back, often within the same phrase. Besides making numerous albums for two of the most famous jazz labels — Prestige and Blue Note — in his prime (the 1950s and '60s), he also worked with Miles Davis, taking up Miles' saxophone chair, vacated by his predecessor John Coltrane, and was one of Art Blakey's original Jazz Messengers.

Tribute is paid to Mobley by Grand Central, a band featuring Lenny Kravitz' drummer Cindy Blackman, and Coltrane's son, Ravi, on tenor saxophone. Ravi Coltrane and Craig Handy create the double-tenor attack that makes Grand Central so strong. Strong is certainly a word describing the band's new Tenor Conclave: A Tribute To Hank Mobley on the Evidence Music label.

Besides Handy, Blackman and Coltrane (the latter two being the only remaining members of this band that was first featured a while back on their Evidence debut Sax Storm, with Antoine Roney providing the second tenor), we also have, on Tenor Conclave, Billy Childs on piano and Dwayne Burno on bass comprising Grand Central this time around.

As Mobley was a large figure in the "hard bop" vein of jazz, that is what one mostly finds here, as the album's compositions are mostly Mobley's. "Take Your Pick," and the opener "This I Dig Of You" are both examples of no-bull hard bop; Childs' wild piano style makes golden whatever it touches, especially on the two above tunes. Classic double-tenor playing abound on "Hank's Symphony" (augmented by a meditative, tom-heavy solo by drummer Blackman) and "East Of The Village." The only new original here, Handy's "Hanksville" is a simple be-bop jam.

Evidence Music has also brought out a new disc from a legend from that fruitful Prestige/Blue Note era of the '50s and '60s: Nat Adderley's new release, Mercy, Mercy, Mercy. The trumpeter, who is also the brother of the late, great alto saxman Julian "Cannonball" Adderley, takes his sweet, muted cornet (a higher relative of the trumpet) to only slight prominence on Mercy. Joining him for this album are two of his regular touring bandmates, pianist Rob Bargard and drummer Jimmy Cobb (another '50s/'60s jazz veteran), as well as Walter Booker on bass and the always compelling Antonio Hart on alto and soprano saxophones.

COURTESY THE LABELS

Infamous producer Bill Laswell (also owner of Axiom Records) lends his bass duties to jazz/funk band Third Rail on their new album, South Delta Space Age.

Mercy, Mercy, Mercy is a terrific album to sit and listen to, having been modeled after a typical Adderley live show, complete with two songs with bluesy vocals by Adderley well spread apart, and a typical be-bop tune from his brother "Cannonball" ("Spontaneous Combustion"). The vocal tunes are the jazz standard, "On The Sunny Side Of The Street," and Richard Jones' "Trouble In Mind," featuring some alright blues singing. Joe Zawinul's title track is laid-back groove jazz, but the real champ here is Adderley's original, "Hummin'." The song is modeled in a compelling way. Before each of the soloing instruments' (cornet, soprano sax, and piano in that order), they lull around in a minimal, calm space playing with either just piano or just bass before the rest of the rhythm section comes in. These breaks before the full solos provide a good break-up that holds attention. Also, the solos are terrific once fully whipped up.

Moving away now from straight-ahead contemporary be- bop, we have guitarist James "Blood" Ulmer, one of the most daring guitarists in jazz/rock fusion, who has put together a new band with ex-Meters drummer Joseph "Zigaboo" Modeliste, former P-Funk keyboard maestro Bernie Worrell, bassist Bill Laswell (better known as an ambient producer), and Amina Claudine Myers on a second organ. This band is known as Third Rail and their debut is now out on Antilles/Verve, entitled South Delta Space Age.

South Delta Space Age moves as a vehicle carrying Ulmer's tastes for funk and singing. Yes, he pulls some run-of-the-mill funk lyrics out of him to soothe a passion he has for that type of stuff. This is certainly not a jazz album per se, but yet another of the many fusions with other musics that allow jazz artists to hop across genre-specific CD racks in stores. The songs are often saturated with the double- organ sensual drone produced by Worrell and Myers and heavy grooves. Some of the better, more motivated jams come through on "In The Name Of," "Blues March" and the closer, "Lord Thank You."

Josh Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

Softies set to rock Hampshire

Bradley Skaught
Collegian Staff

It seems like only yesterday that the hardest working woman in indie-pop, Rose Melberg, graced the Valley with her gorgeous voice and stellar songwriting. She was touring with her band Go Sailor at the time, supporting its self-titled debut. Now she's back with her other band, The Softies, in support of their sophomore release, Winter Pageant. Truly, Melberg has been working overtime with a handful of seven inches and compilation tracks squeezed in between the two albums and national tours.

The hard work is paying off, however. Both Winter Pageant and Go Sailor showcase an increased depth and confidence in Melberg's writing, and as she continues to grow artistically, so has the admiration of colleagues and fans grown. Melberg has quickly established herself as a talent of great importance — an artist fiercely independent and consistent.

Melberg's career began with K Records' pop darlings Tiger Trap, who released one full length, an EP, and a string of seven inches before breaking up. Tiger Trap's forte was infectious punk/pop laced with sparkling harmonies — a bubbly, rollicking jangle that was as sweet as it was tough. Melberg's post-Tiger Trap duo, The Softies, showcases a different side of her immense talent.

The Softies' debut, "It's Love," is a gentle, introspective album — hushed, bell-like guitars wrapped around the glowing, nearly whispered vocals of Melberg and Jen Sbragia. Their latest, Winter Pageant, continues in the same vein, but with more confident and dynamic songwriting from both women. The Softies sing weeping willow love songs — gentle and unobtrusive, but carefully woven with threads of bitter introspection, glorious beauty, and an artist's eye for detail. The Softies' albums are consistently rewarding — unfolding and growing with repeated listenings.

Undoubtedly their live performances with be similarly illuminating and moving. Playing at the same place Go Sailor performed only a few months ago, The Softies will present their songs like precious gifts to a small army of loyal fans, and lovers of beautifully crafted pop as well. Sure, Melberg will probably return with some other project in the next few months, but any chance to catch her in action is well worth the effort — bring a love of brilliant pop, and maybe a handkerchief or two.

■ jazz

continued from page 5

your wrists.

• Project Kate — "...The Way Birds Fly" Lp. I'm going to bite my tongue and simply say this is acoustic folk rock with female vocals along the lines of Kristen Hersh or Ani DiFranco. Norm Arenas, Sergio, and Alan Peters all appear on this album.

All of these releases can be purchased through Equal Vision Records, PO Box 14, Hudson NY 12534.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist.

Looking for something to do this weekend?

Check out the Classifieds page and the Five College Community Calendar to find out what's going on this weekend.

Weekly Drink Special

Captian Morgan & Coke 16 oz 2.00

Sloe Gin Fizz 2.00 16oz

Red Dog 16oz Drafts 1.50

Rolling Rock 12 oz Bottles 1.50

1/2 Price Appetizers & Nachos 3-5 and 7-11 Thurs-Fri-Sat

Thurs-Fri-Sat Dancing

No Cover Charge Before 10pm

up•food•spirits THE PUB amherst

15 East Pleasant St.

SPRING WHITEWATER!

Whitewater Rafting is one of the best ways to break out of the mid-semester blues! Our great Spring Rates make the most exciting season a real bargain.

From April 15-May 15 raft for as little as $54 on the Zoar Gap section of the Deerfield River.

ZOAR OUTDOOR Charlemont, Massachusetts

CALL NOW TO BOOK YOUR SPRING RAFTING ADVENTURE! 800 532-7483

Thursday Nite at Mikes

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE

Crown Royal Athletics
Tee Shirts - Prizes - Mikes Mad Money
Mikes Big One Still the Best Deal in Town

16oz Bud Ice $1.00
16oz Bud or Bud Lite $1.00

SPEEDMARK TRANSPORTATION INC

INTERNATIONAL FREIGHT FORWARDING

DYNAMIC ASIAN BASED INTERNATIONAL FREIGHT FORWARDER SEEKS ENERGETIC INDIVIDUALS FOR OUR OPERATIONS SALES DEPARTMENTS. WE OFFER A POSITIVE WORK ENVIRONMENT, OUTSTANDING GROWTH OPPORTUNITIES, A COMPETITIVE STARTING SALARY AND A COMPREHENSIVE BENEFITS PACKAGE. COLLEGE DEGREE PREFERRED, BUT WILL TRAIN THE RIGHT PERSON. IF INTERESTED PLEASE SEND RESUME TO:

ATTN: MR. TONY LIU AND/OR
MR. MIKE MACDONALD
SPEEDMARK TRANSPORTATION INC.
440 McCLELLAN HIGHWAY, SUITE#118
EAST BOSTON, MA 02128

Hewlett-Packard — Performer of the year.

We like the sound of that.

Hewlett-Packard, the world's most admired technology company, is also Forbes magazine's 1995 Performer of the Year. We are a world leader in the design, manufacturing and distribution of computer and electronic test and measurement equipment because of a core set of performance-based values we call "The HP Way." Currently, we have employment opportunities available for Electrical Engineering majors (BS, MS, or Ph.D) in the following departments:

- Research and Development
- Manufacturing
- Marketing
- Technical Support
- QA
- Custom Solutions

Successful candidates must have excellent interpersonal, problem solving, and written/verbal communication skills. Individual must be self-motivated, detail-oriented, and able to work in a team environment.

Interested candidates please contact the University Career Center and meet with our hiring managers on campus April 8, 1997. Anyone interested in meeting with the hiring managers are invited to attend a social gathering Monday, April 7th. It will held in Room #803 from 6:00 pm to 8:00 pm. To learn more about HP and our employment opportunities, visit our Homepage on the World Wide Web at: http://www.jobs.hp.com Hewlett-Packard Company is an equal opportunity employer dedicated to affirmative action and work force diversity.

HEWLETT PACKARD

"Hop" on down for some great deals at... LIQUORS 44 Don't Drink and Drive

Miller High Life / Miller Genuine Draft & GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT 30 PACK CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $10.49 + DEP

ROLLING ROCK CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $12.99 + DEP

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY & ANNIVERSARY LIGHT CASE OF 2-12 PK. CANS $7.29 + DEP

SAM ADAMS, PETES WICKED, OTTER CREEK, MIDDLESEX ALL FLAVORS 6 PACK BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP

FOSTER'S LAGER 12 PACK BOTTLES $8.49 + DEP

CIDER JACK HARD CIDER & CRANBERRY HARD CIDER 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99

WINE OF THE MONTH
DUNNEWOOD WINES
CHARDONNAY, ZINFANDEL, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750ML $5.49

FRANZIA WINES 5.0 LITER BAG-IN-A-BOX CHABLIS, BLUSH, CUVEE BLANC, FRENCH COLOMBARD, WHITE GRENACHE, RIUNE, CHILLABLE RED 5.0 LITER $6.99

CORBETT CANYON MERLOT, CHARDONNAY, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5 LITER $6.99

VENDANGE WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5 LITER $4.99

MARTINI & ROSSI ASTI SPUMANTE 750ML $7.99

BERINGER WHITE ZINFANDEL 750ML $3.99

KENDALL JACKSON VINTNERS CHARDONNAY 750ML $9.99

SMIRNOFF VODKA 1.75L $14.99

BACARDI RUM LIGHT & DARK 1.75L $14.49

CANADIAN MIST WHISKEY 1.75L SALE $11.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $8.99

JACK DANIELS 750ML $10.99

CLAN MACGREGOR Scottish Winner 1.75L SALE $13.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $11.49

Kahlúa COFFEE LIQUEUR 750ML $12.99

ABSOLUT VODKA 750ML $11.99

We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption

AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555

SALE PRICES THURS. 3/27/97 THRU WEDS. 4/2/97

NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Percy Hill, surprisingly, is not the name of a Dickens' heroine — they're a band.

COURTESY PERCY HILL

Percy Hill to work their magic at Butterfield

By Jean Sienkewicz
Collegian Correspondent

Their logo, curly purple outline guys, in the throes of dance-induced ecstasy, says it all. Percy Hill, with its significant grass-roots Northeast following, and more importantly — its reputation for jammed-out high-energy live shows, makes even those dancers with the highest stamina and strongest constitutions shake their bones 'til the need to sit and catch their breath (for just one minute) kicks in.

Mark Dagostino from The Boston Globe sums Percy Hill up perfectly. "If you get the chance to experience Percy Hill live and you aren't moved to dance, you better check your vital signs." And now, Butterfield prepares to be raised from its foundations Saturday night, when Percy Hill is scheduled to rattle the roof.

So who, exactly, is Percy Hill? The band, impressively enough, is comprised of six hard-working, talented musicians, all of whom are under 25 years of age! Fronted, for the most part, by Tom Powley and Joe Farrell, who both play guitar and trade off on lead vocals, the band also has, as a vocalist, Nate Wilson on keyboards (and occasionally a big Hammond organ). His brother Zack adds a percussion twist to Percy Hill's sound (bongos, cowbells, tambourine, etc.), and the ensemble is rounded off by Dylan Halacy (hidden at the back of his stage behind his huge drum kit) and Jon Hawes on bass.

Percy Hill's music is almost indescribable. The band themselves have written, "Percy Hill is a jam band fused between their Latin, rock, jazz and more recent hip-hop influences," which, while true enough, is an understatement of the xpower Percy Hill commands over an audience. Latin beats, courtesy of Zack Wilson and Halacy, as well as blues, Southern Rock, jazz, and bluegrass all combine to create the "danceable grooves" of which Percy Hill is famous. A typical Percy Hill song running five to seven minutes with toned-down studio jamming on CD shines live for a good fifteen minutes (at times longer). Bandmembers jam and solo, no holds barred, to produce music that just about anyone (who's into good tunes and solid live playing) can appreciate.

Although their new live CD, representative of Percy Hill's on-stage energy, slated for release next week on the day of the band's fourth anniversary, won't be around in time for their UMass gig, students (and the general public) can get a taste of them ahead of time.

Experience Percy Hill in Butterfield Basement this Saturday, March 29 from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. Tickets are available at the door. No drugs, alcohol or backpacks are permitted, and a picture ID is required for entrance.

Give Us Some Face!

Between March 24 and April 4, come to the Campus Center Concourse and have your picture taken for the new UMass I.D. Card; Monday-Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The photo is FREE, takes about 2 minutes, and you'll AVOID SOME BIG LINES IN THE FALL. The new card will be issued then, and it's going to make your life a lot easier! THE ALL-CAMPUS CARD can be used as your library card, Meal Plan ticket, residence hall key, and as a cash card for on-campus purchases.

I.D. Card photos are also taken in the I.D. Office, Franklin Dining Hall anytime during regular business hours.

Don't miss this photo opportunity!

Knowledge Grows Here!

Summer Session at Stony Brook

Terms start June 2 and July 14
260 courses in 40 subjects
Day and evening classes
Low NYS tuition
Live on campus or commute

Please send me the 1997 Summer Session or check out our web page at Http://www.sunysb.edu/summer/

Name
Street/Box No.
City State Zip
Telephone Area of interest
School currently attending Anticipated year of graduation

STONY BROOK STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK

Mail coupon or call 24 hours 1-800-559-7213. E-mail: summerschool@ccmail.sunysb.edu Or write: Summer Session Office, Dept. CN, University at Stony Brook, Stony Brook, NY 11794-3370

Never too late to ski

Northeast Easter offerings a real treat

Now is the prime time to travel up north and enjoy New England's endless winter fun. Although ice water is beginning to rapidly flow over the tops and through the crevices of reservoir boulders; and Peter Cotton Tail is due for his annual appearance, experience winter this spring at Stowe; Killington, Loon, Waterville Valley, Sugarbush and Mount Snow.

If you find yourself free of religious obligations this weekend then escape the Pioneer Valley and celebrate the arrival of spring on Stowe's marvelous mogul fields. Before you retire your shinny boards, challenge your alpine expertise in Stowe's Bumps and Beach Contest this Saturday. Absorb the sun while your knees absorb mighty bumps of snow on Stowe's steep and narrow slopes. Registration is on the day of the competition between 8–9 a.m. at the main lodge.

Alfresco News with Liz Anderson

Killington Mountain is welcoming spring with the "Ma-Ma-Ma-My Corona Promo." Blasting music from the Boston radio station Kiss 108 this "spring fling" will begin on March 27 and last until March 30. Featuring a Frozen T- Shirt Contest, a Lime Dance, a Pinata, and their very own wacky version of the Lambada, Killington will be hosting the Corona Promo in Mahogany Ridge at the base lodge.

To the beat of adrenaline pumping music Killington will also be holding a "Becks on the Deck" party at the base lodge. On March 27, Killington will be maintaining a long standing New England tradition, Pond Skimming.

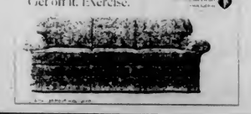
A ritual that first took place in the spring of 1965, Pond Skimming, challenges skiers and snowboarders to ride the tail of their skis/snowboards down a snow covered slope, and skim the top of a shallow pond. Even though this event will take place in the spring, Killington advises all participants to dress warmly, because this 15 seconds of fun surely will not be water proof. Prizes will be given out to "The Best Wipe Out," "Longest Skim," and "The Best Costume."

On Easter Sunday Killington encourages all skiers and snowboarders to leave their Sunday bests in the closet, get dressed up in zany threads, and ski or ride in the Costume Parade. All snow enthusiasts in the parade will receive a free ticket valid for next year. The grand prize winner for the best costume is a 3-Day Killington Golf School Weekend including lodging. Registration for the parade is at the Snow Shed Lodge between 8–9 a.m. on Easter Sunday.

Killington is not the only mountain acknowledging Easter Sunday, Loon Mountain will be having a sunrise religious service at 5:15–6 a.m. free of charge on the top of the mountain. Loon Mountain will also be hosting the Snickers Snow Board Competition at 8:30 a.m. on March 30. Registration is from 7–8 a.m. and there is a $10 fee to participate in this all terrain open event.

Waterville Valley is also hosting a sunrise religious service on Easter Sunday at 5:15 a.m. on the top of the mountain. All outdoor enthusiasts are invited to celebrate Easter from the top of the world at Waterville Valley due to their accessible lift service free of charge. Following the religious service there will be a traditional New England breakfast in Waterville Valley's base lodge.

Don't worry if you can not get away this weekend because the following weekend (April 4–6) the Green Mountains will be sweltering with hot music festivals. Vermont will be jammin' with Rasta rhythms from as far north as Sugarbush to Mount Snow's southern apex.

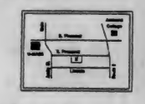


Sugarbush will be hosting a weekend long Reggae Festival featuring the bands UNI, Channel DUB Band, and Motel Brown. On April 5, North Sugarbush will be holding their annual Pond Skimming Contest.

If you can not make it up to Sugarbush, then enjoy Mount Snow's Baccardi Reggae Festival, during the weekend of April 4–6. On April 4, Mount Snow will be hosting the Jamaican Bobsled Team, and lively music of Motel Brown and Mighty Charge.

On Saturday night Mount Snow will be hopping with a Beer Garden and Barbecue to the live music of One People and The L-Tones. The resort's Snow Barn will be have live music by UHF and Entertain also on Saturday night. Before replacing your skis/snowboards with a pair of swim trunks, try them on together and go spring skiing at New England's endless winter hot spots.

Liz Anderson is a Collegian columnist.



Get off it. Exercise.

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY

53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385

- Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
- State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
- Over 90 years staff experience
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
- Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
- We provide substitute transportation
- Users of Sikkens paint products

Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities

Shop Registration # RS1212

COURTESY ELLIOTT LANDY

Backed up by the Band, Tom Pacheco's new album is worth checking out.

Pacheco recalls the summer of love

By Joshua Bayd
Collegian Staff

TOM PACHECO
Woodstock Winter
Mercury Records

Woodstock Winter is the album of an observer. Of course, one of the most common characteristics of folk is the observation of what is going on in the world around the singer or writer. Pacheco's lyrics clearly denote what he is singing/writing about, but do not necessarily embrace the complexities of language, therefore finding themselves as lyrics most anyone can write, and in terms of the music on Woodstock Winter, that is also pretty much straight–forward.

Not to say the performances of the music is not indicative of talent or experience. There's plenty of that in the personnel playing on this album. Pacheco only plays rhythm acoustic guitar, but has a voice which has a story–telling clarity to it, with a wavering that may have been picked up from his many years in Europe (Ireland and Norway especially). His band–mates on Woodstock Winter are none other than The Band. What could be more Woodstock?

Guitarist Jim Weider, Keyboardist Richard Bell, and drummer Randy Ciarlante, new members of the revitalized Band, play on most tracks. However, appearances from original Band members, drummer/singer Levon Helm and virtuosic keyboardist Garth Hudson are not at all rare. Rick Danko, also a charter –(and current) member of The Band — who were also once Bob Dylan's backup band in the mid– '60s and again in the '70s — playing bass and taking most lead vocals for the original Band (which also consisted of guitarist/songwriter Robbie Robertson and the late pianist/singer Richard Manuel) for backing vocals.

Together with Pacheco (and session bassist Rob Leon; Danko also plays bass on one song, "Nobody Killed Billy The Kidd"), The Band casts sweet melodies and churn out some fine folk–rock performances. Weider sticks close to his predecessor Robertson's singing, down–home soulful style when playing lead guitar, allowing his fellow new Bandmates to fall in comfortably behind. Anytime Hudson touches the keys (whether it be synthesizer or organ), the usual magic is emitted. Helm takes the drumming duties over from his young protege Ciarlante on "She's A Smart Woman," "Christmas On Times Square" and is more expressive with his stylings.

The opening song, "The Hills Of Woodstock" hearkens back to a time when, in the late '60s, Pacheco lived in Woodstock before 500,000 hippies and other assorted rainbow children descended on the town for that big festival there. Back when it was a quiet little upstate New York hillside town. Back when he could walk into a general store and run into locals Hudson and Helm buying studio snacks for the recording of their 1968 landmark album, Music From The Big Pink, and Dylan (also a Woodstock resident from '65–'70), who might've been buying Pampers for his baby boy Jakob (now the lead singer and songwriter of The Wallflowers).

Other songs question ideals of patriotism, especially the Oklahoma City Federal Building Bombing three years ago ("Real Americans?"), and divine intervention ("Four Angels," a charming acoustic song). There are two straight– up tributes to American music pioneers ("Hey Hey Robert Johnson" and "Jerry's Gone," the latter for the late Grateful Dead guitarist/singer and songwriter Jerry Garcia). Despite the mid–tempo repetition of most songs, this disc does give a little known singer/songwriter the chance to jam with some friends, and for Pacheco, after having been in Europe so long, he can also write some straight–up songs about American people and American places. B-

Golden Gophers no longer in the college hoop shadows

By Steve Herman
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Two more wins and Clem Haskins will have all the attention he'd ever want. Until then, he'd rather stay in the shadows.

Trouble is, by just reaching the Final Four, Haskins and the Minnesota Golden Gophers are no longer a surprise team amid some traditional NCAA heavyweights.

"We have no problem with that. We know we have a fine club," Haskins said yesterday during a conference call of Final Four coaches. "In the Big Ten, if you win 16 ball games, you know you're doing something right. People around the country are starting to recognize that now."

Minnesota, which wasn't invited to the tournament last year despite an 18-12 regular-season record, plays defending champion Kentucky in one semifinal game Saturday, while Arizona plays North Carolina in the other matchup. The winners meet Monday night in the NCAA title game.

Of the four teams and four coaches, Haskins and the Gophers are the only ones in the Final Four for the first time.

Anonymous, maybe, but still very dangerous, Kentucky coach Rick Pitino said.

"I can't find many weaknesses they have," he said. "I've watched about eight films of them so far. Last year, they probably deserved to be in the NCAA and they got valuable experience from the NIT and took that to a new level this year.

"They're as well schooled in fundamentals as any team we've faced," Pitino said.

Minnesota (31-3) also has the best record among the Final Four. The biggest question for the Gophers, perhaps, is the status of point guard Eric Harris, the key to the team's defense, who bruised a shoulder in a double-overtime win over Clemson last week. He received treatments with ice and electrical stimulation and may be ready to play on Saturday, Haskins said.

"Any time you have that type injury, it doesn't heal in one week," the coach said. "He hasn't practiced since that game but we'll test it and see what happens. We feel he will be able to play."

And the Kentucky depth, which had been suspect after the loss of four players from last year's championship team to the NBA, also concerns Haskins.

"They have eight or nine really quality players," he said. "They have good depth, and Ron Mercer without doubt is one of the finest college players. He's very explosive."

Minnesota has an explosive player of its own in Bobby Jackson, the Big Ten player of the year.

"He's been one of the best-kept secrets in the country. We're hoping to keep it a secret for two more games," Haskins said. Kentucky (34-4), whose six previous NCAA titles are second only to UCLA's 11, will end the season where it began, in the RCA Dome. The Wildcats lost their season opener to Clemson in overtime last November, and with the loss of four players to the pros, the transfer of another player, and a knee injury to leading scorer Derek Anderson at midseason, Pitino didn't expect to return to Indianapolis with a chance for another title.

"I'm very surprised the way we've developed," he said. "The preseason was a nightmare, as far as our expectations. We had to lower our expectations a little bit and tried to be the best we could each day.

"The guys did a tremendous job focusing in with all the adversity. They've earned it."

Calipari and Halberstam fined for off-color remarks

NEW YORK (AP) — The NBA, punishing non-game related speech for the first time in league history, fined New Jersey Nets coach John Calipari $25,000 and Miami Heat broadcaster David Halberstam $2,500 yesterday.

"Discipline... has historically been limited to comments about the game," commissioner David Stern said. "However the recent statements by [Calipari and Halberstam] have forced us to re-examine this role and our responsibility. This is uncharted territory for an NBA commissioner."

Calipari was fined for calling reporter Dan Garcia of the Newark Star-Ledger "a [bleeping] Mexican idiot" during a heated argument after a Nets practice last Thursday. The coach has since apologized, maintaining it was an ill-advised attempt at humor.

Halberstam, who has been Miami's announcer for five years, was fined for remarks he made last Wednesday while broadcasting a game against Golden State.

Remarking on a pass thrown by guard John Crotty, Halberstam said: "Thomas Jefferson would have been proud of that pass. When Thomas Jefferson was around, basketball was not invented yet, but those slaves working at Thomas Jefferson's farm, I'm sure they would have made good basketball players."

Several Miami players said they were offended, and Halberstam has apologized for the remark.

"The discrepancy [in the fine amounts] is not intended to reflect any judgment as to which of the marks was worse — in my mind they were equally intolerable," Stern said. "The disparity in amounts results from a realistic acknowledgement of the differing financial impact the fines will have on the individuals involved."

"These gentlemen, and everybody associated with the NBA, should understand that racially insensitive or derogatory comments are not acceptable."

Penn Street Nightclub
Live Music & Dance Club
EVERY TUESDAY
GAY NIGHT
FREE BEFORE 10:00pm
18+ NO-SMO
EVERY THURSDAY
THE DAILY BISCUIT
HIGH ENERGY
Dance Party
A FULL HOUSE EVERY WEEK
FREE BEFORE 10:00pm
EVERY FRIDAY 9-2am
RETRO NIGHT
FREE BEFORE 10:00pm
MUSIC FROM THE 70's, 80's & 90's
EVERY SATURDAY
TEEN NIGHT
AGES 15-19 • 7:30 - 11:30 PM
PROPER ID AND DRESS REQUIRED
LIVE MUSIC
Thur. Mar. 20 @ 7:00 pm
A Slate Records presents a Benefit for Local Artists
THE INVADERS
OWSLAUGHT/ALISON'S ROOM/LINEE PERONCELI
ARCHITECTURAL MISAPHONIC/JUST ABOUT DONE
Fri. Mar. 21 @ 9:00 pm
TEXAS FLOOD
Sat. Mar. 22 @ 9:00 pm
BARRY KINGSTON & THE SCREAMING SOULS
FEATHER CLOWN
Sun. Mar. 23 @ 7:00 pm
LORDZ OF BROOKLYN
GRATITUDE/DRAIN/GREEDY EDNA
Wed. Mar. 26 @ 7:30 pm
THE DESCENDENTS
THE SUICIDE MACHINES/SHADES APART
Fri. Mar. 28 @ 7:00 pm - Upstairs
THE BREEDERS
LUTEFISK/BRENDON BENSON
Fri. Mar. 28 @ 9:00 pm
STEVE WESTFIELD & THE SLOW BAND
(Downstairs Free w/Breeders Ticket)
UPCOMING
Sat. March 29 STAIND 18+
Sun. March 30 SUFFOCATION All Ages
Tues. April 1 BLOODGOOD GANG All Ages
Fri. April 4 THE BLACK REBELS
Sun. April 6 THE WRETCHEDNESS All Ages
Wed. April 9 BODMEN 18+
Thu. April 10 PAT BAG
4/18-4/20 THE REALLY LOUD MUSIC FESTIVAL
Wed. April 23 STRYPE All Ages
Thurs. April 24 ACOUSTIC JUNCTION 18+
Proceeds to benefit AMC
Advance tickets available at the Northampton Box office, 586-8686, 1-800-THE TICK, Strawberries Record Stores, For The Record in Amherst, Absolut Music in Greenfield, Tix Unlimited at U. Mass, Flashpoint Records in Westfield, Music Gallery in Enfield, & T Side Records in Northampton 586-9350
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
http://www.virtual-valley.com/penn-street
413-584-7771

Boricuas Unidos Presents
Pueblo, Una Esencia
3rd Annual Puerto Rican Cultural Night
featuring
Traditionally prepared Puerto Rican Cuisine followed by an address on Puerto Rican Unity
by
UMass Alumn
Limari Rivera
Willie Colón
Saturday, March 29, 1997
6:30 pm-2:00 am (Dinner will be served exclusively from 6:30 - 8:00 pm)
Student Union Ballroom
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
Performance by: Cayena
DJ music by: Concepto Latino
Cash Bar
$8 College Students with valid ID, $12 General Public
For Further information call Boricuas Unidos at (413)577-0051.
Advanced tickets call TIX at (413)545-0412

Thats Right!
Screen Printed T-Shirts On 100% Cotton!
Many Colors to Choose From!
PRINTSHACK & APPAREL UNLIMITED
322 Russell Street • Hadley, Mass
Call Today 586-6933
3A Minimum Includes: 1 side 1 color Ex 4.31.97

NOW IS THE TIME
MARCH 29-31
SUSPENSION DEMO DAYS
You've heard about it! Your friends have it!
You've never tried it?
Smooth-out mountain trails or in-town potholes
10% OFF SUSPENSION BIKES OR UPGRADES ALL WEEKEND
FUN FITNESS TRANSPORTATION
VALLEY BICYCLES Since 1981
Only 7/10 miles from the Rod Trail
419 Main St., Amherst 256-0898 or 800-851-5157
Open Mon.-Sat. 10-6 Sun. 12-5
Always a FREE Helmet with any new bike purchase

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Over ~500~ Microbrews
Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines
SPECIALS
Sam Adams Lager $8.99 12-pk bottles
Wachusett 6-pk $4.99 (Country Ale, IPA, Nut Brown)
Bass Ale 6-pk $5.99
Johnny Mash Hard Cider 6-pk $4.99
BEER SPECIALS
Rolling Rock 12-pk bottles $7.39
Bud & Bud Light 16oz. bottles/6-pk $4.99
Molson Golden 12-pk cans $7.99
Michelob Reg. & Lt. 18-pk cans $9.99
Warsteiner 12-pack bottles $8.99
1/2 KEG SPECIALS
Killian's . . . $65.00
Rolling Rock . $45.00
LIQUOR SPECIALS
Malibu Rum $9.99/750 ml
Absolut $11.99/750 ml
Sauza Gold Tequila $9.99/1 L
Boones Wines 5 for $9.99
Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers - Ice - Mixers - Mini Kegs - Beer Glasses
Rt. 9 East College Street one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E

SPORTS NOTICE

THE MASSACHUSETTS WOMEN'S LACROSSE GAME, ORIGINALLY SCHEDULED FOR YESTERDAY, WILL BE PLAYED THIS AFTERNOON AT 3:30 P.M. AT TOTMAN FIELD.

Injuries have been more than abundant on women's Final Four teams

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — They've rehabbed torn knees, taped up broken fingers, limped around on bum ankles and wondered where oh where it would all end.

Old Dominion lost its backup center to Hoshimoto's Disease. Tennessee lost its starting point guard to a torn knee ligament during a preseason pickup game.

Things got so bad that Notre Dame suited up its student manager for the NCAA tournament. Stanford resorted to calling in an All-America volleyball player.

The road to Cincinnati has been a major pain for the four teams competing for the women's national championship this weekend at Riverfront Coliseum. They've had to be as concerned with the breaks as with their brackets.

"I'm so proud of this team," said Notre Dame coach Muffet McGraw, who has painted her nails green to celebrate her team's first Final Four appearance. "They've played with tremendous heart and they've not hung their heads at all."

There were plenty of reasons to count all four finalists out along the way. One starter would go down, followed by her replacement.

No one has been hit harder than Notre Dame (31-6), which was down to seven scholarship players at one point because of injuries. A student manager suited up during the NCAA East Regional just to give the Irish a chance.

The whole season has been that way for the Irish. Twenty minutes into the first practice of the season, guard Danielle Green tore an Achilles' tendon, ending her season.

In Game 5, guard Niele Ivey tore a knee ligament, ending her season. Volleyball player Kristina Ervin joined the team and broke her nose after six games.

It didn't end there. In February, guard Kari Hutchinson broke her hand and missed eight games. And guard Adrienne Jordan injured her hip in the Big East tournament.

Somehow, Notre Dame kept winning.

"All we've heard all along is we only have seven or eight people, we don't have enough horsepower, we don't have the depth, we don't have the size and we don't have the quickness," McGraw said. "This team likes to hear what they can't do, then they turn around and do it."

Notre Dame (31-6) can compare scars with Tennessee (27-10) in their semifinal on Friday night. The Lady Vols lost point guard Kellie Jolly before the season began, one reason for a poor start. Then Laurie Milligan, who replaced Jolly at the point, tore cartilage in her knee and had surgery Feb. 13.

"At the time we were going through that, we were wondering if we were going to see the end of the tunnel, so to speak," coach Pat Summitt said.

Fortunately for Tennessee, Jolly was able to return and play effectively. The Lady Vols were 10-6 without her and 17-4 since her return, putting them in position for their fifth national title.

"When we started the season, I did not think this basketball team could win a national championship," Summitt said. "On paper, I said we're not supposed to win. But I'm not going to count this basketball team out."

Stanford (34-1) was just looking for players when a series of injuries — strained knees, a broken finger — depleted the roster. Coach Tara VanDerveer turned to Kristin Folkl, an All-America volleyball player who led Stanford to the national championship in December.

Folkl played as a freshman, sat out last season to play volleyball, then came back in Stanford's time of need.

"I don't know that I've ever been on a team that's so close," Folkl said. "You wouldn't believe the bonding that goes on. It's rare that everyone on a team is so committed to one goal."

Old Dominion (33-1) has been the healthiest of the bunch. Backup center Angie Liston has been sidelined since Jan. 31 by a thyroid condition called Hoshimoto's Disease. Clarisse Machanguana missed a couple of games with pneumonia.

The main question about Old Dominion is not its health, but its strength. The Lady Monarchs have struggled in the tournament, needing overtime to beat Purdue and going scoreless in the final 6:35 of a victory over Florida.

As long as All-America point guard Ticha Penicheiro stays healthy, Old Dominion figures it has a chance.

■ hoop

continued from page 12

20 turnovers.

Seeing the freshman manhandle the experienced senior was symbolically significant, because it marked that changing of the guard — the passing of the torch from the outgoing graduate to the blossoming freshman.

Flashback four years and you'll find the mirror image of the Arizona–Kansas/Vaughn–Bibby matchup. Second round, Duke vs. California. In other words, Duke senior point guard Bobby Hurley vs. Cal freshman PG Jason Kidd.

Duke, while not favored as heavily as Kansas was this year, had destroyed the Southern Illinois Salukis in the first round to set up the game with the Golden Bears.

A national player of the year candidate, Hurley was considered by many to be the paradigm for future point guards. Tenacious on defense and incredibly creative on offense, Hurley was a four–year starter for the Devils and the Most Outstanding Player of the 1992 Final Four.

But Duke couldn't get the job done and as the Blue Devils faltered down the stretch of the game, Kidd just plain outplayed Hurley.

The headline the next week in Sports Illustrated — "Changing of the Guard."

It seems only fitting that Bibby's performance be compared to Kidd's.

When Providence coach Pete Gillen was interviewed on WFAN AM radio before his team's Elite Eight tilt with Arizona he made reference to Bibby and Kidd.

"Our assistants told me he's a very Jason Kidd–type player, he's very Jason Kidd–like," he said.

He is. Bibby can rebound, he can pass, he can play defense. But unlike Kidd, Bibby can shoot. And if the comparisons hold true, Bibby has a bright future ahead of him.

Just to add to the comparison: Guess who Bibby's favorite player is? Jason Kidd.

• Rick Pitino has a habit of naming his teams, especially the ones that make runs at the Final Four. In 1992, when the Wildcats lost to eventual champion Duke in the Elite Eight, Pitino dubbed his squad "The Unforgettables."

Last year's championship team received the name "The Unouchables."

This year's team, which has been leveled by injuries (Kentucky had eight players dressed for its Elite Eight game against Utah), stays with the Un–theme. The name: "The Unbelievables."

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

■ softball

continued from page 12

Michigan State, Louisiana Tech and South Florida.

Things aren't going to get any easier either. After tomorrow's game against Princeton, the Minutewomen jump right into conference play with doubleheaders against Dayton on Saturday, and St. Bonaventure on Sunday.

Part of the reason for the Minutewomen's struggles has been that they have yet to practice outside this season. The softball fields are still unplayable, and so they have been forced to practice in the Boyden gym.

The team has been doing some situational hitting, and continues to improve in pitching. Their biggest problem right now, however, is their defense. Practicing in the gym is just too different from the field for them to be able to make much improvement.

"It's really different taking a ground ball in the gym compared to outside," Sortino said.

Despite their recent struggles and the lack of quality practice, the women have been bolstered by the recent improvements in their play, especially hitting and pitching. The pitchers have been putting forth a lot of effort, and Kim Gutridge has been hitting incredibly well, batting close to .400.

"It's not like we're just going to walk in and roll over," Sortino said. "They're going to have their hands full too."

■ briefs

continued from page 12

to finish strong.

The following day, Rutgers held a criterium on its Livingston, N.J. campus. UMass again showed a strong presence, despite the club's low numbers.

Last weekend, UMass travelled to Philadelphia for a criterium against the University of Pennsylvania. With a tough hill climb and a fast downhill, this race was designed with the experienced racer in mind.

Sunday, UMass finished the weekend with another criterium, hosted by Penn State in Allentown, Pa. The flat, fast course was dominated by UMass' two women riders, Nellie Fabian and Tara Maic, who finished third and fifth respectively.

UMass still has a busy schedule lined up, racing until mid– May. For more information about the club or its schedule, call Dan Cordy, club president, at 256–8175.

Intramural action

It may not feel like spring, but the UMass Intramural Office has already gotten its spring sports program underway.

Although several rosters have been filled, there remain a few special spots on various teams' rosters. For information about these spots and the sports in action, stop by the office at 215 Boyden or call at 545–2693.

• The new facility schedule for the last part of the year is now available. Call the 24–hour facility line at 545–2693 for more info.

Sports Briefs was compiled by Collegian staff member Casey Kane.

STUDY THIS AD
This is not a test...It's an opportunity. An opportunity to manage a fun, productive team while establishing relationships and gaining experience for the future. Examine these benefits:
• Hours designed around your class schedule
• Full time hours available during semester break
• $500 Hiring Bonus
• Learning management skills you can use for a life time
• Advancement opportunities after graduation
• Positions available in Easthampton, Northampton, Hadley
The prerequisites? Ambition, effective people skills, proven leadership ability, and good academic credentials. If you think you can make the grade, send/fax your resume or apply in person at: Burger King: attn: Bob Turner, 353 Russell St., Hadley, MA, 01035 Fax: 413-527-7654
"Working Together...To Be The Best"
F.P.S. Inc is an Independent Franchisee of Burger King Corporation.
BURGER KING

R&P Liquors
• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
• Largest Selection of Micro Brews in S. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
299 West St. • South Amherst
Minutes from Mill Valley, The Brooks, & The Square

SPRING SALE
Now until April 15th
August the First
• 20% off most loose Beads, all Bags, Purses, Pillows & Tapestries.
• 10% off all paper products including Journals, Albums, Cards, Notecards, Stationary.
• Free pewter charm with $5 purchase & This Ad
197 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 256-0276

What in the World
Can You Do With Your Education?

TEACH IMPACT
EXPERIENCE
WorldTeach
1-800-4-TEACH-0 • info@worldteach.org www.iqc.org/worldteach

Calvin Klein
25% off
Calvin Klein Basic Underwear Styles
2 Weeks Only!
March 27-April 10
J•RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN
22 Masonic Street
Northampton • 586-6336
Open 7 Days

THURSDAY • FRIDAY • SATURDAY 9:30-1:00 AM
Klub Kai
The Area's Newest Dance Club
$2 TROPICAL DRINKS SPECIAL
99¢ BUD & BUD LIGHT DRAFT
$4 BUD & BUD LIGHT PITCHERS
$1.99 TEST TUBE SHOTS
FREE KAMI THURS & SAT ONLY
THURSDAY NIGHT Sober Sex Party 18 and over This Thursday Only D.J. Cool Regg
FRIDAY NIGHT Ladies Night No Cover Charge for the Ladies! D.J. E.Doogie
SATURDAY NIGHT Post Spring Break Party D.J. Cool Regg
DRESS TO IMPRESS • PROPER ATTIRE & POSITIVE I.D. REQUIRED • 21+
FRIENDLY • CLEAN • PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
MY FARMS MALL • HADLEY • 585-5774

After six months, new graduates are often waiting for their first job.
Our Co-op MBA's are waiting for their first paycheck.
Getting your first job isn't easy, unless you're part of Northeastern's Co-op MBA Program. After six months of study, you'll work another six months in a paid professional-level position. A final nine months of school completes your degree. At the end of the program, you'll have built a solid resume and gained the valuable contacts and experience necessary to launch your career. To find out how you can have a great job in six months, call us at (617) 373-5960 or visit our web site at www.cba.neu.edu/gsba. But, don't wait too long, the next class starts in June.
Northeastern University
Graduate School of Business Administration
Full-time programs that put you to work

Halters

Bootlegs

Platforms

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Looking for a home away from home? Come to Sigma Kappa Open Rush Mon. 3/24 5-7pm (Dinner), Tues 3/25 6-8pm , Thurs 3/27 6-8pm Please call 256-6887 to RSVP. Licensed behind Hillel House.

AUTO FOR SALE

1992 Ford Explorer 4x4, A/C, 5-speed, 2 door, 90K, looks and runs excellent $9500 549-6894

1984 Ford T-Bird auto trans, A/C, 5.0L V8. 59,500 miles. Telephone (413)253-7036 $2000 or B/O.

EMPLOYMENT

Abt Telephone Research Center seeks candidates for interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Flexible hours: Monday-Friday, 5 pm-11pm; Saturday 11 am-5pm; and Sunday 12pm-5pm and 5pm-10pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.75/hour with paid training and earn up to $8.00/hour. Conveniently located in the new Venture Center, with free rides on nearby bus lines. Interested candidates, please call (413)587-1807. An equal opportunity employer

Need a summer job? Knew the web? Sell MCI Internet Websites to anyone, whenever you want to work. Low cost, nice income for you. Call (800)372-7683 or e-mail for more information. dlenger@aol.com

EMPLOYMENT

$300- $500 Weekly! Full/Part Time processing HUD/FHA mortgage refunds. No experience. Own hours. Call 24/7 days. (504)429-9233 ext. 5016D12

Loaders Needed: Summer teenage bicycling trips. US, Canada, Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hostelling Program, Ashfield Rd., Conway, MA 01341 (800)343-6132

Saisa Rapa Expanding company seeks motivated people to earn extra money. Full or Part Time. Will train. (413)732-0699

Leesing Agents Full and Part Time for the busy summer session. Must be outgoing, friendly, and willing to work many hours. Responsibilities include collecting rant, processing applications, answering phones and general clerical work. Please apply in person at Cliffside Apartments between 1-4pm. No phone calls please. EOE

Crebappia White Water Looking for one person to greet trips. Work in restaurant and retail store. Full-Time Summer Job. Some positions Looking for multi-talented, friendly person. (413)625-2286

SOpportunity$ Looking for several exciting, enthusiastic and dedicated people to expand an already lucrative markal Graat opportunity for those who are serious. Interested persons call Todd at (413)739-4689

EMPLOYMENT

Summer in Maine- Camp Androscoggin for boys needs staff to teach tennis, soccer, lacrosse, baseball, swimming, sailing, archery, photography, nature, fishing, mountain biking, art, ropes, radio. HAVE FUN. Have an impact. Write, E-mail, or call collect: 801 West Street, Harrison, NY 10528 (914)835-5800 http://www.coolworks.com/showme/camp/androsco

Earn great money and valuable Sales/Marketing experience Memolink's Memoboards are coming to UMass!! We need one highly motivated individual to direct our sales project. Contact David at (800)563-6654

Amherst Leisure Services is now accepting applications for summer positions. Aquatics positions: Pool Maintenance Supervisor, Canoa Instructors, Assistant Pool Manager, Lifeguards, Swim Instructors, and Cashiers. Day Camp Positions: Camp Counselors, Special Needs Coordinator/Supervisor. In Mainstream setting, Special Needs Counselor/Aides in Mainstream setting, Camp Art Director, Camp Resource Manager. Sports Positions: Ball Field Maintenance, Youth Tennis Instructors. Applications are available at the Town of Amherst Human Resources and Leisure Services Offices. Return completed application by the preferred deadline of 3/31/97 to: Town of Amherst Human Resources Office, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst, MA 01002. An EO/AA Employer

EMPLOYMENT

Legal Assistants Wanted- Fall 1997 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office, get hands-on experience in the Legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the Legal profession necessary— training provided. Stop by the office today and pick up an application. 922 Campus Center

Technical Support/ISP Looking for a great part-time job? We are a local, progressive, internet service provider that is looking for Quality, Energetic, and Reliable persons to join our team. Requirements: experience in Windows '95, Windows 3.1, Mac, Dialup Networking and TC PIP Call our job hotline today! (413)587-4333 or e-mail jobs@crocker.com

Cruise Lines Hiring Earn up to $7000+/month plus free world travel (Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. (919)918-7767 ext. C180. (Member, Better Business Bureau CARE Program)

Alaska Employment Earn up to $3000-$6000+/month in fisheries, parks, resorts, airfare, food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (919)918-7767 ext. A180

Part-Time Saisa Rapa Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast! Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.: D40, NYC, NY 10014

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise and Load Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

EDUCATION MAJORS!!
DON'T JUST WORK THIS SUMMER. COME GROW PROFESSIONALLY AT AMERICA'S PREMIER BROTHER/SISTER CAMPS WINADU FOR BOYS DANBEE FOR GIRLS IN WESTERN MASS.
SALARY / ROOM / BOARD AND TRAVEL INCLUDED!!
COME VISIT WITH OUR REPRESENTATIVE: THURSDAY, APRIL 3RD 802 CAMPUS CENTER 10AM - 4PM (WALK-INS WELCOME!)
FOR MORE INFO CALL 800-494-6238

FOR RENT

Sugarloaf Estates Ultra modern, two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Now leasing Spring and Fall. Call 665-3856

FOR RENT

Summer Rental- West Hyannis Port Cape Cod three bedroom Walk to Craigville Beach. Available 5/25-8/31 (508)778-6519

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

Buy wholesale, not retail. The last phone card you will ever own. MCI Pre-paid only $2.00 for UD minutes. This card is rechargeable. Mail $2.00 and SASE to: Collegiate Communications, P.O. Box 785, Attleboro, MA 02703 (800)372-7883

HOUSE FOR RENT

Uptown, Great location! Corner of Kellogg St. Downstairs, great for two people $500/month. 549-6285 Summer/Fall

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT
30 hours $395
American Academy
1-800-908-Prep
(please leave your name and number)

MUSICIANS

DRUMMER WANTED
PUNK/SKA BAND 25 TAYE needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming Call Dave and Ryan 665-9172

MISCELLANEOUS

Fundraiser- Motivated groups needed to earn $500+ promoting AT&T, Discover, gas and retail cards. Since 1989, we've helped thousands of groups raise the money they need. Call Gina at (800)592-2121 ext. 110. Free CD to qualified callers

PERSONALS

Adam:
Even though you won't be able to sail along the Rhine with me, I'll be thinking about you, especially next semester when you're soaking up that California sun!
-Your secret admirer

Jeremy-
You think that I don't pay any attention to you but I remember our four classes together. Don't give up, I've got your number!
-Your SOM lover

To the girl at the Whitmore Snack Bar-
I like the way you melt my cheese!

ROOMMATE WANTED

Two bedroom apt. ASAP! Mill Valley Estates. Rent negotiable Call 253-0592

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

SERVICES

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State St. Northampton. 586-0829

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Photophile? Me too. I'll pose, you shoot. Iris 587-0850

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

Summer Sublet
3 bedroom Puffton available 6/1 549-5941

1 bedroom apartment available immediately. Call Tricia for more info. (617)247-7388

TRAVEL

Caribbean/Mexico $189 R/T Europe $169 O/W Fly the world dirt cheap. ONE WORLD TRAVEL 587-0001

Party Weekend in Vermont April 4-6, only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus. $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be preordered by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek cosponsors, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES ANNOUNCEMENTS APARTMENT FOR RENT AUTO FOR SALE COMMUNITY EVENTS EMPLOYMENT ENTERTAINMENT FOR SALE FOUND (2 DAYS FREE) HAPPY BIRTHDAY HOUSES FOR RENT INSTRUCTION LOST MUSICIANS MISCELLANEOUS MOTORCYCLES PERSONALS ROOM FOR RENT ROOM WANTED ROOMMATE WANTED SERVICES SUMMER SUBLET TO SUBLET TRAVEL TRANSPORTATION WANTED TO RENT WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, MARCH 27

Concert — The UMass Outing Club (UMOC) presents Entrain performing in the Student Union Ballroom. Stairwell opens with an acoustic set starting at 8 p.m. Tickets available at Tix Unlimited for $5.

Discussion — Rodney Wilson, the founder of Gay and Lesbian History Month and a history teacher in St. Louis, will discuss "Lesbian and Gay Activism: The Next Generation." The event is free and will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, 903, which is wheelchair accessible. Part of the GLBT Lecture Series.

Film — Yvonne Rainer, renowned filmmaker, dancer, writer and winner of the Mac Arthur Foundation Lifetime "Genius" Award will premiere her new film at 7 p.m. in the Main Lecture Hall at Hampshire College. The film, Murder and Murder, is Rainer's seventh feature and was the recent winner of the Teddy Award at the 1997 Berlin Film Festival. The event is free and wheelchair accessible.

Info–social — An informal Info Social will be held tonight at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium for those involved in the Goodell Takeover. Drinks, snacks and music will be provided. For more information, contact Lynn in the Campus Activities Office at 545–4716.

Lecture — American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) president Nadine Strossen will speak at Mount Holyoke College at 7:30 p.m. as part of the new lecture series to honor Mary Lyon, the college's founder. The event is free and open to the public and will be held in the college's Art Museum in Gamble Auditorium.

Voting — MassPIRG reminds our members and supporters to vote yes on Question two to keep the MassPIRG chapter at UMass. The polls are at Newman Center, the Hatch, and the dining halls from 11:30–a.m. – 7 p.m.

FRIDAY, MARCH 28

Lecture — Former Olympian swimmer Greg Louganis will speak about his decision to go public with his homosexuality and the fact that he has AIDS at Mount Holyoke College at 7:30 p.m. in Chapin Auditorium. The event is free and open to the public.

NOTICES

Financial aid — Applications for summer financial aid are now available at Financial Aid Services. You must be a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass: taking summer classes through Continuing Education; going on approved summer international exchange program through IPO; or working on a graduate dissertation. Deadline is April 18. Late applications will not be accepted.

Dance — The UMass Ballroom Dance Club invites everyone to come dance with us. Meets every Tuesday and Thursday, 5:15–7 p.m. in the Totman Gym. Newcomer/beginner Tango/Rumba instruction starts March 27.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545–9484.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one–acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to department of comparative lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Band wanted — Amnesty International is looking for a Jazz Band to play for its upcoming fundraiser this spring. If interested, call the Amnesty office at 549–1925 or Babz at 546–3105 as soon as possible.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPIRG, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

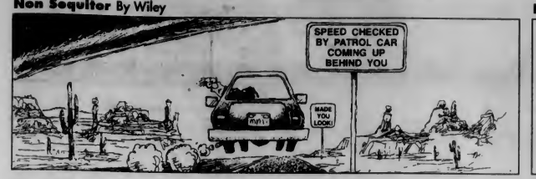
FYI's are public serv! :e announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Member O.C.M.P.
"we accept all major credit cards"

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network



2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
$1 drinks Rum & Coke & always $1 Bud light draft

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 27, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ℡		New Explorers (In Stereo) ℡		Mystery! "Cadfael" "The Devil's Novice" ℡			Wait for God	T. Old House	Ancestors ℡
WFSB	3	News ℡	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Peter Rabbit and Friends		Moloney "Loved and Lost" ℡		48 Hours (In Stereo) ℡		News ℡	Late Show ℡
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Ent. Tonight		Peter Rabbit and Friends		Moloney "Loved and Lost" ℡		48 Hours (In Stereo) ℡		News	Late Show ℡
WCVB	5	News ℡	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ℡	Figure Skating ℡		Vital Signs (In Stereo) ℡		Turning Point ℡		News ℡	Nightline ℡
WLVI	6	Full House ℡	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		★★ "Fire Birds" (1990, Adventure) Nicolas Cage				News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo) ℡
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ℡	Friends ℡	Sudden-Susan	Seinfeld (R) ℡	Naked Truth	Law & Order "Showtime" ℡		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Fresh Prince	Martin ℡	Judge Judy ℡	Real TV ℡	Cape "The Accusation" (R) ℡		Baywatch Nights (R)		News	LLAPD	H. Patrol	Real TV ℡
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy ℡	Friends ℡	Sudden-Susan	Seinfeld (R) ℡	Naked Truth	Law & Order "Showtime" ℡		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	10	Simpsons ℡	Roseanne ℡	Home Imp.	Seinfeld ℡	Martin (R) ℡	Living Single	New York Undercover "Hubris"		News		Coach ℡	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ℡	Friends ℡	Sudden-Susan	Seinfeld (R) ℡	Naked Truth	Law & Order "Showtime" ℡		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ℡		T. Old House	Pbs on Call	Mystery! "Cadfael" "The Devil's Novice" ℡			From Brutality	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News ℡	ABC News	Seinfeld ℡	Ent. Tonight	Figure Skating ℡		Vital Signs (In Stereo) ℡		Turning Point ℡		News ℡	Nightline ℡
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld ℡	Mad Abo. You	Sentinel "Private Eyes" ℡		Star Trek: Voyager "Warlord"		News	Martin ℡	Mad Abo. You	Real TV ℡
WTBS	49	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	Atlanta Braves: New Home		★★ "Fire Birds" (1990, Adventure) Nicolas Cage				★½ "Uncommon Valor" (1983)
A&E	41	Quincy "Even Odds"		Equalizer "Silent Fury"		Biography: Elizabeth I: Queen		Ancient Mysteries			Unexplained	Law & Order "Aria" ℡
CNN	42	WorldView ℡		Moneyline ℡	Crossfire ℡	Prime News ℡	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live ℡			World Today ℡	Sports Illus.	Moneyline ℡
COM	38	(4:00)	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	★★ "Manhattan Murder Mystery" (1993, Comedy)		Allan Alda, Woody Allen			Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	60		Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings "Dark Overnight" (R)	Sisterhood (R)		Movie Magic		Next Step (R)	Time Traveler (R)	Sisterhood (R)
ESPN	43	Up Close	Sportscenter			College Basketball: NIT Championship – Teams TBA				College Basketball: Stan Dunk & 3-Point Championship. (Live)			Sportscenter
LIFE	39	Supermarket	Debt	Designing	Designing	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Betrayal of Trust" (1994, Drama) Judith Light, Judd Hirsch.				Living	Mysteries
MTV	44	Ren & Stimpy	Sports (R)	Singled Out	Idol Savanta	Prima Time (In Stereo)		Yat (In Stereo)				Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	45	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug ℡	Rugrats ℡	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	I Love Lucy ℡	Bewitched	Newhart ℡	Odd Couple ℡	Taxi ℡	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	46	Twilight Zone	Darkside	Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)		Viewers' Choice				Masters	Inside Space	Time Trax (R) (In Stereo)
TLC	48	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Real America: 48 Hours		Close Encounters of Fifth			Case of the UFOs (R)	Real America: 48 Hours (R)
TNT	47	In the Heat of the Night ℡		In the Heat of the Night ℡		★★ "Four Play" (1975, Comedy)		Chevy Chase, Goldie Hawn.				★★½ "Used People" (1992)	Shirley MacLaine.
USA	37	Renegade "Stationary Target"		Highlander: The Series ℡		Murder, She Wrote ℡		★★½ "Mirror League" (1989, Comedy) Tom Berenger. ℡				Wings ℡	Wings ℡
HBO	33	(4:30) "Folks!"	★★ "Lown Pentcope" (1994) Kelsey Grammer.			★★ "Assassins" (1995, Drama) Sylvester Stallone. (In Stereo) R ℡						Assessine	Iceman Tapes: With a Killer
MAX	31	(4:45)	★★ "The Cobaystter" (1995) Beverly D'Angelo.			★★ "Three Wishes" (1995, Drama) Patrick Swayze. PG-13 ℡				★★ "The Doctyprsers" (1995) Robert Duvall. R ℡		★½ "Abprec" R
SHOW	36	★★ "Captain Ron" (1992, Comedy) Kurt Russell. PG-13 ℡				★★½ "Stargate" (1994, Science Fiction) Kurt Russell. PG-13 ℡						★★★ "Dead Man Walking" (1995, Drama) Susan Sarandon. R ℡

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Social Norm By Mr. K

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

University² By Frank Cho

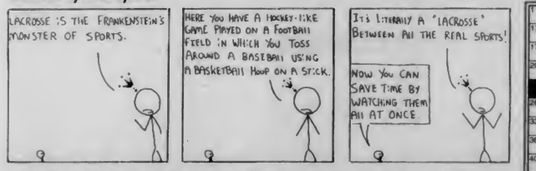
Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2020 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Cattle Burgers	Mandarin Chick. or Tofu
Pizza	Southern Fried Steak
Fiesta Rice and Cheese	Lemon Grill Burger
Croutons	Grilled Cheese

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Burger of Cow	Mandarin Chick. or Tofu
Bow Ties w/ Sauce	Southern Fried Steak
Red Beans	Squash Bake
Oatburger	pasta: Amer. Chop Suey



Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Fried Beef Patty	Mandarin Chicken
Grilled Chicken Sand.	Southern Fried Steak
Mac & Cheese	Tap Water
Oatburger	Tap Water w/ Ice

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Cowburger	Mandarin Chick. or Tofu
Pizza	Southern Fried Steak
Bow Ties w/ Sauce	Squash Bake
Black Bean Burger	pasta: Baked Ziti

Leodeo By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
If the pace seems hectic, take heart—it should slow down in the near future. Creative thinking will also help ease the stress. You may be able to find a shorter path from point to point

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
Gossiping this week has an unintended effect, so it may be wiser to refrain. A poor opinion someone has already formed about you will become set in stone this week if you're not careful.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
It's a good time to take matters into your own hands and get things settled—you'll be more satisfied when the decision is made, whatever it is. Manage money carefully, because a big purchase could be in the offing

CANCER
June 22–July 22
Although taking a vacation this week would be wonderful, it may not be the responsible thing to do. Refresh yourself with a few small indulgences, like a hot bath, and then plan a real trip for a more convenient time.

LEO
July 23–August 23
A provocative encounter keeps you guessing as the week progresses. Subtle hints could further your cause—just be sure that outsiders aren't watching, or you may attract more than your share of attention.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
A powerful person's act of compassion is good for thought, both for you and a close friend. Take it to heart, because you may have an opportunity to make someone else's life easier in the near future.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Maintaining a good frame of mind may take up much of your energy. It may be wiser to let tempers flare and die of their own accord, rather than trying to keep the seas calm by force.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
Someone close to you may have an attitude problem. If so, try to stay out of their way. It's not in your best interest to try to improve their mood, since they may take it out on you in a very unpleasant way

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
The energetic approach yields great results this week and keeps you feeling great. A peaceful weekend with a dear companion is advisable as a way to maintain your good mood and productivity.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
Maintaining your self respect this week may be difficult, with pressure coming from a dozen different directions. Try to keep your equanimity intact, and don't sell yourself short—you can do it.

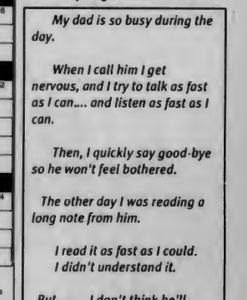
AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
A creative solution to an old problem earns you respect at work. Be careful that you only take the credit which is due you, however. Take the opportunity to toot another's horn if you can—it will reflect well on you.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
Another person's mistakes may appear to be your fault. Don't worry, because the truth will come out eventually. Meanwhile, take the fallout with as much grace as you can muster and try to avoid pointing fingers.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Those are 20 percent off."

Quote of the Day



"I know a girl called Elsa, she's into Alka-Seltzer."

–Oasis "Supersonic"

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Lockhorns By Roger & Salem Salloom

ACROSS
1. To the ___ degree
4. Windshield wiper unit
9. Kimono sash
12. Saudi native
14. Petitioner of Pharaoh
15. Muddle, informally
17. Yawner
18. Little branches
19. Qualified
20. Texas headwear
22. Laundry equipment
23. Cargo units
24. Despondency
26. The Booth family, e.g
29. Timber
30. " ___ Anybody Seen My Gal?"
33. Map
34. Ingenious Goldberg
35. Be obligated
36. Cat's "Go away!"
37. Emulate Samuel Adams
39. Smack
40. Brotherhood brother
41. Send forth
42. Daring: in Dijon
43. Rep.'s foe
44. Arithmetic, for short
45. Humphrey's honey
48. Passionate
48. My: Ger.
49. Fonda's folly
51. Ignobility
55. Moreno or Rudner
56. ___ for a song
58. Injurious
59. -do-well
60. Reporter's "hook"
61. He loved Lucy
62. Medics (abbr.)
63. Struck an attitude
64. Eye cover

DOWN
1. Collars
2. Horse's gait
3. Rapid rodent
4. Relay rods
5. Sources of suburban pride
6. Onassis et al.
7. Lassie, for one
8. Type measures
9. Windy airport
10. "Blessed event" party (2 wds.)
11. "___ of Capri"
13. Wager makers
16. Hannah and ___ Sisters
21. Categorize
22. Fashion-conscious fellow
24. Sparring match
25. Piercing target
26. Suffered dull pain
27. Allende's land
28. Rigorous supervisor
29. Intense anger
31. Conscious
32. Begin to prevail (2 wds.)
37. Julie's Dr. Zhivago costar
38. Sacrament
39. Avoided
41. Jennings or Ludwig
42. Fratricide name
45. Rented
47. Phobias
48. Country's Haggard
49. Ocean flier
50. Expired
51. Java holders
52. Daredevil Knievel
53. Emphatic Spanish affirmative (2 wds.)
54. Plummeted
56. Yelp
57. The Plastic ___ Band

UMass tramples Crusaders 14–8 in chilly opener

UM scores 11 runs in first three innings, then holds on until game is called off

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

UMass shortstop Brad Gorrie stole four bases in yesterday's 14–8 win over Holy Cross.

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The frozen tundra... of Earl E. Lorden Field?

Batting temperatures in the 20s, a stiff wind and less than ideal playing conditions, the Massachusetts baseball team (7–3) outlasted Holy Cross yesterday, 14–8, in the home opener at Lorden Field. The game was called with two outs in the bottom of the seventh due to darkness.

Massachusetts	14
Holy Cross	8

UMass committed six errors, including four in the seventh, but sophomore designated hitter Aaron Braunstein and freshman left fielder Shaun Skeffington each drove in three runs to push the Minutemen past the Crusaders for their sixth win in their last seven ballgames.

"We weren't crisp today," UMass coach Mike Stone said. "Those were tough conditions. This was one of the coldest days I can ever remember, a tough day [to play baseball]. We're a lot better than we showed today, but at least we got [the game] in, and at least we got the win."

UMass lefthander Travis Veracka picked up the win in relief, allowing one run on one hit in two innings. Junior Jeff Puleri started the game, and let up three runs, one earned, and seven hits in four innings of work.

The only thing that was warm all day, at least in the first three innings, was the Massachusetts bats. UMass lit up Holy Cross starter Shawn Mroz like a pinball machine, touching him up for 11 runs in only two-plus innings.

Minuteman rightfielder Pete Gautreau led the charge, going 2-for-4 with three RBIs, including a solo home run to lead off the second. Braunstein had only one hit on the afternoon, but he made the most of it, utilizing a stiff wind blowing out to right field to smack an opposite field three- run homer, pushing the UMass margin to 6–1 at the end of two.

"I just tried to make contact, and hit it opposite field with the wind blowing out," Braunstein said.

Massachusetts put the game away in the third, adding five more runs to make it 11–1. Two Holy Cross errors, a pair of untimely walks and a two-run double by Skeffington did in the Crusaders. After consecutive dropped balls by the Holy Cross outfield, Mroz walked third baseman Ryan Thistle and first baseman David Giglio, scoring sophomore catcher Brian Samela from third. An All-Atlantic 10 shortstop last year, Brad Gorrie then singled, driving in another run, before Skeffington's double scored Thistle and Giglio.

Holy Cross made it interesting in the top of the seventh. Trailing 11–4, the Crusaders benefitted from a Rich Hartman walk to centerfielder Brian Issit, and three straight errors from the UMass infield to rack up four runs before the Minutemen could register an out. But Hartman got Crusader Brian Nawrocki to ground into a double play, and a harmless grounder to third baseman Adam Correa ended the threat.

Massachusetts got three back in the bottom of the seventh before the game was called. Gorrie led the inning off with a walk, and then stole his fourth base of the ballgame, and 12th of the season. After walking two straight batters, Holy Cross pitcher James Jenkins let up a single to Gautreau, knocking in two runs.

The single made the score 14–8, and the margin, combined with an increasing darkness and freezing temperatures, prompted home plate umpire Billy LaRue to call the game. No one in the bitter cold conditions registered a complaint.

UMass travels to Blacksburg, Va., to face Virginia Tech in a three-game series this weekend to begin conference play. Massachusetts has won the last three A-10 tournaments, and beat the Hokies twice in last year's tourney to win the title.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Second baseman Muchie Dagliere went 2-for-3 with 2 RBIs in the UMass baseball team's win.

Princeton up next for softball team

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

Two defending regional champions will clash today when the Massachusetts softball team heads to New Jersey to take on the Princeton Tigers at 2:30 p.m.

The Tigers are the current Ivy League champs, while the Minutewomen are the current Atlantic 10 champions. The Minutewomen have been struggling so far, and go into tomorrow's game at 7–13. The Tigers have also struggled lately, their record now stands at 8–9, but they should give UMass quite a challenge.

"They're always tough to play," coach Elaine Sortino said. "They have always been a formidable foe."

Princeton is one of the top three teams in its region, but facing a high-ranked team is nothing new for UMass. The Minutewomen's season thus far has been incredibly difficult, as they have already faced several top 25 teams, including

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 9

COLLEGIAN FILE

Stephanie Mareina and the UMass softball team hit the road to New Jersey to take on Princeton today.

Bibby beginning to look more like Kidd

CASEY KANE ON COLLEGE BASKETBALL

There was a sense of something very familiar in the air when the Arizona and Kansas men's basketball teams faced each other in an NCAA tournament Southeast Regional Sweet 16 game last week. A feeling of deja vu, a feeling that history could repeat itself.

A few hours later, the Kansas players tearfully consoled one another while the Wildcats celebrated their stunning 85– 82 upset over the region's No. 1 seed.

The game, besides being the shocker that put serious wrinkles in almost every office pool (as if the whole Southeast region hadn't done that. Need I remind you of Chattanooga?), also marked a figurative and literal changing of the guard.

Coming into the game, Kansas senior point guard and Mr. All–Everything Jacque Vaughn was considered by many to be the reigning example of what being a point guard is all about. He passed, he shot, he created. He had a game vision and he was a true floor general.

Entering the same game, Arizona's freshman PG, Mike Bibby, was making his case for freshman of the year. The Wildcat can shoot, man, can he shoot. He can pass and create, he has a vision, he is on his way to becoming a premier point guard in not only the Pac–10, but in the nation.

When Vaughn faltered in the 'Zona game, Bibby took over. The freshman racked up 21 points, including a pair of key free throws in the game's final 18 seconds. He was also at least partly responsible in forcing the Jayhawks into committing

Turn to HOOP, page 9

Bike racing club starts spring racing slate

Editor's note: The Collegian's Sports Briefs column is designed to give attention and credit to the athletes who don't play at the collegiate varsity level, but instead play on club, intramural and recreational teams.

The feature runs every Thursday, and is comprised of information sent in from the teams and athletes. Submissions for Sports Briefs should be sent to the Collegian offices, and are due each Wednesday at noon. Submissions can be sent or brought down to the offices at 113 Campus Center Basement or faxed to 545–1592.

If there are any questions call co–sports editors Casey Kane or Chris Stamm at 545–0719.

SPORTS BRIEFS

The UMass bike racing club kicked off its collegiate road racing season at Columbia University's Harlem Criterium on March 8.

A criterium located right along the Hudson River proved a good challenge for all the cyclists involved. UMass' only crash this season happened during the Columbia race, when Erik Miller fell. He proved himself, though, by coming back

Turn to BRIEFS, page 9

KENNETH W.F. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

UMass bike racing club member Keith Burgoyne bombs down a fast downhill in Fairmount Park in Philadelphia last weekend.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 107 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, March 28, 1997

Beck Odelay's in Amherst

Alternative hero and posterboy Beck brings his unique style of music to Amherst College tonight. Check out our preview (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Men's lax faces Army

P.G. Massey and the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team traveled to West Point to face Army. For the preview (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Haitian premier survives efforts to oust him, but promises future changes

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Premier Rosny Smarth survived a motion to oust him from government yesterday, but still faces the economic and political crises that prompted the censure vote. "Too many serious problems remain unsolved," Sen. Samuel Madistin told The Associated Press. "Change has been put off to another day. [But] pressure on the government will grow." Despite prevailing in parliament, Smarth told reporters that he was considering some Cabinet changes. Most likely to go is Commerce Minister Fresnel Germain, whom many accuse of being indifferent to the high cost of living.

The challenge to Smarth came from supporters of former President Jean-Bertrand Aristide who have attacked the prime minister's plans to privatize state-run industries and streamline government bureaucracies.

Since leaving office a year ago, Aristide has used the prospect of even more severe economic hardship to build up opposition to the government, and in January he started a new party.

Since then, the government has lost its outright majority in the Chamber of Deputies and will probably retain only a minority in the Senate after partial elections April 6. Candidates sponsored by Aristide who oppose the economic program are favored to win. International donors keeping Haiti afloat have demanded the austerity measures, which would cost thousands of jobs in a country where industry employs only 40,000 of the 7.2 million people. Most Haitians are unemployed or survive on odd jobs.

NATION

Manson denied parole again, says he doesn't want freedom

CORCORAN, Calif. (AP) — A gray-haired Charles Manson was denied parole yesterday for the ninth time after telling prison officials he's just too busy to be free.

"I'm involved in too many things," he said. "I have a web site I'm working on."

Manson, now 62, rambled on for about an hour, giving the three-member panel of the state Board of Corrections a taste of the rhetoric that has marked his appearances before other parole boards in past years. He insisted he did not kill actress Sharon Tate and six others in 1969.

"I've killed a lot of people in my life," he said. "I have. But I was convicted for things I didn't do and I was let loose for things I did."

Manson at first sent word that he did not want to appear at the hearing, but showed up at the last minute. His gray hair was wavy and neatly combed, his face craggy with age. His forehead still bore the deep swastika that he carved there during his 1970 trial. Manson showed that he was keeping up on the news by almost immediately mentioning the mass suicide of 39 people in suburban San Diego a day earlier.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 45	HIGH: 45	HIGH: 35
LOW: 65	LOW: 55	LOW: 55

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Math Prof. dies at 57

University of Massachusetts Mathematics professor Mary Katherine Bennett, 57, died on March 15 after suffering a stroke due to a ruptured aneurism a week earlier. She is survived by one brother, Father Thomas P. Bennett.

Bennett was an UMass alumnus who received her M.A. in 1965 and her Ph. D in 1966. She was then hired by the University as an Assistant Professor. In 1968, Bennett moved to Dartmouth College and became a John Wesley Young Research Instructor for two years before returning to UMass to become an Assistant professor again in 1970.

In 1979 Bennett became a mathematics professor at UMass where she remained until the time of her death.

In 1995, Bennett published a research literature book, Affine and Projective Geometry, which was named Outstanding Academic Book of 1996 by Choice, a journal of the association of College and Research Libraries.

Bennett was currently serving on the Provost Search Committee.

Funeral arrangements were made by Amherst Funeral Home and the ceremonies were held at the Newman Center on March 19. Father Bennett presided over the funeral.

— Leigh Faulkner

Story says UMass budget request increased by 17 mill.

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Representative Ellen Story (D–Amherst) spoke at yesterday's Faculty Senate meeting on the state budget and its impact on the University of Massachusetts.

"On my annual visit I thought I would talk a little about what was going on at the statehouse, about the budget request," Story began.

Story said that this year's budget request for UMass Amherst was $197.7 million — up from $180 million last year. She noted that it was approximately half of the $403 million total request for the entire UMass system and that state funding for the UMass system has increased in the past five years.

Story also spoke about the importance of private financing for state institutions of higher education.

"The new state endowment program has been a huge success. The state is putting pressure on public institutions to beef up their fundraising... The state is matching $1 for every $2 raised by the institution from private sources. This sends a clear message that the state is not going to cut back [because of additional private funding]," Story said.

She went on to address the Fair Share Bill, which would ensure that the state would pay a minimum of three-quarters of the cost of a student's education at a community college and two–thirds of the cost at a state college or university.

"Fair Share just had a hearing and it will be coming to the senate floor," Story said. "There is a lot of support for it, but there's some nervousness about [the passage of] this bill.

"The reason I think it is important is in order to place a floor — that the universities can not get less than this amount. If it doesn't get through this year, hopefully it will next year."

Turn to BUDGET, page 2

Cult mass sucide leaves 39 dead

RANCHO SANTA FE, Calif. (AP) — Thirty-nine members of a cult of computer programmers systematically killed themselves by washing down drugs with vodka, their suitcases packed for what they thought was a rendezvous with a UFO trailing the Hale-Bopp comet.

"It seemed to be a group decision," Dr. Brian Blackbourne, the San Diego County medical examiner "It was very planned, sort of immaculately carried out."

The victims included 21 women and 18 men, Blackbourne said, with most carrying identification packets in their shirt pockets, along with little pieces of paper containing a suicide recipe: take pudding or apple sauce and mix it with phenobarbital, drink it down with alcohol, lay back and relax.

The victims apparently died in separate groups: 15 the first day, 15 the second and the remaining nine the third day.

Blackbourne said the second group cleaned up after the first, the third after the second. The last two alive removed plastic bags from the last seven bodies and then killed themselves.

"We believe they were the last ones and they did have plastic bags over their heads," Blackbourne said.

The dead ranged in age from 20 to 72, and because each had closely cropped hair, it was difficult initially to determine their sex.

One victim was Canadian, two were black, a few were Hispanic and the rest were white, he said. Authorities withheld IDs until family members were notified.

Each victim had a packed suitcase at the foot of their bed or cot, and each had $5 bills and quarters in their pockets, Blackbourne said.

Police showed a videotape taken from inside the mansion showing bodies all dressed in black — identical sneakers, long-sleeve shirts and pants — lying on neatly made bunk beds.

All had a purple shroud covering their upper bodies, some had eyeglasses folded at their sides. Computer equipment filled the nine-bedroom house.

The group made money with a web design firm called Higher Source and also proselytized through a web site called Heaven's Gate, on which they had put out a statement saying the comet's appearance meant their time had come.

"Hale-Bopp's approach is the 'marker' we've been waiting for," says the statement on the World Wide Web site. "We are happily prepared to leave this world."

A Beverly Hills businessman who hired a former cult member said yesterday that another member told him several months ago that a space ship following the comet was coming to pick them up. "They did not say they were going to commit suicide, but they did indicate to me that they would be leaving the planet," Nick Matzorkis said.

Matzorkis, president of Interact Entertainment Group, said an employee he identified only as Rio who used to belong to the cult had received a package late Tuesday with a farewell letter and two videos.

The letter said that by the time Rio read it, his friends would have committed suicide or, in their words, "left their containers," Matzorkis said.

After opening the package Wednesday, Matzorkis and Rio drove down from Los Angeles to the mansion, where they discovered the bodies and called police.

UMB suspends prof. over explosion

BOSTON (AP) — A University of Massachusetts chemistry professor has been suspended while authorities investigate a chemical explosion and fire in his laboratory that left one student severely burned.

Jean-Pierre Anselme was suspended with pay from all teaching and research until the university determines whether his handling and storing of chemicals contributed to the fire, University Provost Louis Esposito said.

Esposito said the investigation would take at least a month. "The concerns are about how records are kept on chemicals, how chemicals are handled, how students are used and trained," he said.

The city's fire department also is investigating, and spokesman Stephen MacDonald said the department might bring charges if any laws were broken.

The March 13 explosion injured a student who was alone in the laboratory at the time, and forced the building to be closed for 10 days.

Firefighters found a container of highly explosive picric acid in his desk drawer, and workers cleaning the laboratory Tuesday found several other containers of unidentified chemicals, school officials said.

Also, sodium azide, which may have caused the fire when the student knocked it over while cleaning a refrigerator, was not on a list of chemicals provided to the fire department under a requirement of federal law.

Anselme, a 32-year veteran of the UMass faculty, was not at his Cape Cod home yesterday and could not be located for comment. His laboratory and others in the building were cited for violations of chemical storage and labelling rules in 1995 following a fire in a nearby lab, said Fire Capt. Thomas Scavitto. The entire campus was closed for several weeks three years ago after several staff members and students complained of fumes and became ill.

Tests did not determine the cause of many complaints, but officials said the heating and air conditioning system was inadequate. It has since been overhauled.

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNIK-COLLEGIAN

On top of the world!
Chris Lindstrom, a Masspirg volunteer poses in front of a giant replica of the earth in front of the Hampshire D.C. yesterday.

Book by UM prof. shows how to ace job interviews

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

Students preparing to enter the job market soon — facing numerous job interviews — may be interested that a member of the University of Massachusetts School of Management faculty has written the book on the subject.

Richard Fein, the director of placement in the School of Management, has again translated his knowledge on the job hunting process into print with his latest book, 111 Dynamite Ways to Ace Your Job Interview.

"This book covers the whole stream of questions you are likely to be asked and includes a chapter of questions for you to ask employers," Fein said.

The book was constructed in a manner that makes it both easy to read and easy to understand.

"It's designed to be in bite–size form, which gives you a principle, and then an application," Fein said.

The questions the book will prepare a reader for, include everything from the commonly asked, "Why do you want to work with us?" to the terrifying "You've told me about your strengths, now tell me about some of your weaknesses."

As part of the writing process, Fein contacted over 1000 hiring companies, asking each what they liked to see and hear from interviewees. He received responses from over 300 of them, incorporating many of them in the advice of the book.

"There's a lot of input in this book," Fein said. "This isn't just Richard Fein sitting down and writing his happiest memoirs."

Asked how the job market looks for graduating college students, Fein said that when the economy is good, as it is now, there are more opportunities out there, but that is no reason to worry less about finding a job.

"Companies may need to hire 10 people, but they don't just want 10 people they want the best 10 people... It's always competitive. It just so happens that when the economy is good it's easier for someone looking for a job to get an interview, but just because the economy is good doesn't mean it's time to relax. This is your chance to get in good now for the next 45 years of your life," Fein said.

Dealing with students on a daily basis in his School of Management office is an asset to Fein when working on his books.

"Working with students gave me a lot of ideas to talk about. These ideas are not unique to UMass students, or even to students in general. They tend to apply to people who are going into the job market," Fein said.

Fein also emphasizes the importance of showing an interest in the interviewer by asking questions yourself.

"The questions you ask can be at least as important as the answers you give at the interview," Fein said.

His previous book is built around that premise. Titled, 101 Dynamite Questions to Ask at Your Job Interview, it followed his previous guides, First Job and Cover Letters, Cover Letters, Cover Letters.

Not surprisingly, Fein's next book, which he is currently working on, will be titled 101 Hot Tips for a Dynamite Resume.

Retreat aims to vocalize disabled community concerns

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

The first annual Retreat for Students and Faculty with Disabilities is being held today for these individuals to voice their opinions and brainstorm ideas about how to make their situations known in society.

The goal of this Retreat is for individuals with disabilities within the University of Massachusetts and Five College communities to join together with the larger Amherst community in order to make themselves heard.

Those in attendance will have the opportunity to talk on an open microphone to state their personal opinions, and roundtable discussions will take place to formulate ideas about what can be done in establishing themselves in society.

If the Retreat goes well enough, the collective group may even present their ideas to governmental agencies in Washington, D.C.

Paul O'Leary, a doctoral student from the School of Education at UMass and partial organizer of the retreat, explained the importance of the students organizing together since the more people who speak up will be likely to tell others and the ideas will "grow exponentially."

O'Leary described the student's efforts as "similar to a body of water — throw a pebble into the water and watch the ripples that form."

The major issue behind individuals with disabilities according to O'Leary includes a number of different forms yet all involve "some aspect of their life which they are deprived of."

The Retreat will be held in the Student Union Ball Room. Students and faculty are welcomed to drop–in whenever they have time between 9 a.m.– 5 p.m.

Those with questions, information or an interest in subscribing to the new Individuals with Disabilities Discussion List may send email to DISABILITY@DavDawn.com or MI.PETERS @stauf.umass.edu.

Ramseys hold up key DNA tests

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Key DNA analysis in the JonBenet Ramsey case is being delayed while her parents decide whether they want a representative to observe the testing.

"Testing has not begun because we have not worked out the technical issues of the counsel support for the family," city spokesman Kelvin McNeill said yesterday.

McNeill said DNA evidence from the strangling of the 6-year-old beauty queen has been sent to Cellmark Diagnostics in Germantown, Md. The testing at the lab could take up to six weeks.

A call to family spokesman Pat Korten was not immediately returned.

McNeill also confirmed that authorities have subpoenaed videotapes from CNN of an interview in January with John and Patsy Ramsey. The city spokesman said the girl's parents still have not agreed to an interview with police.

The girl was found slain in the basement of her home Dec. 26.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor:
Seema Gangatirkar
Copy Editor:
Lisa Chiu
Photo Technician:
Chris Cesnek
Production Supervisor:
Josh Sylvester
Production Staff:
Elizabeth Brown
Sandra Krauss

Pinsky to be named poet laureate

By Brian Witte
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Robert Pinsky, a computer-adept poet, will be named the nation's new poet laureate today.

Librarian of Congress James H. Billington, who will announce the selection, said in a statement that Pinsky was chosen for his achievements in translation, his interest in making poetry accessible through the Internet and his own probing poetry.

Pinsky, 56, teaches at Boston University in the graduate creative writing program. He has written five books of award-winning poetry. His 1994 translation of Dante's Inferno won the Los Angeles Times Book prize in poetry and the Harold Morton Landon Translation Award, bestowed by the Academy of American Poets.

Pinsky, who grew up in Long Branch, N.J., was poetry editor of The New Republic through most of the 1980s. He is currently poetry editor of the weekly Internet magazine Slate, a Microsoft Corp. publication where Vice President Al Gore's eldest daughter, Karenna, 23, is an editorial assistant.

He will take up his new duties in the fall.

The job of poet laureate, a two-year post, pays $35,000 per year and has minimal specific duties, according to the Library of Congress. That gives the poet maximum freedom to create and promote poetry in schools and workshops.

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNEK\COLLEGIAN

Fire Fantasy...
Red fire trucks in front of the Amherst Fire Department may persuade some people to become fire fighters when they grow up.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Personal Injury
March 25
A pedestrian reported being struck by a vehicle in the crosswalk at Sunset Avenue. The vehicle left the scene and the pedestrian declined medical attention. The accident is under investigation.

Accident — Property Damage
March 26
A two vehicle accident occurred on Campus Center Way.
March 27
A vehicle struck curbing on Commonwealth Avenue and damaged two tires.

Animal Complaint
March 25
Environmental Health & Safety removed a deceased duck from the Campus Pond area.

Disturbance
March 25
Parking control officers were allegedly threatened on North Service Drive.

Fraud
March 26
An individual reported never receiving a credit card and has been receiving substantial bills for charges.

Larceny
March 24
A cell phone and clothing were reported stolen from a room Coolidge Residence Hall.
March 25
There was a report from Totman Building that a number of items were stolen during Spring Break.
An individual reported unauthorized use of a credit card.
March 26
An individual reported that gas had been siphoned from his vehicle in parking lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.
March 27
A credit card was reported stolen from Cashin Residence Hall.

Malicious Damage
March 26
Papers affixed to a door in Brown Residence Hall were lit on fire.

Traffic Stop
March 26
Damian H. Gates, 21, of 123 Lake Elizabeth, Craigville, was arrested for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license.
March 27
Jeff C. Kromenhoek, 21, of 147 Coventry Ln., Fairfield CT, was arrested on University Drive for operating a vehicle under the influence of alcohol.

Vandalism
March 27
A window was smashed in Pierpont Residence Hall.
A fire extinguisher was thrown through a window in Washington Residence Hall.

budget

continued from page 1

In response to faculty criticism of the amount of state funding for the University system, Story commented, "We still have a governor who is not particularly interested in public higher education."

In other business, Chancellor David K. Scott emphasized his Strategic Action Goal of admission into the Association of American Universities and offered his thoughts on the Goodell takeover.

Scott began by addressing the general issues that the takeover was concerned with.

"It was a very broad range of issues: child care, diversity, class and class conflicts and poverty — these are issues that the whole country is facing. We need to work harder on these issues," Scott said. "The agenda of the students was not fundamentally different from the agenda of the administration."

Scott went on the criticize the disruption of the staffs' work at Goodell and the coverage of the takeover by The Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

"I do have some concerns... I have increasingly heard that there is a problem of communication on this campus... it should not take a demonstration to bring that back," Scott said.

"Secondly, I found the ad hominum attacks on members of my administration to be a disturbing and dangerous sign," Scott said. "We all need to be on guard to challenge the Collegian when they write this way."

Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Thomas B. Robinson announced the appointment of Joseph C. Marshall, of California Sate University at Fresno, to assistant vice chancellor for enrollment service.

Marshall will assume his position in August and will be responsible for setting and achieving enrollment goals for the campus.

Professors Donald St. Mary, head of the math department, and David Foulis, of the math department, presented a moving tribute to Mary Katherine Bennett, a professor in the math department who died March 15.

"She participated fully in all aspects of being a faculty member. She was an excellent teacher... she loved this University," St. Mary said. "She was a department head's dream — she never said no when you asked her to do something."

"M.K. was recognized by her department as a gifted teacher. She gave generously of her time and services," Foulis said. "Her sense of humor was legendary."

U.S. troops sent to the West Bank

By Hilary Appelman
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — U.S. mediator Dennis Ross returned to the Middle East yesterday to try to save the collapsing Israeli-Palestinian peace process as Israel — anticipating more violence — sent troop reinforcements to the West Bank.

Ross met for two hours with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat in Morocco, then flew to Jerusalem yesterday night and talked with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

Ross would not talk about the content of his meetings, but in Washington, President Clinton said Ross' discussion with Arafat was helpful.

"I don't have anything else to tell you, but he was encouraged by the response of Chairman Arafat to the matters that we discussed here before he left," Clinton said at the White House.

But the Palestinians are wary of American participation in the peace process, and Israel is prepared for more unrest in the West Bank.

The Palestinian legislative council accused the United States of having a pro-Israeli bias, and joined calls for Palestinians to demonstrate Sunday against Israeli land expropriations.

Arafat said Israel's construction of Jewish housing in disputed east Jerusalem was "a real crime against the peace process." Near the West Bank town of Ramallah, hundreds of Palestinians threw stones at Israeli soldiers on the eighth day of protests against the Israeli construction. Israeli troops fired tear gas and rubber bullets, and Palestinian police moved quickly to disperse the protesters.

Concerned that the violence will intensify with Sunday's protests, Israel deployed more troops around Palestinian cities in the West Bank.

"We will not wait to see how things develop," said the armed forces chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Amnon Shahak.

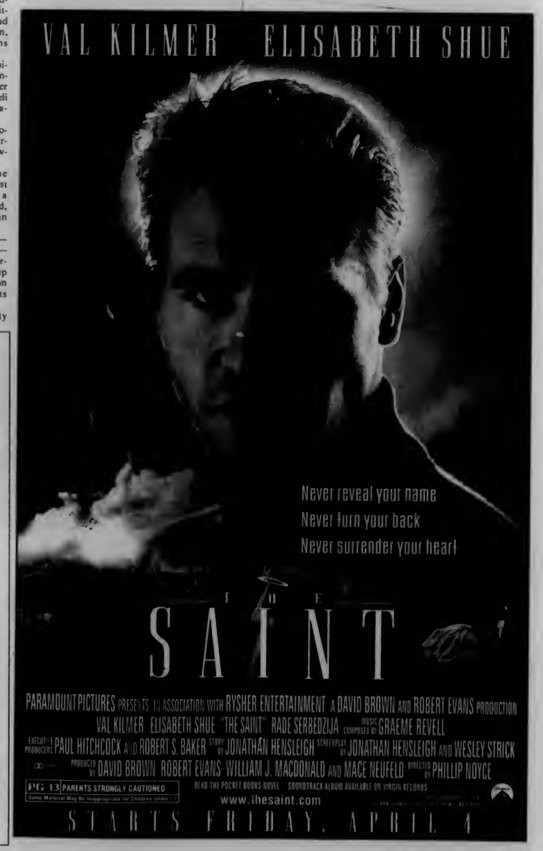
The gaps between Israelis and Palestinians appeared far more difficult to bridge than the last time Ross visited the region, when he brokered Israel's military withdrawal in January from most of the West Bank town of Hebron.

Israel demands that before peace talks can resume, Arafat send a clear signal to Islamic militants that he will not accept terrorist attacks against Israel, and that Palestinian stone-throwing riots end. Netanyahu claims Arafat gave the militants tacit approval for attacks before last Friday's suicide bombing in a Tel Aviv cafe.

The Palestinians want Israel to stop construction of the Jewish Har Homa housing project in east Jerusalem, which they claim as the capital of their future state. Israel capiured the eastern sector in the 1967 Mideast War.

The Palestinians also want the United States to guarantee that there will be no further settlement building. But the United States, while criticizing Israel's decision to go ahead with the Har Homa construction, twice vetoed U.N. resolutions denouncing the project.

"We condemn the American position," the Palestinian legislative council said in a statement. "We consider this protection and support of Israeli aggression and blatant Israeli violations."



Nabil Shaath, a Palestinian negotiator, said Israel should not be surprised by the Palestinian stone throwing.

"When Israel is treating the Palestinians as an occupier, it must expect that the Palestinians react as a people of the intefadeh," Shaath said, referring to the 1987-93 Palestinian uprising.

In a show of unity, Fatah — Arafat's Fatah faction of the PLO — held a joint news conference yesterday with the Islamic militant group Hamas at the Palestinian Information Ministry to announce joint protests on Sunday.

Hamas has claimed responsibility

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian • www.umass.edu/rso/colegian • www.umass.edu/rso/colegian
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian • www.umass.edu/rso/colegian • www.umass.edu/rso/colegian
DAILY COLLEGIAN
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian • www.umass.edu/rso/colegian • www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Gore talks with several Chinese officials

By John King
Associated Press

SHANGHAI — Al Gore took some heat yesterday from American interests who don't think he got China's leaders to commit sufficiently to progress in areas important to the United States — trade and human rights.

And, as the vice president neared the end of a five-day visit that's had some rocky moments, Chinese emotions bristled anew over allegations that Beijing may have illegally tried to influence last November's elections in the United States.

U.S. Ambassador James Sasser said Chinese officials told him they are angry and offended.

And a Chinese foreign ministry spokesman said American government officials had been "irresponsible" in making such allegations.

On the business front, Gore met privately with the American Chamber of Commerce in Shanghai and presumably briefed them on what he learned of new opportunities for U.S. business.

He thanked its members for their "frank" views and assured them that the Clinton administration was determined to try to get China to "remove the trade barriers that so many of you face in this market."

While applauding that line, several participants said they had hoped Gore's visit would be met by some Chinese action opening up to American products.

Meantime, in a statement issued in Beijing, Human Rights Watch, a monitoring organization based in New York, criticized Gore for dealing with the human rights issue entirely behind closed doors. The organization said Gore should have done something publicly. For example, he could have stopped in Hong Kong, a British colony that is to revert to Chinese control July 1, the group said. Or he could have visited a legal aid clinic in Beijing.

The organization questioned whether Gore gave Beijing "the impression that no matter how many international human rights standards were violated, the strengthening of U.S.-China relations would proceed apace."

On Wednesday, Gore told reporters he got a "more receptive response" on human rights than in previous discussions.

Sasser, a former Democratic senator from Gore's home state of Tennessee, made his comments to American reporters as Gore flew from Beijing to Xian and then to Shanghai.

Sasser said China's strong feelings about the campaign funding allegations did not surface in discussions with Gore because the Chinese wanted the sessions conducted in a businesslike manner. He said Chinese officials told Gore they had investigated the allegations but found no basis for them.

"Unofficially, I know that there was an investigation and they say the investigation turned up nothing," Sasser said. "That is what they say."

China's sensitivities were reflected in comments by Foreign Ministry spokesman Cui Tiankai, demanding the United States investigate how such reports got out.

"Some news media have already created a sensation out of this affair before they got conclusive evidence. I think this is irresponsible," he told reporters. "Furthermore, there are some people, possibly some government officials in the United States, who also are frequently irresponsible and reveal this so-called intelligence to the news media in breach of U.S. law. This affair also should be looked into."

Wednesday, after his meeting with President Jiang Zemin, Gore was asked whether he found the Chinese denials credible and said, "I'm not in a position to judge."

The vice president said that in his talks with Jiang and Premier Li Peng there was "further elaboration on the denial but, you know, no specifics."

Before the election, the FBI warned several members of Congress of a possible effort by China to curry political favor by channeling money to U.S. campaigns.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Photo Essay

By Chris Cesnek

Two days ago the UMass campus looked cold, wet, and dismal, (as seen in the upper right). As for yesterday, UMass students and ducks enjoy the firsts signs of spring when the temperatures were recorded in the sixties.

Caution urged in gov't Internet spying

PARIS (AP) — A 29-nation economic policy council adopted broad guidelines yesterday for government eavesdropping on Internet communications, urging nations to balance the needs of law enforcement with the rights to privacy.

The United States had pushed the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development to endorse an international system giving law enforcement agencies access to Internet communications that have been scrambled for secrecy.

Since messages on the Internet are easy to intercept, some people and businesses are protecting their privacy by snoop-proofing their communications.

U.S. officials argued that greater government access to the scrambled communications was essential to keeping criminals — including drug traffickers and terrorists — from exploiting the Internet.

The OECD did not specifically include the U.S. plan in its guidelines yesterday; instead, it urged governments to take the desires of law enforcement, businesses and individuals all into account in whatever eavesdropping policies they adopt.

Although Internet privacy-rights groups said otherwise, the U.S. envoy to the OECD insisted the general guidelines were a victory for the U.S. campaign for greater government access.

"This is a very important step forward and we are very gratified by it," envoy David Aaron said.

Aaron said further negotiations between governments would be necessary, but that members had endorsed the spirit of the U.S. plan and more concrete laws in each country could be expected to follow.

The United States had proposed an international system of computer-security codes, which could be held by government agencies and only be accessed after obtaining government approval.

Under the so-called "key escrow" system, governments would keep copies of user's computer "keys" used to scramble messages and files.

Objections to the key escrow portion of the proposal were that it would interfere with commerce and that users would not accept having their own or any other countries having access to their security codes. There also were doubts about whether an international key escrow system was even technically viable. Except for Britain, the United States was alone in the OECD in backing the key escrow, said David Banisar, an attorney with the Electronic Privacy Information Center in Washington, D.C. EPIC was an adviser to the economic policy board on the guidelines. "The reality is that the OECD member countries actively rejected the U.S. proposal because it wasn't acceptable to them," Banisar said.

Dr. O. Wyss of the Swiss Federal Office for Foreign Economic Affairs said his country was among those with grave doubts about the guidelines.

"They only became acceptable for Switzerland following a softening of several key points," namely, the key escrow provisions, he said in a statement last week.

Internet privacy-rights groups say the U.S. plan would violate civil liberties.

"Our view is that forcing individuals to escrow the keys with a government-approved escrow agent is a violation of U.S. constitutional rights and a violation of human rights," said Daniel Weitzner of the Center for Democracy in Technology in Washington, D.C.

"Basically, it's forcing people to consent to a search in advance of doing anything wrong," said Weitzner, who had been a member of the U.S. delegation on the issue.

The guidelines ultimately approved by the organization were far vaguer than the U.S. plan.

Governments were "challenged to draft cryptography policies which balance the various interest at stake, including privacy, law enforcement, national security, technology development and commerce," the economic policy organization said in a press release.

"The fundamental rights of individuals to privacy, including secrecy of communications and protection of personal data, should be respected in national cryptography [coding] policies," the adopted guidelines said.

Free Workshops!

ARTISTS! GET THE EDGE!

Making Art/ Making a Living
Wednesdays, April 9, 16, and 23, 4 to 6:30 p.m.

The Marketing Edge
Wednesday, April 9
Audiences, opportunities, promotion, publicity, pricing, and more!

The Funding Edge
Wednesday, April 16
Funding sources, proposal writing basics

The Legal and Financial Edge
Wednesday, April 23
Protecting your rights, budgeting for art projects, making financial decisions

PLUS!

Careers in Arts Administration
Wednesday, April 30, 4 to 6:30 p.m.
Settings, jobs, qualifications, opportunities in museums, art centers, theater, and more!

WORRIED about making it as an artist? Artists have always been survivors. But, the '90s pose an especially challenging environment. Artists who know where to seek opportunities, how to promote themselves and their work, and take control of their career goals have the best chance of surviving the challenges of the '90s and living a fulfilling life as working, earning artists.

All workshops in 125 Bartlett Hall on the UMass/Amherst campus.

Seating is limited for this popular series!

Presented by the Arts Extension Service, Division of Continuing Education, University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Funded by the UMass Arts Council

To sign up and ensure your seat, call AES, 545-2360.

Simpson to turn over trophy and jewelry

By Jane E. Allen
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — The judge in the O.J. Simpson case agreed yesterday to order Simpson to turn over more than 100 of his belongings, including his Heisman Trophy, his golf clubs and an Andy Warhol silkscreen of himself.

The nearly $500,000 inventory was culled from insurance records by the plaintiffs who won a $33.5 million verdict holding Simpson responsible for the slayings of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

"I think I will sign this order. Let the sheriffs take ahold of this property and the parties fight it out," Superior Court Judge Hiroshi Fujisaki announced after a one-hour hearing.

After the order is served, Simpson has seven days to turn over the items to the Sheriff's Department for sale to satisfy the judgment. He has the right to seek exemptions, including a $5,000 exemption for jewelry and art, plaintiff attorneys said.

The turnover order was requested by Goldman's family. At the hearing, it was learned Fujisaki granted a similar order Monday for the estate of Ms. Simpson.

That order included 66 items, some not on the Goldman inventory, including a a Yamaha grand piano and signed letters from former President Richard M. Nixon congratulating Simpson on his football victories.

The Brown and Goldman families have been squabbling over collecting their share of the verdict. The question appears to be who can collect first.

Fujisaki admonished the attorneys in the case: "You guys are just running up money, expenses for everyone. I'm really getting disturbed by this whole process."

Among the items sought by Goldman's estate were $43,860 in awards and trophies; Simpson's $5,100 Heisman Trophy; a $700 Buffalo Bills football helmet; a $24,480 Tiffany-design leaded glass lamp; a $25,500 Andy Warhol silkscreen of Simpson; a $40,000 14-carat gold necklace with 89 diamonds; and a $26,500 amber fox fur.

Goldman's estate also sought silverware, rugs and Lalique and Baccarat crystal, Simpson's $60,000 Chevy Suburban, and stocks and other interests in five Simpson companies including O.J. Simpson Enterprises Inc. and Orenthal Productions Inc.

Simpson's lawyer, Phil Baker, argued that "99 percent of the items" sought by the Goldmans were no longer Simpson's and had been placed in trust for Simpson's children.

The trust was set up March 10. Goldman family attorney Peter Gelblum said that was the same day the damage judgment against Simpson was entered.

"It has the earmarks of a fraudulent conveyance. He's trying to hide his assets," Gelblum told reporters. "He's using his children to hide his assets."

But Baker told the judge that the trust was set up as "partial satisfaction" of the judgment and that the money would go to Simpson's children.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Presses Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

The real Anthony Lake

The favorite son of the Five College community, W. Anthony Lake, was on the brink of taking us where we always knew we really belonged. During his stint as Clinton's National Security Advisor, Lake was lionized up and down the Valley academe in various ceremonies and convocations, while the national press anointed him the sublime savior of virtue in the Washington cesspool.

Recently we were at the edge of transcendence, going (one can almost hear a steely-eyed Hannibal Lecter hiss it through tightly clenched teeth) "all the way to the top, all the way to the C... I... A..."

Alas, little Starling, it was not to be.

Lake was ostensibly dismissed for incompetence, accused, in effect, of being unable to command the NSC (National Security Council) staff with the authority of your average teenage McDonald's manager.

The spin-doctored party line is that due to his pure-hearted naivete he was innocently unaware of the fantastically corrupt uses to which the Clinton campaign was putting his agency.

This of a man whose political B.A. was earned at the U.S. embassy, which directed the orgy of torture and assassination in Saigon in the early '60s; whose M.A. was acquired in the Kissinger NSC, which was the greatest academy of mass murder and cold-blooded cynicism in recent history; and whose Ph.D. came from the Carter State Department, among whose stellar accomplishments was the planning and approval of the Kwanju Massacre in South Korea.

> "Instead, we are supposed to content ourselves with the fairy tale that Professor Lake is a macrosyphilitic idiot with the management skills of a squashed apricot."
>
> Hussein Ibish

Of course Lake's specialty has always been to bail out of ugly and damning situations, like the Vietnam War for example, drenched in blood yet smelling like a rose. Lesser men might be judged hard-boiled veterans of some of the most brutal campaigns of American Imperialism with an impressive resume, but not Saint Anthony of Mount Holyoke.

despicable Lebanese crook Roger Tamraz (how our government in Beirut would love to get their hands on that parasite) for campaign donations, even exploiting Tamraz' CIA files for this money grubbing scheme. Why, that would mean that Anthony the Pure placed his boss' reelection (and, hence, his own political future) over the law, security concerns, and minimal common sense.

Instead, we are supposed to content ourselves with the fairy tale that Professor Lake is a macrosyphilitic idiot with the management skills of a squashed apricot. Even more outlandishly, we are asked to interpret this incredible stupidity an inspiring manifestation of principle in politics, which corrupt Washington politicians, such as the Intelligence Committee, cannot abide.

Well, what has our preux chevalier been doing as NSC advisor and foreign policy director during the past four years? Why practicing principle in politics of course. The embargo on Iraq for example, which has killed at least 500,000 children, who otherwise would have lived, by systematically denying them food, medicine and the other basics of life. No one in Bosnia, Rwanda, Afghanistan, Somalia, Chechnya or anywhere else can boast of killing so many little boys and girls during this time period. An edifying display of morality indeed. By the way, Lake, who is well aware of the genocidal massacre of Iraqi children his policies have effected, has repeatedly stressed how "proud" he is of his record in dealing with the Iraqis.

The people of Haiti were also blessed with a taste of Lake's halo-ringed approach to politics. While Lake had his boss Clinton hugging and kissing deposed President Aristide in public, their intelligence services created and bankrolled the FRAPH thugs led by Toto Constant. Lake and Clinton paid Constant and FRAPH to shoot, beat and terrorize any dissenters who would dare to challenge the junta. Meanwhile, our serene Bodisatva systematically committed piracy on the high seas, arresting all the Haitians who were fleeing from the U.S. funded goon squads and either putting them in inhuman concentration camps or sending them back to the tender mercies of the junta and FRAPH. In the end, they manipulated the situation with such cynicism and ruthlessness that they effected the occupation of Haiti by U.S. troops for the umpteenth time this century. This was truly an exercise in "moral politics" worthy of Lake's guru, Kissinger himself.

In Somalia, Lake and company's insane campaign to take over inserral Somali politics by murdering Mohammed Farah Aideed led to the deaths of thousands of innocent Somalis and a humiliating defeat for the United States. In Bosnia, Lake's policies seem to have been designed to keep the war going as long as possible and certainly contributed to its continuation, culminating in the U.S. coordinated ethnic cleansing of 700,000 people from Krijena.

Such was the nature of Mr. Chips' morality in action, represented in the Clinton foreign policy of which he was the acknowledged architect. Such is the behavior of a man whose moral purity blinded him to the corruption with which he was surrounded.

Of course, the real reasons for Lake's rejection are quite different. Lake is still regarded as too liberal and a turncoat by much of the right wing, which will never forgive him for resigning towards the end of the Vietnam War, in which he had played such a major role, and then successfully pretending that he had been opposed to it all along. In a perfect example of what Richard Hofstadter called the "paranoid style in American politics," the far-right even views Lake as a kind of Communist, in spite of the fact that he is a classic liberal imperialist most of whose career has been devoted to thuggery of one sort or another on behalf of the American Empire.

Democrats, led by Bob Kerry, stepped away from Lake as the extent of his involvement with crooked Clinton fundraising efforts became clearer and the prospects for the "naivete and mismanagement" fiction holding up under public scrutiny became more remote. The shabby truth is that Lake was just another corrupt bastard in Clinton's army of corrupt bastards.

Furthermore, the timing of Lake's withdrawal, at the moment when Chairman Shelby began insisting that Lake's FBI files be disseminated to the whole Committee, suggests that Mother Teressa indeed has something juicy to hide. We shall never know. Pity.

Finally, for all these reasons and more, the CIA staff clearly had a deep aversion to the idea of being led by man of Professor Lake's description. Doubtless they fear that following the countless espionage, cocaine, murder and other scandals, and the absolute lack of justification for its post-cold war existence, the calamity of a Lake regime could at long last constitute the Company's coup de grace.

Lake's sanctimonious and laughable letter of withdrawal attempts to paint the picture of a Christ-like self-sacrifice, following persecution by vIndictive Republican Pharisees, the enemies of good government. He calls it evidence of a world "gone haywire." Naturally this hogwash has been lapped up by most of the media, as it allows everyone to continue to view Lake, and by extension Clinton's brutal foreign policy, as morality incarnate.

The truth is that Lake was hoist on his own petard of cynical power politics. His comeuppance is as delicious as it is overdue. The fact that he will go down in history as the first nominee for DCI to be, in effect, rejected by the Senate, and on the grounds of both incompetence and corruption no less, is merely the icing on the cake.

Presumably, our erstwhile Messiah will be slinking back to the ivy-encrusted enclave of Mount Holyoke to lick his wounds, rejoin the Five-College community, and resume instructing young ladies in the fine art of political virtue.

Hussein Ibish is a Collegian columnist.

The Collegian welcomes letters to the editor. Keep them short — about 400 words. Letters may be dropped off at the Collegian, emailed to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu, or snail mailed to 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst, MA 01003.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Martin Luther King

Editor's Note: On May 8, the Collegian celebrates its 50th anniversary as a daily newspaper. To commemorate this occasion the Collegian will be publishing editorials spanning the last 30 years. Today we feature a column originally published April 5, 1968.

1967-1997
1968

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. is dead. He was assassinated yesterday evening in Memphis, Tennessee, where he had planned to lead his second non-violent protest march in support of the striking Negro sanitation workers. The details of Dr. King's fight for civil and human rights are universally known. Dr. King was the leading advocate of non-violence in a country that has had a history of violence, but the real tragedy of King's death is that the racists have removed the greatest leader of Black Americans. Dr. King represented a symbol of strength for the black community, and despite some of our disagreements with his techniques, we all shared a sense of pride when King led his marches, delivered his eloquent speeches and confronted the white society.

Dr. King assumed the role magnificently and he captured the imagination of an overwhelming majority of Black Americans. No black leader, in fact, no previous figure in history, has done more to raise the hopes and aspirations of Black Americans. There was always a certain reverence for King, even among his most severe Black Militant critics. King was admired for his courage, convictions and commitment to the civil and human rights of all people.

America is a sick society and, unlike many of us, Dr. King never lost faith in the efficacy of the non-violent movement to change this society. King was as keenly aware of the underlying racism in America as anyone, but he remained committed to the view that non-violent militant action can awaken the moral conscience of this nation and eventually overcome the persuasive and powerful influence of racism.

Many of us questioned King's faith in non-violence. We wondered how a country which can wage a war leading to the destruction of a country and people in Southeast Asia, a war that King himself had grown to hate, and simultaneously remain insensitive to the sufferings of millions of suppressed people in this nation, can ever be motivated to act because of non-violent actions and appeals to conscience.

But for some reason, we still listened to King, and many of us skeptics were quietly hoping that Dr. King's show- down of non-violence in Washington D.C., this spring could effect some significant changes. Only Dr. King could generate such hope among a disillusioned and frustrated people. But King is now dead!

Where do Black Americans Go From Here?

William Julius Wilson was an Assistant Professor of Sociology at UMass in 1968. He is currently a Malcolm Weiner Professor of Social Policy at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University. He was named one of America's 25 most influential people by Time magazine in 1996.

Big companies gone bad

Before spring break a friend of mine called rental car agencies. A number of these companies refused to rent her a car because she is under 25, and those that would charged her an extra fee because of her age.

Currently, the Attorney General of New York is investigating claims that Avis refuses to rent to African- Americans and Jewish Americans. Meanwhile, the company faces a class action suit in both North and South Carolina.

In New York City, Avis regularly charges higher rates for residents of Queens and Brooklyn, two boroughs with large Jewish and African-American communities. Both groups are accusing the company of discrimination. The two groups have contacted the attorney general and their legislatures complaining about Avis's discrimination. The state is not taking their claims lightly.

Matthew Wurtzel

One of the original plaintiffs, an African-American woman, in the North Carolina class action suit was clearly discriminated against when she arrived at an Avis franchise in Wilmington, N.C. in July. The woman called to reserve four mini-vans for a family trip to Disney World. The operator confirmed the reservation, but when she arrived at the franchise at the attendant at the counter lied to her. He told her there were no vans when in fact the lot was filled with them.

About a week after the initial filing by three plaintiffs, over a hundred other people came forward with complaints about Avis. Employees from Oklahoma and both Carolinas have stepped forward and admitted that the company has a clear discriminatory policy. Managers give attendants clear instructions not to rent to blacks and Jews — especially Hasidic Jews. If employees do not discriminate, then the company docks their pay, claims employees.

Avis is not the only big company discriminating. A few months ago Texaco was slapped with fines for discriminating against employees. Texaco executives refused to promote African-American employees, and often promoted under qualified white employees before black candidates.

When Texaco executives met, they often used racial epithets and made insensitive comments about various cultures and religions. One executive was caught on tape saying, "I'm still having trouble with Hannukah, [and] now we have Kwanzaa?" Some people may ignore his comments as simple ignorance, but he leads a huge corporation and disregards other people's culture because it is different.

I thought the days of Christian Only and Jim Crow Laws were over. However, they continue to flourish in big businesses like Avis and Texaco. Despite good business practices, big corporations are more likely to discriminate then smaller and struggling firms according to economic studies. It's good business to serve any customer whether they are black, white, Jewish, Catholic, Irish, Russian, gay or straight. As long as customers can pay, then businesses should provide them with the products.

A similar rule of thumb should exist for employment. If an employee is capable of doing the job, then hire the individual. If they are doing a good job, then promote the individual. Race, ethnicity, creed, religion, gender and sexuality have nothing to do with employment. When hiring and promoting, only one thing matters: ability.

We shouldn't need laws and education to tell us discrimination is wrong, we just need common sense. And common sense should tell you not to rent a car from Avis and fill it with Texaco gas.

Matthew Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury Flashbacks BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Doonesbury Flashbacks BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Arts & Living

Friday, March 28, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Cardigans to hit Amherst

By Mike Burke
Collegian Staff

In one of the most bizarre triple bills in recent memory, Beck, the Cardigans and Atari Teenage Riot take the stage tonight at LeFrak Gymnasium at Amherst College. From Beck's smorgosboard of hip-hop, rock, blues and everything else, to the Cardigans' bubblegum pop, to Atari Teenage Riot's apocalyptical version of techno punk — be prepared for a perplexing concert-going experience.

Beck is coming off an unbelievably successful year. Besides proving to skeptics that he is hardly a "one-hit wonder," Beck managed to rank in two Grammy's and "Artist of the Year" by Spin, Rolling Stone, New Musical Express and the Village Voice. And Beck deserved every bit of praise.

His 1996 album Odelay stands as a simply unbelievable piece of art, making his previous output look puerile. Beck has proven to be one of a few rock artists to transcend the so-called "alternative rock" world into making music that literally tests the boundaries of popular music.

COURTESY OF GRAND ROYAL

Atari Teenage Riot opens up for Beck.

The question remains though, can Beck pull off a live set that rivals Odelay — an album jam packed with samples and soundbytes — or will Beck stray to a more traditional live set?

Squashed in between the innovative visions of Beck and Atari Teenage Riot, are the Cardigans.

Hailing from Sweden the Cardigans have become one of the surprise success stories of the past few months.

Six months ago the Cardigans were seen as one of the brightest lights on an underground pop scene from continental Europe alongside such obscurities as Red Sleeping Beauty and Le Mans.

But with the release of their single "Lovefool" the Cardigans have exploded into the big time.

Turn on the radio anywhere and you are sure to hear the Madonna-esque chorus, "Love me, love me, say that you love me" played between everything from Kenny G to Bush to Notorious B.I.G. The Cardigans have become Sweden's biggest musical export since ABBA and Ace of Base.

Musically, the Cardigans are — for the most part — a by- the-numbers loungy pop band.

Surprisingly though, on stage the band is known to turn up their amps and rock.

Tonight they will have to, or else they will be blown off the stage by the others — especially Atari Teenage Riot.

While Beck and Cardigans may dominate the headlines and the airwaves, Atari Teenage Riot should prove to be the most exciting and exhilarating portion of the evening.

Described as "one of the strangest live acts in the world," Atari Teenage Riot should prove as quite a shock to all of the Cardigans' lovey dovey fans.

Atari Teenage Riot will open the show with their disturbing and frantic version of techno meets hard core punk with most "songs" racing along at over 200 BPM.

Hailing from Berlin, Atari Teenage Riot is part of an underground scene led by Alec Empire who also heads up the label Digital Hardcore Recordings (distributed domestically by Grand Royal) which also features Ec8or, Shizuo and Sonic Subjunkies. Besides their similarities in music, the bands share a political vision.

Atari's first release in America was the seven-inch single "Deutschland (Has Gotta Die)" and their first German single was "Hunt Down the Nazis."

In an interview with Rolling Stone, Empire stated that he started Digital Hardcore, "to destroy and disturb the simulated harmony the government wants. All you hear on the radio is music that doesn't cause any emotions. It's there to keep everything quiet."

Not Atari Teenage Riot.

Beck, the Cardigans and Atari Teenage Riot perform at LeFrak Gymnasium at Amherst College tonight at 8 p.m.

At press time, tickets are sold out to the general public but still available for students with an Amherst College I.D.

COURTESY SIMON POULTIS

Beck will deliver an alternative showcase to Amherst College.

Folk singer Odetta to play Iron Horse

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

With a single guitar, Odetta has changed the world of music. Well, passively, at least. Her first albums in the '50s with just her deep, broad voice singing classic folk, religious and blues songs and her simple guitar grew on a young Robert Zimmerman from Hibbing, Minn. The influence of Odetta and other musicians like Woody Guthrie, Hank Williams and Blind Lemon Jefferson, combined with the visual poetics of Dylan Thomas and T.S. Eliot moved this young man to take up music and change his name to Bob Dylan. As Dylan has moved through his various incarnations over the last 35 years, we can still find Odetta in a little club like the Iron Horse singing "Kumbaya."

Odetta has been passing on American folk music from the Mississippi Delta, New England, sea chanties and the religious pantheon, to a new generation for over 40 years now. Until she was 19, she could not stand anything but classical music and especially could not stand the guitar, often the centerpiece of the music her step-father listened to on the famous country radio show, "The Grand Ole Opry."

With this love of classical music, Odetta studied religious choir music (she felt that being African-American, she didn't have much chance of getting into an opera company), and soon ended up singing and touring in the chorus of the musical "Finian's Rainbow." At a party during this tour circuit, there was a lot of folk and acoustic guitar playing, and she picked up on it from there. A friend of hers gave the young Odetta a guitar that wasn't being used around her house, taught her some chords and Odetta went to find the songs that represented the people and the culture of the United States.

The Library Of Congress caught on to her in the '50s and recorded Odetta's earliest work, such as her epic folk debut album, Odetta Sings Ballads And Blues, released in 1956 on the Tradition label. Since then, she has bounced between record labels and folk festivals like no other performer. She has been to the former Soviet Union, Japan and Israel to perform also, with those cultures considering Odetta a rich resource to teach them about American history and folklore.

Nowadays, she is a simple woman who either loves being around lots of people and entertaining them or going into a "hermit stage," as she calls it, remaining in her New York City apartment looking out the window, observing people on the go as well as enjoying rich views of Central Park and the lake within its boundaries.

When she performs, she appreciates just sitting down on a stool, with a stick of incense burning at the end of her guitar, and she likes to communicate with the crowd as much as possible, to get as intimate as a performer can. Her voice has lost some of its strength with age, but still can move a person, even when singing something as simple as "Home On The Range." With Dan Bern opening (see preview by Justin Beland), the acoustic guitar, the original American folk instrument will be in full prominence and all practicing acoustic guitarists out there are urged to attend.

Odetta will perform at 7 p.m. on Saturday night. Tickets are available from The Northampton Box Office and For The Record. Dan Bern opens. Call the club at 584-0610 for more details.

amc THEATRES
$2.50 (TWI-LITE) SHOW DAILY Mon.-Fri. LIMITED TO SEATING • Sunday SPECIAL ENGAGEMENT
MT. FARMS 8 MT. FARMS MALL ROUTE 9, HADLEY
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Jungle 2 Jungle PG
Cats Don't Dance* G
Donnie Brasco R
Selena PG
HAMPSHIRE 8 HAMPSHIRE MALL ROUTE 9, HADLEY
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Private Parts R
Return of the Jedi PG
The 6th Man* PG-13
Turbo: Power Rangers* PG
The Devil's Own* R
Liar, Liar* PG

WEEKLY DRINK SPECIALS
Captain Morgan & Coke 16 oz 2.00
Sloe Gin Fizz 2.00 16oz
Red Dog 16oz Drafts 1.50
Rolling Rock 12 oz Bottles 1.50
1/2 Price Appetizers & Nachos 3-5 and 7-11 Thurs-Fri-Sat
Thurs-Fri-Sat Dancing
No Cover Charge Before 10pm
famished-students THE PUB
15 East Pleasant St.

University of Colorado at Boulder
USE SUMMER TO ACCELERATE
YOUR ACADEMIC PROGRESS
Summer session on the Boulder campus is something special. With over 500 campus courses to choose from, it's a relaxed, comfortable learning environment. Classes are smaller. And when you're not in class, you can soak up Boulder's mellow charm. Or explore Boulder's backyard, a high country playground that includes some of the country's most rugged and spectacular terrain.
Summer is a great time to get a jump on the next phase of your educational goals.
FOR EXAMPLE:
VISITING STUDENTS. Take advantage of CU resources to complete or enrich your own degree program.
HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS. Take a college course for experience, to enhance your college application, or to see if CU is the right school for you.
TEACHERS. Earn recertification credits and tap into every thing the University has to offer.
PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT. Increase your knowledge base and build skills to enhance your capabilities.
ENRICHMENT. Give yourself the pleasure of an academic challenge at CU this summer.
FOR MORE INFORMATION.
Call 303- 492-5146 or 800-331-2801 to request a Summer Session catalog . Or visit our web site www.colorado.edu/conted/Summer

DAILY CLASSIFIED SPECIALS
Monday: Apartment for Rent
Tuesday: For Sale
Wednesday: Personals
Thursday: Auto for Sale
Call us at 545-3500 or visit us at our Newsstand or at our Campus Center Basement Office
Student 10¢ a word

Boricuas Unidos Presents
Pueblo, Una Estrella
3rd Annual Puerto Rican Cultural Night
featuring
Traditionally prepared Puerto Rican Cuisine followed by an address on Puerto Rican Unity
by UMass Alumn Limari Rivera
Willie Colón
Saturday, March 29, 1997
6:30 pm-2:00 am (Dinner will be served exclusively from 6:30 - 8:00 pm)
Student Union Ballroom
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
Performance by: Cayena
DJ music by: Concepto Latino
Cash Bar
$8 College Students with valid ID, $12 General Public
For Further information call Boricuas Unidos at (413)577-0051
Advanced tickets call TIX at (413)545-0412

American Heart Association

Kim brings the real deal to Northampton

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

The name Kim Deal had been ubiquitous with the college/alternative/indie (or whatever the hell you want to call it) rock scene for the last decade. From the Pixies to the Breeders to the Amps and now back to the Breeders, Deal had been unable to stay out of the studio and off the road.

Ohio native Deal first came to prominence with Boston's legendary Pixies. Handling the bass duties as well as providing a sultry foil to singer/guitarist Black Francis' psychotic escapades, she soon began to suffocate under Francis' creative iron fist. The Breeders provided the creative outlet she needed. Along with another fellow frustrated songwriter (Tanya Donelly of Throwing Muses), the band's 1991 debut Pod (4AD) definitely allowed both musicians to show off their chops. The result was one of the best albums of the early '90s: from "Iris" to a truly twisted cover of the Beatles' "Happiness Is A Warm Gun," Pod was an unqualified success.

1992 was another year of transition for Deal. The Pixies spent the first part of the year opening up stadium shows for U2 before splintering and dissolving. Although their demise came in somewhat of an anticlimactic manner for one of the most important bands of the last 20 years, it gave Deal the freedom to devote all of her time and creative energy to the Breeders. The band featured a different line-up for '92's Safari EP; in addition to Deal and Donelly, Kim's twin sister Kelley and British bassist Josephine Wiggs entered the fold. Safari continued the Breeders' creative progression. The title track was the Breeders' hardest rocking moment to date. "Do You Love Me Now?" was a prime Deal, and another '60s cover (this time, the Who's "So Sad About Us") provided another gender-bending take on rock history.

Kim Deal

After appearing on the 1994 Lollapalooza roster, though, the band went on another hiatus, largely due to Kelley's heroin bust and subsequent rehab and solo career — "Kelley Deal 6000" and some new, godforsaken project with Skid Row's Sebastian Bach and ex–Pumpkin Jimmy Chamberlain.

John Hendrickson

1993 saw the Breeders (minus Donelly, who left to form Belly) hit the commercial jackpot with their second full– length LP, Last Splash.

Jim MacPherson

Featuring the mega–hit "Cannonball" and its follow-up singles "Divine Hammer" and "Saints," Last Splash continued expanding upon the precedent established with their first two releases.

After appearing on the 1994 Lollapalooza roster, though, the band went on another hiatus, largely due to Kelley's heroin bust and subsequent rehab and solo career (Kelley Deal 6000 and some new, godforsaken project with Skid Row's Sebastian Bach and ex–Pumpkin Jimmy Chamberlain). Last year saw the debut of Kim's new project, the Amps (also featuring Breeders drummer Jim MacPherson), and '97 has brought us the latest Breeders incarnation. The other Deal and Wiggs are gone; only drummer MacPherson and Kim remain from the heyday of Last Splash. Currently road–testing songs for their next album, the Breeders Vol. 3 should, judging from the consistency and quality of their back catalogue, be expected to deliver the goods yet again.

The Breeders appear tonight at Pearl Street in Northampton with Brendan Benson and Lutefisk. Doors open at 7 PM. It's 18+. And you can go see Steve Westfield & The Slow Band for free downstairs with your ticket stub. Cool.

Dan Bern to open for Odetta

By Justin Beland
Collegian Correspondent

The new precedes the old this Saturday when Sony/WORK recording artist Dan Bern opens for legendary folkie Odetta at the Iron Horse. Seeing Dan Bern in concert, it's easy to see why many critics have skipped the "next Bob Dylan" moniker given to so many undeserving new artists and have labeled him "the Real Deal." Too few artists in any musical genre, let alone the folk scene, possess the energy and raw talent Bern does, and those qualities seem to explode from him in front of an audience. His sound has been called "folk/pop/punk/talking blues/rock," but that barely brushes the surface of what his music represents.

Standing solo with an acoustic guitar, Bern's stage presence has an immediate effect on the viewer; a bulky young guy with a flat–top interweaving terrific guitar skills with the most brilliant, poetic lyrics in recent memory. He tells his audience in the song "Jerusalem," his usual opening number: "Don't ask what kind of music I'm going to play tonight/ just stay a while/ hear for yourself a while." This plea comes with good reason — Bern flows with astonishing ease through songs that are uproariously funny to sad and tragic, and this gamete is run at all his shows.

No matter how varied the subject matter, Bern's songs always roll into each other beautifully, from songs questioning what would happen if Marilyn Monroe had married Henry Miller instead of Arthur Miller ("Marilyn") to questioning the youth of today's choice of idols ("Kurt," as in Cobain,) to his theories on where humans came from ("Aliens came/ and fed the monkey).

Even with their vast diversity, the songs never alienate the audience; instead they seem to pull the listener in and leave them humming and contemplating the lyrics for days afterwards. Indeed, his audience is so much a part of his music that he even has songs about them (including a song about two female students that he met at a Northampton show last year).

Bern's debut e.p. "Dog Boy Van" garnered incredible reviews (the L.A. Daily called the seven–song demo the Album of 1996, even with two months left in the year), and his brilliant eponymous debut album (featuring a full backing band and Dylan/Springsteen producer Chuck Plotkin) is currently collecting similar accolades.

Listening to the two, it's easy to see the maturation of the young man over only a year. Of course, he logged 60,000 touring miles last year (including opening stints for Ani DiFranco at Smith College and StrangeFolk at the Iron Horse), and wrote a song a day, which most likely moved the maturing process along at a good clip. This year, Bern will continue to tour with DiFranco, play several music festivals, and cross the country dozens of times. A new artist of Bern's caliber won't be unknown for long, and the Iron Horse is the perfect setting to see him shine.

Dan Bern will be opening for Odetta at the Iron Horse on Saturday at 7 p.m.. Tickets are available at Northampton Box Office and For The Record. Call the club at 584–0610 for more details.

Oprah hosts special children's program

By Jennifer Bowles
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Ask a kid what he's always wondered about and you might be surprised: "I want to know if grasshoppers have brains."

Ask another what he knows about sex and you get this: "It means that when you kiss somebody you don't stop."

These questions and more are posed to children of varied social, economic and racial backgrounds from across the country in a two-hour ABC special, "About Us: The Dignity of Children," airing at 8 p.m. EST Saturday, rated TV-14.

Hosted by Oprah Winfrey, the special offers a refreshing and insightful look into the world of children through their own words.

The show is an "intimate portrayal of what it's like to be a child, the very experience of childhood itself," Winfrey says inopening the program. "Something that too many of us have probably forgotten."

The children impart their thoughts to an unseen interviewer on a variety of topics, anything from their fears, frustrations and wishes to their feelings about their heritage, siblings or absent parents.

"I think a normal family is people who love each other, look after each other and make... make... make sure everything is OK," says an 11-year-old.

A Chicago teen-ager says: "I think grown-ups sometimes forget that kids are as smart as they are. They forget that we see things and we hear things and we feel things." Unlike many specials, this one doesn't offer any so-called expert opinions.

"The minute that people start to talk to you from a place of knowing more than you do, I find that a turn off," said executive producer Fred Berner.

Berner hopes the special, if nothing else, leaves adults with one impression.

"My hope is that by feeling and being touched emotionally, that they'll never look at children quite the same way, that something will be planted so there's a slightly different way of seeing children and hearing them and the hope that we become better listeners."

Highs and lows at the Oscars

(AP) — Ah, the Oscars: the pageantry, the pomp, the goofy over-the-topness of it all. This year's 69th Academy Awards didn't disappoint — though some carp that the 3 1/2-hour show didn't have as many of the show-stopping, deliciously embarrassing moments of years past.

Still, here are a few of the more piquant moments:

• Most Authentic Surprise (tie): Lauren Bacall, the heavy favorite for best supporting actress, who didn't win it, and Juliette Binoche, who did. "I thought Lauren was going to get it and I think she deserves it," said a wonderfully shocked Binoche.

"This is a dream. It must be a French dream, I think. Bye." (Tip for those who taped the show: Catch the moment when the Binoche's name is announced and watch the faces of Bacall and Binoche.)

• Worst Dance Production: Both of them. (Ah, just what did Michael Flatley and the Irish step dancers in "Lord of the Dance" have to do with the Oscars, anyway?)

• Best Dance Production: Cuba Gooding Jr., who did a really snappy midair kick and a few high steps across the stage after winning best supporting actor.

• Most Exuberant Moment: Gooding — hands down. He exclaimed "I love you!" 14 times during his acceptance speech, which was interrupted by the orchestra. Gooding kept going. He started with his wife, moved on to God, next singled out co-star Tom Cruise and finished with, "Everybody who was involved in this, I love you! I love you! I love you!"

• Best Acceptance Quip: Andrew Lloyd Webber, accepting the Oscar for best original song for Evita. "Well, thank heaven there wasn't a song in The English Patient, is all I can say."

• Worst Staged Moment: Debbie Reynolds, stopping amid her scripted remarks introducing an award, to gripe "Who wrote this drivel?" Her daughter, Carrie Fisher, then appeared sheepishly from the wings — on cue — to confess that this was her first year writing for the show.

• Most Animated Couple: MTV's animated characters, and really cool-movie star introducers, hee-hee, Beavis and Butt-head.

• Least Animated Couple: Chris Farley and David Spade, with their inane "Saturday Night" schtick.

• Best Trouper: Celine Dion, who stepped in for an ailing Natalie Cole on one day's notice to sing "I Finally Found Someone," music and lyrics by one Barbra Streisand. La Streisand initially had sent her regrets to the ceremony, with more catty observers speculating it was because she felt her film, The Mirror Has Two Faces, had been snubbed. She unexpectedly showed up, however, and the camera followed her to the front row, where she sat next to her director, Richard Gere.

• Sweetest Acceptance Speech: Jan Sverak, director of the foreign-language winner, Kolya, who spoke directly to his Oscar, adding that he hoped he would one day make a brother for him.

• Biggest Tear-jerking Moment: When Muhammed Ali, afflicted with Parkinson's disease, appeared quietly dignified on stage with George Foreman and the makers of When We Were Kings, the documentary on the boxers' 1974 fight in Zaire.

• Those Boots Were Made for Winning: Billy Bob Thornton (Sling Blade) who, clad in a ZZ Top baseball cap and cowboy boots, said he "can't really help" being a hillbilly. Even while wearing an old-fashioned tuxedo and string tie, Thornton could just as easily have been dressed in overalls.

Cuba Gooding Jr. won a Oscar for Best Supporting Actor.

Write for Arts and Living... and bring new meaning to your life!

SPRING SALE
Now until April 15th
August the First
- 20% off most loose Beads, all Bags, Purses, Pillows & Tapestries.
- 10% off all paper products including Journals, Albums, Cards, Notecards, Stationary.
- Free pewter charm with $5 purchase & This Ad

197 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 256-0276

Hewlett-Packard — Performer of the year.
We like the sound of that.
Hewlett-Packard, the world's most admired technology company, is also Forbes magazine's 1995 Performer of the Year. We are a world leader in the design, manufacturing and distribution of computer and electronic test and measurement equipment because of a core set of performance-based values we call "The HP Way." Currently, we have employment opportunities available for Electrical Engineering majors (BS, MS, or Ph.D) in the following departments:
- Research and Development
- Manufacturing
- Marketing
- Technical Support
- QA
- Custom Solutions

Successful candidates must have excellent interpersonal, problem solving, and written/verbal communication skills. Individual must be self-motivated, detail-oriented, and able to work in a team environment.
Interested candidates please contact the University Career Center and meet with our hiring managers on campus April 8, 1997. Anyone interested in meeting with the hiring managers are invited to attend a social gathering Monday, April 7th. It will held in Room #803 from 6:00 pm to 8:00 pm. To learn more about HP and our employment opportunities, visit our Homepage on the World Wide Web at: http://www.jobs.hp.com/
Hewlett-Packard Company is an equal opportunity employer dedicated to affirmative action and work force diversity.
HEWLETT PACKARD

Bucci
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0155

Best Locations!
Shaw-Long's Resort
April 7th
Dinner or Breakfast Cruises
Dilworth Manor
Robert Lane
Lincoln Real Estate
25 N. Pleasant Street
253 - 7879

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
starts FRIDAY -Only Area showing- LIMITED RUN
Curtain daily 7:00 PM (see ticket info. below)
★★★★ BRANAGH BURNS THROUGH THIS FILM LIKE A FLAMING ARROW.
"A TOWERING ACHIEVEMENT!"
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET
A KENNETH BRANAGH FILM
Due to the 4 hour running time of this film
TICKETS AVAILABLE ALL PERFORMANCES IN ADVANCE
Box Office DAILY from NOON – EASTER from 3:00 P.M.
Film must start promptly at 7 P.M. regardless of ticket line
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435

Minutewomen to open softball season at Totman

By Carey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

There will be no place quite like home for the Massachusetts softball team this weekend, when they return to Amherst for their home opener after a brutal early season schedule leaves them with a 7–13 record.

The Minutewomen open up their A–10 season Saturday and Sunday afternoon at 1 p.m. at Totman Field, when they wage war against Dayton and St. Bonaventure in double– header action, respectively.

Though they have struggled early, UMass can find comfort in their proven ability to hang in there with the top teams in the country.

The Minutewomen have already dropped heartbreaking one–run decisions to No. 3 Fresno State, No. 6 South Carolina and No. 14 South Florida.

Also slated on their early season schedule have been tough outcomes with No. 13 Southwestern Louisiana, No. 16 Michigan State and No. 20 Louisiana Tech.

The road has been tough for UMass, and returning to the cozy confines of Totman Field appears to be the best remedy for the homesick and slumping Minutewomen.

This weekend, the Minutewomen will need to get the ball rolling by dismantling their overmatched A–10 foes Dayton and St. Bonaventure.

The Flyers attack is led by 1996 All A–10 team member Megan Gue.

Gue's team–high .339 batting average accompanied by her team–high 21 hits, has paced Dayton through early season turmoil en route to a disappointing 5–13–1 start.

Gue is the center of a weak Flyer lineup that has had trouble scoring runs so far this season, while hitting at only a .239 clip.

The Bonnies have faired slightly better thus far, jumping out to a deceiving 9–1 mark, but have yet to play a team higher than Division III.

UMass will be the first true test of their season.

St. Bonaventure standout Jessica Gauby leads the team with an impressive .424 batting average.

The Bonnies have so far proven the theory that pitching and defense wins ballgames, outscoring their opponents 87–20 over 10 games.

To be successful, UMass will need strong outings from sophomore Danielle Henderson who took home A–10 pitcher of the week honors last week.

Despite a lack of run support which won her only 3 of six games, Henderson yielded just two earned runs, a stifling 0.43 earned run average.

For those stats buffs, you can bet on the Minutewomen taking control of matters this weekend. UMass has dominated their home openers, winning 19 of 21, reeling off the last 12 straight.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
The Massachusetts softball team kicks off its home season this weekend.

■ water polo

continued from page 10

Another important accomplishment last week was the win over USC, a team who has a reputation for being violent and playing dirty, and who the Minutewomen lost to just a few days prior. According to Newcomb, the loss was significant in making the team realize that it should not have been an 11–5 loss, and that our team can play with them.

"We didn't try and play dirty, we just went out at them, as opposed to sitting back and letting them get us, and it was a great game," Newcomb said. "It was never more than one goal away."

"I think they came out thinking that they were just going to walk all over us again, but we came to play and they didn't. I think that made the difference," freshman Katie Grogan said.

There were many things that the team wanted to do on this trip, according to Newcomb, including beating Redlands, Washington, Indiana and winning the Claremont Colleges Tournament, which they came very close to doing.

"I think it was a great opportunity for us, from here all the way down we just played one great game after another, and that's what we were trying to do," Newcomb said. "We were trying to go out and play against the best teams — we did that. To play well against the best teams — I think we did that as well."

One of the key assets for the team has been Grogan, the leading scorer thus far this season. To date, Grogan has 48 goals, 43 assists and 57 steals. According to Newcomb, she has had a tremendous impact on the program.

"She is just an outstanding ability," Newcomb said. "We are excited about having her here, and she is making her impact felt right from the start."

This past week Grogan scored in all but one of the matches, racking up 22 more goals during this road trip. After scoring six goals to helping lead the Minutewomen to a victory over Claremont, she continued to impress, scoring another four goals against Washington.

Another player who made her presence known this trip is senior tri–captain Cathy Leeburg.

"Cathy has an incredible game sense," Newcomb said. "She knows where she needs to be, what she needs to do, and always is there. She always has herself in the position to get an assist."

Currently Leeburg is second only to Grogan, with 21 assists and 24 goals. She scored four goals against Claremont, and helped the Minutewomen down Indiana with three goals.

"We have a crew of leaders in our captains, Nancy MacNeil, Barbara Hickey and Cathy Leeburg, who are doing a great job as far as keeping the team motivated and psyched about playing and coming to workouts and working hard. They are doing a real good job," Newcomb said.

According to Hickey, the team gives each other a lot of support, which is one reason the confidence level is so high.

"Comments like, 'That's a great shot' from your teammates means a lot to people. For someone who is my teammate to see something that I did is more important because they are playing at the same time and are seeing the situation," Hickey said.

"Most of the confidence comes from our own team. I think our team together is very strong. Support wise, I think that everyone really helps each other," Bamond said.

Can the Sox be any good in 1997?

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

FORT MYERS, Fla. — Don't expect to see Boston Red Sox manager Jimy Williams making proposition bets between exhibition games in Las Vegas this weekend. He won't even commit to breaking .500 this season.

Asked yesterday if he would echo the marginally optimistic prediction Dick Williams made in Boston's pennant-winning season of 1967 — "We'll win more than we lose" — the current Williams declined.

"But I certainly feel that. I really feel that [we will]," he said before the team broke camp and headed for Las Vegas to continue its exhibition schedule. "Our goal is to play in October. You have to win more than you lose to play in October."

The Red Sox wrapped up the Florida portion of their exhibition schedule with a 6-1 loss to the Chicago White Sox, then finished packing up their lockers for the truck to Boston.

Yesterday's loss dropped the Red Sox to 9-17-1 in Florida, including just four victories in their last 22 games.

"Regardless of the record, I think we're fine. I feel good about it," Williams said. "There are some very, very good hitters here who haven't hit the way they're going to hit.

"I like these guys. They're good players. There are good arms on that pitching staff."

After the game, the team headed to Nevada for games against Seattle, San Diego and two against the New York Mets. Then, it will be off to Anaheim to open the season against the Angels on Wednesday.

Williams, who isn't a gambler, said it will be all baseball when he gets to Las Vegas. Same with pitcher Vaughn Eshelman, whose spot on the roster is not yet assured.

"I'm going to catch up on my rest. I can't wait for a night game," he said, noting also that he has read several books on blackjack. "It's not a vacation for me. It's still a lot of hard work."

Third baseman Tim Naehring, whose dashing good looks make him a favorite of the newspaper gossip columns in Boston, will stay out of trouble meeting with business partners for his youth program. Bret Saberhagen said he has nothing special planned. Designated hitter Reggie Jefferson and his wife will try to take in some shows, playing a little blackjack here and there.

But at least one of his teammates has big plans.

"I'm going to eat. I'm going to seriously eat," said opening day starter Tom Gordon, who planned to head straight for the Tropicana Hotel buffet he remembers from a trip there in 1989. "I'm going to pay for the buffet and see how long I can stay before they kick me out."

**

**

John Valentin was listening to some interviews at the next locker when a radio reporter tried to thaw his mood with the ill-conceived comment, "You don't look happy." "Does it matter?" Valentin replied.

Well, no. It probably doesn't.

Second base or shortstop, pleased or disgruntled, traded or still in Boston, it probably doesn't matter what Valentin does or how he feels. That's just the problem with the Red Sox this year. Just two years away from a division title, the Red Sox are likely headed for a fourth-place finish and a 79th consecutive year without a World Series title. Only six players that faced Cleveland in the 1995 AL playoffs are still with the team, but Boston's revolving door roster would really start spinning if Valentin gets his wish for a trade.

"In '95, we were a couple of players away, but we've changed a lot of faces. It makes it tough," first baseman Mo Vaughn said. "When you change roles from year to year, it makes it tougher to fill in the gaps. You just hope you can fill them in before you're 6-19."

The Red Sox did indeed open 6-19 last season, the result of a franchise-worst start that doomed them to also-ran status even with baseball's best record after the All-Star break.

During the off-season, Red Sox perennials Roger Clemens and Mike Greenwell left angrily. Slugger Jose Canseco demanded a trade — and got his wish — after manager Kevin Kennedy was fired. And before the first pitch of the spring, Vaughn lashed out at management's failure to keep pace in the competitive AL East.

The grousing only intensified after Valentin was moved from shortstop to second base, a long-expected but poorly handled decision that exhumed the turmoil of last fall. The shuffle installed Nomar Garciaparra at shortstop and Wil Cordero, who spent the winter trying to learn second base, in left.

"I would have gone on a cruise," he smirked.

Shane Mack, a free agent signee who spent the last two years in Japan, will play center and Rudy Pemberton and Troy O'Leary seem to be platooned in right. Reggie Jefferson and Mike Stanley are slated to platoon at designated hitter.

Tim Naehring, who became a free agent after the new labor agreement was approved, passed up a more lucrative offer from Cleveland to stay in Boston and stay at third base. Bill Haselman will catch.

The bullpen has Heathcliff Slocumb as closer and about nine interchangeable others fighting for the five remaining spots. The competition might have been more suspenseful if it weren't a near-certainty that the Red Sox — who used 53 players in 1995 and 55 more in '96 — will go through all of them and more during the season.

Final 4: Notes from Indianapolis

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Dean Smith is again chasing Adolph Rupp. Rick Pitino is going for history. Lute Olson is looking for respect. Clem Haskins is trying to shake the rookie tag.

The Final Four always has a solid group of coaches and this year is no exception.

Saturday's first matchup has Smith and his North Carolina Tar Heels going against Olson and his Arizona Wildcats, a rematch of the teams' season-opener won by Arizona 83-72.

Then it will be Pitino's defending national champion Kentucky Wildcats against Haskins' Minnesota Golden Gophers, who are making the first Final Four appearance in school history.

College basketball is a sport of coaches and this Final Four is no exception.

Smith moved to the top of the coaches' victory list in the second round of the NCAA tournament, passing Rupp with win No. 877. Two wins in Indianapolis will move Smith past Rupp and into second place on the Final Four victory list.

This is Smith's 11th Final Four, one behind John Wooden's record, and a title would be his third and break him out of a logjam of seven coaches with two. Wooden won 10 titles, Rupp had four and Indiana's Bob Knight has three.

"From 1967 to now a lot has changed even with the Final Four," said Smith, whose 65 tournament victories are well ahead of Wooden's 47 on the career list. "The big hoopla came somewhere between our trips in 1972 and 1977. In 1977, I couldn't believe the difference. Yet I believe I'd like our team to approach it as Arizona is the next game on our schedule."

The Tar Heels (28-6) are on a 16-game winning streak and haven't lost since Jan. 29. Their first loss of the season was to Arizona in the Tipoff Classic at Springfield, Mass.

"I won't even let our team watch that game," Smith said. "Both teams are so different now."

Arizona (23-9) pulled off the upset of the tournament in beating top-seeded Kansas in the Southeast Regional semifinals and then had to sweat out an overtime win over Providence in the finals. "I think we're playing very well. We've not made it easy in terms of getting there with all four games going down to the wire," Olson said. "But without a doubt we're playing the best basketball that we have all year long."

Olson took Iowa to the Final Four in Indianapolis in 1980 and this is his third trip with Arizona. Still, he's a coach whose name is more synonymous with being on the wrong end of first-round upsets.

"I think our program stands on its own and you can't control what people say," Olson said. "Our program has been a outstanding program for a number of years now and we don't feel the need to protect that at all."

Kentucky (34-4) won it all last season and is two games from repeating despite losing the crux of last year's team to graduation, the NBA and a midseason knee injury to star guard Derek Anderson.

Pitino is trying to become the seventh coach to lead a team to a repeat title, the last being Duke's Mike Krzyzewski in 1992. "With this team the only thing we've been trying to do is get better and improve," Pitino said. "We never thought in terms of, well I shouldn't say that, we did think in terms of defending the national title. When Derek went down all we did was try to get better. Now we have an opportunity to do that but we understand we're playing Minnesota and it's going to be a difficult task." The Golden Gophers (31-3), who have won 16 of their last 17 games, are the newcomers to the Final Four hoopla, but it doesn't seem to faze Haskins in the least.

"We try to treat it like any game on the road. It's an opportunity once in a lifetime," he said. "We're here to play a couple of hours a day, relax a couple of hours a day and then enjoy what's going on with the kids.

* * * *

There was a time when Cameron Mills had trouble getting noticed on the Kentucky bench. Now he's a marked man in the NCAA tournament.

The former walk-on received that kind of attention from Utah in the West Regional final after scoring a career-high 19 points in an 83-68 semifinal victory over St. Joseph's.

Utah did a superb job on Mills, holding him scoreless and limiting him to just one shot. But Kentucky won 72-59.

"It felt good, I guess," Mills said of the defensive attention. "Once you concentrate so heavily on one player, it's going to help out the rest of the team because that's going to leave other guys open."

Mills, a 6-foot-3 junior guard, has been hot in the NCAA tourney. He is averaging 12.3 points, third best on the team, while hitting 72 percent (13-of-18) from 3-point range.

"Cameron has been a major factor in us going to the Final Four," said Kentucky coach Rick Pitino, whose team faces Minnesota in the semifinals Saturday night. "We could not have done this without him because somebody had to step us and get us points." North Carolina plays Arizona in the other semifinal for a spot in the NCAA championship game.

Mills admits to being slightly overwhelmed about his postseason play. After all, before this season his playing time was sparse and always came when the outcome was well in hand for the Wildcats. Pitino said Mills has improved steadily, and while the guard doesn't have great quickness or leaping ability, he does have a pretty jump shot.

WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS SOFTWARE ASSOCIATION
41 Main Street • Florence, MA 01060 • 413-584-3449 • fax 413-584-2495
SOFTWARE JOB FAIR '97
Tuesday, April 1, 11 a.m–7 p.m.
Springfield MA Sheraton Monarch Hotel Grand Ballroom
OVER 30 COMPANIES SEEKING!
- Software Engineers
- Network Specialists
- Quality Assurance
- Software Managers
- Technical Writers
- MIS Professionals
- System/LAN Administrators
- Systems Analysts
- Application Programmers
- ... and many more!!!

FREE ADMISSION · BRING YOUR RESUME
SPONSORED BY
Fidelity Investments · JavaNet · APPLIED PC · MassMutual The Blue Chip Company · Commonwealth Corporation
For more information: http://www.wsss.org

SPEEDMARK TRANSPORTATION INC
INTERNATIONAL FREIGHT FORWARDING
WE ARE LOOKING FOR EXPERIENCED INTERNATIONAL FREIGHT FORWARDING SALES REPRESENTATIVES FOR OUR OFFICE IN BOSTON. WE OFFER ATTRACTIVE COMPENSATION PACKAGE, A PROFESSIONAL ENVIRONMENT, OUTSTANDING GROWTH OPPORTUNITIES, A COMPETITIVE STARTING SALARY AND A COMPREHENSIVE BENEFITS PACKAGE. CANDIDATES WITH PREFERRED BUT WILL TRAIN THE RIGHT PERSON. IF INTERESTED PLEASE SEND RESUME TO
ATTN: MR. TONY LIU AND/OR
MR. MIKE MACDONALD
SPEEDMARK TRANSPORTATION INC.
440 McCLELLAN HIGHWAY, SUITE#118
EAST BOSTON, MA 02128

UMAN SPORTS ARE HERE TO SER

PUB Promo Nights
Friday March 28 10 - Midnight CROWN ROYAL
Friday March 28 10 - Midnight EASY-WIDER PAPERS
Thurs April 3 10 - Midnight Yukon Jack
WIN PRIZES - T- Shirts
THE PUB
Friday April 4: Giant Iguana Moutain Bike Give away From AXLERS' Bicycle Corner 10 - Midnight
Saturday April 5: MOLSON NIGHT Shoot for the Gold with WHMP LIVE 10 - Midnight

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

The Collegian Butter On Your Bagel

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office. 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

1992 Ford Explorer 4x4, A/C, 5-speed, 2 door, 90K, looks and runs excellent $9500 549-6984

EMPLOYMENT

Hadley Office has 10 part-time openings for Field Service Reps in its Customer Service Division Responsibilities include Marketing, Service, and light Deliveries in Amherst, Hadley, and Northampton areas

$8/$12 hour
Call 584-7696
10am to 4pm
Ask for Frank Biasi

Vermont Adventure! Farm and Wilderness is now hiring summer staff. We need people who want to provide positive guidance and support to adolescents coming of age in the 90's. Counselors, nurses, cooks, general staff. Organic farming, backpacking, rock climbing, waterfront, carpentry, crafts. Challenging wilderness environment in the Green Mountains of Vermont. Contact Philip Tobin (802)422-3761 or fandw@sover.net (http://www.fandw.org)

EMPLOYMENT

Hadley Office has several part-time positions available in its Marketing Dept.

- Evening and Weekend Shifts
- Fun Atmosphere
- Daily, Weekly, and Monthly Bonuses
- On Bus Line
- 15 to 35 hours a week $7/$10 hour

Call 584-7696 between 2pm. and 9pm.

Drivers Wanted College students, anyone to sell Good Humor Ice Cream from one of our vending trucks Work outdoors this summer. Be your own boss. RTS available in your area Earn $750-950/weekly. Male or Female Apply now. Call Mon.-Sat. 9am.- 3pm. only. (203)366-2641 or (800)899-1009

Need a summer job? Know the web? Sell MCI Internet Websites to anyone, whenever you want to work. Low cost, nice income for you. Call (800)372-7683 or e-mail for more information. dlenger@aol.com

Sales Reps Expanding company seeks motivated people to earn extra money, full or Part Time. Will train. (413)732-0699

Leasing Agents Full and Part Time for the busy summer season. Must be outgoing, friendly, and willing to work many hours. Responsibilities include collecting rent, processing applications, answering phones and general clerical work. Please apply in person at Cliffside Apartments between 1-4pm No phone calls please EOE

EMPLOYMENT

Crehoppie White Water Looking for one person to greet trips. Work in restaurant and retail store. Full-Time Summer Job. Some positions. Looking for multi-talented, friendly person. (413)625-2288

$Opportunity$ Looking for several exciting, enthusiastic, and dedicated people to expand an already lucrative market. Great opportunity for those who are serious. Interested persons call Todd at (413)739-4669

Earn great money and valuable Sales/Marketing experience Mamolina's Memoboards are coming to UMass! We need one highly motivated individual to direct our sales project. Contact David at (800)563-6654

Amherst Leisure Services is now accepting applications for summer positions. Aquatics positions: Pool Maintenance Supervisor, Canoe Instructors, Assistant Pool Manager, Lifeguards, Swim Instructors, and Cashiers. Day Camp Positions: Camp Counselors, Special Needs Coordinator/Supervisor in Mainstream setting, Special Needs Counselor/Aides in Mainstream setting, Camp Art Director, Camp Resource Manager. Sports Positions: Ball Field Maintenance, Youth Tennis Instructors. Applications are available at the Town of Amherst Human Resources and Leisure Services Offices. Return completed application by the preferred deadline of 3/31/97 to: Town of Amherst Human Resources Office, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst, MA 01002 An EO/AA Employer

EMPLOYMENT

Legal Assistants Wanted- Fall 1997 internships with the Student Legal Services Office. get hands-on experience in the Legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits No experience in the Legal profession necessary— training provided. Stop by the office today and pick up an application. 922 Campus Center.

Technical Support/ISP Looking for a great part-time job? We are a local, progressive, internet service provider that is looking for Quality, Energetic, and Reliable persons to join our team. Requirements: experience in Windows 95, Windows 3.1, Mac, Dialup Networking and TC PIP. Call our job hotline today! (413)587-4333 or e-mail jobs@crocker.com

Cruise Lines Hiring Earn up to $2000+/month plus free world travel (Europe, Caribbean, etc.) No experience necessary. (519)918-7767 ext C180 (Member, Better Business Bureau CARE Program)

Alaska Employment Earn up to $3000-$6000+/month in fisheries, parks, resorts, airfare, food/lodging! Get all the options. Call (519)918-7767 ext. A180

Part-Time Salsa Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise and Load Tour Employment work in exotic locations: Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. CS0017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

4 bedroom apartment 2 bath, 2 large living rooms. Located on bus route in South Amherst. Call 256-1561

Summer Rental- West Hyannis Port Cape Cod three bedroom Walk to Craigville Beach Available 5/25-8/31. (508)778-6319

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

Buy wholesale, not retail. The last phone card you will ever own. MCI Pre-paid only $2.00 for 10 minutes. This card is rechargeable. Mail $2.00 and SASE to: Collegiate Communications, P.O. Box 785, Attleboro, MA 02703 (800)372-7683

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Nyer,

Wish I was getting the cash today! You crazy bagel. Live up the Big Nineteen!

Love and Beyond,

Twit

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT
30 hours, $395
American Academy
1-800-808-Prep
(please leave your name and number)

LOST

Gold Chain and Pendant in Boyden. Great personal value to me. Please call Hilery 256-4546

MUSICIANS

DRUMMER WANTED
Punk/Ska Band 25 Lixrs needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming. Call Dave and Ryan 665-3112

MISCELLANEOUS

Fundraiser- Motivated groups needed to earn $500+ promoting AT&T, Discover, gas and retail cards. Since 1969, we've helped thousands of groups raise the money they need. Call Gina at (800)592-2121 ext. 110. Free CD to qualified callers.

ROOM WANTED

Looking for apartment on bus line for Fall '97. Please call Amy 546-0706

ROOMMATE WANTED

Two bedroom apt. ASAP! Mill Valley Estates. Rent negotiable. Call 253-0592

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State St. Northampton. 586-0629

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

3 bedroom Puffton available 6/1. 549-5941

TO SUBLET

1 bedroom apartment available immediately. Call Tricia for more info. (617)247-2388

TRAVEL

Party Weekend in Vermont April 4-6, only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Mootroo!- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus- $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be processed by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day

All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, MARCH 28

Lecture — Former Olympian swimmer Greg Louganis will speak about his decision to go public with his homosexuality and the fact that he has AIDS at Mount Holyoke College at 7:30 p.m. in Chapin Auditorium. The event is free and open to the public.

Comedy — The UMass

SATURDAY, MARCH 29

Improv Comedy Troupe will present its free, weekly improv comedy show, Mission Improvable, at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center basement.

NOTICES

Financial aid — Applications for summer financial aid are now available at Financial Aid Services. You must be a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass: taking summer classes through Continuing Education; going on approved summer international exchange program through IPO; or working on a graduate dissertation. Deadline is April 18. Late applications will not be accepted.–

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, conact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545–9484.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submisssions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one–acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to department of comparative lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Band wanted — Amnesty International is looking for a Jazz Band to play for its upcoming fundraiser this spring. If interested, call the Amnesty office at 549–1925 or Babz at 546–3105 as soon as possible.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

PITs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Member O.C.M.P.

"we accept all major credit cards"

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
$1 drinks Rum & Coke & always $1 Bud light draft

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 28, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	McLaughlin	Connecticut	Fourth Estate	First Flights	World at War	British Victory
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	JAG "The Guardian" (In Stereo)		Orleans "Luther's Temptation"		Nash Bridges "Out of Chicago"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	JAG "The Guardian" (In Stereo)		Orleans "Luther's Temptation"		Nash Bridges "Out of Chicago"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Family Matters	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Step by Step	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Full House	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		★★½ "River of Death" (1989, Adventure) Michael Dudikoff.				News		Jenny Jones (R) (In Stereo)
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)	Crisis Center (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		(6)	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	"The Devil's Bet" (1994, Drama) Nicolette Sheridan, Joe Lando.			News		News	Real TV
WVIT		(36)	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Herd Copy	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)	Crisis Center (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	3	(11)	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Sliders "The Last of Eden"		Millennium "Walkabout"	News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	9	(22)	News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)			Dateline (In Stereo)	Crisis Center (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	(6)	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Slats Wa're In	Frug. Gourmet	Talking With David	Frost
WGGB	40	(28)	News	ABC News	Seinfeld		Ent. Tonight	Family Matters	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Step by Step	20/20
WSBK	38		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld		NBA Basketball: Boston Celtics vs Philadelphia 76ers. (Live)			News		Martin	Med Abo. You
WTBS	49		Family Matters	Family Matters	Preseason Baseball: Atlanta Braves vs. Cincinnati Reds. (Live)					★★ "Brewster's Millions" (1985, Comedy) Richard Pryor.
A&E	23		Quincy "Dead and Alive"		Equalizer "Zebra 17"		Biography: Humphrey Bogart			★★★½ "Beat the Devil" (1954, Comedy) Humphrey Bogart.		Law & Order
CNN	45	22	World View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today	Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	42	32	★★½ "Ghostbusters II" (1989, Comedy) Bill Murray, Dan Aykroyd.				★½ "Pennsylvania 6-5000" (1985, Comedy) Jeff Goldblum.				★★½ "Ghostbusters II" (1989, Comedy) Bill Murray, Dan Aykroyd.
DISC	48		Beyond 2000	Next Step (R)	Wings "The Rubber Planet" (R)		Wild Discovery: Serpent			Chopper-s on Patrol (R)		Wild Discovery: Serpent
ESPN	43		Up Close	Sportscenter	Women's College Basketball: NCAA Semifinal -- Teams TBA					Women's College Basketball: NCAA Semifinal -- Teams TBA			Sportscenter
LIFE	39		Supermarket	Debt	Diah	3 Blind Dates	Wire	Pandora		★★ "Heartbeat" (1993, Drama) John Ritter, Polly Draper.		Dish (R)	3 Blind Dates
MTV	44		Ren & Stimpy	Week in Rock	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Music Videos (In Stereo)				Beavis-Butt.	Sports	Singled Out
NICK	41		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Kablam!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Taxi
SCIFI	61		New Edge (R)	Anti-Gravity	She-Wolf of London		Viewers' Choice				Friday the 13th: The Series		She-Wolf of London
TLC	46	24	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Quest (R)	What a World	Close Encounters		Quest (R)	Forces	Quest (R)
TNT	62		In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball: Indiana Pacers at Charlotte Hornets. (Live)					NBA Basketball:	Timberwolves at SuperSonics
USA	47		Renegade "The Mattress Inden"		Highlander: The Series		Figure Skating: Champions on Ice				La Femme Nikita "Charity"		"Howling II... Werewolf"
HBO	59		(4:30)	Sports on the Silver Screen (R)			★★½ "The Rookie" (1990, Drama) Clint Eastwood, Tr.				"Crash Dive" (1997) Michael Dudikoff.		Dennis Miller
MAX	60		★★½ "The Net" (1995, Suspense)		Sandra Bullock. PG-13		★★ "Carried Away" (1995, Comedy-Drama) Dennis Hopper.				★★★ "Patriot Games" (1992, Suspense) Harrison Ford.
SHOW	58		★★ "Mad Love" (1995, Drama) Chris O'Donnell.				★ "Bio-Dome" (1996) Pauly Shore.		PG-13	30-Min. Movie	Outer Limits	Poltergeist: The Legacy	"Johnny"

The Collegian Butter On Your Bagel

Bruno By C. Baldwin

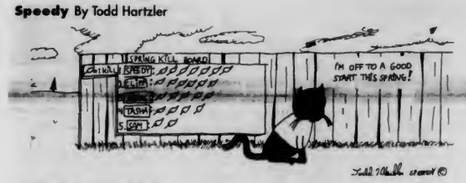
Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

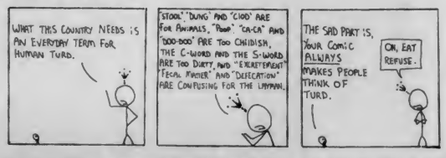
Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley



Non Sequitor By Wiley



University² By Frank Cho

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2620 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
taco	cod
veggie taco	pasta w/ lentil sauce
clam roll	1/4 burger
reuben sandwich

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
captins catch	cod
grilled chicken sandwich	Korean bbq tofu
fettuccini	ravioli
black eye peas	1/2 time deli

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
burger on bun	cod
grilled chicken sandwich	pasta
captins catch	and sauce

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
captins catch	cod
fettuccini	pasta
wheat balls	stir fry
	ravioli

Leold (leold@javanet.com) by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

My mom can't afford health insurance for us.

She took my little sister to a specialist to look at her big toe.

He didn't do much except look at her toe and talk to my mom. He charged my mom $135. She cried in the waiting room when she saw the bill.

I told her he was a specialist in toes and in installing pure white marble floors in his wife's kitchen.

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Pressure at work eases as the week begins. Take the opportunity to attend to some personal affairs you've been neglecting. An old friend may be feeling a bit forgotten.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
A reckless feeling may lead you into a situation that's over your head. Don't hesitate to ask for help, since the consequences of not doing so could be dire. A sporting event is a source of amusement.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Someone who rubs you the wrong way is about to get a fresh opportunity. Be prepared. If you're aware ahead of time, you may not find their actions quite so obnoxious.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
An old friend may need your support in handling a difficult problem. Be prepared to lend an ear, or perhaps some financial support, if you're able. A little compassion goes a long way.

LEO
July 23-August 23
A group project flows nicely once a group leader permits everyone to have an equal say. A light touch goes a long way toward easing a situation that has become tense.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
A relationship deepens with some effort and attention. Be clear about what you want, and your companion will equal your honesty. It's important to give trust in order to have trust.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Stir't out a confusing relationship for a little while longer. You may gain insight, even if it still doesn't work out. The effort you make to avoid hurting another person will come back to you tenfold.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
A happy announcement may make you the center of attention early, this week. Enjoy it while you can— stressful moments may be following closely behind.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
A brilliant insight on the part of a co-worker may seem silly at first, but give the idea the benefit of the doubt. A trial run may be the very thing to prove its value.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
Planning a big event proves more exhausting than you had anticipated, so enlist help from someone you trust to get things done in time. Save some energy so you can enjoy yourself, too!

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A visit with a close friend or relative brings you up to date on some gossip you've missed. Ignore a catty remark from a co-worker, since their spitefulness is probably rooted in jealousy. Living well is the best revenge.

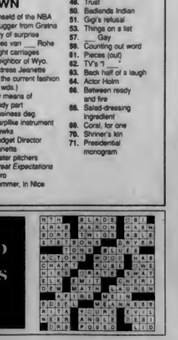
PISCES
February 19-March 20
A good week for catching up on minor projects you've been ignoring. Cover all your bases before making an off-the-wall suggestion—you don't want to make others think you're a fool.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

"The insurance company is right. We've got its basic policy that covers only illnesses that begin with the letters A through G."

Quote of the Day



"Ho Ho Ho! Hoo tee men, Kow-wow wookie!"

–Jaba the Hut in Return of the Jedi

ACROSS
1. Grain locale
5. Johnny Mathis hit
9. Jack of clubs
12. Lucy's pal
14. Superstar
15. Action word
16. Alibi
17. Celebration
18. Columnist Bombeck
19. Treasure Island author's monogram
21. Egyptian deity
23. Reese of baseball
27. Early-blooming plant
31. Bug bite upshot
32. Sash of the East
34. Stop
35. Brazil's "Black Pearl"
36. Musical selection
39. Youth group (abbr.)
40. Harold ___ Maude
41. Headwear piece
42. Blubber
44. Baseball stat
46. Gunpowder holder of yore
48. Parser's concern
52. Reach
54. Compass dir.
55. Biblical preposition
56. Hobbies
58. Reduce
60. Tree of Life site
61. Storm center
62. Leveling wedge
65. Saturate
67. Emulsified e bloodhound
72. Black-eyed legumes
73. Nastase of tennis
74. Triangular traffic sign
75. Hankering
76. Houston et al.
77. Placid, e.g.

DOWN
1. Unsold of the NBA
2. Slugger from Gretna
3. Cry of surprise
4. Mlles van ___ Rohe
5. Light carriages
6. Neighbor of Wyo.
7. Actress Jeanette
8. In the current fashion (3 wds.)
9. By means of
10. Body part
11. Business deg.
13. Harpsilike instrument
15. Hawks
20. Budget Director Panetta
22. Water pitchers
23. Great Expectations hero
24. Summer, in Nice
25. Filled pastries
26. Where or ___?
27. Figures of speech
28. First-place flutterers
29. CIA forerunner
30. Harper Valley gp.
33. Object of ridicule
37. Has- ___ (fallen star)
40. Lyricist Hal
43. Responsibility
44. Strike
45. Bikini top
47. Miss Marple novel
48. Trust
50. Badlands Indian
51. Gig's refusal
53. Things on a list
57. ___ Gay
59. Counting out word
61. Pieces (out)
62. TV's "___"
63. Back half of a laugh
64. Actor Holm
66. Between ready and fire
68. Salad-dressing ingredient
69. Coral, for one
70. Shriner's kin
71. Presidential monogram

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

SPORTS

Friday, March 28, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Minutewomen lose tough one to Yale 20–5

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Going into the home opener versus No. 10 Yale University, high expectations were had by all who are involved with the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team. For good reason, because since the reinstatement of the program in 1993, this season the Minutewomen finally had a good mix of young talent and senior leadership to draw from.

MASSACHUSETTS 5
YALE 20

But, all that happened to UMass (1–2) on Totman Field yesterday afternoon was expectations were shattered, and the only thing high was the final score, a 20–5 dismantling at the hands of Yale (4–0). After their first two games where the Minutewomen were either close to victory (6–5 loss to Harvard), or ran away with a victory (an 11–2 rout of Holy Cross), only positive things were expected for a home opener on the first sunny afternoon of spring.

But, the Elis dominated the Minutewomen in all phases of the game, from picking up loose ground balls to stifling defense to a high-powered, fast break offense. After a off–season where Yale lost three important contributors, senior Ali DeLaCruz and junior Amanda Cox single–handedly led the team today, together scoring nine goals.

For UMass coach Francesca McClellan, she has been excited about her team's effort so far this season. But, she has also been hesitant about the possible ramifications a midweek home opener can have on a team's effort and concentration — those fears were confirmed.

"We look tired, and we did not look sharp," McClellan said. "It was a typical first midweek home game reaction, which I expected. But, the way we started I thought they had beaten that, and they didn't.

"They just did not look like the team we know and love. My team did not show up today."

The start of the game did not bode well for the Minutewomen. Just :27 into the contest, junior Laurie Bellfveau made a run from behind the UMass net, beating freshman goalie Megan Haggerty (15 saves) low to her left to put Yale up 1–0. After a five minute span where Haggerty came up with a series of big saves, DeLaCruz put Yale up 2–1 on a nifty left to right cut.

UMass had their share of the ball early in the game, but sloppy transitional play and poor passing hurt any inkling of momentum they established early. When Bellfveau was knocked out of the game at the 6:23 mark, things began to look up for the Minutewomen.

After DeLaCruz' goal, though, the Elis ran off six unanswered goals to put them up 7–1. Any mistake UMass made, Yale was all over them, would gain possession and their fast break offense would have the ball on Haggerty's doorstep within three to four passes.

Another goal by Herker off of another penalty shot at the 21:19 mark stopped the bleeding at 7–2, but the Eli pressure was too much. The Minutewomen could not make a run on the scoreboard before the end of the half, and two more Yale goals made the 10–2 score at the break.

Junior tri–captain Jen Bowen opened the second half with a score at the 1:31 mark, but once again, the Elis went on a run to make the score 13–3. Bowen scored again at the 6:17 mark off of a dandy pass by sophomore attacker Laura Korutz. Bowen leaped to pick the ball out of the air in front of the net, and in one motion beat Yale goalie Alison Cole for the 13–4 score. One score by Korutz, and seven by the Elis ended the 20–5 game — thankfully for all involved.

"We match up with Yale on a good day, but we didn't come close in matching up with them today," McClellan said. "The kids did not remember the details. They were slow to react on everything, which makes Yale look great because they beat us to ground balls, to loose balls, on draw reactions. We just didn't step up."

UMass' next game is against No. 7 Temple in Philadelphia, Pa. tomorrow at 1 p.m., and will return to Totman on April 4 with a game versus New Hampshire.

JORMA KANSANEN \ COLLEGIAN

Kristen Hocker and the women's lacrosse team could not outrun Yale yesterday at Totman Field, losing 20–5.

Men's lax off to Army; seek 2nd straight win

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's lacrosse team is going off to West Point this weekend, not to join the Army, but to beat it.

UMass is trying to gain some momentum after improving to 3–2 with a mid–week 12–5 thrashing of Boston College.

The win over the Eagles snapped the Minutemen out of a two game slide that included a double overtime loss at Hofstra and a tough loss at Virginia.

Army is ranked No. 13 in the country, just two places higher than the Minutemen. The Cadets are 4–1, with wins against Cornell, Georgetown, Bucknell and Holy Cross.

Men's Lax vs. ARMY

The all–time series between the schools is 9–8 in Army's favor, the one–game advantage coming at last year's meeting between the schools.

The Cadets took a 9–8 overtime win, after UMass had made a 6–1 comeback run to tie the game on a Jim Kennedy goal with :21 seconds remaining in regulation.

"This game is a huge challenge," Massachusetts coach Greg Cannella said. "Army is a national lacrosse power, perennially. We can't take this game lightly."

The Minutemen are led on attack by senior midfielder Chris Grande (11 goals) and senior attackman Brendan Glass (9 goals, 2 assists).

As a two–time All–American, Glass has received tight coverage, combined with an early season shin splint problem this has allowed room for others, such as Grande to step up their production.

Now that Grande is known as a serious threat coming from outside, it may open up the UMass offense significantly.

"We expect him to receive some added attention, playing with the pole [defended by a long–stick player], he's going to get a double team a little quicker and people are going to [step up] a little earlier on him," Cannella said.

"He's going to have to look to dish it of and move the ball a little bit more.

"Hopefully the guys who [have] got the short sticks can create a little bit, that's Mike DelPercio and Chris Martens."

In a similar pattern, Army's attack is anchored by two experienced upperclassmen, one forward and one middie. Junior attackman Chad Hadlock leads the cadets in scoring with 17 goals and 3 assists, followed closely by senior midfielder Ross Yastrzemsky who has amassed 15 goals and 4 assists.

"Ross Yastrzemsky is an outstanding player, he showed us that last year. We're going to have to shut him down," Cannella said. "Chad Hadlock is a big kid and he possesses a great shot. We'll have to stay on his hands and keep the ball away from him. There [are] other guys who can hurt you if you fall asleep."

The teams' respective goalkeepers are similar in their experience and success.

Along with junior Harold Drumm at close defense, UMass' John Kaselakis is the cornerstone of a defense that is allowing just 7 goals per game. Army's Lou Kousouris, a junior, has been guarding the Cadets' cage just as aptly this season, allowing an average of just 8.6 goals per game.

"Their goalie has played well," Cannella said. "In the game that we saw them play against Georgetown — at the time Georgetown was ranked fifth in the country and Army beat them at [Georgetown's] home field — he played very well.

"He's a pretty athletic goalie, in and out of the cage, so we're just going to have to shoot well," Cannella continued.

At 3–2, with eight games remaining, seven of which are against ranked teams, UMass expects this to be one of many hard fought contests that make up its schedule.

"In the remaining eight games we have, we're going to face top–notch people, and top notch goalies," Cannella said. "So it's going to be up to us to step up to the challenge."

The Massachusetts versus Army lacrosse game will be broadcast live on 91.1 WMUA, Amherst.

Face–off is at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday, March 29, with pregame show starting at 1:15. Jonathan Place will provide play–by–play and Larry Harding will add commentary.

UM off to Virginia Tech to face Hokies

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

The Virginia Tech. baseball team had a great season last year. Its squad was the Atlantic 10 regular season champions, and looked to carry its success right up to the tournament's championship. The Hokies did just that, but unfortunately had its red carpet taken right from under its feet by the Minutemen, who won its third Atlantic 10 championship in a row.

This weekend, the Massachusetts baseball team travels down to Blacksburg, VA. to battle the Hokies (12–12) in a three game series. The first two games will be played tomorrow in a double–header. The all–time record between these two schools is 2–2.

Baseball vs. VIRGINIA TECH

Although UMass posts an impressive early season 7–3 record, winning six out of its last seven, the win against Holy Cross on Wednesday was far from pretty.

"It was not a good game. We played, we won, that's about the only positives I can give," head coach Mike Stone said. "We've got our work cut out for us this weekend. Virginia Tech's going to be our best opponent so far."

So far, UMass has shown considerable progress during the first quarter of its season. During its stint in Florida over spring break, the pitching was starting to come around and the lineup was showing signs of solidarity. In regards to Wednesday's game, it was cold, too cold for baseball, and while the day grew old, the weather became even more chilling. The nippy weather took its toll, and the Minutemen recorded six errors on the day.

"It was not the kind of game you want going into the weekend," Stone said.

The state of Virginia should be clear of sub 30 temperatures, which would make the game much more bearable to play in. The Hokies are on an eight game winning streak (not including yesterday's game) after dropping 12 of the teams first 16 games.

"Virginia Tech.'s a good ballclub. They're at the top of the league," Stone said. "We've got our hands full. We're capable of beating them, but this will be the best game of the year."

Virginia Tech has played some of its tougher opponents as of late, and have performed to the task, sweeping George Washington in a three game series. Before the teams current winning streak, the Hokies lost three to Georgia Tech.

Playing like they can would be impressive, and with one more win Jason Bennet can join a great group of pitchers — "The Twenty Win Club," which features former great Jeff Toothaker, Doug Welenc, Carl Boteze and Phil Tarpey. This year, Bennet is a perfect 3–0, with an ERA of. His overall record for the past four years stands at 19–3.

Rookie pitcher Travis Veracka has shown great potential thus far in the season. He picked up his first collegiate win versus Holy Cross on Wednesday allowing only one run in two innings.

"Everybody's looking good," Stone said. "Defense has looked fairly good. Pitching is going well. I'll be starting Jason Bennet and Bill Cook on Saturday and Scott Barnsby will pitch on Sunday."

The real season has begun, as the Atlantic 10 conference games start for the Minutemen this weekend. The Hokies are the teams toughest opponent so far, and the outcome could set the tone for the rest of the season. It may be too early to speculate, but if UMass wins this weekends series, a fourth A–10 victory will not be too far out of reach.

"If we play like we know we can, then our chances are good," Stone said.

EMILY BERLIN \ COLLEGIAN

Doug Clark and the Minutemen look to spank the Hokies in the A–10 season opener

Women's polo goes 6–3

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's water polo just returned from one of their most successful road trips. The No. 9 Minutewomen went 6–3 on their west coast trip, bringing their overall record to 13–3.

The Minutewomen began with a 14–1 win against Indiana and an 11–4 win against Redlands. They followed with a 5– 11 loss against USC and a 6–16 loss against No. 1 UCLA, but quickly came back winning 9–5 over Claremont, 22–5 over Whittier, 14–4 over Washington and 6–5 (2OT) in their second match against USC. They finished with a 3–6 loss to No. 6 UC Davis.

A definite highlight of the trip was the 6–5 double overtime win over No. 8 USC, marking the first time UMass has beat a top 10 team.

"Beating USC was the best feeling. Everyone on the team was trying not to cry because we didn't want the other team to think it was a big deal for us, but at the same time we were so emotional," senior Vicky Bamond said.

A relatively new program, only in its third year, the win against USC, and their overall record so far, is just a glimpse of what to expect from this promising team.

"We can play with anybody," said UMass head coach Bob Newcomb.

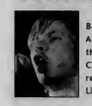
"This road trip was probably the biggest indicator of how far we have come in past years," Bamond said. "Beating USC was probably the biggest marker of how far we've come. It was exciting at one point, to be able to prove what our team can really do, and on the other hand it was nervous thinking well, if we don't, they're still going to think we're just UMass. We really made them work to best us."

A very important game for the Minutewomen was against the defending national champions UCLA. Though they lost the match, Newcomb said he felt that it was important in terms of realizing that UMass is just as good as any one of the California teams.

"By the end of the UCLA game, I think they felt like UCLA was not that big team you put on a pedestal anymore," Newcomb said. "UCLA is the team that's not any stronger than us — they may be a little faster than us, they're just a little more talented, they have a ton more scholarship money, and they have the reputation.

"Plus, they're out in California where all the best players are, but they are not superhuman people who can do all these amazing things, and we can," Newcomb said.

Turn to WATER POLO, page 7



COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Ken Sussi and the men's lacrosse team face the Cadets of Army this weekend.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 108 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Monday, March 31, 1997

The new pollution rolls into the Valley

Grammy winner Beck shook Amherst College this weekend. Check out our review (Arts & Living, page 6).

Men's lax takes soul to the hole

With a new team motto in place, P.G. Massey and the Minutemen routed Army 12–10 Saturday. See Sports Weekend (page 10).

WORLD

Japan bids farewell to storied coal mine

TOKYO — Japan's largest coal mine closed yesterday with a ceremony of thanks for past efforts and prayers for its dead miners, including 458 who died in a 1963 explosion in Japan's worst mining accident.

Unable to compete with cheaper imported coal, the Mike Mine stopped operations after 124 years, throwing 1,207 workers out of work, said Koshi Uehara, a Mitsui Coal Mining Co. official. The closing ceremony was held after the last 160 miners came out of the mine at Omuta on the southern main island of Kyushu, 560 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Workers and officials, including mine head Shintaro Itoda prayed silently for 30 seconds for victims of mine accidents and expressed thanks for all the workers who kept the mine going for more than a century.

Aside from the 1963 explosion, major accidents also included a mine shaft blast that killed 62 miners in 1985.

NATION

Tenn. looks to gov't in wake of tornadoes

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee's governor sought federal disaster relief yesterday for victims of a round of tornadoes that caused an estimated $45 million in damage in one county alone. Robert Achata's apartment is still standing, but many of his neighbors weren't as lucky.

"Total... mass destruction," Achata said.

The Hickory Villa Apartments, where he lived, were among the hardest hit by tornadoes late Friday and early Saturday.

Gov. Don Sundquist requested federal disaster relief after seeing the destruction. Such assistance would allow victims to apply for temporary housing, grants and low–interest loans from the Small Business Administration.

Officials have also requested assistance to help local governments pay for the cleanup.

Preliminary property damage estimates are in the $45 million range in Hamilton County, where Chattanooga is located. Eighteen condominiums and 50 houses were destroyed. Three apartment complexes, 600 homes and one business were damaged.

Bradley, Overton, Polk and Smith counties also sustained damage as 13 tornadoes touched down.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tue	Wed
HIGH: 40 LOW: 35	HIGH: 30 LOW: 20	HIGH: 50 LOW: 30

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 8
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Tirrell, Wong win by generous margin

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

After various election problems ranging from rescheduling election dates to ballot theft, the winning candidates for the Student Government Association (SGA) election for the academic year 1997–1998 were announced early Friday morning.

Lia Wong defeated Brian McManus for the office of SGA President, and her term will begin when she is sworn in at this Wednesday's Senate meeting.

Wong said that her primary concern is to deliver on all of the statements that she made during her campaign.

"I will do my utmost to fulfill what I promised. I want to keep the administration in check and make them live up to their words," Wong said.

Wong has 30 days to choose her executive cabinet and said she is looking for individuals who have knowledge of the issues, but are also dedicated to changing the University of Massachusetts for the better.

"I'm looking for individuals with dedication and commitment," Wong said. "In terms of representing the student body, I'm definitely looking for those students who know the issues.

"I prefer someone who knows the issues so they can get things done immediately, but if they don't, and they show dedication to making change and improving the University for the student body, that's just as important."

Brian McManus, who lost to Wong, said that he is proud of the campaign that he and former Trustee candidate R.J. Lemar ran.

"I think we put up a very hard fight and we ran a clean campaign," McManus said. "I won Southwest [Residential Area] by a two–to–one margin and I'm very grateful to everyone who took the time to help me organize this campaign. I'm going to continue in the Senate and push forth my platform and agenda."

In the Student Trustee race, Brian Tirrell was triumphant over Rob McDonald and R.J. Lemar. Tirrell will not assume the position until current Trustee Sean Carter steps down in July.

Tirrell commended the other candidates on keeping their campaigns focused on the issues.

"I think as the candidates go, every candidate did a very good job in keeping the issues out there and respecting the other candidates and providing for a discussion about issues like privatization and the quality of food services," Tirrell said.

Tirrell said the issues he will tackle first as Trustee concern Administrative Redesign (ARD).

"The first issue I'm going to attack is Administrative Redesign. That has to do with getting Whitmore to be more open to students," Tirrell said.

Elections Commissioner Jodi Bailey said that overall she was happy with the way the candidates ran their campaigns, and is pleased with the voter turnout.

"I think that all of the candidates did a really good job. They [the campaigns] were pretty clean for the most part, and over 2,000 voters came out, which is good," Bailey said.

The two referendum questions on the ballot concerned privatization and the UMass chapter of the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group [MassPIRG].

Seventy–seven percent of voters elected to support the $5 waivable fee for MassPIRG.

Chapter Chair Stacey Shackford said that MassPIRG is very pleased at how close they came to reaching their goal of 80 percent.

"We were very happy. We came pretty close. We usually get 60 percent of the people to pay the $5 waivable fee," Shackford said.

When asked what MassPIRG intends to do on campus in the near future, Shackford said that they will continue their Hunger and Homelessness campaign, and at least one environmental project. This week, MassPIRG is planning to clean up their election fliers.

"We're going to be organizing a post–election day clean–up to get rid of all campaign posters. Since we contributed in some way to this, we're going to try to get the candidates to come with us and clean up the campus," Shackford said.

Question One, the privatization question, may be thrown out due to voter confusion, according to Bailey.

"There have been some questions about the privatization question. People marked off both parts of the question," Bailey said.

LAUREN ROSKY \ COLLEGIAN

Brian Tirrell

LAUREN ROSKY \ COLLEGIAN

Lia Wong

ELECTION TOTALS
Trustee: Tirrell 924 McDonald 516 Lemar 478
President: Wong 1148 McManus 839
MassPIRG: yes 1092 no 292
Privatization: to be announced

Search for new provost begins

Group of candidates to face committee, public interviews

By Tomar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Daniel Fogel, a candidate for the provost position, which many consider to be the second most important administrative role on campus, will speak with students at 6 p.m. tonight in Memorial Hall.

Fogel is one of three candidates for the post that will be brought to the University of Massachusetts campus in the next two weeks for interviews with administration, faculty, staff and students.

Katherine Fite, a professor in the psychology department and a co–chair of the search committee to find a new provost, commented on the significance of the decision.

"It's probably the most important appointment that will be made at this institution in the near future," Fite said.

The provost is the vice chancellor for academic affairs, controlling the budgets for all of the academic departments and programs on campus — a total of two–thirds of the entire University budget. As chief academic officer, 11 deans report to the provost, in addition to the directors of the libraries and Fine Arts Center.

"It is really the academic core of the University," Fite said of the provost position. "It is what the University is all about."

Robert Hallock, a professor in the physics department and Fite's co–chair on the search committee, also emphasized the importance of the appointment of a new provost to the campus.

"I think that any high–level position that is filled is significant because they have an opportunity to fundamentally effect the course of the University," Hallock said. "Any time that a high level position is open, it is a chance for the University to acquire stable leadership."

The history of the search

The committee is currently nearing the completion of its nationwide search for a new provost, which began in October, 1996. The 18–person committee is comprised of administration, faculty and staff, as well as two undergraduate students and one graduate student. Approximately half of the committee was appointed by the Faculty Senate, and the other half by Chancellor David K. Scott and his administration.

"There is a good mix of staff, faculty and students, essentially," Fite said.

Hallock stressed that the students on the committee had an equal vote.

"On the committee, the students are equal members," Hallock said. "There is good student representation."

The committee began its search by placing an advertisement in The Chronicle of Higher Education, requesting submissions of resumes and references from interested candidates. The advertisement said that prospective candidates should demonstrate prior experience in academic administration; the ability to work well with faculty, students, staff and administration; and a strong commitment to Scott's Strategic Action Plan.

At this point in time, the committee has received 85 to 90 applications for the position. Although it is an open search process, which means that applications will be accepted until the new provost is named, the committee does not expect to receive a significant number of new applications.

"We do not expect we will get very more," Fite said. "We probably have all of the people in the applicant pool that are going to be considered."

The committee sat down as a group and examined each application in a screening process. They selected a group of 12 candidates for off–site interviews and from that group, a smaller group for on–site interviews.

"We decided that these would be the ones that the whole campus should see," Fite said.

The candidates will be on campus for two days, during which time they will meet with administration, faculty, staff and student leaders, and attend an open forum for all UMass students. The candidates will then travel to Boston for a half–day visit with the President's Office.

"These two–day on–campus interviews will be very intensive," Fite said. "There will plenty of chance for interaction with the students."

During all of the interview sessions, evaluation forms will be available. Fite said that her committee would take the forms into consideration when they make their final recommendations to the chancellor.

"That [evaluation forms] will be very important to us as the feedback from the campus. It will be a very important factor in the final selection," Fite said.

Hallock said that it was very important for students to come to the forums.

"We care about their opinions and we want them to participate in the open forum," Hallock said. "The more views we receive, the stronger we will feel that we have an accurate idea of student views on campus."

Cindy Gargano, a student member of the search committee, agreed with Hallock.

"It is extremely important that students come to these forums," Gargano said. "If we do want a student that responds to students' needs, we need to show that to the candidates. We can not do that with a small group of students."

Student Trustee Sean Carter feels that including two students on the search committee and having meetings in

Turn to PROVOST, page 1

Saudis ask for custody of suspect in bombing

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The Saudi suspect held in Canada for last June's bombing that killed 19 American servicemen should be extradited to Saudi Arabia, not to the United States, an Interior Ministry official said yesterday.

Hani al-Sayegh was arrested in Ottawa on March 18 for possible involvement in the deadly truck bombing at Dhahran in eastern Saudi Arabia.

Canadian officials claim al-Sayegh is a threat to Canadian security and want to deport him. U.S. officials have said that since he entered Canada from the United States, al-Sayegh could be deported to U.S. territory rather than Saudi Arabia.

But the Interior Ministry official, speaking on customary condition of anonymity, said al-Sayegh should be sent to Saudi Arabia since he is a Saudi and the bombing happened on Saudi territory.

The official told The Associated Press that Saudi Arabia had made a lot of progress in the investigation into the blast and needed to interrogate al-Sayegh to fit the pieces together. He also said the United States was not the right place to try anyone implicated in the Dhahran blast. The official said Canada has expressed understanding for Saudi Arabia's request.

Al-Sayegh is to appear at an April 28 court hearing to determine whether he will be deported. He has requested refugee status in Canada, claiming he was persecuted in his homeland for religious reasons. He is a Shiite Muslim, while the majority of Saudis are from the mainstream Sunni sect of Islam.

Canadian officials said Thursday they believe al-Sayegh, 28, conducted surveillance at the military housing complex in Dhahran and drove the car that signaled the go-ahead to the driver of a fuel truck packed with 2 1/2 tons of explosives.

Al-Sayegh denies any involvement in the bombing and says he was in Syria at the time. He says he is being targeted by the Saudi government because of his opposition to the ruling regime. A Canadian Security Intelligence Service report, parts of which were made public Thursday, said al-Sayegh is a member of Saudi Hezbollah, a militant Shiite group with alleged links to the pro-Iranian Hezbollah in Lebanon.

It also said he contacted Iranian diplomats in Ottawa and made references to the 1996 bombing in phone calls to Iran and to his wife in Saudi Arabia.

The report did not identify the sources for the allegations, but the claims are believed to have originated with Saudi and U.S. authorities.

Louganis talks about Olympic career, HIV at MHC

By Jamie Sinshaimer
Collegian Staff

Last Friday night at Mount Holyoke College, former Olympic gold medalist Greg Louganis spoke to an adoring jam–packed crowd on a stop on his nationwide book tour.

As well as being an accomplished actor, speaker and diver, Louganis has had to overcome many other obstacles in his life. In 1988, he tested positive for HIV and has since become a survivor battling the everyday battle associated with the virus. He is also the survivor of a six–year long abusive relationship as well as several other forms of homophobia endured after he came out to the Olympic committee in 1995.

Before Louganis made his entrance on stage, a short film was shown about his Olympic diving career, which helped to make him a household name around the world. As he made his entrance onto the dimly lit stage, the entire audience stood from their seats to award Louganis with a standing ovation.

Starting off his speech with a point that he mentioned for the duration of his time on stage, he stressed the fact that everyone needs to "let go of secrets," and if that is accomplished, then the "truth shall set you free" In the long run, Louganis said his struggle stemmed from his initial inability to share his sexuality and HIV status with the world.

Louganis told the crowd of the various types of homophobia that exist in the world of diving, but couldn't help mentioning that a lot of it could stem from basic "jealousy" of his diving. He was told not to speak of his homosexuality in the media, since it could hurt his career and cause people to talk.

When he tested positive for HIV in 1988 his initial reaction was "if I'm HIV positive, I'm gonna lock myself in my house and die." This was two weeks before the Seoul Olympics, the year the now infamous accident in which he hit his head on the diving board. Medicated by AZT at the time, Louganis went to the Seoul games and walked away with top honors in each event he competed in.

Feeling utterly alone when he became aware of his HIV status, Louganis decided to keep it all a secret, only sharing the information with his cousin, who was also his doctor. This caused him to become extremely isolated, he said, which was when is his ideal, "the truth shall set you free," surfaced. He finally decided to tell his diving coach his big secret — this turned out to be a successful decision and helped Louganis through this rough period in his life.

During this time, Louganis was also involved in an abusive relationship with a former lover. According to Louganis, in this relationship he was raped at knifepoint by his lover and was made to believe that he deserved it. It took him six and a half years to get himself out of the relationship, finally realizing that "nobody deserves that, not even me."

Keeping his spirits high, and sharing his wonderful sense of humor with the adoring crowd, Louganis began to speak of his father. After he and his abusive lover split up, Louganis's father was diagnosed with cancer. The diagnosis brought him and his father closer together and they became involved on what he calls a "crusade for life."

Unfortunately his father lost that crusade, but Louganis felt that the time he

Turn to LOUGANIS, page 1

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Greg Louganis

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Chris Conner
Night Editor
Laura Stock
Copy Editor
Rachelle Joseph
Photo Technician
Lorraine Urbanski
Production Supervisor
Chris Lavin
Lauren Goldfarb
Production Staff

■ louganis

continued from page 1

spent with his dying father helped to settle the year's of turmoil between them. To help cope with the emotional pain that he was suffering, he started taking morphine. It was at this point in 1993 that he started getting sick and he felt that "this was the end."

Later that year, he started suffering from fevers and went to Florida to die, still hiding his HIV status from the public. After recovering, he flew to New York and saw the play Jeffrey, a story about gay dating in the '90s. Touched by the story, he contacted his manager to find out about acting in it. Eventually he got the part he desired and acted in the show for six months.

It was at this point that he decided to write his book, for which he contacted a writer named Erik Marcus, and began his book therapy. Through the book process, Louganis underwent a form of therapy in which he spoke honestly about himself and revealed that which had been bottled up for so long.

Until recently, he had kept a lot of his feelings and emotions inside, Louganis said. Through his book tour and his public speaking, he said he has helped to heal himself. As he finished up his speech he told the crowd that "life is an incredible journey, greatness is not achieved on your own, you always need a group of support and the love and trust of your friends."

RACHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN

Rocked da house...
NYC + 1, a music group from UMass, performed at the Iota Phi Theta talent show in the Campus Center Auditorium on Saturday night.

Correction

An Associated Press article printed in Friday's Collegian contained an incorrect headline, stating that U.S. troops were sent to the West Bank. It should have read that Israeli troops were sent to the West Bank. The Collegian regrets the error.

■ provost

continued from page 1

the evening around students' schedules is a positive thing; however he encourages all students to get involved in the provost interviews.

"[Students] should find out more about what the provost does, and find out what needs their particular college and department have," Carter said. "Some questions that should be asked are 'Do you support a four-course curriculum over a five-course one?' and 'What value do co-curricular experiences have in education?', for example."

Diversity a concern in provost search

The search committee will finish it work in the first two weeks of May, at which time it will recommend three to five candidate for the post to Scott. The final decision rests in his hands, and he expects to make his choice within two weeks of the committee's final recommendations.

Fite said that Interim Provost Patricia Crosson is one of the final candidates and will be scheduled for an on-campus interview in a few weeks.

"She is definitely a serious consideration," Fite said.

Both Fite and Hallock were impressed with the pool of candidates.

"I think the pool of applicants is excellent," Fite said.

"I am very optimistic. We have a very fine pool of candidates," Hallock added. "It now remains to be seen how the rest of the campus views the candidates."

Hallock said that the issues (such as diversity on campus and multiculturalism) raised by the Goodell Building takeover were important to the search committee in their selection process.

"The fundamental issues that the Goodell takeover was concerned with were issues we were concerned with from the very beginning," Hallock said. "[The candidates] have to demonstrate their concerns for these issues by the kinds of actions they have taken in the past and the actions they propose to take in the future."

Fite said the ALANA (Asian, Latin American, African, Native American) background of the candidates was an important consideration of the committee, but there were very few applicants of color.

"It has been a very important consideration. We have not yet finished our process," Fite said. "There is one ALANA candidate that we are scheduling in this group of six, and there are four males and two females so far. There is certainly the possibility of more ALANA and female candidates.

"The really hard part of all this that at this academic level, there are not that many people of color in the applicant pool."

The other candidates scheduled at this time are Robert Smith, April 4 at 6 p.m. in Memorial Hall and Kenneth Smith, April 11 at 6 p.m. in Memorial Hall. More candidate interviews will be announced shortly.

Get Online With The Collegian!
Check out our Web Site at :
http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Give Us Some Face!

Between March 24 and April 4, come to the Campus Center Concourse and have your picture taken for the new UMass I.D. Card; Monday-Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The photo is FREE, takes about 2 minutes, and you'll AVOID SOME BIG LINES IN THE FALL. The new card will be issued then, and it's going to make your life a lot easier! THE ALL-CAMPUS CARD can be used as your library card, Meal Plan ticket, residence hall key, and as a cash card for on-campus purchases.

I.D. Card photos are also taken in the I.D. Office, Franklin Dining Hall anytime during regular business hours.

Don't miss this photo opportunity!

This Week in the Campus Center
INFORMATION, NEW PRODUCTS & SERVICES, AND SPECIALS FROM THE CAMPUS CENTER/STUDENT UNION COMPLEX

Think Spring
Come see the new spring styles in the
University Store

Save 80% All Pictorial Calendars
Save 20%
Stop by for weekly specials
Women's Studies Book Gardening & Nature Books
All New York Times Best Sellers all the time
Poetry Books in Honor of April Poetry Month

BLUEWALL CAFETERIA PASTA BAR
3 PASTAS
MARINARA SAUCE
MEAT SAUCE
PESTO SAUCE
SALAD
GARLIC BREAD
16 OZ. SODA
$4.95
MONDAY-THURSDAY: 5:30-8:00 pm

Customized Graduation Announcements are now available at the Campus Center Print Shop. Call 545-0371 for more information.

Campus Center Student Union
WEEKLY SPECIALS
For Week of March 31

~ NATIONAL/INTERNATIONAL ~

Sea tragedy blamed on Italy

Albanian authorities call for int'l inquiry of crash

By Merita Dhimgjoka
Associated Press

TIRANA, Albania — Survivors from a capsized Albanian refugee boat say an Italian warship purposely rammed their craft, killing at least four people, Albania's ambassador to Italy said yesterday.

Albania's foreign minister called for an international inquiry into Friday's collision.

"The Italian forces have acted arbitrarily, when they could have used many other methods to stop the boat," Foreign Minister Arjan Starova said. He wrote his Italian counterpart, Lamberto Dini, to request the investigation, state radio reported.

Four bodies were recovered from the Adriatic Sea and 34 Albanians were rescued after the boats collided. There were fears that many more people may have drowned. Estimates of the number of passengers range from 45 to 150.

Italy has rejected allegations it was at fault, saying Saturday that the Albanian vessel steered into its path, causing the collision. However, the Italian ship's commander has been placed under investigation, the Milan newspaper Corriere della Sera reported yesterday.

Albania's ambassador to Italy, Pandeli Pasko, interviewed the 34 survivors Saturday night. Based on those interviews, he provided police with a list of 79 more people who were believed on the boat, which was carrying refugees attempting to flee the chaos in Albania, Italy's ANSA news agency said.

"The (Italian) frigate hit the boat two times, first in the back and then on the side, after which the boat capsized... and according to the Albanians this was done on purpose," the ambassador said in a statement.

But Piero Fassino, Italy's undersecretary for foreign affairs, told RAI state radio that the Italian navy "had no intention of ramming" other ships.

"The truth is that the opposite happens. Some of these ships, and their captains, when they find themselves facing our ships, ram them so our ships have to save them," he said.

Nearly 200 people have died in Albania and hundreds have been injured since the violence began in January, sparked by the collapse of investment schemes in which nearly every family had invested. Thousands of Albanians have fled, crossing to Italy on rickety boats.

Italian warships have been patrolling Albanian waters recently, seeking to discourage the exodus by turning back boats.

Ehrman Rapushi, 19, who lost his mother in the collision, said about 120 to 130 people were aboard, including 30 children. "We put the women and little ones under cover to protect them from the cold. Instead it was all useless. That Italian ship came on top of us voluntarily," he said, ANSA reported.

President Sali Berisha declared today a day of mourning for the victims.

The allegations were sure to worsen relations with Italy, with which Albania has traditionally had close ties. It also could cause ill feelings against Italian troops heading an international force due to arrive within two weeks to help calm the situation. As expected, Parliament yesterday approved the deployment of the force. Starova, the foreign minister, told parliament that about 200 foreign military experts were also expected to help reorganize Albania's police forces.

Parliament's resolution said the international force should work only with national and local government officials, not rebels. The Democratic Party threatened on Saturday to pull its ministers from the government after the Socialists signed a rebel declaration on Friday asking for Berisha's resignation.

Grenade blast kills 11 in Cambodia

By Som Sattana
Associated Press

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — A grenade attack apparently targeting an opposition leader killed 11 people and wounded more than 100 others yesterday, threatening the future of Cambodia's fragile democracy.

Opposition leader Sam Rainsy escaped with only a shrapnel wound in the leg. A bodyguard who shielded him was killed.

The attack came as Rainsy was leading some 200 supporters of his Khmer Nation Party in a demonstration against the governing Cambodian People's Party outside the National Assembly.

It followed predictions of worsening political violence as parties maneuver before legislative elections scheduled for November 1998.

Rainsy appeared at a news conference shortly after the attack, his clothes soaked in blood and the left lens of his glasses cracked. He blamed police and army "terrorists" taking orders from the formerly communist CPP, led by his rival Second Premier Hun Sen.

"Hun Sen... should be sentenced and arrested," Rainsy said. "This is a terrible setback for the democratic process in Cambodia. It bodes ill for the national elections."

Khieu Kanharith, secretary of state for information and a member of the CPP, denied the allegation. "The CPP has long experience with politics and does not commit acts of violence against innocent people," he said.

At least 11 people were killed and 112 wounded, Kanharith said. The injured included a U.S. citizen, Ron Abney, 55, of the International Republican Institute, a democracy advisory group. Abney, of Cochran, Ga., was wounded in the groin.

Initial accounts said three grenades were thrown from a white car that drove past the crowd, but Rainsy said grenades came from several directions.

The first was thrown by a member of the crowd near him, he said. A second grenade was tossed from behind a wall and two others came from the car.

Two reporters from local newspapers were reported killed. A correspondent for China's Xinhua News Agency and four Cambodian journalists were injured.

Clinton plan to burn forests debated

By Scott Sonner
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Smokey Bear made a career of stomping out fires, so it might seem odd to think of the Forest Service setting trees ablaze.

"When I grew up, fire was always the enemy of the forest. Now it's a friend?" Rep. Dale Kildee, D-Mich. asked at a recent hearing.

Not everybody's happy with Clinton administration plans to increase so-called prescribed burning from 750,000 acres in 1997 to 1.3 million acres next year to clear overstocked national forests of dead and dying timber.

Rep. Bob Smith, R-Ore., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, sees "a lot of hidden problems in prescribed burning" and prefers salvage logging to clear forest floors of tinder instead.

"People will always make misjudgments. Nobody can predict the weather," said Smith, worried about blazes getting out of hand. Forest Service Chief Mike Dombeck agreed, telling lawmakers fire must be treated with respect. "There isn't a burn that's not dangerous."

But he added that more controlled blazes are needed to reduce unprecedented fuel loads that threaten catastrophic blazes at one-fifth of the 191 million acres of U.S. national forests — the result of decades of "extensive, overzealous if you will, fire suppression."

That's right. The Forest Service has done too good a job of fighting fires, even as the government set an average of 300,000 acres burning to get rid of dead and dying trees every year for the past decade.

Until recently, federal firefighters who saw 6 million acres burn naturally last year tried to douse every blaze. As a result, they upset the natural cycle of fire that for 10,000 years made way for more mature trees.

"The price that we have paid for 60, 80 or 100 years of very effective fire suppression is that we have changed the succession of ecosystems," said Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt.

The problem has been compounded by clearcut logging that stripped forests of native tree species, Babbitt said. Many were replaced by less fire-resistant trees that are more susceptible to insects and disease.

In arguing for prescriptive burns, Babbitt used the analogy of a person with "a long history of poor eating habits and indigestion. ...We need to burn off the unhealthy fat, not practice forest liposuction."

The Forest Service wants $30 million to $50 million for the burning program for fiscal 1998 to set 850,000-to-1.3 million acres on fire.

Dombeck said that with a planned burn, the Forest Service can pick favorable conditions, temperatures, humidity, wind direction and speed.

"If there's a disaster, Mother Nature takes its own course. There's no ability to control the situation," Dombeck said. Environmentalists prefer prescribed burning as a more natural alternative to removal of dead and dying timber. The charred, decaying wood left by fires helps nurture the soil and provides habitat for wildlife.

"We don't buy the argument that you have to get in there and harvest timber in order to make the woods safe from fire," said Greg Aplet, a forest ecologist for The Wilderness Society in Denver. A clear cut doesn't leave "the biological legacy of a natural fire," he said.

Rep. Smith, however, believes there's too much dead wood in the forests now to rely on prescribed fires.

"When you get the kind of fuel loading we have now, you can't fight fires. You just get out of the way," he said.

Applewhite son issues statement

By Amanda Covarrubias
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Private guards keep watch at a hilltop mansion. A son apologizes for a father he barely knew. Friends and relatives of cult members who killed themselves seem resigned to their loss.

"I am deeply hurt by the knowledge that people have now lost their lives in connection with my father," Mark Applewhite said in a statement Saturday. "My sympathy and prayers go out to all those who are suffering the loss of loved ones."

Applewhite, 40, is the son of Marshall Herff Applewhite, the Heaven's Gate cult leader who committed suicide Wednesday with 38 followers in a swank mansion in Rancho Santa Fe.

"We're of mixed emotions," said Applewhite, who described himself as a born-again Christian "with the real ticket to heaven."

"My father is dead — that's painful. It's sort of like we've been through a grieving process and now we're seeking closure," he said.

Applewhite hadn't seen his father since he was 5, when his parents got divorced. It had been years, too, for the loved ones of many of his father's followers.

Investigator Bob Engel, who has been notifying families of the deaths, said most relatives were subdued.

"They seemed resigned to it," Engel said. "These families realize these people took their own lives of their own choosing." Autopsies continued Saturday, with bodies stored in a refrigerated truck outside the coroner's office. Most families sent funeral homes to collect bodies rather than make the trip themselves.

"We got towels, we're crying so much," said Eartha Hill of Cincinnati, whose daughter-in-law, Yvonne McCurdy-Hill, was among the dead at the nine-room estate rented by the Heaven's Gate cult. Twenty-one autopsies were finished and pathologists planned to work through the weekend to finish the rest.

The family of cult member Erika Ernst went to the coroner's office in two campers. They refused to speak with reporters and were the only relatives to personally claim a body.

Another family, two women and a man, visited late in the afternoon and left without speaking to reporters.

The dead were found in their beds with purple shrouds over their faces. They left behind videotapes and Web pages explaining their philosophy and reasons for suicide — to rendezvous with a spaceship trailing the Hale-Bopp comet.

Sam Kouchesfahani, who owns the mansion, stopped by the front gate, fuming over the trouble his tenants had caused him. He angrily waved off a reporter but was overheard telling neighbor Bill Strong that he never knew so many people were living in the house.

"I turned the TV on, and they say I'm a tax evader and I get connected to these people. My kids are devastated," Kouchesfahani said.

Strong said the cult members had promised Kouchesfahani there would be seven people, at the most, living at the house.

Kouchesfahani hired a private security team to guard the property. As evening approached and a gentle golden light settled over the hill, gawkers milled in small groups. Betsy Lewis and Chrissy Hill, both 20, from Simi Valley, were amazed at the cult's spaceship beliefs.

"They really thought they were going. They were just sure of it. They were whacked, " Ms. Lewis said.

Meanwhile, the University of St. Thomas in Houston, where Applewhite taught music from 1966 to 1970, denied reports that he was fired for having an affair with a male student.

"He had tremendous musical talents and was well-received by the faculty and students," university president Joseph McFadden said in a statement.

Frances Riddle Redman, a friend of Applewhite's mother, remembered him as "a sweet little thing" who had to deal with a domineering father, Presbyterian Pastor Marshall H. Applewhite Sr. "He was terribly authoritative. He always had the answer in two seconds to everybody's problem," Mrs. Redman said.

Of the boy who would become a cult leader, she said: "I worried a lot about that child."

Great Weekend Escapes for as low as $109 from MasterCard and United Airlines!

Take Off For The Weekend With United Airlines
And Return The Following Monday Or Tuesday
To Get Substantial Savings When
You Use Your MasterCard® Card.

Weekender Zone Fare Certificate

Promo Code: AV0027
Ticket Designator: AV0027
Travel Complete: June 6, 1997

Use Your MasterCard® Card For Great Savings On United Airlines.
To make reservations, call United at 1 800 241-6522 or your travel professional.
Please reference Weekender Zone Fare Certificate AV0027

Roundtrip Rates

Within Zone A or B	$129 roundtrip
Between Zone A & Zone B	$189 roundtrip
Between Zone A & Zone C	$269 roundtrip
Between Zone B & Zone C	$189 roundtrip
Within Zone C	$109 roundtrip

Not valid for travel to/from IL/CO/AK/HI

Agency Ticketing Instructions: See $*PMA/AV0027 for detailed information
1. Treat as Type A Discount Certificate
-Use Fare Basis Code: VE14NSTU
VE14NSTD (zones A-C)
-Use Ticket Designator: AV0027
-Endorsement Box: VALID UA ONLY/Non-Ref/No Itin Changes
2. Refer to ARC Industry Agents' Handbook, section 6.0 for details.
3. Failure to comply with promotion guidelines could result in debit memo.
UAL ATC/CTO Ticketing Instructions: See $*PMQ/AV0027

To enjoy these low Weekender Zone Fares - plus earn Mileage Plus® credit on your trip: Just call your travel professional or United to reserve your flight and redeem your certificate. To receive the lowest fare, use your MasterCard® card to purchase an E-Ticket+ between Feb 1, 1997 and May 15, 1997 for travel between Feb 15, 1997 and June 6, 1997. Outbound travel must be on flights departing on Saturday. Return travel must be on flights returning the Monday following departure (A exception for travel between zones A-C. Return travel may also be on the Tuesday following departure).

Zone Definitions:
Zone A - AL, AR, CT, DC, DE, FL, GA, IA, IN, KY, LA, MA, MD, ME, MI, MN, MO, MS, NC, NH, NJ, NY, OH, PA, RI, SC, TN, VA, VT, WI, WV
Zone B - ID, KS, MT, ND, NE, NM, OK, SD, TX, UT, WY
Zone C - AZ, CA, NV, OR, WA
Not valid for travel to/from IL/CO/AK/HI

TERMS AND CONDITIONS:
Promo Code: AV0027
Valid Carrier: United Airlines/Shuttle by United/United Express.
Valid Routing: Round-trip travel must begin and end in the 48 contiguous United States (IL/CO/AK/HI excluded). All travel must be via the routes of UA in which UA publishes Economy Class fares. One-way travel/stopovers/circle trip/open segments/add-ons/standby are not permitted. Open jaw permitted (IL and CO excluded as origin/destination however connections through CHICAGO are permitted.)

Valid Ticket Dates: Feb 1 through May 15 1997
Valid Travel Dates: Feb 15 through Jun 6 1997. All travel must be completed by Jun 6, 1997.
Blackout Dates: 1997: Mar 22 - 29, Apr 5-12. Outbound travel must be on flights departing on Saturday with return travel on flights the Monday following departure, or the Tuesday following departure if the passenger is traveling between zones A-C.
Class of Service: V class. (Seats are capacity controlled and must be available in the required booking inventory at the time reservations are confirmed.
Advance Purchase: Within 24 hrs of making reservations, at least 14 days prior to departure.
Min/Max Stay: Saturday night stay minimum. RETURN TRAVEL MUST BE THE IMMEDIATE MONDAY FOLLOWING DEPARTURE, AN EXCEPTION FOR TRAVEL BETWEEN ZONES A-C. RETURN CAN ALSO BE THE IMMEDIATE TUESDAY FOLLOWING DEPARTURE.
Mileage Plus Accrual: Discounted travel is eligible for Mileage Plus credit
Ticketing: E-Ticketing only (electronic ticketing service)
Taxes/Service Charges: All fees, taxes and surcharges including Passenger Facility Charges (up to $12) are the responsibility of the passenger and must be paid at time of ticketing.
Cert Restrictions: Certificate is required for discount and must be presented at time of ticketing. Accept original certificate only. Non-transferable, non-combinable with other air travel certificates or discount fare offers (Mileage Plus awards/SavertWings awards/promotions/group/charter (charter/student/holiday packages/travel industry discounts/ military/government travel).

MasterCard
UNITED AIRLINES
©1997 MasterCard International Incorporated

8 016 5003000045 7

RACHELLE JOSEPH / COLLEGIAN

Nature Boy!
Cambridge native Viriato Amado climbs a tree to get a different perspective yesterday afternoon near Amherst Center.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W. P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Presto Distribution Manager
Fesaal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majercwski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independents from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Why we shouldn't balance the budget?

Seema Gangatirkar

A couple weeks ago, the Balanced Budget Amendment failed to pass by one vote.

Under the Balanced Budget Amendment, the federal government would be required not to spend more than it takes in tax revenues. Currently, many state governments operate under such a fiscal policy because they are required to by their states' constitution.

However, the current debate is centered around whether or not it is a fiscally viable option for the federal government to pursue.

In conservative economic theory, a balanced budget sounds like a good idea. According to the theory, balancing the budget would get rid of the deficit, thus leading to more savings, which would stimulate greater investment and consumer spending. In turn, investment would spur more growth in the United States' economy.

However, most economists oppose a Balanced Budget Amendment for several reasons. University of Massachusetts Economics Professor Stephen Resnick calls balancing the budget similar to "running a race with [the] feet tied."

In times of a strong economy, a balanced budget would not hurt. But when the economy slips into a recession, a strict rule requiring a balanced budget would make it nearly impossible to revive the economy.

Currently when a recession occurs, taxes automatically fall while government expenditures rise. This automatic response to the recession stabilizes the economy, but increases the deficit.

Under a Balanced Budget Amendment, the government would be required to equal its expenditures to its tax revenues. In the case of a recession, the government would be forced to either raise taxes or reduce expenditures.

According to Resnick, the government will do everything to avoid raising taxes. The alternative to raising taxes would be reducing expenditures. Cutting expenditures would involve reducing the amount of money to fix or create roads or spending on education, welfare and other public expenditures.

Reducing spending on expenditures decreases a society's productivity. Spending on roads or education enhances society's capacity to produce, thus increasing investment, which in turns promotes growth.

Balancing the budget would reduce the deficit, which is a major concern of many Americans. In times of high spending — like war — or a recession, the deficit can be used to stabilize tax rates by maintaining high rates one year and low rates another year.

Major arguments against a budget deficit include lower national savings, lower investment and a trade deficit — in the short run. In the long run, a deficit may lead to a smaller steady-state capital stock and a larger foreign debt. In addition, opponents point out that running a deficit will affect generations to come. As Herbert Hoover remarked, "Blessed are the young, for they shall inherit the national debt."

Within the context of the argument against the Balanced Budget Amendment, economists argue that running a deficit can shift the tax burden from the current generation to the later generations. The money can be made up later by levying taxes on later generations.

And while being in debt sounds horrible, the United States ranks nowhere near the top of in-debt countries, when debt is taken as a percentage of the GDP. Belgium takes the top prize at a 136 percent, while the United States is lower on the list of 19 countries at 64 percent.

Probably the best example of using a deficit to bring the economy out of a recession grew out of President Reagan's fiscal policy. Going against the conservative viewpoint that promoted the idea of balancing the budget, Reagan chose instead to increase military expenditures and lower taxes. In the process, he not only ran up an enormous deficit, but also promoted major expansion.

If there had been a Balanced Budget Amendment at the time, Reagan would have been unable to use a deficit to bring the country out of the recession.

Balancing the budget, in some aspects, has its strong points, but constraining the budget to equalize its tax revenues to its expenditures in the long run will hurt the economy.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

PG–rated capitalism

Last semester, my friend Matt got a copy of NWA's Straight Outta Compton as a gift. He loved the album and had lost his old copy, so he was looking forward to listening to it again. He was pretty surprised when he noticed that the words to the songs were significantly different — every trace of filthy language was AWOL, and all uses of the word "nigger" (which is in the band's name) had been replaced with less controversial words. What he listened to was a kinder, friendlier NWA, an NWA that any mom could love. No child's mind would be filled with words deemed obscene by "community standards" when they listened to this eviscerated album.

It turns out the CD came from Media Play. The packaging of the CD gave no sign of the gutted language it contained, so how was one to know? Needless to say, the CD got returned.

Media Play isn't alone in this type of censorship. It's actually a pretty common practice with huge chains, going back at least as far as the decision by the nationwide 7–11 convenience store chain to stop selling Playboy, Penthouse and Playgirl some years ago. Walmart, whose dodgy pricing practices have driven hundreds of local businesses into extinction, also refuses to stock products whose content offends some conservative moralities.

"Our freedom of speech shouldn't be governed by the whims of chief executive officers and boards of directors who are accountable only to elite investors."

Daniel Bodah

Blockbuster Video, who controls 25 percent of the video rental market, also has a censoring influence on the content of art. The controversial new movie by David Cronenberg, Crash, will lose nearly half of its length in a video edition aimed at being acceptable to the store. Blockbuster does not stock any movies with an NC–17 or higher rating.

These decisions by major economic players bring up an important point about market forces — they aren't necessarily in our interests. For instance, I worked in two small video stores in a typical small U.S. town. I know for a fact that these stores, although they were by no means specifically adult movie shops, made a great deal of their money from rentals of pornography. The demand for pornography is a pretty strong and reliable economic force. What would cause a corporation to neglect that demand?

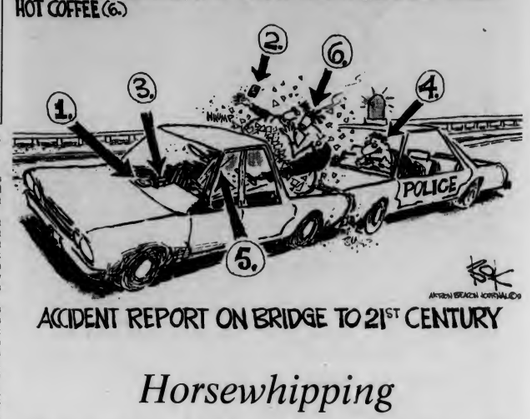
What is really disturbing me, though, is the possibilities for oppression present in our nation's increasing moves toward privatization. Our leaders are trying to get private companies into everything. Clinton came into office with big talk about public health care, but now pushes the glories of private health care providers. Even our prisons are becoming privatized, with companies given the opportunity to try to fill their private coffers by exploiting prisoners of the state — and many of these prisons are private facilities holding criminals under contract with the state.

As the government gives more and more of its roles over to private companies, what happens to our rights? Private companies have no motivation to protect or defend the freedoms that are ours simply because we are human. In fact, they make it clear that whenever possible they will take as much advantage of the people as they can. There have been numerous complaints about poor prisoner care in private prisons, numerous examples of employee exploitation and union–busting by corporations in all sectors of the economy.

The New World Order we are heading toward is not based on any dream except that of ripping off others in order to become the wealthiest mothers on the planet. Part of this Order is the bankrupting of the government (brought about by the Reagan/Bush regime) and the selling off of it to remains to private corporations.

We can't expect that these corporations will suddenly break with all traditions and decide that yes, in fact, it is important to respect the dignity and rights of all people, that our freedom of speech shouldn't be governed by the whims of chief executive officers and boards of directors who are accountable only to elite investors. What we can expect is more and more of the sorts of censorship that Media Play, Walmart and Blockbuster practice.

Welcome to the kinder, gentler world of the future. Please be sure to use appropriate language as you enjoy the rewards of citizenship in the country that has mastered the art of screwing others. With so much money to spend, who has time for freedom?



Daniel Bodah is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury Flashbacks BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Horsewhipping

Editor's Note: On May 8, the Collegian celebrates its 30th anniversary as a daily newspaper. To commemorate this occasion, the Collegian will be publishing editorials spanning the last 30 years. Today we feature a column originally published on Sept. 25, 1969.

1967-1997
1969

In the wake of protests against the Vietnam war and the military–industrial complex have come polemics against "big government." Accordingly, the Nixon Administration has announced its desire to return government to the people and has introduced the "New Federalism."

However, the president's main course of action has been to let local areas decide issues such as school integration. This is most pleasing to the South, for the administration is thus allowing Southern whites to rule as they please in this areas. As one Southerner in the Administration has said, the government has stopped horsewhipping a section of the country. Thus, in the name of limited government, the rights of black individuals are being denied.

Certainly the federal government should be small, or limited, in its power over private persons. It should refrain from prosecuting individuals for their opinions, appearance, or personal conduct so long as no one is actually injured by these personal matters.

However, there are instances where big government is needed. As the supreme power in the United States, the federal government has responsibility to act when local governments trample or adulterate the rights of citizens. If a local government is failing in its duty to protect citizens, the federal government must step in.

The federal government has no right to stop segregationists from speaking or thinking as they wish. It does have an obligation to protect blacks from being denied full use of public schools, for public is an inclusive term. Those whites who wish to send their children to a segregated school must look outside the public school system for educational facilities.

The government must not allow de jure or de facto segregation. There are times when a section of the country, such as the south or the Massachusetts, because of its "Chastity Laws," is deserving of horsewhipping. It is the federal government, as the highest repository of the people's sovereignty, which must act. It is the agent which must be willing and able, if local governments are not, to protect the rights of the individual citizen.

The federal government must act, must be "big," in such cases, because individual rights are what America is all about.

This column originally ran as a policy editorial.

Letters to the Editor

Scientology cleared up

To the Editor:

I recently read Adam Levine's column ostensibly regarding the Church of Scientology. My first reaction was to dismiss it as a hurriedly done, poorly researched and opinionated piece by a young student writer. I eventually decided, however, that to complete the record it might be important to correct some of its misstatements and to fill in the obvious gaps.

The first problem appears in the first paragraph. Mr. Levine claims that if you evaluate any religion's foundations outside the context of religion, those foundations will show themselves to be "insanity." This is an appallingly dim view of the entire subject of religion. I wonder if he thinks that The Ten Commandments or the belief that one should live a moral and ethical life — both of which are common in one form or another to many religions — is "insane." If anything, the world suffers from too few of these kinds of ideas.

From this ominous jumping off point, the article contains at least the following deficiencies:

• Contrary to Mr. Levine's statement, the Church of Scientology has long been recognized as a bone fide, vital religion. Long before the IRS granted all Churches of Scientology and related organizations tax exempt status in 1993, court decisions, scholars of comparative religion and clergy of other faiths had recognized the Church of Scientology as a bone fide religion. In fact, the available material in support of Scientology's religious nature is so overwhelmingly voluminous, it's hard to believe someone could get it wrong.

• Mr. Levine's general statement that "religion has always been a money making industry" is decidedly anti-religious in tone. Although it is true that the Catholic Church, the Jewish faith, the Lutheran Church and others raise a great deal of money, their purposes are not to "make money." A great deal of the money raised by these churches stays in the local community to serve their congregations' and the community's needs. Likewise with Churches of Scientology — the donations it receives are used to provide better service to its membership — and to serve the communities in which the church is located. All Churches of Scientology are actively involved in their communities. This is well documented, well covered by local press and attested to by the many proclamations and awards received by Church programs every year.

• It is false that the IRS considered the Church of Scientology a business prior to 1993. For example, the Boston Church of Scientology received its tax exemption letter in the early 1970s, as did other Churches. Many parishioners have claimed Church donations on their income tax for years. However, the IRS's position prior to 1993 was confused as not all Churches were treated the same. The IRS's 1993 granting of tax exempt status to all Churches of Scientology and Church related groups clarified this confusion and afforded all Scientologists equal treatment with members of other faiths.

• Mr. Levine's comments about the founder of Scientology, L. Ron Hubbard are simply ignorant. It is well known that Mr. Hubbard was a wildly successful and influential writer prior to and after his development of Scientology and Dianetics. For example, between 1927 and 1941 he published 15 million words of fiction and was popular as a writer of mystery, western, adventure, fantasy, science fiction and even romance. He was also respected by other writers — at the age of 25 he served as the President of the New York chapter of the American Fiction Guild. He was one of the earlier writers who helped kick off the Golden Age of Science Fiction.

Although he took a break from fiction in 1950 to concentrate on his work with Dianetics and Scientology, he returned to fiction after a 30 year absence with the 1980 bestseller Battlefield Earth. This was followed up by the 10-volume magnum opus Mission Earth. In all, during the 1980s and 1990s, Mr. Hubbard had 21 consecutive international bestsellers.

No less important have been his contributions to the field of writing. For example, in 1983 he initiated the Writers of the Future Award which has become science fiction's most prestigious award for new and developing writers. Judges for the contest have included Robert Silverberg, Frank Herbert, Jerry Pournelle, Jack Williamson, Andre Norton and Anne McCaffrey. The annual contest anthology has been the most successful of its kind and the contest has helped to place more than 100 new novels on American shelves.

• Mr. Levine displays more of what seems to be anti-religious sentiment in mocking comments about what he thinks are Church beliefs and then goes on to claim that Scientology is outlawed in several European countries including even Germany. I'm not sure how or why he is making these things up, but Scientology is not outlawed in Europe. The truth is that elements of the German government have attacked Scientology (there's a unique concept — that some people in a German government would engage in anti-religious rhetoric!). This time, though, the world has Germany's number.

The State Department has criticized Germany for its discriminatory treatment of Scientologists, various branches of the United Nations have initiated investigations and the entertainment community, including the likes of Dustin Hoffman, Goldie Hawn, Mario Puzo, Aaron Spelling, Oliver Stone and Gore Vidal — all non-Scientologists — publicly blasted Germany for its policies in an open letter to Chancellor Helmut Kohl. Scientologists for their part have not forgotten — and neither has the rest of the world.

Scientology is an applied religious philosophy which members study on the basis of "if it is true for you, it is true."

Books on its tenets and procedures are broadly available in public libraries or bookstores such as Dianetics: The Modern Science of Mental Health, Scientology: Fundamentals of Thought and many others. For those with Internet access, there are over 50,000 pages of information available in several languages on Scientology related web sites. I'd suggest starting with www.scientology.org.

Scientology is a growing, dynamic and important international religious movement. I would invite readers of the Collegian to explore some of the resources mentioned above to find out more about it.

David Aden
daden@world.std.com

Black Affairs

Monday, March 31, 1997

Kwame Ture: Remembering a Freedom Fighter

Editor's Note: Legendary Civil Rights Activist and Freedom Fighter, Kwame Ture, will be making his very last public appearance in the United States at the University of Massachusetts, Monday, April 14, in the Campus Center Auditorium. Next Monday's Black Affairs Page will be dedicated to Kwame Ture. The following editorial is a brief peek into the life of the man who gave us Black Power. It is an account of a lecture, given by Professor Thelwell in the New Africa House library.

Michael Aleo

Professor Michael Thelwell met Kwame Ture — then Stokely Carmichael — as a freshman at Howard University, and the two grew together politically. Having met and worked with many of the great actors of the Civil Rights Movement (Bayard Rustin, James Farmer, Martin Luther King, Huey Newton, Robert Moses, H. Rap Brown, Malcolm X, James Baldwin, etc.) Thelwell claims that, "Stokely was most striking, charismatic and quite extraordinary in his ability to attract people... inspire confidence... courage and bravery."

In 1964, Carmichael and Thelwell worked together in the Student Non–Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC). They were assigned to do field work in the Mississippi Delta. When a black man stepped off the train in Mississippi, he faced a new life. In an anecdote illustrating Carmichael's bravery and wit, Thelwell remembers an incident that happened involving southern cops in Mississippi.

While in town, Carmichael and Thelwell were approached by "big southern, redneck looking cops." Soon, the two were surrounded. "Boy," the sheriff called, "You in Mississippi and you ain't got no rights!"

Carmichael raised his hand at the police officer to hold his attention and responded. Thelwell, fearful for his life, cautioned Carmichael to be careful. "Sweets," Carmichael said to the officer — who had probably never even been called "Sweets" by his mother — "Have I not told you that my name ain't 'Boy'... It's Mr. Carmichael."

Needless to say, he was quickly arrested.

This was the situation in Mississippi and the whole of the United States. The police were there to preserve law and order; yet that law and order embodied hundreds of years of oppression to Black America and posed a lethal threat to the black community. Courage was a necessity for black people. Stokely had that courage, and people trusted and followed him.

1965 was the year that saw the assassination of Malcolm X and also saw Stokely Carmichael became executive secretary of SNCC. This was also the year that the term "Black Power" was coined, after James Meredith was shot on his "March Against Fear" in Mississippi.

The legislative battles of the Civil Rights Movement were being won. Blacks were successfully winning the right to vote and were desegregating public facilities and space. However, this victory, though not a hollow one, did not insure the liberation of black people. The effectiveness of integrationist methods were being questioned.

In Mississippi, Fannie Lou Hamer and the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party (MFDP) were fighting to form a strong, black political voice. In Mississipi, the Democrats were racist and the Republicans were non–existent. The alternative was to create an independent black voice. Carmichael, assisting the MFDP, also initiated an independent political party in Lounder County, Ala., which took as its symbol the black panther. "Black Power" was the term he used to describe this political move.

The coining of this phrase threw Carmichael into the history books, for better or for worse. Some called him a dangerous, racist separatist; others called him a hero.

Black Power became the wave of the late '60s. Carmichael was a popular figure across the country. Thelwell explained that everywhere he went, Carmichael earned people's admiration and trust. He gave particular mention to the fact that older women would often refer to Carmichael as "son," and he would refer to them as "mother."

The FBI's war on Black America is a historically documented fact. Carmichael was viewed as a national security threat by certain agencies of the National Government. It was known that his life was in danger. That immediate danger is what prompted Pan–Africanist Ghanian President Kwame NKrumah, who had led his nation to political independence, to call for Carmichael to come to West Africa to study with NKrumah and be his personal assistant. There Stokely Carmichael became Kwame Ture, and has since been working as a Pan–Africanist in exile.

It is of great significance to commemorate the life of Kwame Ture. He is back in the United States due to the most tragic of circumstances. Ture is now receiving treatment for prostate cancer. It was last reported that things were going well and he should be strong. Professor Thelwell and the Afro–American studies department are calling on concerned faculty, students, organizations and community members to pool resources in order to welcome this legend to our campus. Some refer to him as the "heir to Malcolm X" and he is known for having inspired Steven Biko to action in South America. Please welcome him to UMass.

Michael Aleo is a Collegian correspondent.

Kwame Ture speaks at an African Liberation Day celebration by the All African People's Revolutionary Party.

Breaking the color barrier

Millicent Jackson

Nowadays, one need not be an avid reader of black literature to realize that the business of black books is a lucrative one. There is indeed a new generation of African American writers emerging with strong voices. These voices are now being shared in a variety of ways with literature ranging from best selling mysteries, commercial fiction, romance novels and biographies.

How and when did this sudden change come about one might ask?

The fact is that there has always been a serious need for our stories as African Americans to be told, the problem being that the publishing industry was not trying to hear them.

The majority of literature by African Americans appearing from the '30s through the early '60s were aimed at white audiences. We were telling them who we were and what was wrong. Times have since changed. This new "Black Aesthetic," as author Trey Ellis calls it, doesn't feel the need to justify their existence, let alone prove anything to white people. African American writers no longer feel the need to create characters that need to be portrayed in ways that degrade them or undermine their capabilities; instead they are stepping up and showing that as a people we work hard, are educated, live in nice homes, travel and are resilient.

Best selling mystery novelist Walter Mosley, famed for the trials and tribulations of his reluctant detective, Ezekiel "Easy" Rawlins, explains that for the longest time the attitude of the publishing world was that, "white people don't read about black people. Black women don't like black men, and black people don't read." None of this is true as Mosley concludes — rather it is quite the contrary.

Due to the blockbuster success of Terry McMillan's 1992 best-seller, Waiting to Exhale (700,000 hardcover and 3 million paperback copies sold to date), publishers have found that not only do white people read about black people, but black people read about black people a lot. The beauty of McMillan's craft is that she writes intimately about a middle class black experience in which White America is largely irrelevant. A recent article written in "Newsweek" about the best–selling author highlighted that McMillan's colloquial narratives have the casually cathartic flavor of pop songs, allowing them to reach audiences her more literary peers never will.

Clara Villarosa, owner of the largely black Hue–Man Experience Bookstore in Denver, describes the McMillan revolution this way: "When you look at the literature of Toni Morrison or Alice Walker, a lot of it reported on experiences in rural areas or back when.

"Contemporary black fiction, in a black woman's voice, was a total void. These women weren't reading the Toni Morrisons. They'd say, 'Honey, I want it to sound like me,' and when it did, they loved it," Villarosa said.

Needless to say, not only has McMillan managed to overthrow unattractive publishing industry wisdom, she has also spawned a garage industry of black pop fiction writers who are following closely in her steps. All of these writers began publishing after McMillan and, like her, steer clear of writing about racial problems, focusing instead on the problems of contemporary African–American women.

Connie Briscoe's, Sisters & Lovers (1994) sold more than 100,000 copies in hardcover and 325,000 in paperback. Her new novel, Big Girls Don't Cry, has 100,000 copies in print. Even controversial bestselling author E. Lynn Harris, known for his steamy commercial novels of male bisexuality and homosexuality, has more than 152,500 copies of his current best seller, And This Too Shall Pass in print.

Excited by these figures, the overwhelmingly white American publishing industry is going to even greater lengths to tap the black audience. Last June, powerhouse publishing company Alfred A. Knopf published black poet Sapphire's gritty first novel, Push, for which they paid a half a million dollars. These figures are steadily rising as publishers constantly remain on the look out for the next "fresh" African–American new voice to sweep the nation.

It is not uncommon for writers' advances to range from the high thousands anywhere up to six figures, in addition to possibly securing themselves a movie deal. Once again, due to the success of Waiting to Exhale the movie, Hollywood, too, has recognized that African–Americans will spend money to see stories about themselves.

This goes without saying. There are many more of us "out there" waiting to be discovered and have our voices heard. We need as many voices and as many stories as are willing to come forth. Although we are not in the strict sense of the word historians, we are in fact making history. As Terry McMillan said in a speech given in 1990 in Tucson, Arizona, "We, as African–American writers, are capturing and making permanent and indelible our reactions to, and impressions of, our most intimate observations, dreams & nightmares, experiences and feelings about what it felt like for "us" to be African–Americans from the '70s until now, the '90s."

Millicent Jackson is a Collegian correspondent.

Conference aims to educate students on music industry and networking

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

This Friday and Saturday, the Black Mass Communications Project (BMCP) will present its 8th Annual Communications Conference at the Campus Center.

The conference will serve as an opportunity to educate young adults about the music industry, as well as the importance of networking. Event organizers anticipate that this event will draw more participants than in past conferences.

The scheduled keynote speaker is Thembisa Mshaka, Rap Editor of GAVIN magazine. Mshaka's work with GAVIN includes administering radio and retail charts, communicating with influential underground DJ's, breaking new artists and coordinating the rap industry's networking event, The Gavin Seminar.

Workshop and panel discussions will address topics such as "Behind the Scenes Jobs in the Industry," "Publishing and Copyrights," "Distribution," "Beat makers and Producers" and "Sistas in the Industry," as well as many other topics.

Events will include a fashion expo, music performances, a basketball tournament and label representatives.

"Among other reasons, BMCP exists to facilitate the flow of dialogue in the realm of Black Music which in America has served as the foundation for nearly all other genres of music. It is the root of American culture and we honor it as such," a BMCP press release read.

BMCP was founded in 1969 by students concerned over the lack of diversity at WMUA, the University of Massachusetts college radio station. For the past 28 years, BMCP can be heard exclusively on WMUA and is one of the oldest and largest RSOs on campus.

BMCP has sponsored such speakers as Tony Brown, Spike Lee, Cornell West, Honorable Minister Louis Farrakhan, Lani Guinier, Angela Davis and James Mtume. The organization has also worked with University Productions and Concerts to sponsor acts such as Public Enemy, Brand Nubian, O.G.C., KRS One, Onyx, De La Soul, The Roots, Tribe Called Quest and others.

The organization also holds its annual fall Jeans and T– shirt party and spring Funk–O–Thon, which each draw at least 1500 college students from the Northeast area and beyond.

For more information on BMCP's Communications Conference, contact the BMCP office at (413) 545–2426 or visit the office in room 402 in the Student Union. UMass students can register at the Collegiate Committee for the Education of Black and other Minority Students (CCEBMS) office on the 2nd floor of the New Africa House.

An excerpt from the poem...

Love Hurts

If.....

If only You could know how much you had hurt me when you said no
If only You had waited for me, then we could have found the love we have been searching for in each other
If only You didn't push my love away
If only You had waited for me, then I could have stopped the last bat from shattering you last hope of true love
If only You would stop coming & going and just stay
If only boys would grow up to become honorable & respectable men, then I wouldn't have to write this
If only boys realized what they are doing when they give false pretense of the word love to a young female. Then our pain would stop
If only it was as simple to say it as it is to prove it
If only You would stop giving me excuses to why I shouldn't love You
If only I didn't rush it & let nature take its course
If only I did not fall for you so easily
If only You had waited for me to sweep You off your feet
If only I knew You were the one I was destined to be with, then I would have to stop searching and waited for You
If only You had waited for me, You could have seen that my love was real
If only my sisters had stopped playing me, then I would still trust and respect You today
If only nice guys came in first place instead of last place, then I wouldn't feel that I have to be a dog to win your love
If only You were not so superficial and independent of me, then I would be able to trust You
If Only.....

Instead, you push me away with angry words, you say I am like the rest of them without giving me a chance to prove my love to you.

By Dimitry Frederique

One Time for the Mind: Race across the Atlantic

Allana E. Todman

On March 15, 1997, I had my bags packed and ready to go on a performance tour to London and Paris with my performing arts troup, Boston City Lights. This tour, which lasted for two weeks, opened my eyes to view everything around me in a more analytical way.

Boarding the plane, I sat down in my assigned seat number, prayed for a safe arrival and closed my eyes until the plane lifted off. As we reached thousands of feet into the air, the plane began to experience turbulance. I just sat there with my seatbelt clasped tightly around me.

Every now and then, I would look at the flight attendants, who were trying their hardest not to appear as if they were scared about the plane crashing like the rest of the passengers, including myself, were.

Finally, we landed safely in London, and the first thing I noticed about the people was that I hardly saw anyone in jeans or sneakers, including the little children. Everyone dressed very casually. That's why all seven of us, dressed in our Converse uniforms with our sneakers to match, were constantly being pointed out as the group of Americans. As people continuously stared at us, we started to feel proud that we were from the U.S.A.

Though we were in a foreign land in London, I still felt close to home because the people spoke English. But as soon as we entered Paris it was a different case. Not only did I not understand French, but the culture of Parisians was very interesting.

The first thing I looked for was the brothers and sisters. I wanted to see how they dressed, the way they spoke, and the kind of music that they listned to. I wondered if they had the same socio-economic problems that we did as black Americans. Lastly, I wondered if racism was more or less when compared to that of America.

The first group of African Europeans that I saw were at one of the hottest dance clubs in Paris, THE HOT BRASS. The night of our performance, there was a French rap battle right after us. With this night being the night for individuals 18 and up, the troupe and I were excited to see some of our black peers.

Unlike young African–American men who commonly wear baggy jeans for comfort and style, African Europeans were mostly sporting straight fitted jeans, with casual sweaters, or Tommy Hilfiger gear. They also seemed to love matching blue jean and jacket matching outfits.

All the females I saw were similiar to that of African– American women, except that they all seem to either have full weaves or microscopic braids that looked as if they took three weeks to do.

Though the common dress code for the African European man or woman was slightly different, it seemed that their socio-economic problems were not too far off from ours in America.

They similarly expressed issues through their rap music, as we do in the United States, so I tried to understand the issues that were affecting African Europeans through the interpretation of my friend who spoke pretty good French.

One of the phrases from one of the French rapper's was, "In the street you have to have money because if you don't have money the cops won't respect you, so you have to make the cash."

As the rap battle continued, many of the rappers' messages mirrored each other, making it very clear that the white society in Europe had a problem with completely accepting black men or woman as individuals in the economy or in social class.

After their performance ended, many of the rappers came to us and asked members of our troupe who rapped to jointly freestyle together. At this time, I was very proud to see African Americans and African European men come together to express themselves through the common art of rap.

One of the comments that the African Europeans gave us was the fact that it was hard for them to see a troupe as ours mixed with diffk.ent races because although the laws prohibit racial discrimination, inwardly, the people are still very racist.

I found their comments to be very true after the troupe and I were not allowed to perform at a major club in Paris because we were not Portuguese. As the bouncer asked us to not enter the building, we were very upset.

After talking with more Black Europeans, they expressed to me that it's harder to get ahead in France because of the heavily structured class system.

Many of them also revealed to me that if they could move to America they would.

On the journey back to Boston, I met an African man who lived in Paris for sometime and had just become an American citizen.

He expressed to me that as an American, I shouldn't spend all of my time straining the social problems and prejudices of this country because when compared to the rest of the world, America is a land of opportunity.

As he continued to share his struggle with me, I realized that maybe I could have taken a lot of the principles this country stands on for granted.

Overall this trip abroad has been a life learning experience. For me to communicate with other people of African descent was very inspiring. The struggle for black people is not only on for African–Americans, but for all people of African descent, worldwide.

Allana E. Todman is a Collegian staff member

Arts & Living

Monday, March 31, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

TAB CALIAN / COLLEGIAN

Alterna-god Beck shows a sold-out Amherst crowd what you can do with two turntables and a microphone.

Beck shows Amherst "where it's at"

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

BECK
Amherst College
March 28

Most likely in an attempt to ward off mainstream status, alterna-icon Beck Hansen has veered far from larger venues to embark on a national college tour. This past Friday, he brought his eccentric blends and styles of genre-meshing to Amherst College. His entirely unique sound of hip-hop, blues, folk, country bluegrass and rock has put Beck not only at the top of the charts, but has won the respect of concertgoers and music critics alike.

Surrounded by a five-piece ensemble decked out in classic mod attire, Beck's set screamed of '70s-retro homage. He entertained the sold-out house by bouncing around the stage with the vigorous energy of a young child, though he stopped for far too long in between each number to either introduce the song or tell a random story with flaky pseudo- intellectual blabber.

The evening began promptly at 8 p.m. with the flickering of the overhead lights over the anticipatory crowd. What then occurred was a shock to the audience members who were strictly there for Beck and plastic poppers, the Cardigans. Germany's Atari Teenage Riot hit the stage equipped with two singers and two D.J.'s. Atari set the night off in the right direction with their disturbing chants of apocalyptic revolution. Frontman Alec Empire continuously directed his internal rage at the confused kids in the crowd, who at first stared with wide eyes and then seemed to turn off their attention.

Atari's set was a loud and angry mix of punk and industrial, yet referred to by the band as digital hardcore. The highlight was the title track from their recent E.P. Sick to Death. "I'm sick to death like I've never been sick before." Empire and his stage partner ripped through each song, taking turns singing while the other jumped furiously around the stage. All in all, Atari lived up to their reputation as one of the most entertaining and bizarre live acts around.

The best way to describe the second stage of the evening is with one direct word: buzzkill! After the extreme intensity of Atari Teenage Riot, Swedish sensations The Cardigans took the stage with their cutesy, radio-friendly ballads. Led by the ear-piercing screeches of singer Nina Persson, the prepubescent members of the audience cheered on and on. The Cardigans' set consisted of one song warping its way into another — the only tune that stood apart was the recognizable Top 40 hit "Love Fool." The band's obvious late '80s metal influences were the only distinction they had from all the members of their genre, like Letters to Cleo.

By the time Beck came on, the gymnasium was nearly packed to full capacity. The set began in a true epic fashion with a short intro by the D.J., who was then joined by the rest of the band, minus Beck. The guitarist then gave a little yell, "Let's here it for Beck!" The new king of college radio then came running out from off-stage, giving a sincere warm welcome to his fans. He set the night off with "Devil's Haircut," the first song off his critically acclaimed album Odelay. During the chorus, the crowd looked in awe at the stellar light show that flickered about the gymnasium. The band appeared in front of a symmetrically shaped backdrop which looked more like kitchen wallpaper circa 1975.

Throughout the next couple numbers, Beck & Co. appeared to be putting their hearts into it, but the crowd seemed a bit withdrawn. Halfway through the set, Beck decided to slow things down and had his band take a breather backstage. Equipped with an acoustic guitar, he performed two folksier songs from earlier in his career. He introduced one with an exhaustingly long, yet amusingly cynical explanation of nitrous oxide abuse. At this point many people sat down and listened patiently until Beck changed tempos.

Eventually the band returned and kicked through an amazing rendition of "Where its At." For the first time, the entire crowd got up and danced, chanting along with Beck to the chorus of "two turntables and a microphone." The remainder of the evening maintained the same level of energy, and by the end of the show there were tremendous expressions of complete satisfaction by everyone present.

The majority of the set was taken in almost numerical order form Odelay. Only a few songs from 1994's Mellow Gold were played and, surprisingly enough, "Loser" was one left absent. Rather, songs like "Beer Can" and "Asshole" were mixed in with newer tunes, including the recent single "The New Pollution," as well as the country twang of "Lord Only Knows." Beck proved himself to be quite the showman as well as talented performer. An evening with Beck, although a bit odd at times, is still an experience not easily forgotten.

Breeders vol. 3 – a raw Deal

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

THE BREEDERS
Pearl Street
March 28, 1997

Friday night was representational of the past, present and future of Kim Deal's musical career. For starters, her old Pixies bandmate Black Francis (a.k.a. Charles Thompson or Frank Black) was in attendance. The Breeders, initially Kim's side project while still a Pixie, were the featured act Friday night. But this edition of the Breeders had the same line-up as her most recent group, the Amps. So the band on stage at Pearl Street was not really the Breeders, but also not the Amps. Got that? Neither do I.

The show started out promisingly. The opening salvo of "Mom's Drunk" and "Pacer" grabbed the crowd's attention; "Iris" and the brand-new "Yo" (the band thought up the title on the spot) were also some of the set's early highlights. However, the Breeders' performance soon became repetitive and monotonous, with too many sluggish, mid-paced numbers drowned out in dissonance and feedback, thus weighing down the show. That factor coupled with a relatively unfamiliar set (much of their catalogue — the albums Pod and Last Splash and the Safari EP — was ignored in favor of unreleased new songs and about half of the Amps' LP) resulted in a nasty case of audience boredom.

And that's a damn shame, because Kim Deal is an incredibly charismatic and likeable performer. Constantly smiling and chatting with the audience, she's a breath of fresh air in the hipper-than-thou rock world. Her voice and demeanor clearly belie her somewhat ratty appearance; the former high-school cheerleader still knows how to project her enthusiasm to the crowd. Kim's enthusiasm and willingness to deconstruct the traditional band/audience barrier was welcome, appreciatcd and perhaps the one saving grace of the show.

Kim Deal is an incredibly charismatic and likeable performer. Constantly smiling and chatting with the audience, she's a breath of fresh air in the hipper-than-thou rock world.

Although the band's sound was overwrought with too much ambient noise (i.e. too much dissonance), the new edition of the Breeders have a solid musical base of fundamental rock skills. The focal points of the five-piece band are Kim's fuzzed-out acoustic guitar and drummer Jim MacPherson's solid backbeat, though often the sound was augmented with a third electric guitar, violin, pedal steel guitar and even a second bass (can you say "Ned's Atomic Dustbin"?). Unfortunately, these occasional quirks only made the prevailing dullness of the rest of the set all the more obvious.

The Breeders picked up the pace towards the end of the show, saving it from being a complete washout. Most of their better known songs were ignored, so when the loopy bass introduction of "Cannonball" started up, it galvanized the audience. The encores continued the momentum, with the rousing country-rock of "Drivin' On 9" (which Kim dedicated to everyone who has to commute from Northampton to Amherst) and Pod's "Fortunately Gone," which gave the show its most emotional moment of the evening. However, it was simply a case of too little too late — the strong finale couldn't redeem the show's overall blandness.

Unfortunately, Kim Deal's songwriting seems to be heading in the same direction as former Pixies bandmate Black Francis' — down. Comparisons between the two are unfair but ultimately inevitable, as their post-Pixies projects will always be held up against their old group's vastly superior body of work. Hopefully, this show wasn't representational of the current edition of the Breeders; if it was, one can only pray for a Francis/Deal reconciliation and a Pixies reunion.

Descendents in form at Pearl St.

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

DESCENDENTS
Pearl Street
March 26

The Descendents are a band that transcend all boundaries. Regardless of your sex, race, scene or whatever, if you like fast, loud, well-played music, you were at Pearl Street last Wednesday night. The crowd, of course, ate it up as they pogoed, skanked and danced with abandon. Despite the fact that it felt like Pearl Street exceeded the maximum occupancy by a thousand with its sauna-like conditions, there wasn't a frown to be found at the show.

One aspect of the punk scene in the '90s has been the return of bands who, after huge layoffs, fell flat on their faces. The Sex Pistols and Misfits are two prime examples. The Descendents however continued to go against the grain by coming back and rocking as hard as ever. Maybe it was the unbreakable trio of Karl Alvarez, Bill Stevenson and Stephen Egerton who logged in years with All before bringing back the Descendents, or maybe vocalist Milo Aukerman is someone to whom anyone whose ever felt left out or rejected can relate. Then again it could be the fact that when you see the Descendents, everything melts away as you enter a punk nirvana.

The Descendents opened up with thematic "I'm Not A Loser" and from then on proceeded to destroy Pearl Street. "Everything Sucks" and "I'm The One" were next and perhaps best exemplified why the Descendents' comeback has been so successful. Although those songs were written this year, after Milo's layoff, they still sounded just as good as the classics and proved that the band has not missed a beat.

While the new songs were good, they weren't what the crowd shelled out their hard earned money for. "Hope," one of the best songs about lost love ever written, came fourth, and the crowd reached a frenzied state as the band played away. "Coolidge," "Descendents," "I Don't Want To Grow Up," "Bikeage" and "Wanna Be a Bear" are just a small sample of the songs played. They even threw in the Beach Boys cover "Wendy," a song they had omitted from their first couple of shows. Despite the Hades-like temperature and the fact that the crowd was packed in like sardines, no one let up as the band played for over an hour.

While Milo leaned into the crowd as he sang and Karl and Stephen bounced around showing off the few dance moves they learned in years of being in All, you realized nothing could be better. What separated the Descendents from other punk bands is that they do it all for their fans. At every show, they pour every bit of sweat and energy into their set, and no matter how hot it is or how tired they are, the smiles never leave their faces. In a time when too many bands are involved in punk for the money and the fame, it's nice to see a band that does it purely for the love of the music. To prove that they were different, after their entire catalogue had been exhausted and two encores, they came out and blasted into a three song homage to Black Flag beginning with "Wasted." It was that little extra that made Wednesday a truly magical night.

Write for Arts

Tired of throwing your weight around?
Exercise

WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS SOFTWARE ASSOCIATION
41 Main Street • Florence, MA 01060 • 413-584-3449 • fax 413-584-2495
SOFTWARE
JOB FAIR '97
Tuesday, April 1, 11 a.m.–7 p.m.
Springfield MA Sheraton Monarch Hotel Grand Ballroom
OVER 30 COMPANIES SEEKING!
• Software Engineers • Technical Writers • Systems Analysts
• Network Specialists • MIS Professionals • Application Programmers
• Quality Assurance • System/LAN Administrators
• Software Managers . . . and many more!!!
FREE ADMISSION · BRING YOUR RESUME
SPONSORED BY
Fidelity Investments · APPLIED PC · JavaNet · MassMutual The Blue Chip Company SM
For more information. http://www.wmsa.org

DO YOU OR A FRIEND OR COLLEAGUE HAVE A PROBLEM WITH ALCOHOL OR OTHER DRUGS?
THERE ARE RESOURCES AVAILABLE TO HELP.
Alcohol and Drug Education Program. 248 University Health Services Room. General information, referral, training, peer workshops. 577-5181 Wkdays 8:30-5:00. Ask for the Alcohol/Drug Educator in the Health Education Division.
First Call for Help. Town of Amherst. Information about resources and self help groups in the local area. 256-0121 Weekdays 9:00-4:45.
Athletic Health Enhancement Program (AHEP). 256 Boyden Gym. Information, educational programs, consultation and referral for student athletes, coaches and staff. 545-4588 Weekdays 8:30-5:00.
80 PROOF • IMPORTED BY PALACE BRANDS, CHICAGO. Imported in This Bottle
Residential Education Alcohol Program (REAP). Moore Lobby in Southwest. Referral, multi-session education and court-mandated counseling, individual counseling for students. 545-0137 Weekdays 9:00-5:00.
This information provided by University Health Services

UNIVERSITY OF NEW HAMPSHIRE
Get a Boost This Summer at UNH
Request the UNH Summer Catalog or go online!
• Over 300 day and evening credit courses
• Courses are 5, 8, or 10 weeks
• Four Convenient Terms
June 2-July 3
June 2-August 8
June 16-August 8
July 7-August 8
• Take 2 terms, back-to-back and earn 8 or more credits
Get info & register on the web! http://www.learn.unh.edu
Registration begins March 31
Send me the University of New Hampshire Summer Session Catalog.
Mail to: UNH Summer Session, 24 Rosemary Lane, Durham, NH 03824, or call (603) 862-4234, or visit the web (www.learn.unh.edu)
Name
Address
City State Zip

Wildcat win continues repeat quest

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — When Ron Mercer was in the game, his shots weren't falling. When he was out, his cramping legs were on ice. That combination should have had Kentucky in a bad way. Instead, the Wildcats will get a chance to defend their national title. Kentucky's tenacious defense and a sudden burst of balanced scoring by Mercer's teammates gave the Wildcats a 78-69 victory over Minnesota on Saturday night.

Mercer scored 19 points on 7-of-21 shooting as Kentucky (35-4) advanced to the NCAA championship Monday night against Arizona, which beat North Carolina 66-58.

The one thing for sure is that the winner will be the Wildcats. It will either be Kentucky's seventh title or Arizona's first.

"I have tremendous admiration for our basketball team that overcame a lot of problems, from foul trouble to cramping and was still able to dig deep down and win this ballgame," Kentucky coach Rick Pitino said.

Mercer, who had 20 points in the national championship game against Syracuse last season as a freshman, couldn't get untracked against Minnesota (31-4). A 50 percent shooter during the season, Mercer was 3-of-13 in the first half as the Wildcats took a 36-31 lead, then was bothered by the leg cramps.

"I just started catching cramps in the second half," he said. "I tried to continue to play on, but it was worst when I was jumping and it kind of affected my jumping a little bit." That would have meant bothering his shooting as well.

"Sometimes you're going to shoot good and sometimes you're not," said the 6-foot-7 sophomore, who has already announced he will enter the upcoming NBA draft. "I had pretty good shots. I didn't get enough lift on my shot, but I'm just glad we won. I not really concerned about my shot right now."

The Golden Gophers, who were hounded by turnovers against Kentucky's varied pressure defense, still hung in during their first ever Final Four appearance.

They took their first lead of the game with 10:51 to play on a 3-pointer by Bobby Jackson. It was also their last.

"Anytime you get a lead like that you have fought an uphill battle," Minnesota coach Clem Haskins said. "We didn't do a good job of taking care of the basketball. The pressure got to us and we were forced into quick shots. That's what happens when you go against pressure."

Kentucky broke from a 54-54 tie with a 14-3 run with five players, none of them named Mercer, scoring the points. Cameron Mills almost matched his 5.6 scoring average for the season in the run with five points, including the 3-pointer that capped it and made it 68-57 with 4:18 to play.

Anthony Epps had 13 points for Kentucky and Mills finished with 10.

Bobby Jackson scored 23 points and Sam Jacobson and John Thomas each had 10 for the Golden Gophers. Jackson, Minnesota's star throughout the tournament, was also forced to the bench because of cramps in the second half.

"They did a good job of containing us and pressuring us and we just had careless turnovers," Jackson said. "I wish we could have the game back but we can't. We came out and we were scared. I think we were scared. We gave it all we could. That was the main point." Pitino will try to become the seventh coach to lead a team to consecutive national championships. The last was Duke's Mike Krzyzewski in 1992 — among the others was Kentucky's Adolph Rupp in 1949.

Kentucky's six national championships are second only to UCLA's 11. The Wildcats were installed as seven-point favorites over Arizona."We're not last year's team," said Pitino, who lost four players to the NBA draft. "I've never coached a team with this much heart in my life. We're tired, we're banged up and these guys just keep digging in."

Minnesota had 15 turnovers at halftime, one more than it averaged this season. The Golden Gophers finished with 26, even more than Kentucky's average of forcing 22.7 per game.

HUI GAO \ COLLEGIAN

Batter up

Senior Sam Cardenas went 4-for-6 in yesterday's double- header with St. Bonaventure with three RBIs and two doubles while scoring a pair of runs.

■ softball

continued from page 10

earned runs, just three hits, and struck out an astounding nine batters.

"I'm happy we won," Henderson said. "I hope we will be able to go on a win streak now. We're doing a lot of things better."

Massachusetts 5, Dayton 0 (5 innings–rain)

Saturday afternoon the Minutewomen celebrated their home opener and the start of their A–10 season with a trouncing of Dayton in the rains at Totman Field.

After a slow start, UMass pounded the Flyers in the fourth inning for four runs on as many hits.

A Tracey Osier RBI infield single ignited UMass. An RBI single by Mareina followed, and the inning was capped off by an RBI rope double by Gutridge.

Once again, Henderson was called on to pitch, and dominated the Flyer lineup. Henderson went the five innings, giving up no runs on three hits, while striking out five before the game was called due to lightning and rain.

Collegian Sports is looking for writers like you! Come visit the Collegian Sports desk at 113 Campus Center Basement.

■ baseball

continued from page 10

Bennett had been flawless, going 3-0 and reaching one game shy of reaching the 20-win mark. Unfortunately, in game one of Saturday's double- header, Virginia Tech got Bennett's number and called him on it. The Hokies scored 11 runs on 11 hits during the five and a third innings he pitched.

The Hokies' ace Denny Wagner (4–2) pitched four scoreless innings before giving up two runs in the fifth and sixth against the Minutemen. Wagner went the distance, allowing only nine hits while striking out nine.Massachusetts 7, Virginia Tech 1

In the nightcap of Saturday's double-header, UMass turned things around, and the Minutemen slid in with their eighth win of the season, 7-1.

The starting shooter for the Minutemen was Bill Cooke (1– 1), who allowed one run on five hits while surrendering no walks. Senior catcher Jason Kudrikow went 4-for-5, while Doug Clark and Brian Samela each hit home runs to clinch the victory for the Minutemen.

Also contributing to Virginia Tech's demise were Pete Gautreau, who added three hits, and Brad Gorrie, who had two hits of his own and scored two runs, taking Hokies pitcher Matt Lichtel out of the books.

Arizona underdogs chomp on UNC

By Mike Nadel
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Too quick, too clutch and simply too tough for mighty North Carolina, Arizona is only one more improbable victory from its first NCAA title.

Just eight days after knocking off No. 1 Kansas, Arizona defeated North Carolina 66-58 Saturday night behind the shooting of Miles Simon and Mike Bibby.

"As many Final Fours as they've been to and as many times you've seen them playing on TV in the championship, all the good players that have come through," Simon said, "I'm just glad that it's Arizona's time now."

Simon, rejected by North Carolina coach Dean Smith four years ago, scored 24 points, and Bibby shook off a horrible start to hit four 3-pointers down the stretch as the Wildcats won a game for the first time in three Final Four appearances.

Arizona (24-9), the only team that wasn't a top seed in its region to reach the Final Four, will play in today's championship game against the winner of the Kentucky-Minnesota semifinal played later Saturday.

"They're not afraid of anyone, and they play that way," Arizona coach Lute Olson said of his players. "I think the Kansas win gave us a confidence that, hey, if we can beat Kansas, we should be able to beat any of the teams we come up against. I don't think our guys are walking with a swagger, but... the mindset we have right now is perfect."

North Carolina (28-7), which won its previous 16 games, shot 31 percent and committed 17 turnovers. The Tar Heels, who have reached the Final Four 11 times in Smith's 36 years, won't get a chance to bring their coach his third title in the same season in which he broke Adolph Rupp's record for coaching victories.

"We've had a great season, but I didn't tell them that," Smith said when asked what he told his players afterward. "I said they tried hard but they have to look back at this and learn from each experience.

"Arizona did an excellent job with their interior defense. They are very quick. And we just weren't shooting well."

Arizona, which also used its quickness to shock Kansas in the Southeast Regional semifinals, didn't shoot much better — 33 percent. But the Wildcats made shots when it really mattered. Bibby, a freshman, missed 10 of his first 13 shots but kept firing and finished with 20 points. He made six 3-pointers. "My mentality is to shoot the rock," he said. "I'm not worried. I finally started hitting some. I just knew my shots would fall if I kept taking them."

Vince Carter had 21 points, but only five on 2-for-7 shooting in the second half, as North Carolina ended its season the same way it began — with a loss to Arizona. The Wildcats defeated the Tar Heels 83-72 in the Tipoff Classic on Nov. 22.

Shammond Williams hit a 3-pointer for North Carolina's first points of the game. But he missed his last seven shots from behind the arc and finished 1-for-13 from the floor.

"I said, 'Mike, you have got to get to him by the time he gets to the three-point line', " Olson said.

And Bibby listened, helping the team with his defense before putting Arizona over the top with his clutch shooting.

The Wildcats led only 47-42 with 9:50 to play before Bibby and Simon scored all their team's points during a 14-4 run that made it a 15-point game.

Simon, who still has the rejection letter he received from Smith hanging on his bulletin board, began the stretch with a 3-pointer. Bibby then hit a 3-pointer to make it 53-42. After two baskets by Serge Zwikker sandwiched Simon's 15-footer, Bibby hit two more 3-pointers for a 61-46 lead.

North Carolina scored the next seven points, but the cool Bibby made another 3-pointer to put Arizona up 64-55.The game still wasn't wrapped up, though, as the Wildcats missed the front ends of three consecutive 1-and-1 free throws while Carter made a dunk and Ed Cota hit a 3-pointer to bring the Tar Heels to within six points.

But Carter, Williams and Cota missed 3-pointers, and Donnell Harris made two clinching free throws with 27.8 seconds left. Arizona's players looked much more excited before the game than their Carolina counterparts. When introduced, Bennett Davison ran onto the court, held both index fingers aloft and pointed at Arizona's cheering session, while Simon did a little shimmy dance as he left the bench.

Inexperience, injuries can't stop Cats

By Mike Embry
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — When Kentucky lost its stars from last year's championship team to the NBA, not many people gave it a shot at winning the title again.

But with an undermanned and ailing team, the Wildcats are just one victory away from their second straight NCAA crown. Kentucky used its trademark pressure defense to overwhelm Minnesota 78-69 Saturday night.

The Wildcats started three sophomores and one freshman to go along with senior guard Anthony Epps. Nonetheless, the lack of experience didn't faze Kentucky in the national semifinal. "This is a sophomore-dominated team and they're mentally as tough as I've ever had," Kentucky coach Rick Pitino said. "I don't think it really matters what class you're in any longer." After beating Syracuse for the national title last year, the Wildcats lost seniors Tony Delk and Walter McCarty and sophomore Antoine Walker to the NBA. Then they lost leading scorer Derek Anderson to a knee injury in January.

Anderson, however, came off the bench to shoot two free throws on a second-half technical foul on Minnesota coach Clem Haskins. He hit both to give the Wildcats a 49-43 lead, and left the game. "This team is sort of like a family trying to overcome tragedies," Anderson said.

Not counting Anderson, the Wildcats used nine players against the deeper Minnesota team. And they lost sophomore Scott Padgett to fouls while Jared Prickett and Nazr Mohammed each picked up four. Even without last year's powerhouse lineup, the Wildcats used their smothering full-court pressure to force 26 Minnesota turnovers.

"These guys are young, and you don't see that type of performance from young players. ... We've now beaten two teams in the top five to get to the championship game, and I'm blown away from their grit," Pitino said.

The Wildcats are trying to become the first team since Duke to repeat as champions. The Blue Devils won in 1991 and 1992. Sophomore All-American Ron Mercer, who is leaving for the NBA after this season, hit just 7-of-21 shots for Kentucky and grabbed only three rebounds. And when he was forced to the bench in the second half after getting elbowed in the head, the other Wildcats picked up the slack.

Epps scored 13 points, including 4-of-5 free throws late in the game, and hit two 3s that put Kentucky in control in the opening minutes. The senior guard also came through with seven assists and five steals.

"That was tough but the good thing about Ron is that he knew he was struggling so he tried to get the ball to everybody else," Epps said.

Simon: 'Luckily, I was able to be on'

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — An hour before tip-off, Mike Simon entered the RCA Dome singing and bopping to music blaring from his headphones while his Arizona teammates walked silently around him. When the headphones came off and the game began, it was Simon making all the noise again for the Wildcats.

The lifelong North Carolina fan missed Arizona's victory over the Tar Heels in the Tipoff Classic because of academic problems. But he made up for that absence Saturday, scoring 24 points as the Wildcats (24-9) beat North Carolina 66-58 in the semifinals of the NCAA tournament.

Freshman point guard Mike Bibby, who struggled in the first half, made four 3-pointers down the stretch and scored 17 of his 20 points in the second half.

"Luckily, I was able to be on," said Simon, the only returning starter from last year's squad. "My team ... kept saying, 'Man, you've just got to keep taking it,' and that's what I tried to do. I just put up shots and took what was coming to me."

With six seconds left to play, Simon turned to the Arizona fans, held up his index finger and mouthed, "One more game." The Wildcats, who upset top-ranked Kansas in the semifinals of the Southeast Regional, play the winner of the Kentucky-Minnesota game today for the national championship.

It will be Arizona's first appearance in the title game. "I don't think our guys are cocky or walking with a swagger or anything else," coach Lute Olson said. "I think they've got an inner confidence in what their teammates can do and what they can do."

The only thing to mar Arizona's victory was Jason Terry's hospitalization for dehydration. The sophomore guard, who had a cold earlier this week, had three points in 20 minutes.

While Bibby and Mike Dickerson, Arizona's leading scorer, struggled, Simon gave North Carolina (28-7) a game all by himself. It was sweet turnabout for the Fullerton, Calif., native, who still keeps his rejection letter from Dean Smith on the bulletin board in his bedroom.

Smith said he quit recruiting Simon because he had two young shooting guards.

Simon downplayed the personal significance of the game, saying he was more concerned with the NCAA title. But Arizona forward Eugene Edgerson said Simon's public indifference was an act. "He was just basically like this: 'We need to kill these people. They recruited me, but they didn't recruit me hard enough. We've got to make them pay'," Edgerson said.

And that's just what Simon did. The Tar Heels led by 11 when he took a Bibby pass in for an easy layup, then followed up with back-to-back treys to cut the margin to 17-14 with 11:57 left in the first half.

His jumper tied the game at 24 with 7:21 left in the half, but he didn't get any help from his teammates as Arizona hit another drought. Dickerson's pair of free throws gave the Wildcats a 26-24 lead — their first since Simon's opening layup - but North Carolina scored seven unanswered points.

After free throws from A.J. Bramlett and a Bibby 3-pointer, Simon scored on a hook shot following a North Carolina turnover. He was hacked as he put it up, and converted on the 3-point play to give the Wildcats a 34-31 halftime lead.

He finished with 15 points in the first half on 6-of-8 shooting. "That first half, when it seemed like nobody else could (score), he really did a great job of holding us in there until other guys started hitting some shots," Olson said.

THERE WILL BE A MANDATORY SPORTS STAFF MEETING ON TUESDAY AT 7:00 P.M. IN THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE. CALL CHRIS OR CASEY AT 545-1749 IF YOU CAN'T ATTEND.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Coucaread about Sex, STD's, Alcohol, Drugs, Eating Disorders, Stress, HIV/AIDS or Smoking? Call Peer Health Connections at 577-5168 for answers to your questions. Completely Confidential

Trying to quit smoking or chewing tobacco? Need help? Support Group meets every Wednesday from 7-8pm. in Campus Center Room 801. Free. Call 577-5181 for more info or just drop by

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Summer Apt. Available 6/1 with Fall option. Clean, 2 bedroom in Brendywine. $775/month includes gas, hot water and heat. On bus line. 1 mile from UMass. 549-0679

AUTO FOR SALE

87 Ford Escort
A/C, F/M, 5-speed
, 104K miles, $1725
(413)256-1238

1985 Toyota Corolla good shape. 129K miles, $1000. Call 253-2264

1983 Red Renault Alliance Coupe Only 76K miles, automatic transmission, runs well, body in excellent condition, new brakes, starter, battery. Clarion AM/FM cassette. Must sell! $1000 or B/O 549-4584

1992 Ford Explorar 4x4, A/C, 5-speed, 2 door, 90K, looks and runs excellent $9500 549-8894

EMPLOYMENT

NEED MONEY $50 a week, short morning hours. Contact Mark or Alycia at 545-3500 or stop by The Collegian in the Campus Center Basement.

SUMMER JOBS
Communication Assistant- MA Telecommunications Relay Service, Holyoke, MA. Requirements: Typing 50wpm, clear speaking voice, good phone skills; dependable, positive attitude, full-time and part-time positions. Flexible shifts. Call (413)493-1100 for an appointment.

Hadley Office has 10 part-time openings for Field Service Reps in its Customer Service Division. Responsibilities include: Marketing, Service, and light Deliveries in Amherst, Hadley, and Northampton areas

$8/$12 hour
Call 584-7696
10am. to 4pm
Ask for Frank Biesi

Vermont Advantural Farm and Wilderness is now hiring summer staff. We need people who want to provide positive guidance and support to adolescents coming of age in the 90's: Counselors, nurses, cooks, general staff. Organic farming, backpacking, rock climbing, waterfront, carpentry, crafts. Challenging wilderness environment in the Green Mountains of Vermont. Contact Philip Tobin (802)422-3761 or landw@sover.net (http://www.landw.org)

EMPLOYMENT

Hadley Office has several part-time positions available in its Marketing Dept.
- Evening and Weekend Shifts
- Fun Atmosphere
- Daily, Weekly, and Monthly Bonuses
- On Bus Line
- 15 to 35 hours a week $7.810 hour

Call 584-7696 between 2pm and 9pm.

Need a summer job? Know the web? Sail MO Internet Websites to anyone, whenever you want to work. Low cost, nice income for you. Call (800)272-7883 or e-mail for more information. dlenger@aol.com

Leasing Agents Full and Part Time for the busy summer season. Must be outgoing, friendly, and willing to work many hours. Responsibilities include collecting rent, processing applications, answering phones and general clerical work. Please apply in person at Cliffside Apartments between 1-4pm. No phone calls please. EOE

Crabapple White Water Looking for one person to greet trips. Work in restaurant and retail store. Full-Time Summer Job. Some positions. Looking for multi-talented, friendly person (413)625-2288

$$Opportunity$$ Looking for several exciting, enthusiastic, and dedicated people to expand an already lucrative markets. Great opportunity for those who are serious. Interested persons call Todd at (413)739-4669

EMPLOYMENT

Earn great money and valuable Sales/Marketing experience. Memolink's Memoboards are coming to UMass! We need one highly motivated individual to direct our sales project. Contact David at (800)563-6654

Legal Assistants Wanted- Fall 1997 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the Legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the Legal profession necessary— training provided. Stop by the office today and pick up an application. 922 Campus Center.

Technical Support/RP Looking for a great part-time job? We are a local, progressive, internet service provider that is looking for Quality, Energetic, and Reliable persons to join our team. Requirements: experience in Windows 95, Windows 3.1, Mac, Dialup Networking and TC PIP. Call our job hotline today! (413)587-4333 or e-mail jobs@crocker.com

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: Tha 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

Buy wholesale, not retail. The fast phone card you will ever own. MCI Pre-paid only $2.00 for 10 minutes. This card is rechargeable. Mail $2.00 and SASE to: Collegiate Communications, P.O. Box 785, Attleboro, MA 02703 (800)372-7683

INSTRUCTION

GRE/GMAT
30 hours, $395
American Academy
1-800-818-Prep
(please leave your name and number)

FOR RENT

Sugarloaf Estates Ultra modern, two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers, and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Now leasing Spring and Fall. Call 665-3956

4 bedroom apartment 2 bath, 2 large living rooms. Located on bus route in South Amherst. Call 256-1561

Summer Rental- West Hyannis Port Cape Cod three bedroom. Walk to Craigville Beach. Available 5/25-8/31 (508)778-6519

Cape Cod group & summer rentals Waterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-8000

FOR SALE

Lite Speed Titanium 50 centimeter road bike. Ridden once. Need immediate funds. Paid $1700, asking $1150 or B/O. 253-6452

Kenmore Gas Dryer $40 (413)665-5189

Buy wholesale, not retail. The fast phone card you will ever own. MCI Pre-paid only $2.00 for 10 minutes. This card is rechargeable. Mail $2.00 and SASE to: Collegiate Communications, P.O. Box 785, Attleboro, MA 02703 (800)372-7683

LOST

Gold Chain and Pendant in Boyden. Great personal value to me. Please call Hilary 256-4548

MUSICIANS

DRUMMER WANTED
Punk/Ska Band 25 Liars needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming. Call Dave and Ryan 665-9112/Edwin, 549-5941

PERSONALS

There is so much to say but I don't think I can ever say them all. Just remember that I love and care about you very much. I can't imagine spending my life without you. I'm always here for you babe! Te quiero mucho! Love, Su Novia Sue

ROOM WANTED

Looking for apartment on bus line for Fall '97. Please call Amy 546-0706

ROOMMATE WANTED

Two bedroom apt. ASAP! Mill Valley Estates. Rent negotiable. Call 253-0592

SERVICES

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State St. Northampton. 586-0629

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

Summer/Fall Option 1 bedroom in a 2 bedroom. Sunny, huge, clean. 10 min. from campus. Available 5/15 or 6/1. Jen 259-1581

CHEAP SUBLET- Summer/Fall Option. Two bedroom apartment on Sunderland bus line. $500/month. Shelly 665-0087

3 bedroom Puffton available 6/1. 549-5941

TO SUBLET

Four girls to sublet an apt/house for Fall '97. Must be on bus route. Please call either Rory at 6-2778, Heather at 6-1872, or Katy/Renee at 6-3114

1 bedroom apartment available immediately. Call Tricia for more info. (617)247-2388

TRAVEL

EUROPE $175.
Within USA $79 - $129.
Caribb./Mexico $199 r/t
Cheap Fares Worldwide!!!!!!
http://www.airhitch.org
AIRHITCH (800)326-2009

Party Weekend In Vermont April 4-6, only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

EMPLOYMENT

EDUCATION MAJORS!!
DON'T JUST WORK THIS SUMMER. COME GROW PROFESSIONALLY AT AMERICA'S PREMIER BROTHER/SISTER CAMPS WINADU FOR BOYS DANBEE FOR GIRLS IN WESTERN MASS
SALARY / ROOM / BOARD AND TRAVEL INCLUDED!!
COME VISIT WITH OUR REPRESENTATIVE THURSDAY, APRIL 3RD 802 CAMPUS CENTER 10AM - 4PM (WALK-INS WELCOME!)
FOR MORE INFO CALL 800-494-6238

Buy Collegian Classifieds - because they work!

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. First names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad listed in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or typo.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, APRIL 1

Colloquium — Aorewa McLeod, a Five College Women's Studies Research Associate from the University of Auckland, New Zealand, will give a colloquium entitled, "Silenced Narratives: Why New Zealand Women Stopped Writing," at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke college. Informal reception to follow talk. Free and open to the public.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2

Exhibit — The Bottom Drawer, a sculpture and painting exhibit by Harriet Diamond and Linda Batchelor, will open today and run through April 24 in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space in the Student Union. An opening reception will be held April 4 at 5 p.m. and an open panel discussion will be held April at 10:45 a.m.

Lecture — The Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies (PAWSS) will sponsor a talk by Dr. Cynthia McClintock on "Peace and Rebellion in Latin America After the Cold War," at 8 p.m. in the Hasbrouck 20. The event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series will feature Lorna McLean, a visiting Canadian historian, on "Gender, Community and Crime in the 19th Century Ontario," from 12:15-1:30 in the Campus Center, room 162-175. Coffee and tea will be available. Feel free to bring a lunch. Free and open to everyone.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold its weekly meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Reading — The Five College Women's Studies Research Center will host a reading and book signing for editor Arlene Avakian and local contributors Martha Ayres, Sally Bellerose, Jyl Lynn Felman, Jennifer Iré and Cheryl Savageau, of the book Through the Kitchen Window: Women Explore the Intimate Meanings of Food and Cooking at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College. Informal reception to follow talk. Free and open to the public.

Seminar — The UMass Amherst Neuroscience and Behavior Program Seminars will feature James E. Crandall, Developmental Neurobiology, from the E.K. Shriver Center, on "Early Development of the Cerebral Cortex," hosted by Thomas Zoeller, at 4 p.m. in Room 319 of Morrill Science Center II.

NOTICES

Financial aid — Applications for summer financial aid are now available at Financial Aid Services. You must be a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass; taking summer classes through Continuing Education; going on approved summer international exchange program through IPO; or working on a graduate dissertation. Deadline is April 18. Late applications will not be accepted.–

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Athletics — UMass Women's Crew is looking for women 5'5" or less to cox. No experience necessary. To join their winning team, call 545-9484.

Writing submissions — mOthertongue, a multinational journal published by the comparative literature department is seeking submissions for its spring 1997 publication. Now accepting poetry, prose, lyrics and one–acts in languages other than English as well as artwork and photos from abroad. Please include an English translation as well to department of comparative lit., 303 South College, UMass.

Band wanted — Amnesty International is looking for a Jazz Band to play for its upcoming fundraiser this spring. If interested, call the Amnesty office at 549–1925 or 546–3105 as soon as possible.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

PSAs and public service announcements printed daily: To submit an PSI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Member O.C.M.P.
"we accept all major credit cards"

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN 2 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
$1 drinks Rum & Coke & always $1 Bud light draft

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MARCH 31, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		World of National Geographic		American Experience		Fighter Pilot's Story (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 2)			First Flights
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Merch Magic		College Basketball: NCAA Tournament Championship -- Teams to Be Announced				News
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	Cosby (R)	Raymond	College Basketball: NCAA Tournament Championship -- Teams to Be Announced				News
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Relativity (In Stereo)		"The Tenth Commandments" (1956) Charlton Heston		News		Nightline
WLVI	56	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		7th Heaven (R) (In Stereo)		Buffy the Vampire Slayer		News		Jenny Jones (R) (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Med Abo. You		"The Piano" (1993, Drama) Holly Hunter, Harvey Keitel. (In Stereo)		News		Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Sparks (R)	Homeboys	LAPD	Hi Fairro	Real TV
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Med Abo. You		"The Piano" (1993, Drama) Holly Hunter, Harvey Keitel. (In Stereo)		News		Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Melrose Place (In Stereo)		Married...With	Pauly	News		Coach	Babylon 5
WWLP	22	News	ABC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Med Abo. You		"The Piano" (1993, Drama) Holly Hunter, Harvey Keitel. (In Stereo)		News		Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		World of National Geographic		New Explorers (In Stereo)		Fighter Pilot's Story (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 2)			Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Hollyoka Hoag	Relativity (In Stereo)		"The Tenth Commandments" (1956) Charlton Heston		News		Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	In the House	Malcolm-Eddie	Sparks (R)	Homeboys	News	Martin	Mad Abo. You	Real TV
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	"Narrow Margin" (1990, Suspense) Gene Hackman.				"Wheels of Terror" (1990, Suspense) Joanna Cassidy.
A&E	23	Quincy		Law & Order "Point of View"		Biography: Nancy Reagan		Point "The Third-Floor Flat"		Miss Marple (Part 3 of 3)		Law & Order
CNN	24	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	25	Thick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	TV Nation	"Nanny Ardina" (1987, Comedy) Nicolas Cage.				On Delivery	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	69	Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Strange Planes "Giants" (R)		Wild Discovery: Salmon		Life on Mars (R)		CIA-Secret Warriors		Wild Discovery: Salmon
ESPN	26	Up Close	Sportscenter		Reporters	Sportscenter		Figure Skating World Championships -- Men's & Ladies' Finals.				Baseball	Sportscenter
LIFE	27	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"In the Shadow of Evil" (1995, Suspense) Joan Wilkens.				Living	Mysteries
MTV	31	(5:30) Music Videos (In Stereo)		Singled Out	Idiot Savanta	Indie Outing	Sports	Music Videos (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Daria	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	53	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Taxi	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	59	Odyssey	Sci-Fi Trader	Quantum Leap		Sasquest! DSV	To Be or Not to Be	(In Stereo)		Mesters	New Edge (R)	Quantum Leap
TLC	67	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Extreme Machines-Deep		Passion of the Saints (R)		Man Immortal		Extreme Machines-Deep
TNT	65	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		WCW Nitro (Live)				Adventures of Robin Hood		WCW Nitro (R)
USA	70	Renegade "Offshore Thunder"		Highlander: The Series		World Wrestling Federation Monday Night Raw				La Femme Nikita "Friend"		Wings	Wings
HBO	43	(5:30) "Down Periscope" (1996)		Talked to Death (In Stereo)		"The Bridges of Madison County" (1995, Drama) Clint Eastwood.				"Home Alone 3" (1997)		Ila Cerrera.
MAX	44	"Three Wishes" (1995, Drama) Patrick Swayze.				"It Takes Two" (1995, Comedy) Kirstie Alley.				"Heat" (1995, Drama) Al Pacino. (In Stereo)
SHOW	46	"Wild Orchid 2: Two Years Later" (1992) Joe Manning.				"Bio-Dome" (1996) Pauly Shore.				"Death Becomes Her" (1992, Comedy) Meryl Streep.		PG-13	"Punchline"

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
Candy or flowers are the gifts of choice to heal a romantic rift this week. Talk is cheap at the moment, at least as far as your sweetie is concerned. It's still important to keep the lines of communication open, though, so don't be afraid to try again.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
Your complete attention helps you pick up on a detail others will miss. Tactfully pointing this out could save a large project from certain disaster. A subtle reminder keeps a family member from committing a major faux pas.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
An argument between friends has everyone begging you to take their side. Don't be tempted, even though things may seem cut and dried to you. You'll create even more alienation and prolong the healing process.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
A summer heat wave may have you feeling as though you can't cope. A brief rest and a cool drink may be all it takes to recharge your batteries. Don't hesitate to take a long weekend, though, if things are really bad.

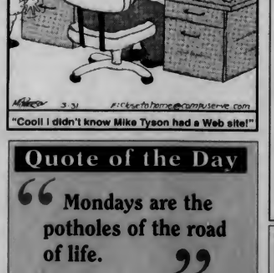
LEO
July 23-August 23
A road trip will be more fun if someone else offers to do the driving. A careful, pre-trip check may reveal a mechanical problem that's small—for the moment. A financial situation begins to improve.

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
Acquiring a new skill proves to be a worthwhile enterprise this week. Your adaptability may soon be put to the test. A good week to find ways to economize—your ingenuity is flowing freely.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
An expansion, involving either your professional or your personal life, seems unnerving. But once you have all the information, you'll be able to make a good decision. Don't allow a small risk to dissuade you.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
A stubborn person may give you fits, especially if you work with them. A good time for cinching up if you've let some work slide for a while. Joint finances may be a source of tension—discuss them freely with all concerned parties.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
Although it's easy to squander money this week, try to avoid the temptation. A major expenditure may be in the offing. A group that shares your interests may be a good place to look for a romantic partner, if you're in the market.



CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
High energy levels and enthusiasm carry you through a particularly busy time. Compromise is in order when you knock heads with a strong-willed individual—the results could be extremely productive.

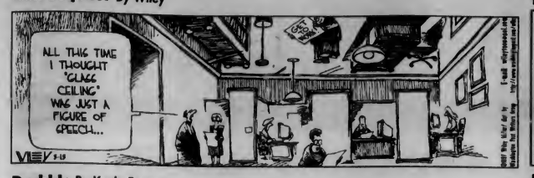
AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
A sweetheart may be in need of extra TLC. Find out what's bothering them when you have the opportunity. You'll be much better equipped to help that way. Little things, like cooking a meal for them, will help their morale a lot.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
A gathering of friends provides fertile ground for a discussion. Brainstorm as many ideas as possible and then let the group's expertise sort out the genuine possibilities.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

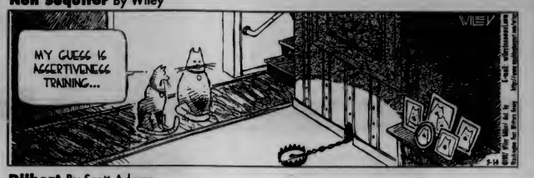
Close to Home By John McPherson

"Cool! I didn't know Mike Tyson had a Web site!"



Quote of the Day

"Mondays are the potholes of the road of life."
–overheard



Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Brune By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

University® By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Mesquite Chick Wich Sausage Grinder Pizza	Chicken Fajita Beef Stroganoff Tofu Fajita Chicken Hoagie

Worcester

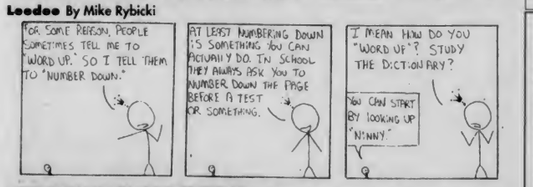
LUNCH	DINNER
Chick Cut Wich Cod Szechuan Tofu 'n' Broccoli	Chicken Fajita Cod Tofu Fajita Stuffed Shells

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Hamburger Chick Cutlet Sandwich Sausage Grinder	Chicken Fajita Beef Stroganoff

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Pizza Chick Cut Wich Ziti Mac, Lentil and Matoes	Beef Stroganoff Chicken Fajita Tofu Fajita Stuffed Shells



ACROSS
1. Classification
6. Jeff's tall friend
10. Source of roughage
14. Nearer fruition
15. On the main
16. Attraction
17. Miss Quested of A Passage to India
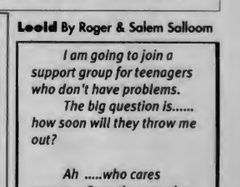
18. Harskerings
20. Tucking-in locale
21. Ready for the Preakness
23. Fort Knox unit
24. Malt beverage
25. Get a watch going
27. Queen of sleuthdom
30. Sidewalk de-icer
31. Difficult situation
34. Frijoles
35. From Cardiff
36. Turkish title
37. Fit of pique
38. ___ Rosa, California
39. Frank
40. German article
41. Inclines
42. Beer
43. Opposite of SSW
44. Certain wines
45. Petite
46. Slight decreases
47. Short fans
48. Feature
51. Author George
52. CSA member
55. Least hypocritical
58. Sleepily wed
60. Commesi dish
61. Top of the head
62. Prize-giver Alfred ___
63. Big Dipper component
64. State of disorder
65. Saccharine



DOWN
1. Snatch
2. Disneyland offering
3. Emulated
4. PA's neighbor
5. Tools for some cruciverbalists
6. Metropolitan chief
7. Spent
8. Traditional English beverage
9. ___ and feather
10. Concealment spot for hunters
11. Winston Churchill's plan
12. Mythological ship
13. Treetop home
18. Beethoven's choral symphony
22. Shout that's a stopper
24. Twisted
25. Disney and Kelly
26. She asked Sam to play it again
27. He played a Clampett
28. Leader of the Bolsheviks
29. Singer Frankie
30. Transmitts
31. "Victory over ___" (Ellen Gilchrist)
32. KAOS operative
33. Barry Manilow hit
35. Magic rods
36. Ooze
39. Singer Redding
41. Overused
42. Makes unhappy
45. Racket
46. Onion chopper
47. Capshaw and Smith
48. Cook's measures (abbr.)
49. Urban chaos
50. The King of Siam's governess
51. Speedy Atlantic crossers
52. Paignoir
53. Rapier
54. Bible or conveyor
56. Engine speed (abbr.)
57. ___ Claire, Wisconsin
59. Deuce description

W	U	U	■	U	I	N	A	■	F	I	A	M
E	T	H	E	L	■	D	O	■	E	V	E	N
S	T	O	R	Y	■	O	A	T	A	■	E	M	A
■	■	■	H	A	L	■	A	M	E	S	■	■	■
P	L	E	A	S	E	■	E	N	O	R	M	O	U	S
I	T	C	H	■	O	B	E	■	E	S	T	■	■
P	A	L	E	■	N	U	M	B	E	R	■	■	■
■	A	N	D	■	T	I	E	■	S	O	R	E
N	E	■	A	N	I	E	R	■	N	O	U	N
A	R	R	I	V	E	■	E	N	D	■	U	N	I	T
P	A	R	T	I	M	E	■	S	E	E	S	E	N
■	■	■	S	E	E	■	D	E	■	■	■	■	■
S	M	I	T	H	■	S	O	A	K	■	N	O	D	E	D
P	E	A	S	E	■	T	I	S	I	E	■	V	I	E	W	E	D

Loodoo By Mike Rybicki

Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS WEEKEND

Monday, March 31, 1997

▼ SPORTS THIS WEEK

MEN'S Lacrosse	WOMEN'S Lacrosse	MEN'S Baseball	Women's Softball
April 5 @ Duke	April 1 @ Brown	April 2 @ Uconn	April 2 @ Hartford
	April 4 @ UNH	April 3 @ Hartford
	April 6 @ St Joe's	April 5 and 6 @ Dayton	April 5 @ Rutger's

Men's lacrosse hangs tight to top Army 12–10

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

WEST POINT, N.Y. — Former Massachusetts basketball star Julius Erving has been popping up recently in commercials for his new Converse sneaker with the saying, "Take the soul to the hole." The UMass lacrosse team has recently adopted the alumnus' saying as it's team motto.

Saturday at No. 13 Army, the Minutemen definitely lived up to their motto, taking the soul — and everything else they had — to the hole against the Cadets and coming away with a 12–10 win.

Massachusetts	12
Army	10

"We have a little statement that we bring the soul to the hole," senior Harold Drumm said with a smile. "And we brought the soul to the hole today."

The Minutemen did so with four different multiple–goal scorers and four other single–goal scorers. According to UMass goaltender John Kasselakis, the offensive output was the best of the season.

"Offensively we did a great job," the junior goalie said. "We did great on ground balls, which is always one of Army's strong points. But offensively, that was one of our best outputs."

UMass coach Greg Cannella agreed.

"It was a tremendous victory for us, especially coming off the loss last week and not playing well on Tuesday and coming down here too," Cannella said. "It's not an easy place to play. I was really proud of the guys today."

UMass got on the board first, as Brendan Glass fired a shot from the left side over Army goalie Lou Kousouris' right shoulder to open the scoring 45 seconds into the game.

Jay Negus followed just under a minute later with a shot through the middle that gave UMass a two–goal advantage.

Negus' goal woke up the Army attack, and the Cadets closed the gap to one goal with 11:18 remaining in the first quarter. Ross Yastremsky beat Kasselakis when he fired a bullet from 15 yards out.

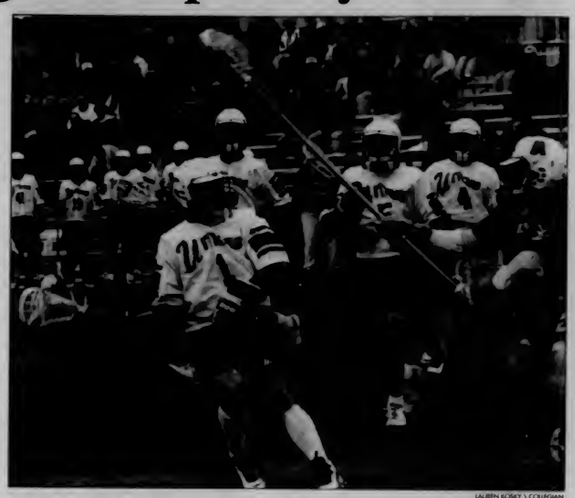
UMass immediately went back on the offensive. With 8:42 remaining in the period, Ken Sussi fed Jason Heinze with a pass from Kousouris' left side. Heize collected the ball and beat Kousouris high on the goalie's right.

Literally seconds later, P.G. Massey received the ball from the faceoff, sprinted up the middle and fired a shot before Kousouris had even recovered from Heinze's shot.

The Cadets called on Yastermesky once again to close the gap. Yastremsky responded with a five–yard shot fed by Greg Tily which beat Kasselakis on the left.

With the score 4–2 in favor of the Minutemen, and five minutes remaining in the quarter, neither team's goalie could rest assured. With 4:20 left, Chris Martens put up his first of the day to make it a 5–2 game. Yastremsky mustered one more tally for Army in the first period when he found the UMass net on an extra–man opportunity.

With UMass focusing its defensive attention on Yastremsky, Army coach Jack Emmer went to his other offensive players for production. A minute and a half into the second quarter, Jordan Gros sent home a tally for the Cadets. Twenty seconds later, Gros assisted Ryan McCormack for another Cadet goal.



Undaunted, UMass turned to its hottest goal–scorer, Chris Grande. Grande has scored at least two goals in each of the Minutemen's games so far and he continued his streak on Saturday. With 11:51 remaining before the half, Grande five–holed a shot to the back of the Army net. Six minutes later, Grande's streak remained intact when he sent his second goal of the game past the Cadet keeper.

UMass' Mike DelPercio capped the first half scoring with a direct shot from 18 yards out which ripped through a hole in the Army net.

Massey tallied his second goal of the day to start off the second half, giving the Minutemen a 9–5 advantage.

"He played outstanding," Cannella said. "P.G's day in and day out one of the best players we have. He comes up with big plays all the time. We expect a lot out of him and he's been outstanding."

After two Cadet goals cut the UMass lead to two goals, 9– 7, a five–goal output in the fourth propelled the Minutemen to victory. Martens tallied his second goal of the day while Jim Kennedy's first goal of the day gave UMass a 12–8 lead. Army managed two more goals in the final frame, yet failed to pull off the upset.

LAUREN KOSKY \ COLLEGIAN

UMass' Chris Grande, who has averaged at least two goals per game, continued his streak with two tallies in Saturday's win over Army.

Baseball takes two of three against Va.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

With David Giglio on base, senior shortstop Brad Gorrie (pictured) singled before Adam Correa hit the pair home in the top of the ninth for a come from behind win yesterday.

By Jonathan M. Place
& Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

Before the Atlantic 10 baseball season began, all the coaches put in their bids for the number one teams in the West and East division. Virginia Tech (14–14, 4–2 A–10) was picked to top off the West, while Massachusetts (9–4, 2– 1 A–10) was the favorite in the East.

Virginia Tech	11
Massachusets	2

So with these two teams picked to dominate the conference, and the fact that UMass took the A–10 Championship trophy right out of the hands of the Hokies last year in the final series, this weekend's three–game series was undoubtedly

Massachusetts	3
Virginia Tech	2

going to be a clash of the titans.

Massachusetts 4, Virginia Tech 2

Sunday's Easter matinee turned out to be the best game of the weekend. Sophomore third baseman Adam Correa hit a three–run–homer in the bottom of the ninth, leading the Minutemen to a 4–2 come from behind win over the Hokies. UMass trailed 2–1 from the second inning on, but David Giglio and Brad Gorrie banged out consecutive singles, and Correa, a transfer from baseball powerhouse Rollins College, followed with his first home run in a Massachusetts uniform.

Junior righthander Scott Barnsby earned the complete game win to improve to 2–0 on the year. Barnsby let up six hits and notched four strikeouts, but Virginia Tech could only muster three hits after scoring two runs in the second inning. Catcher Brian Samela, sophomore centerfielder Doug

Massachusets	7
Virginia Tech	1

Clark and senior shortstop Brad Gorrie each banged out two hits for the Minutemen, who will play at Connecticut on Tuesday.

Blacksburg, Va. hosted two games on Saturday, and the battle was just as expected. The Hokies took the first game 11–2, stunning UMass' ace Jason Bennett and giving him his first loss of the season. In the second game, the two teams switched sides and it was Va. Tech this time that got the spanking, 7–1.

Virginia Tech 11, Massachusetts 2

This year, senior pitcher Jason

Turn to BASEBALL, page 7

UMass bests the Bonnies; softball wins

By Corey Peter Goodman
Collegian Staff

For the Massachusetts softball team, Easter Sunday seemed to inspire the resurrection of their slumping, yet powerful offensive attack.

Led by a barrage of hits, walks and stolen bases, via 11 trips to the plate, UMass took control with six early first inning runs in Game No. 1, leaving their opponent St. Bonaventure and pitcher Amy Ingham confused and bewildered, forced to prepare for Game No. 2 a bit early.

Massachusetts	9
St. Bonaventure	1

Sam Cardenas began the onslaught for UMass with the first of her two doubles, plating teammates Kim Gutridge and Stephanie Mareina. Cardenas later came home on a Chris Martens single. Martens scored on a single off the bat of Mandy Gulas, and Becky George doubled her in. Following a single by Katie Kenderski, a St. Bonaventure error granted UMass its final run of the opening frame.

When the smoke cleared, and a half dozen Minutewomen had rounded the bases, head coach Elaine Sortino entrusted the lead and the ball into the comforting hands of second– year pitcher Liz Wagner.

Massachusetts	5
St. Bonaventure	0

Last year's Atlantic 10 Pitcher of the Year did not disappoint. Wagner refused to let the Bonnies get back in the game, allowing only one run and five hits, while striking out seven before the mercy rule let the Bonnies off the hook, ending the game prematurely in the sixth inning.

"The thing that she [Wagner] did that I liked, was when she had bases loaded, and she wasn't getting any pitches, and she wasn't hitting her pitches, she was still OK," Sortino said. "Pitchers can go ballistic on you like that."

Massachusetts 6, St. Bonaventure 1

After a less than exciting 15–minute interlude watching the grounds crew line the field, both teams were anxious to take the field once again.

St. Bonaventure knew what they were getting into when they saw last week's A–10 Pitcher of the Week, Danielle Henderson, take the mound.

But the Minutewomen had to have been surprised by the early innings performance of St. Bonaventure pitcher Alyson Dennis. Dennis, audible for miles because of her Monica Seles–like grunts, stifled the Minutewomen's red hot bats over the first three innings, yielding only two hits, and one unearned run.

Likewise, Henderson was having little or no trouble dealing with the Bonnies lineup. Over the same three–inning span, not one Bonnie had even reached first base against Henderson, let alone gotten a hit off her. She struck out six Bonnies, five in a row, while throwing a limited amount of pitches.

Massachusetts	6
St. Bonaventure	1

With two outs in the St. Bonaventure half of the fourth inning, the game briefly became a game again. Following two consecutive singles, a throwing error by Octavia Brown, and an edge–of–your–seat, collision at the plate jarring the ball from the mitt of Kelly Buckley, the scattered St. Bonaventure faithful at Totman Field appeared from the stands to celebrate their team's first genuine effort of the day.

Unfortunately for the Bonnies, their jubilation would only last until the bottom of the inning. Nicole Faessler, with Cardenas on second, took a Dennis offering long over the left field fence to put the Minutewomen ahead for good.

Henderson closed the door on St. Bonaventure the rest of the way, pitching perhaps her best game of the season. Over seven innings, Henderson gave up no

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 7

Women's lacrosse stumbles early, falls to Temple

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Everybody goes through an identity crisis at one time or another, and it can happen at any time in your life. Whether you are a toddler, teen or an old–timer, it happens. Sometimes it might happen at a good time, and sometimes, at the worse times possible.

For the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team (1–3), that time of an identity crisis is now, and they face a major one. After a 25–5 loss to No. 7 Temple this weekend in Philadelphia, the Minutewomen have now dropped their last two games by a score of 45–10. That combined score goes back to the 20–5 loss to No. 10 Yale in Thursday's home opener, and now UMass has to try and start the season afresh.

The identity and focus the team had its first two games has now been entirely lost, and for UMass coach Francesca McClellan, the team needs to just go out and play the game.

"It is not about skills or ability right now, but it is all about pressure, and feeling pressured," McClellan said. "It is not about who we're playing right now, its all about us.

"There are some individuals on our team that are trying too much, and are doing everyone else's job instead of worrying about their own."

Temple	25
Massachusetts	5

It all depends how you look at it, but if it was going to happen at any time, the early part of the season would be the best for the optimistic side of the debate. For the pessimistic side, a situation that looked tailor–made for UMass success at the start of the year has now gone awfully wrong. But whatever side of the debate, something has to be done very, very soon to get back to winning ways.

"It's been a familiar pattern over the past few seasons," McClellan said. "We start out the game fast, but then we slip into old habits and routines. We need to concentrate on getting back to basics this week, and get back to fundamentals."

The season does not get any easier for the Minutewomen this week, and they will face No. 15 Brown tomorrow at 4:00 pm in Providence. This game will mark the fourth out of five games this season that UMass has faced a nationally ranked opponent.

Minutewomen Notes: After a slow start, sophomore Laura Koruzt (5g–3a–8pts) has tallied four goals and two assists in the past two games to become the team's leading scorer... For the second straight game, senior Stephanie Walsh (5–1–6) was unable to crack the 100–point barrier in career points scored. She would be the tenth athlete in UMass history to accomplish that feat.

The Massachusetts

DAYLEE KOLEEJUM

UMass once again goes to shootout

Senior tri-captain Buddy Hoffman and the Massachusetts Lacross team travel to chestnut Hill to take on the Eagles of Boston College, (See Sports page 10)

Hey... you're not Verne!

Ernest is back in a major way, but it's not Verne he's chasing after. Get the skinny (see Arts & Living , page 2).

WORLD

2Pac, Notorious B.I.G. found louging in Cuba

CUBA (AP) — Two prominent rap artists presumed dead were found alive and kicking in Cuba, the country where would–be recording maven Fidel Castro wooed them with plentiful riches.

Tupac Shakur and the Notorious B.I.G. are among a growing handful of music artists who have faked their demise at the lure of Castro's generous offers. The most famous of the bunch is the King himself, Elvis Presley.

"Fiddy — I mean, Fidel — promised me a hunk–a hunk–a burnin' cash and all the peanut butter and whatever sandwiches I could eat," said the nearly 700–lb. Presley as he motioned to a landfill–sized heap of ready–made sandwiches.

Shakur said he also could not resist the luxury of the money or the 500–acre villa given to him by the man he affectionately refers to as "O.D.C." — "Old Dirty Castro."

"You think I was about making Poetic Justice II?" Shakur laughed. He then rolled up his shirt to reveal that the "Thug Life" on his chest and torso had been altered to read "Commie Life."

Castro, a failed mambo king, said he first devised his conspiracy to rob the United States of its musical genius when on an acid–riddled trip to the Fillmore West in disguise, he "got really wigged by that Jim Morrison dude."

NATION

Career center relocates

AMHERST (AP) — Sources at the University of Massachusetts revealed yesterday that the Mather Career Center will be moving to an even more remote location — UMass–Worcester.

"We feel that in order to facilitate the job search process for students, we should relocate to, well, frankly, a school that will get you jobs," said Heidy Uperass, director of the Career Center.

Uperass added that internships and co–op programs will most likely be limited to those in the medical fields, however, branch offices will remain open on the Amherst campus solely for School of Management and engineering majors.

"Those are the only majors we cater to anyway," Uperass said.

Students here at Amherst are dissapointed with the move.

"We have a Career Center? Where the hell is it?" said Sally Hairspray, a Delta Delta Delta sorority member.

Uperass said a special Peter Pan bus route will be designed to leave from the Haigis Mall once a month to travel to the new Career Center in Worcester. The site of the present Mather Career Center will be renovated into a mock fast food restaurant that will serve as a training facility for University seniors, soon to enter the job market. The course offered at the facility will fulfill a component of the general education requirements.

"We feel that the exposure to the various meat products used in the fast food industry will improve our students' understanding of the wide range of possibilities in meat manipulation," Uperass said.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	day	anyday
☀	s	✌
HIGH: 40	HIGH: 75	HIGH: very
LOW: 32	LOW: 75	LOW:bummer

INDEX

Fun with Diversity ..page 5
Bad News .....page 8
Jimmy Page .....page 9
Coach Cal's Comments...p.6
Toilet Cam .....page 1
Satan's Diary.....page 2
Where's Waldo .....page 3
More UFO Stuff.....page 10

UMass administration takes over Student Union Building

Special to the Collegian
The Center for Investigative Reporting

What began as an normal administrative meeting inside Whitmore turned into a full–fledged occupation of the Student Union yesterday by the University of Massachusetts administration.

According to witnesses, a meeting held inside the Chancellor's Office in the Whitmore Administration Building was being conducted "as usual" when Chancellor Scott suddenly "snapped," jumped on to the executive table and proclaimed that the UMass administration has gone "haywire" and that it is time for the administration to leave its "containers" and take back what by divine right the group believes to be theirs — the Student Union.

What witnesses later confirmed was that the meeting had been mistakingly catered by the Hampshire Dining Commons. The food re–triggered Scott's personal battle with mad–cow disease, which occurred exactly one year ago today.

Scott and his executive administrative team then proceeded to rally other administrators, whereupon they marched carrying banners reading, "UMass for the privileged, not the public," chanting, "Hey, Hey,–Ho, Ho, Race Relations has got to go," and "The suits united will never be divided," towards the Student Union Building.

Members of the group apparently scheduled the administrative occupation to follow the Hale–Bopp comet which was due to pass over UMass on Friday night. A spaceship following the comet was scheduled to take the administrators back from where they came — the Ivy League.

Apparently, they missed the spaceship due to a meeting with students, and this, combined with the Chancellor's reoccurring mad–cow syndrome, inspired the group to occupy the Student Union.

Scott issued a statement saying that the group will halt the functioning of the Student Union until students understand that the administration is the most important part of the University. They will not leave the building until their set of 2000 demands are met.

Their extensive list of demands include: more administrative access over student functions; dissolving the Student Government Association, the Collegian, all ALANA RSOs and GEO; as well as using the empty space left over to build luxury apartments for themselves. They also plan to install "Administrative Studies 101," for they claim their community has been underrepresented and ignored in the campus curriculum.

According to Interim Provost Patricia Crosson, one of the administrative protestors, "It's simply oppressive for us to drive so far to work. Having the Student Union renovated into luxury apartments would ensure that we have more time work and continue to run this University the way that we have been. We've been suffering way too long."

Upon issue of the list of demands a student task force was quickly set up by various student leaders. They agreed that it was imperative for them to isolate the matter and diffuse the situation before it got out of control. PVTA buses are standing by outside of the Student Union should the group get out of hand and need to be transported to Worcester Medical Center.

Student negotiators Njeri Thelwell and Malwin Davila were the first student negotiators inside. They asked the administrators if they would be willing to meet in a neutral location such as the parking garage. Administrators Marcellette Williams and Royster Hedgepath were at first in agreement with the suggestion because, according to the student negotiators, "they wanted to get some air. Imagine if you had to take part in an occupation and weren't able to loosen your neck tie or take off your heels."

Apparently suspicious of the neutral location move, the administrators denied the request. Negotiations will now be conducted inside Cannibis Reform Coalition Offices, for reasons unspecified.

Initially, University police were confused over what to do. In a surprise move, Chief of Police John Luippold decided to join the group holed up inside, at which point Pierre Elysee, still recovering from the University Store incident, arranged a group of his personally trained student security cadre to monitor the movements of the administrators.

Students were asked to leave their offices, at which point several laughed in the administrators' faces.

Tonight the administrators dined inside Earthfoods after truckloads of gourmet food were sent in. The Chancellor's personal caterer was also present to insure that the mad–cow risk would be down to its minimum.

The administration has set up camp and plans to stay inside the building at least overnight. Chancellor Scott has supposedly bedded down with the Office of ALANA Affairs, reportedly reinforcing that fact that he "still believes in a diverse campus." While Marcellette Williams will be sleeping in Campus Activities — apparently she never knew that she was in charge of the office and is so enamored with it that she hasn't yet left their room. Paul Page has set up residence in the GEO office, re–naming it "U.O.T.E.O. (Union of the Elite and Overfed)." And, according to sources, Provost Crosson has organized a union party (Student Union, that is) in the SGA office. While dancing to the tunes of Barry Manilow, Crosson has already declared the occupation a victory. A sign has been taped to the doors of the SGA saying, "for Southie Manilow fans only!"

The administrators are seeking food and bedding, specifically requested from Bread and Circus and Bloomingdales, respectively. Donations may be brought through the East door of the Student Union Building or may be airlifted by helicopter to the recently installed landing– pad on the roof. Tom Robinson is requesting Godiva Chocolates.

Captain's Chair

KENNETH W.P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

This toilet in the Campus Center provides a pleasant reading environment.

Bulger explains conspicuous absence

By Bob Dunn
Collegian Staff

Amid growing accusations that William Bulger, President of the University of Massachusetts, is a "do–nothing" President, an explanation for his conspicuous absence since taking office has surfaced.

He was never informed he got the job.

"It sounds incredible, I know, but it's the honest to God truth," said UMass Chancellor David K. Scott. "Mr. Bulger never received word of his appointment, which explains why he's never around, I suppose."

"I can't believe that I was even considered for the post, never mind actually getting it," Bulger said. "I mean, I'm really not qualified and I certainly don't have the foggiest notion about running a state university, but now that I know I'm President, I guess I'll take the job. I'll bet it's a really great way to get lots of neat stuff from contractors and lobbyists."

When asked whether or not he thought he was up to the task of running the five UMass campuses, Bulger replied, "I'm in charge of five whole campuses? Cool."

According to Scott, news of Bulger's appointment failed to reach him due to a convoluted set of circumstances that began almost immediately after the decision to appoint Bulger was made.

"Well, first we were going to mail the notice out, but no one had a stamp. Then we were going to call him, but I couldn't find his number and then I was going on vacation and, well, I just assumed word would reach him somehow. Whoops," Scott said.

"Thank goodness he decided to take the job after all, otherwise I might actually have to do something around here. Who knows what kind of trouble could result if I made one of those... those... what do they call those things? Oh, decisions! Yeah, one of those. Whoo! Then there'd be trouble."

Bulger, whose comments were sporadic at best due to the fact that most of his attention was occupied by a small piece of string, could only offer a brief overview of his plans for the UMass system.

"Well, first I guess someone ought to let me know exactly where my office is," he said. 'After that, I've probably got a lot of mail to go through. I probably won't get to it all, seeing as it will almost certainly cut into my nap time. Then I guess I should form a task force or a committee or something, isn't that what presidents do?"

When asked about specific plans for the Amherst campus, Bulger's only response was, "Amherst? Where's that?" before nodding off and going to sleep for several hours.

Upon awakening, and drinking an entire six–pack of Ensure, Bulger was slightly more lucid and consented to a brief interview.

Bob Dunn: I want to thank you for giving us this interview, Mr. Bulger.

William Bulger: No problem, always glad to help. Hey, would you like a piece of string?

BD: No, thanks.

WB: Come on, it's fun.

BD: Um, no I'm all set. Mr. Bulger...

WB: Please, call me Betty.

BD: Why?

WB: (long pause) No reason.

BD: Well, then about your Presidency...

WB: Hey, you ever watch those Die Hard movies back–to back–to back?

BD: No, not really.

WB: Man, that's fun. You ought to try it sometime. But, I'm sorry. I keep interrupting you, Tom.

BD: Um, it's Bob, sir.

WB: Sorry, Frank. Yes sir, I'm going to be one heck of a President.

BD: Now, what makes you say that?

WB: Because, Larry, I can do this... (At this point Mr. Bulger grabbed his eyelids, and folded them up over his eyeballs. He then preceded to run around the room shouting, "Watch me! Watch me!" and performing somersaults. After about two minutes of this behavior, he returned to his chair)

BD: How does that qualify you to be President of a major state university system?

WB: Well, it's more than that Scott guy can do.

BD: I suppose it is. I'm afraid that's all the time we've got, I'm going to have to cut this short.

WB: Oh, no! Please don't go! Look, I've got Jiffy–Pop and six Joan Crawford movies! Stay! It'll be fun! We'll build a fort! We'll make crank calls to the other University Presidents!

BD: Well, as much fun as that sounds like, I'm afraid that I have to be going.

WB: Sammy, do me one small favor before you go?

BD: What's that, Mr. Bulger?

WB: Could you set the clock on my VCR? I keep thinking it's noon all day long.

Riot erupts in SGA meeting over Tirrell's stolen sweater

By Orange Groves & Wood Stock
Collegian Staff

Chaos and utter bedlam broke out last night at the Student Government Association (SGA) meeting, as Speaker of the Senate and Student Trustee–elect Brian Tirrell ceased all motions, and even roll call, to announce the kidnapping of his beloved blue sweater.

"First it was the ballots, and now it's my sweater," Tirrell said, with a wavering voice, regarding the ballots stolen in last week's SGA elections.

Tirrell, who arrived at the special meeting of the Senate shirtless and red–eyed, produced a ransom delivered to him yesterday morning in the SGA offices.

"This little piece of blue lint signifies all that I have left of my precious garment," Tirrell said. "Attached is a ransom note, stating 'Your sweater is safe, we want a re–count. Make it quick, or we start pulling threads'."

Tirrell then proceeded to lament his loss by displaying family snapshots of him in the sweater, from losing his first tooth to his high school graduation. A special framed photo featured the sweater in Tuesday's SGA election debate.

"All of you senators know that this is all I wear to SGA functions. How can I possibly continue to go on without it?" Tirrell said, the tears now streaming down his face.

His passion even led him to take his gold–plated gavel and light it on fire before the Senate.

Too overcome with emotion, Tirrell stumbled from the podium. Associate Speaker Peter Kilbourne then had to take over the meeting. However, Kilbourne's voice could not be heard above Tirrell's radio, which was blaring "The Sweater Song," by Weezer.

Tirrell eventually had to be restrained by President–elect Lia Wong, because he was screaming, á la Mel Gibson in Ransom, "Give me back my sweater!"

Senator Jen Casasanto (Southwest Area) announced that a website has been created to help find the missing sweater. It contains the sweater's vital statistics, such as the brand name, size, that it's a wool–polyester blend and a plea that it must be hand washed and hung to dry.

An alleged anti–sweater website has also been established by the Pro–Student Caucus (a.k.a. Republican Club), complete with pictures of people wiping their asses with blue sweaters.

Senator Paul Ferro took the podium next, stating that he had witnessed Tirrell "doing vodka shots in J.A. in that sweater."

UMass police are currently investigating the case of the stolen pull–over. According to Chief John Luippold, this crime is close to being solved.

"Well, forensics studies have been performed on the ransom note, and though I cannot reveal the names of the current suspects, it appears that pizza grease found on the note was traced to Antonio's of Southwest, and beer stains were that of Colt 45, presumably a 40 ounce bottle," Luippold said.

The chief also said though the kidnappers used cut–out newspaper letters to phrase the ransom note, they were not clever enough to do likewise when signing their names.

When asked about the riotous SGA meeting, an unnamed senator said, "Oh, it's always like this. We never get anything done."

UPC brings Big Hair and testosterone back to UMass

By Mike Jurka
Collegian Staff

University Productions and Concerts (UPC) announced that there will be a Spring Concert this year. According to Stacey Puck, a UPC representative, Spring Concert will be a throw back to the good ol' days of Big Hair metal bands.

"We are trying for something new this year. Instead of getting new bands with talent we dug out some great '80s bands that the kids are sure to love," Puck said.

Among the bands rumored to perform are Quiet Riot, Twisted Sister, RATT and Skid Row.

Puck denied the rumor that UPC didn't have the money or the brains to find any other bands.

"We had originally booked the Beastie Boys, R.E.M. and Dr. Dre, but we decided that acts like Skid Row and Twisted Sister had just as much to offer, if not more," Puck said.

"We tend to view UPC as a groundbreaking organization that brings the cutting edge to the campus. The Beastie Boys are old news. Big hair is back. Just look at my new 'do," exclaimed Puck as she got her hand stuck in her recently feathered hair.

In an exclusive Collegian interview, Sebastian Bach, lead singer of Skid Row, discussed playing at UMass.

"Dude I can't wait! I thought nobody digged us anymore but I must be wrong," he said. "We haven't played a show in front of more than 15 people in a long, long time except for that bar mitzvah for my nephew."

"We see Spring Concert as the beginning of our big comeback. I can feel it now. All these new acts like Beck just don't have what it takes. We have it all, including the hair. I am getting my hair ready right now and the concert's not for another month," Bach said in an interview from a trailer home in Berwick, ME where the band is currently working on a comeback album with Steve Albini.

Reaction on campus to the rumored line–up for Spring Break has been mixed.

"What about Tiffany and Debbie Gibson?" complained Michelle Hillwoman, Women's Issues editor at the Collegian. "This is just another example of sexism on this UMass campus. I am sick of it. First we built an erect library and now a testosterone–filled Spring Concert. The womyn united, will never be defeated."

The Everywomyn's Center has scheduled a protest concert to take place on the lawn of the PIKE dormitory featuring Vixen and Lita Ford.

"We praise UPC for attempting to revive the Big Hair Metal movement of the 1980's. But we must remember that you can have Big Hair without having a penis. This is why we are bringing Vixen and Lita Ford to campus," said Kathy McIreland, spokeswoman of the Everywomyn's Center.

"We are having the concert at PIKE to improve our relations with the Greek community at this campus. We want to show those frat boys that womyn can rock too!"

The frat brothers at PIKE were excited with the possibility of Lita Ford playing on their lawn.

"That babe has nice tits. I sure would like to..." moaned an unnamed member of the fraternity.

In response to the Everywomyn's Center Protest, Puck replied,

"This is ridiculous. We are getting the best Hair bands ever and those femi–Nazis are off whining. I bet Quiet Riot could put those bitches in there place. I'm sorry, but Lita Ford's hair is simply not big enough."

Joining the Everywomyn's Center protest is MassPIRG.

"As an organization we appreciate Skid Row and Quiet Riot — though we wish Nelson was playing — and we understand that Big Hair is Good Hair, but as environmental freaks we can not

Turn to HAIR BANDS, page 2

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's sponsor
Today's issue was brought to you by the letters: M, X, and P and by the numbers 13 and 5.

■hair bands

continued from page 1

condone the massive amount of hair spray that will be present at the concert. What about the ducks — they have feelings too!," said MassPIRG representative Stacy Shackford.

Rumors of the concert have created a buzz in the Southwest Residential Area.

"Yeah man! Rock 'n' roll!" said Shawn Sixpacke as he downed a can of Natty Light. "It's time that UPC brought good bands to campus. I am sick of all these freak bands that play around here. And those women who sing about empowerment. Skid Row all the way!"

Project Flatboy is scheduled to open the show representing the best of UMass' Big Hair.

Spring Concert is planned for May 11 on the lawn by the Campus Pond. Admission is free with a valid student I.D. For more information call UPC at 545-HAIR.

Amherst buys UMass: Good stuff cheap

By C.T.C.
Collegian Spice Boy

In an unprecedented deal, the state of Massachusetts sold the University of Massachusetts–Amherst to Amherst College yesterday for the estimated sum of $200 million.

The exchange marks the first time the title to a state school has been sold to a private institution. No plans for the future of the University have been officially announced, but it has been rumored that Amherst will allow UMass– Amherst to remain in operation — as a research facility for Amherst.

"We've been eyeing the property for years," an anonymous official at Amherst said. "It's a great opportunity for our students to take a safe, well–endowed descent down the lower rungs of the evolutionary ladder."

Preliminary plans may, according to early–draft documents, include: the Dining Commons Laboratories, in which testing using current DC food on students will be done; the Whitmore Center, in which experiments pushing the psychological boundaries of students in inane and incomprehensible situations will be completed; and the Southwest Zoological Area, the most ambitious of the proposed projects.

"Our studies indicate that more than 50 percent of Southwest is functionally illiterate, and the other half is either drunk or stoned all the time" the Amherst source said. "Thus the dorms' transformation into the world's only and largest human zoo probably won't even disturb the residents from their substance–induced, dull–witted slumber of an existence."

According to the official, the entire residential area will be locked down, replete with the students now habitating the buildings, and will be accessible to Amherst students and professors for observation.

The Southwest dwellers will be fed a daily diet of various calzones and 40s, but will not be able to exit their buildings for any reason other than medical emergencies, in which cases they will be escorted via ambulance in Vietnamese tiger cages.

"It is imperative that security not be breached, especially for fear of interbreeding between the Southwest species and our own Amherst brethren," the source said.

For UMass students other than the Southwest residents, courses are still available, but curriculum has been reduced to feature only five courses: English 112, English 113, Math 001, Math 002 and Sociology 001, a new offering from Amherst entitled "The Way It Is: Basic Principles in Obeying Your Socioeconomic Overlords."

"Amherst felt as though it was responsible for the continued education of these quasi–simians, such that they will one day make valuable manual laborers," the source said.

Neither Chancellor David K. Scott nor University president William Bulger was available for comment. Both are said to be enjoying the cases of Beefeater and Jameson's, respectively, sent to them by the new University owners.

According to the anonymous official, Amherst is confident the takeover will go off without a hitch.

"If it's true that most of the UMass population doesn't watch the news, read the Globe, or even go to classes, then our arrival should go virtually unnoticed," he said. "Hell, you think they're even reading anything other than sports and comics in their own paper?"

Revolutionary New Drug to solve Administrative forgetfulness woes.

Having trouble remembering certain minor things such as agronomists, students and the Justice department?

Always forget what the hell that ALANA stands for?

Ever wonder why whenever you hear the word Swedish, you're mentally transported to Cancun?

Does it irk you that all those "domed colored kids" look alike and ask for the same thing over and over again?

Try Memorex, a revolutionary space age new drug administered by the U.S. Department of Education. All natural, never tested on Chancellors. Available at a University near you.

Campus Pig Log

Unexplainable Incidents
Ides of March

A PVTA bus was found on the top of the W.E.B Du Bois library. Police are investigating the incident with help from the physics department.

A fire hydrant was stolen from somewhere on campus. The fire department is very upset and would like it returned.

A bologna sandwich was found at Earthfoods dining area. All deli meats were confiscated upon investigation.

Student–related Disturbances
March 666

A group of suspects were apprehended outside of the Franklin Munchie Store in Central Residence Area. Upon questioning they told that they just needed to get some "Mad Chow, Dude."

Phil McCrakin of Purgatory residence hall was arrested for urinating on a duck. The duck is fine. (We're not too sure about Phil).

Seething Rosie O'Donnell fans were caught on video surveillance at Worcester Munchie store stealing all of the ring dings and devil dogs, while holding the clerk at Twin– point, screaming obscenities because their yoga classes interfere with Rosie's new time slot.

The Collegian office was taken over by enthusiastic Lee– Dee fans protesting that the popular Mike Rybicki comic strip should be given 20 percent of the overall comics page. The group disbanded when told that Lee–Dee is just a stick figure and they should just chill.

Police were notified of a series of explosions occurring on the fifth floor of Field residence hall In Orchard Hill. Suspects were constructing atomic bombs using recipes from the Internet.

Unidentified Human Objects (UHOs)
April 33

Chancellor David K. Scott was mistakenly arrested for impersonating a University administrator when he was seen on campus.

Assault and car batteries
A long time ago in a galaxy far, far away...

John MacAffee of Toronto, Ontario was arrested in the horseshoe in southwest on charges of assault with a deadly, impractical kitchen utensil– — a "spork" from Taco Bell.

Assorted Smells
All the time

The smell of fun was detected throughout the hallways of Baker Residence Hall.

A foul odor was detected coming from a Butterfield bathroom stall. Appropriate search and rescue teams were notified.

Something was burning somewhere.

Specialists makeover Love, campus

By Bob Dunn
Collegian Staff

A statement released from the University of Massachusetts Laundry and Morale Office (ULAMO) claims that the same 12–person team responsible for the transformation of Courtney Love from scabbed–over smack mama to freshly– scrubbed prom queen will be called in to beautify the Amherst campus.

The plan to refurbish the campus comes in the wake of a report released yesterday which claims that the total property value of the UMass Amherst campus as it presently exists amounts to $13.75, twelve beads and an undisclosed amount of small, shiny objects.

"It's outrageous," said Richard "Tricky" Dick, founder and head of ULAMO. "A University of this size should fetch oh, six, seven thousand dollars on the open market. That's why we called in the team."

The "team" is the group of make-up artists, freemasons, pharmacists, sandblasters, psychotherapists and fashion designers, collectively known as Transparent Ploys, Inc., who were responsible for Ms. Love's new, "cleaner" image.

"Courtney's metamorphosis wasn't as difficult as one might expect," claims F.A. Schist, head of Transparent Ploys. "Once the psychotherapists broke her will and her spirit, the rest was fairly straightforward."

After an extensive tour of the campus, Schist gave a brief statement outlining some preliminary plans for the refurbishing which is slated to begin next fall.

"The first place we'll probably start is the Fine Arts Center, we can repair the leaks very easily. The same pancake makeup used to cover up and fill in Courtney's track marks also makes an outstanding spackle," Schist said.

Another point raised was whether Transparent Ploys could do anything about making Morrill Science Center easier for students to navigate through. Schist said that while his team couldn't take on a task as large as completely reconstructing the building from scratch, they could introduce a psychoactive drug into the water coolers inside the building.

"The students still won't know where they are, but they'll be very happy to be there. It should work very well, it's the same technique we used to get Courtney to show up to the Oscars," Schist stated.

According to ULAMO, the decision to call in Transparent Ploys was an easy one.

"Once we learned that there was a group of people who could transform embarrassing eyesores into things you'd be proud to show parents, the choice seemed clear," said Dick.

When asked to comment, Ms. Love, who was receiving "treatment" from Transparent Ploys' resident pharmacist at the time, only said, "Fleedle, grup, ookle, bleh, glubble," and then spent the rest of the afternoon drooling quietly and offered no further comment.

"We'll wake her up in time for her next interview," Schist said.

Arts & Living

Tuesday, April 1, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Deadly Fire stars Worm, Spice

By Joe Gillis
Collegian Staff

DEADLY FIRE
Directed by Renny Harlin
With Dennis Rodman, Mira Sorvino, Jared Leto
Playing at Hampshire Six Theatres

The action–adventure genre is far from dead, as is Renny Harlin's career. Veteran action director Harlin is back with an impressionistic film that skillfully combines death–defying stunts and deft comedy. The plot revolves around a cruise ship taken hostage by a mysterious femme fatale, but what Harlin makes most interesting are the little side–tours into the human psyche.

Mira Sorvino stars as the eponymous terrorist who believes that a lover from a past life is onboard the cruise ship. The character, Deadly Fire, was originally created for Harlin's wife, Geena Davis. Sorvino makes Deadly her own, however: a tragic figure that reminds us why she was last year's "It girl."

As the captain of the ship, Dennis Rodman (in a role originally intended for Matthew Modine,) is hypnotized into becoming Deadly's slave. The passion that Harlin creates between Sorvino and Rodman can only recall Bertolucci's Last Tango in Paris, combining issues of gender and control to an extent that you forget it's an action movie.

Enter Jared Leto. Fans familiar with Leto's work might best remember him as the dyslexic Jordan Catalono from the terribly short–lived My So–Called Life, but Leto has grown up and become one of the most viable action stars in recent memory. As the cabin boy, Leto discovers that he is, in fact, Deadly Fire's lover, not Rodman, in a former life through a series of avant garde short films — something you might get if you crossed Proust with MTV–style editing.

A thrilling conclusion with an explosive finale end a thrilling ride of an action film. But what gives the film substance is a cameo appearance from the Spice Girls as a gymnastically–enabled S.W.A.T. team disguised as waitresses.

Harlin says this is really only the beginning of a series two other films planned that will complete the ideas that the Spice Girls started here. It may not make sense if you take it out of context, but Harlin assures us that when it's all over, they're going to change the history of American cinema. We believe him. B+

Mira Sorvino (shown with co-star Dennis Rodman, in disguise) shows off her talent as a massuese in the new action film Deadly Fire.

Ernest epics re-released, star Hayek

By Keyser Soze
Collegian Staff

John Cherry, following in the footsteps of his mentor, George Lucas, announced last week that this Friday Ernest Goes to Camp, Ernest goes to Jail, Ernest Saves Christmas, and Ernest Scared Stupid will reunite in an epic rerelease. Joining Cherry is Coke Sams who directed the bomb, Ernest Goes to School. Sams' movie will join the other four to make this a quintet to remember.

"There's just something about these movies that hits the heart and inner child of every American. They're changing lives," Cherry said.

Cherry also announced that the special effects which drew thousands of fans to the theaters the first time have been remastered by Industrial Light and Magic, George Lucas' personal technical editing crew.

"I only feel that the best technical crew should work on these films. These films have always had the possibility of being the biggest blockbusters ever," Lucas added.

More than anything else, the new footage of the illustrious and elusive Vern are what people will be filling the streets to see. Vern, who represents the human equivalent to Snufflelupagus, will actually be seen in the new films.

Jim Varney, the man who starred as Ernest has publicly rejected the releasing of the new footage. He felt it added to the nostalgia that no one ever saw Vern's face.

"I don't want to sound like a egotist, but I am Ernest. There is no point in showing Vern. I am Ernest and Vern is everyman, or Godot — I'm not sure which, actually, but he's not real and he's definitely not a she... " Varney says.

Incurring Varney's wrath even further, it has been leaked that Salma Hayek, the starlet from Desperado and From Dusk till Dawn will star as Vern.

The new releases have all had their ratings changed from PG to PG–13, due to adult language and adult situations, which were edited out of the original releases. Varney felt the abridged versions never needed to touch upon the true relationship between the two.

"Ernest was just a goofy guy, not some gigolo. The introduction of Hayek into the films adds a dimension to the already dense sub–text that America is going to hate. It's going to teach these people to leave the classics alone," says Varney.

Test–screenings have produced the more positive feedback from any of the previous Ernest films ever.

"I watched all the films before, and I don't think I really ever understood what was going on," says one of the viewers of the test–screening.

Courtesy Columbia Pictures
Salma Hayek is Verne.

Spice Girls go punk, Minor Threat returns

Welcome to another edition of "Keepin It Real" and there has been a flurry of events in the hardcore world that you should all be informed of.

•In local news The Afflictions/Dave Matthews schism has elevated. After Afflictions drummer Mike C. broke Dave's nose, Dave responded by recording a double live album entitled "Just To Make The Afflictions Suffer." Afflictions vocalist Jeremy Willis responded by attacking Dave Matthews with an arial onslaught of wet Twinkies. Willis said, "I just couldn't take it, I mean two CDs of Dave Matthews is enough to drive any man insane."

•Hallraker has just been signed to Virgin Records to a contract similar to R.E.M.'s. Hallraker will be putting out eight albums over the next 10 years. The only factor that Time Warner insisted on was that the Spice Girls sing back up vocals on every track. While lead vocalist Jim Belisle was a little upset, he admitted that the appeal of the Spice Girls is sure to catapult them to the forefront of the punk scene.

•Earth Crisis has broken up! Lead vocalist Karl Buchener broke down last week and ate three live cows. He claimed he did it to make up for years of not doing anything remotely fun and simply thinking about how miserable the world is he broke down. Earth Crisis is looking for a new vocalist and it is rumored that Pete Steele of Carnivore fame is the number one candidate.

•Minor Threat is back together. Despite the fact that none of the original members except for Brian Baker are in the band, they are playing all of the classics. They also recently signed to Time Warner Records, and while the newer stuff is poppier, the band feels they will have the same impact on the hardcore scene." Baker was quoted as saying "Hey it's better then Junkyard."

•Sick Of It All is releasing a new album hot on the tales "Built To Last." It will be an all a capella release featuring every member of the New York hardscene. They will be doing all Frank Sinatra covers.

•25 Ta' Life's new album is coming out on Keepin' It Real Records. The album has 10 songs — five are "Keepin' It Real," three disco remixes of "Keepin' It Real," one live version of "Keepin' It Real," and one Agnostic Front cover. Lead vocalist Rick Healy said, "Hey I'm just keepin' it real."

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 109 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Tuesday, April 1, 1997

Branagh tops himself with Hamlet

Director Kenneth Branagh's Hamlet is his epic which has become famous for its four hour running time. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Playing in the snow

Scott Barnsby and the Massachusetts baseball team hope to brave the snow and get today's game with UConn in. For the scoop, (see Sports Page 10).

WORLD

American president to take office in Guyana

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — When he — a Guyana man born of indentured Indian immigrants — asked for her hand in 1943, her father threatened to shoot him.

When she — a Jewish woman from suburban Chicago — accompanied her new husband home to Guyana, his family was furious he'd taken a foreign bride.

Five decades after nurse Janet Rosenberg first met dentist Cheddi Jagan, then studying for his doctorate at Northwestern University, she is now set to follow her husband on one final step of their remarkable odyssey — this time, succeeding him as president after his death in office March 6.

Jagan, 76, is getting ready to move out of Guyana's wooden presidential mansion, State House. Few doubt she'll be moving back in as president after elections due by January, given the adoration with which many Guyanans regard her.

Part of the Jagans' popularity and success stemmed from the fact that as a couple, they experienced first-hand the kind of racial tensions that divide the country.

NATION

Woman Marines bring out heavy artillary

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The first women to undergo Marine combat training alongside their male comrades threw live grenades and fired big guns yesterday on a remote corner of this sprawling base.

"We're getting just as dirty as they are," said Pvt. Jessica Greer of Silver Spring, Md., after firing a grenade launcher. Camp Lejeune is the home of the Marine Corps' infantry school for the eastern United States. The Corps said the training is designed to prepare non-infantry Marines for port or airport security missions.

"We have to protect our post. It's kind of valuable to know what to do," said Pvt. Rheanna Stebbins, 19, of Las Vegas. She will work as a postal clerk after combat training.

Previously, women in the Marines received only limited combat training as part of boot camp. They are still banned from combat assignments in the Marines, which have been the most restrictive policy on women in combat.

The Army, Air Force and Navy allow women in combat aircraft; the Army and Marines bar women from serving in infantry, artillery and armored units.

Yesterday, Greer was learning to fire a hefty Mark 19 40 mm grenade launcher, which takes three people to operate. It spits out fist-sized shells

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thurs.
HIGH: 30 LOW: 20	HIGH: 40 LOW: 30	HIGH: 50 LOW: 30

INSIDE
Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Former UM student killed; Police suspect foul–play

Former University of Massachusetts freshman Jeffery Levitz, 18, of 45 Old Maple St., Stoughton, was found dead with a gunshot wound to the head on Sunday in Colonie N.Y., a suburb of Albany.

According to Colonie Police Detective Lt. Steven Heider, a man walking through Shaker Bay, an upscale development area, found the body on a trail in the woods.

Heider believes that the body had been there since the time of death.

Due to his badly decomposed body, police were not able to make a positive identification of the body, but a wallet containing Levitz's license and credit cards was found on the body.

Based on results of an autopsy conducted yesterday by Dr. Jeffrey Hubbard at the Albany Medical Center Hospital, Hubbard confirmed the deceased as Levitz.

Levitz, a former resident of Cashin Residence Hall withdrew from the University on Dec. 23, 1996.

He left UMass on Feb. 1 with a group of female friends headed for Troy, N.Y, seven miles northeast of Albany.

He was last seen driving away from his friends and going to visit his aunt in Albany.

According to his parents, Robert and Deborah Levitz, he never made it.

A search team was formed on Feb. 4 after his parents reported him missing to the Troy Police Department.

Levitz' car was located in Colonie a few days later.

At this time, Detective Heider has ruled the cause of death a homicide due to the gunshot wounds to the head.

The investigation is ongoing.

— Leigh Faulkner

UM students to campaign for Amherst town election

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

Ten University of Massachusetts students are running for public office in the Amherst town elections, which are being held today. All students registered to vote in Amherst and Southwest Residential Area residents are eligible to vote.

This semester, a program was offered to all UMass undergraduates to introduce them to town government, and the process of running for public office. Twelve students are participating — nine are running for town meeting seats and Student Trustee–elect Brian Tirrell is running for Amherst Selectman.

Joanne Levenson, director of Commuter Service and Housing Resource Center, has been coordinating the program.

"We've had various guest lecturers come in and talk about their areas of expertise, such as the Town Manager," Levenson said.

"[If the students are elected] they will be the best informed town meeting reps ever. They will be the best versed on the town warrant and Amherst town history," Levenson said.

Tirrell said the main reason that he is running for Selectman is to encourage students to utilize the polling place that will be available on campus for the first time and to be "an independent voice for unbiased decision making."

"My main reason is to get students out to vote to keep the polling place in Southwest, and eventually make a polling place available for everyone on campus," Tirrell said.

Despite the fact that, if he wins the election, Tirrell would hold the positions of Selectman and Student Trustee simultaneously, he is confident that he would be able to handle both offices.

"It would be a significant time commitment. I think I could do both jobs," Tirrell said.

Upon turning in candidate registration papers, candidates were given a list of registered voters in Amherst. According to Levenson, approximately 900 students are both registered to vote in Amherst and live in Southwest Residential Area.

After about 20 years of attempts, a polling place has been established on the UMass campus. All voters registered in Amherst and living in Southwest Residential Area will be able to vote today at the Hampden Dining Commons between the hours of 12–8 p.m., regardless of the weather.

The Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) will be contacting all eligible voters to inform them about the election, according to Marc Kenen, SCERA staff director.

"We are calling all registered voters in Southwest, we are putting posters up, and we will have people outside the Dining Commons, urging people to vote," Kenen said.

"It takes a lot to make a polling place on campus work," Levenson said. "It will take student response to show that a polling place is needed. Student government is hoping if we have a large enough response there may be a polling place for all residential areas in the Campus Center."

Based on the voter turnout of this election, the town will evaluate the results, and may agree to institute a polling place for the entire campus.

"The town would like to see that this makes a difference — having a polling place on campus. As long as we do better than last year, it will be viewed as a success," Kenen said.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

A glimmer of hope

Last night during the snow storm the only reminder of spring was housed in these greenhouses located near the Morrill Science building.

Students evacuated in JQA fire; Dorm candle may be the cause

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNER / COLLEGIAN

The Amherst fire department was called in to extinguish a fire on the sixth floor of JQA yesterday afternoon.

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

At 4:40 p.m. yesterday, University of Massachusetts Police received an active fire alarm call from the Cluster office and the sixth floor of John Quincy Adams Residence Hall in Southwest Residential Area.

"A few minutes after that, we received phone calls from residents saying that there was smoke coming out from under a resident's door," UMass Police Chief Jack Luippold said.

The alleged source of the fire which took place in room 615 was a burning candle.

The resident of the room reportedly had a burning candle and his windows were opened. The draft from the window may have caused the candle flame to catch papers on fire.

The UMass Police Department had not confirmed the cause of the fire by the time of print.

Two residents who live on the sixth floor, Aaron Nickels and Joe Tesari said they smelled smoke coming from the floor and went to locate the fire when they realized it wasn't coming from their room.

According to the two residents, once they located where the smoke was coming from, they wanted to pull the fire alarm but said their Resident Assistant, Aaron Cash, wouldn't allow them to, allegedly telling the residents they would be written up if they pulled it.

Cash was not available for comment.

Tessari said that another resident, Adam Chiazoli, finally pulled the alarm once he saw the smoke coming out from under the door of room 615.

John Adams residents knew that the alarm was real when the Amherst fire fighters made the Residential Life staff leave the building.

Residential staff was allowed back in the building at 5:20 p.m. and residents were let back in a 5:35 p.m. — an hour after the fire began.

Fire fighters reported only minor damage to the resident's room. Sprinklers were not activated in the halls.

Laura Forster contributed to this article.

Former UMass student among cult members

By Dan Seufert
Associated Press

BOSTON — Julie LaMontagne's family spent nearly 20 years and tens of thousands of dollars searching for her after she joined Marshall Herff Applewhite Heaven's Gate cult.

On Friday, the search ended when the family got the devastating news that LaMontagne, the cult's dietician and a personal nurse for Applewhite, was one of 39 who committed suicide in a mansion in Ranche Santa Fe, Calif.

Family members said they will fly to California to retrieve her body today. She will be buried in St. Michael's Cemetery in Brimfield, her hometown in the western part of the state, sometime around April 10.

LaMontagne's brother, 43-year-old Andrew LaMontagne, was left reeling with grief for his sister, whom he hadn't seen in 18 years. And he was filled with anger for Applewhite.

"This son of a bitch just took my sister away from me. He took my sister's life, and I ain't forgiving him for it," he said by phone from his Windsor, Vt., home. "Look at the guy, he looks like a lunatic. He's a monster. He took my sister."

Her stepmother, Theresa Boucher of Brooksville, Fla., last saw LaMontagne at her Florida home in 1990, when LaMontagne briefly came out of hiding, only to disappear again. At the time, LaMontagne told her stepmother that she took pride in serving the group with her medical training.

But briefly seeing LaMontagne didn't erase Boucher's fear of the cult, which recruited her in Amherst in 1975.

"We lost a daughter, but we really lost her 21 years ago," Boucher said in a telephone interview Saturday. "This was just the final loss."

Andrew and Julie were raised by Boucher in Brimfield after their parents divorced when Julie was 4.

Doris LaMontagne brought her five children to an orphanage in West Springfield after Jules, a factory worker at US Rubber in Chicopee, left the family.

Julie LaMontagne graduated from Tantasqua Regional High School in Sturbridge with Diana Prescott, who said she recognized her former classmate immediately from the cult videotapes.

Prescott, who lives in Keene, N.H., recalled LaMontagne as a national honor society student who was a nice person and "a little on the quiet side."

Julie LaMontagne graduated in 1974 from the University of Massachusetts–Amherst nursing school, full of promise and looking forward to her future, Boucher said.

When her father died in the early 1970s, Julie LaMontagne's life fell into disarray, her brother said.

"She loved him so much, she thought he was her knight in shining armor," Andrew LaMontagne said. "When he passed away Julie just freaked out. And then she met those people, and it was all over."

When Andrew LaMontagne last saw his sister 18 years ago at a family gathering, she tried to explain her newfound religious beliefs.

"At that time, she was preparing helpless people for their future life, she said she was taking the aged and the sick and preparing them," he said. "I told her I thought she was crazy to follow them, but she just told me she had another belief." Months later, Julie LaMontagne wrote a letter saying she wanted nothing more to do with her family, he said.

"She was a weak, unstable person," he said. "My parents spent the next 20 years trying to find her."

The family was concerned but had no way of finding her. She left no address, and the cult was in hiding.

But LaMontagne's family never thought she would take part in a mass suicide.

"I'm amazed that she went along with it," Andrew LaMontagne said. "But I guess I'm not surprised because she probably wanted to be with her father."

"She had never talked about suicide, she was the opposite of that. She really looked forward to living life," Boucher said, her voice quivering. "I wish I knew why any of this happened. All I know is they were all brainwashed. Once they are brainwashed, they can be talked into anything."

Passenger train derails in Spain; at least 22 killed

By Leon Lazaroff
Associated Press

HUARTE ARAKIL, Spain — A train loaded with families returning home from Easter holidays derailed yesterday, killing at least 22 people and injuring 87.

As darkness fell, rescuers were trying to extricate trapped passengers from the five-car train, which derailed just before it entered the station in Huarte Arakil, a northern town 20 miles west of Pamplona.

Some of the train's 250 passengers — including children — were trapped under the locomotive, Spanish national radio reported. "It all happened in a second," an unidentified woman told Spanish state radio. "The suitcases tumbled down, people were thrown into the aisles. Everything was crushed together and the people inside were screaming. It was horrible. Horrible." Rescuers laid bodies in a row on the tracks and covered them with blankets. A child's feet, wearing running shoes, protruded from under one.

Dozens of ambulances rushed to the crash site and ferried the injured to hospitals in several cities.

State radio and private Antena 3 Television said 26 people died, but a Red Cross spokeswoman in Pamplona said she could confirm only 22 deaths. Seventeen of the 87 injured were in critical condition, the spokeswoman, Elena Marco, said in a telephone interview. It was the worst train wreck since Sept. 24, 1980, when 26 people were killed after a train collided with a bus.

The train began its journey in the Mediterranean city of Barcelona, the state news agency EFE reported. It was headed for Irun in the Basque country when it derailed.

It was not immediately clear what caused the wreck, but the Guardia Civil paramilitary police said the train may have been going too fast when it crashed, the Europa Press news agency reported. Authorities also were looking into possible problems with the track switching system.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor:
Mark McGrath

Copy Editor:
Suzanne Barber

Photo Technician:
Kenneth W.P. Scott

Production Supervisor:
Matt McCarthy

Production Staff:
Joylyn Lombard
Kelvin Torres

Got a tip?

If you have information about a potential news story, call the Collegian News Department at 545-1762.

Meeting addresses skateboarding parks

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

There's a grand controversy brewing over the present plans to build a parking garage in downtown Amherst. While some residents are complaining about the lack of parking spaces, others are presenting the question: Wouldn't a parking garage in Amherst only increase the traffic entering town?

Van Kaynor, an Amherst resident, is looking to expose "non-motorized transportation" and "mass transit" alternatives that would alleviate pollution and congestion on Amherst's streets.

"I am interested in getting support to examine the town's traffic pattern problems," Kaynor said. "I don't know exactly what the result will be, but my goal is to bring facts to light about these parking problems."

Kaynor, with the help of other concerned Amherst inhabitants is forming a discussion group to "expand the parking problem" to include more enviro-safe transportation.

"Amherst center is for people, whether they arrive by car, bus or train, on foot or by bicycles. We want to celebrate and continue our downtown as a lively resource for diversity and human-centered economic development," John Furbish said. Furbish is an Amherst denizen who is promoting this new action group.

This association, which will address parking and transportation issues will meet from 5:30-6:45 p.m., on Thursday, April 3, in the Bangs Community Center.

Kaynor is spearheading a petition, which will be presented on Thursday night.

"The reason I was circulating a petition is because I feel there has not been an exploration and study on the effects on traffic problems including bicyclists, pedestrians, walkers, etc., in Amherst center," Kaynor said.

"The space for cars have to come from somewhere — I'd imagine it would increase, not decrease, traffic in the downtown area," Kaynor said.

Prior to the discussion, beginning at 5 p.m., a video about skateboarding will be shown. The video's purposes, according to the press release, is to portray the skateboarding scene that used to exist and thrive in Amherst center.

The interviews in the video were combined by a former University of Massachusetts student who depicts high school and college skateboarders throughout various segments that are bracketed with music.

Many of the comments from this UMass alum cite skateboarding as an alternative to violence and an opportunity in which young women can partake.

Currently, Amherst center has placed a ban on skateboarding. Anti-skateboarding symbols were spray- painted on the sidewalks once the ban took effect last year.

Following the video, two subgroup discussions will take place between 5:30-6:45 p.m. The first session will focus on pedestrian and bicycle opportunities in Amherst center and throughout town.

Included in this conference will be reports presented by Van Kaynor, who also served on the 1972 Select Committee on Governance, and by John Coull of Vally Bicycles, Ltd.

"We want to introduce bicycling as an innovative transportation alternative. Our society should be able to survive without so many autos," Kaynor said.

Following this discussion, attendees will collectively form a plan of action spotlighting non-motorized and transit issues, and the course of action to proceed further.

The second discussion to run simultaneously will focus on the possible creation of "Skateboard Parks", specifically in local schools.

"Here, the university presents the strongest option: with lots of skateboarders living in the Central and Orchard Hill dorms and with that east-side area slated as a site for future campus expansion," Furbish said.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 5 p.m. in the Bangs Community Center. The discussion is free and open to the public.

Snow storm socks region

(AP) High winds, heavy snows. It's beginning to look a lot like... spring?

March headed out like a lion yesterday as windswept snow pounded the region in what forecasters said was no April Fools' prank — it could be the biggest storm of the 1996-97 season.

Heavy rains gave way to wet, blustery snow by midday in many parts of the state and the National Weather Service issued warnings of blizzard-like conditions.

By early evening, a foot of snow had fallen in the western Massachusetts town of Worthington.

"Tomorrow, April 1, may be April Fools' Day, but this storm is no joke," Peter LaPorte, director of the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency, said yesterday.

Travelers were stranded at Logan International Airport as flights were delayed and canceled by the northeaster.

Many schools sent their students home early yesterday. Some superintendents, anticipating accumulations of as much as 20 inches, were telling their students to stay home today as well. "It's all coming in on us. We are going to get bombed," said North Adams Mayor John Barrett III, who took a good look at the projected track of the northeaster and ordered his little city in the state's far northwest corner shut down.

Barrett's solution to a bad snow storm was simple: Order all cars off the street, encourage businesses to close and keep everybody inside until the plows and sanders finish their work. Forecasters said the heavy snow, which could continue through today, could fell trees and down power lines. Winds were strong enough to blow out a window in Town Hall on Martha's Vineyard yesterday afternoon, said National Weather Service meteorologist Glenn Field.

Utility companies said they had extra crews on call.

Boston Edison, which provides power to 650,000 customers in 40 communities, had 78 crews ready, spokesman Mike Monahan said. Massachusetts Electric, which serves 950,000 customers across the state, had 250 crews standing by.

The snow turned the highways into a slushy mess in time for the homeward commute yesterday.

Kevin Sullivan, commissioner of the state highway department, said all 3,000 of his crews would be out plowing and sanding the roads overnight.

"It's a tough one when you have the high winds," he said. "It's difficult to maneuver through as far as motorists are concerned. The good point is that this has been a well-publicized storm."

Although this winter was mild compared to last, the state highway department has plowed and salted 43 times so far this season, Sullivan said.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT / COLLEGIAN

Overtime

Shayna Adelson, a graduate student in interor design works late on a project last night during the snow storm.

Investigators rule out copycat suicides

By Matthew Fordahl
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — There's no evidence that more members of the Heaven's Gate cult are planning to kill themselves, although such reports are being investigated, authorities said yesterday.

Such fears of copycat suicides by far-flung cult cells are real. In 1994, 48 members of the Order of the Solar Temple killed themselves in Switzerland. Later that year, five more members committed suicide in Canada, followed by 16 in the French Alps in 1995 and five in Canada on March 22.

Nonetheless, sheriff's Lt. Jerry Lipscomb said authorities have found "nothing, absolutely nothing" to suggest that anyone other than the 39 members of the high-tech UFO cult planned to commit suicide.

One member who left the group about a month ago because he didn't want to kill himself received two farewell videotapes on March 25 from cult members describing their death plans. The next day, he and his employer drove to the hilltop mansion, found the bodies and called police.

As for reports that members may have killed themselves because leader Marshall Applewhite had convinced them he was dying of cancer, medical examiner Brian Blackbourne said Applewhite did not have cancer. In fact, none of the victims had a terminal illness, he said.

The bodies were being tested for HIV, at the request of relatives, he said.

Thirty-nine members of the nomadic group, which made its living lately developing Internet Web sites, were found dead March 26 in a rented mansion in exclusive Rancho Santa Fe. They were dressed alike and covered in purple shrouds, their bags neatly packed in anticipation of a trip to outer space.

Authorities say the cult members died in groups, consuming a mixture of phenobarbital and alcohol and then placing plastic bags over their heads.

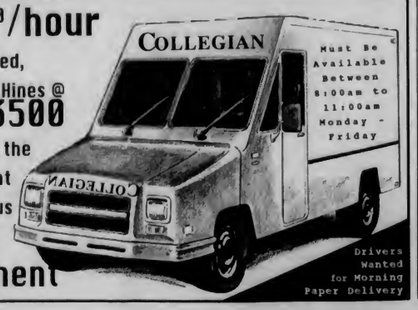
Blackbourne also said that two Vicodin vials were found near the bodies of the last two cult members alive inside the mansion — and traces of the painkiller were found in their bodies in addition to the drugs that helped kill the other 37.

Blackbourne said all autopsies were complete and toxicological tests would be finished by Friday.

Lipscomb said yesterday that investigators still believe it was a mass suicide, and although they're trying to determine where the cultists got so much phenobarbital, it's unlikely the answer will lead to criminal charges.

"We're not going to charge anyone with anything, and who would we charge?" Lipscomb said.

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE DETOURS
30 No Limits
NO ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS



WEEKLY UPDATE
University Career Center
Mather Building 545-2224

MERC inc.
Looking for a position in education K-12?
Come to Massachusetts Education Recruiting consortium orientation meetings held in Mark's Meadow Auditorium:
Tuesday, April 15, 1997 from 4:30 - 6:00pm
Wednesday, April 16, 1997 from 6:00 - 7:30pm

HRTA MAJORS!
It's not too late for summer co-ops!
Marriott Courtyard in Newport, R.I.
Marriott Courtyard in Newark, NJ.
Holiday Inn in Dedham, MA.
Red Rood Inns across New England.
Land's End Inn
Town of Yarmouth

MORE INTERNSHIPS FOR THE SUMMER AND FALL...
Jim Henson in California
Rosie O'Donnell Show in N.Y. City
CBS Sports
Representative Christopher J. Hodgkins

THE GREAT BENEFITS OF CO-OPS!
Free Fish for students on Co-op with Bio Shelters!
Free Airfare to Colorado if you co-op with Blue Mountain Arts!
For more information on summer and fall co-operative educational experiences, visit the Field Experience Office or call 545-6265.

Wanna drive on the sidewalks with this really cool van...deliver for the Collegian.
$10.00/hour
If interested, call Alycia Hines @ 545-3500 or stop by the Collegian at 113 Campus Center Basement

National/International

Survivors seek unpaid insurance claims

By Tim Whitmire
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The pursuit of justice for Jews betrayed during World War II widened yesterday as lawyers accused seven of Europe's largest insurers of stealing billions of dollars from Holocaust survivors and their heirs.

A $7 billion class-action lawsuit filed on behalf of a dozen American plaintiffs, some in their 80s and 90s, accused the insurers of failing to honor policies bought before the war and, in some cases, giving money to Nazis instead.

"We were victims twice," said plaintiff Amalia Kranz Burstin, 67, of Brooklyn, whose father survived the Buchenwald concentration camp but couldn't collect on his insurance policy after dying in 1967.

Many Jews bought life, disability or property insurance from companies in Austria, Germany, France and Italy during the tense years before World War II, said attorney Edward Fagan, who hopes to expand the suit to a class-action involving more than 10,000 plaintiffs.

But once the war started, insurance companies became part of the war machine as companies turned over the proceeds of policies to Nazis who had stolen policy numbers from the victims, the lawsuit claims.

After the war, Jews were turned away by the companies, which said they could not locate policies or that policyholders stopped paying premiums and the policies had been canceled, according to the lawsuit.

Another plaintiff, 69-year-old Marta Drucker Cornell of Queens, said she tried twice after the war to collect on policies her father bought from Italian companies before her family's 1942 deportation from Czechoslovakia.

In 1945, she said, she was told the policies were canceled because her father stopped paying premiums in May 1942, when he was sent to Auschwitz.

When Mrs. Cornell wrote to the companies again in 1964, she received a letter saying the policy principal had been used to pay the remaining premiums and that because the insurance company's Czechoslovakian branch had been nationalized in 1948, the company was no longer responsible for the policy.

"The money that my father paid for his life insurance doesn't belong to the company," she said. "It's not about the money — it's about the right thing."

Fagan earlier filed a lawsuit claiming Swiss banks still hold Holocaust victims' assets worth up to $20 billion counting penalties and interest.

Yesterday's lawsuit accuses the insurance companies of concealing vital information, requiring the production of death certificates that had never been issued, acting in bad faith and enriching themselves at the expense of Holocaust victims.

The class as identified by the lawsuit consists of anyone who between 1920 and 1945 bought life, property, casualty insurance policies and whose policy proceeds were wrongfully withheld. The accused companies all still exist and regularly conduct business in New York state, according to the lawsuit filed U.S. District Court in Manhattan.

U.S. port restrictions lifted

By Karen Gullo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — For the first time since the 1950s, Chinese ships can dock near U.S. military installations with just a day's notice — a result of the Clinton administration lifting a Cold War-era restriction still imposed on the former Soviet republics. In one of three deals in the past year helping Beijing's main shipping company, the United States quietly agreed to end the requirement that Chinese ships provide four days notification when entering one of a dozen sensitive ports.

In exchange, China agreed to provide new business opportunities it had first promised American shippers in 1993 but had not yet delivered. Officials say implementation of that offer is progressing slowly.

The primary Chinese beneficiary of the deal struck in the spring and summer of 1996 is China Ocean Shipping Co. (COSCO), the state-run shipping company which participated in the negotiations. "The Chinese clearly signaled to us that they wanted one-day access to the ports and we said we wanted the American companies to do container services in China," explained the U.S. Maritime Administration's Bruce Carlton, a member of the U.S. negotiating team.

The deal, long sought by China, has both economic and symbolic benefits. COSCO can now guarantee with more certainty when its clients' shipments will arrive and its vessels have the same status as those from other friendly countries.

The change is one of three separate U.S. decisions that recently have benefited China's state-run shipper, one of the world's largest and fastest growing.

Last spring, COSCO struck an agreement with Long Beach, Calif., officials to lease a vacant Navy station in a controversial deal now under scrutiny because it never received a security check. Earlier this year, COSCO also won a U.S.-backed $138 million loan guarantee to build ships at an Alabama shipyard.

COSCO ships have been involved in several recent controversies. One ran into a crowded boardwalk in New Orleans last year and another was unwittingly used by gun smugglers to transport 2,000 submachine guns into northern California.

Experts say the deals involving COSCO show that fears of an imminent threat from Communist aggressors have faded as interests in building stronger business ties with China take center stage. "It reflects the current state of the world," said Bernard Cole, a former Navy officer and expert in maritime strategy and U.S.-Asian foreign policy. "Those port cities are already fairly open."

The four-day restriction on entry to a dozen military-sensitive ports had been imposed in the 1950s to provide U.S. officials early warning about ships arriving from Communist countries that could have an interest in spying.

Though China has been freed from the requirement, it still applies to now-democratic Russia and the other former Soviet republics as well as Cambodia and Vietnam.

Dealings with China have come under the spotlight since the Justice Department and Congress began investigating reports that Beijing may have tried to curry favor with U.S. leaders by funnelling illegal money into last year's elections.

Wall Street's troubles continue

By Farrell Kramer
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stocks tumbled yesterday and pushed the Dow Jones industrial average to its worst back-to-back point decline since the 1987 crash, raising concerns about the 6 1/2-year bull market. For a stock market that has been able to do little wrong, the event is enough to give pause. But, analysts say, the bouts of selling may be part of a market correction, a measured decline that while painful, generally won't mean a prolonged erosion in prices. The Dow is now 7.1 percent, or 501.68 points, below its record close of 7,085.16 on March 11. But even with the two-day decline, it remains ahead for the year, albeit just 2.1 percent.

"It's a necessary consolidation in an ongoing bull market, as far as I'm concerned," said Peter J. Canelo, chief investment strategist at Dean Witter Reynolds, a brokerage.

The market's main barometer plunged 157.11 points, or 2.3 percent, yesterday to 6,583.48. That followed a 140.11-point drop Thursday and brought the average's two-day loss to 297.22 points. The decline also represented the index's sixth-biggest point decline in history. But the bull market remains intact, dating back to the fall of 1990, when the Dow stood at about 2,360.

Selling from the Dow's high in early March began with concerns that the Federal Reserve would raise interest rates to forestall inflation, which it finally did last Tuesday. At first, the market took it well.

On Thursday, though, prompted by some data showing the economy was still going strong, traders started dumping stocks. The market was shut down for Good Friday.

Then word came yesterday that personal incomes rose 0.9 percent in February, more than expected, and other strong data raised inflation fears once again. Higher rates tend to hurt corporate profits, which drive stock prices.

Despite the selling, traders and investors seemed orderly. The cavernous floor of the New York Stock Exchange was calm and professional. Activity picked up toward the end, when the Dow was down as much as 179.39 points, but there were no signs of panic. "I have not seen a stampede," said Muriel Siebert, president and founder of the discount brokerage firm Muriel Siebert & Co. Vanguard Group, the nation's second-largest mutual fund company, said there was no flood of phone calls from investors looking to sell.

While eye-popping, yesterday's drop pales next to the 616.35 points the average lost on Friday, Oct. 16, 1987, and three days later — Black Monday. It fell 26.2 percent during that two-day selloff. Starting from a higher level, the current two-day drop cost it just 4.3 percent.

One hallmark of the current bull market has been the willingness of individuals to stick with their investments. In fact, many big selloffs have been followed by rallies as stocks were snapped up at a bargain.

"The question is: 'Are we moving into a bear market or not?,'" said Joe Battipaglia, chief of investment policy at the brokerage firm Gruntal & Co. "My feeling is that we are not."

Potential jurors introduced to McVeigh

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

DENVER — In a courtroom protected by barricades and armed guards, Oklahoma City bombing defendant Timothy McVeigh gazed intently at potential jurors yesterday as they spoke of their willingness to impose the death penalty for the deadliest terrorist attack ever on U.S. soil.

McVeigh, wearing a buzz haircut, an open-collared blue shirt and khakis, smiled and shook his attorneys' hand as he was brought into the courtroom from a basement holding cell for the start of jury selection. He nodded and mouthed "Good morning" through a grin when the judge introduced him to potential jurors.

But during detailed and excruciatingly slow questioning, McVeigh's stare tightened over his folded hands as prospective jurors discussed how they could recommend execution if he is convicted in the April 19, 1995, blast that killed 168 people and injured hundreds more.

"It's hard to place yourself in the role of deciding the fate of another human being on these terms," said a middle-aged man identified only as No. 858. "Yet there has to be some ultimate price to pay."

The self-employed financial adviser said he has not formed an opinion about McVeigh but believes there may be other suspects who have not been arrested. "There are elements, potentially people out there that are ancillary to this case, that might want to make their strength and presence felt," he said.

The man, who once lived in Tulsa, Okla., said he visited the bombing site before the gutted shell of the building was demolished, feeling "I guess all the things a normal human being would feel. I think I cried a little."

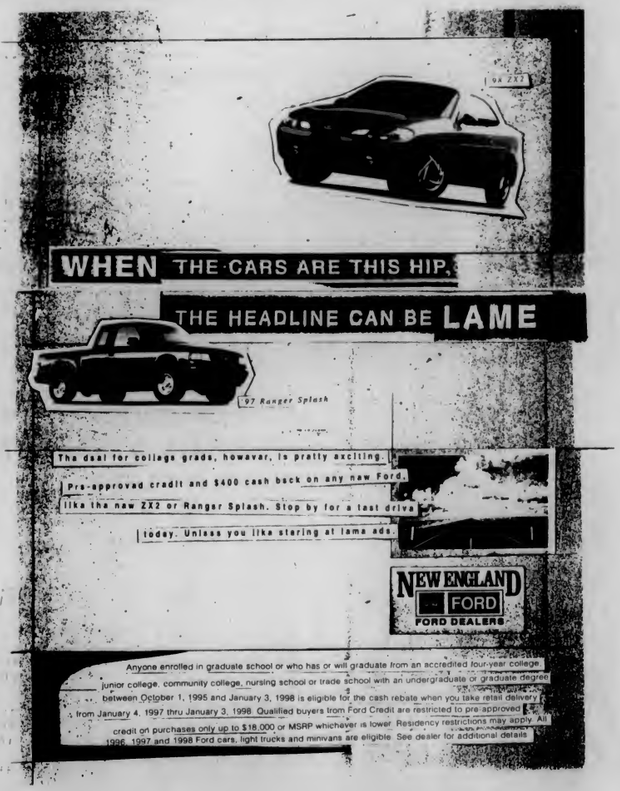
The second prospective juror questioned, a churchgoing grandmother in her 60s, said she too cried and prayed for the victims as she watched television coverage of the bombing. Her dominant memory of McVeigh was the footage of him in an orange jail jumpsuit being led out of a county jail in Oklahoma.



"I felt very sorry for him," she said. "For such a young man to waste his life."

McVeigh attorney Stephen Jones then asked: "You didn't feel sorry because they arrested the wrong man?"

"I didn't know," she said.

As the prospective jurors took the stand to talk about everything from their view of the justice system to their opinions on the O.J. Simpson case, they were hidden behind a partial wall from nearly everyone in the audience section of the courtroom. U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch has promised the prospective jurors that their privacy will be protected during the questioning. Given the slow pace — only four potential jurors were questioned by midafternoon — it could take two weeks or more for lawyers to choose 12 jurors and six alternates from a pool of hundreds, and all those picked must be willing to consider the death penalty as punishment.

Heightened security was evident at the stone-and-glass courthouse, which is ringed by concrete barriers, huge stone planters and temporary metal fences. Police officers on foot, on horseback and in cruisers made regular passes around the complex, and at least one sharpshooter, wearing military fatigues, was stationed at the top of a parking structure across the street. Reporters and observers were screened by two sets of metal detectors before being allowed into the second-floor courtroom. Only a few victims' families showed up to watch, and an auxiliary courtroom set up to handle an overflow crowd was filled mostly with reporters.

GOT A TIP?
IF YOU HAVE INFORMATION ABOUT A POTENTIAL NEWS STORY, CALL THE COLLEGIAN NEWS DEPARTMENT AT 545-1762.

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W. P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1958. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The suicidal sensation

Mark McGrath

It seems like suicide's in again.

The deaths of 39 people in San Diego last week confirmed that, at least in my eyes. The question most people are asking is "why?" Why did these people choose to hold the ultimate going away party? I know, I know… they were trying to hitch on with the alien spaceship, discarding their souls' containers (bodies) for a better way. Yeah, Yeah, Yeah we get the picture…

The question is still "why?" If not why they did it, then why were they so dumb? What led them to "D_" our favorite charismatic alien and cult leader? I saw his recruitment tapes on television and I have to admit, he was one fantastic speaker.

But comets, $5 bills, UFOs, Christianity, castration and suicide? Come on guys, you don't think we're going to go for that, do you? Why?

Perhaps the biggest "why" may involve the amount of television and press coverage you received. For the three days following your "event," all I saw or heard were reports on the mass suicide. Pictures of your dead bodies covered with purple cloaks, your farewell tapes, explanations of your cult.

If I had it my way, your story would never have made its way out of California (where it fits quite comfortably with the prevalent cultural themes). All I could think was, "They're glorifying a bunch of nutcases because they did something crazy." Why? Was the media alerting potential suicidal cult members out there to the dangers of such activity, or were they trying to create a new sensation? If you ask me, it's the latter.

Hey kids, suicide's in.

Just look at John E. Curtis Jr., the former CEO of Luby's, the largest cafeteria chain in the country, who took his own life two weeks ago and who was also featured prominently in many major news magazines. Curtis, who was earning more than $350,000 dollars per year slashed his wrist and upper abdomen with a kitchen knife before severing his jugular vein.

Thank you, Mr. Curtis.

I have a few words for you… you're an idiot, an absolute idiot. You weren't even 50 years old, you had a wife and three children, the youngest just 15 years old. You made more money each year than I'll ever see in my life, and you decided to leave yourself face down in a pool of blood.

But apparently, you had a couple of really good reasons for what you did. You didn't want to have to tell your Board of Directors that your profit margin was down, though still healthy. Or was it that you couldn't bear to lay off one percent of your 13,000-person work force? John. Listen to me— that's only 130 people. You know there were other ways.

Then there's the issue of assisted suicide and our dear friend, Dr. Kevorkian. His little episodes are so regular that they remind me when to change the baking soda in my refrigerator. Every time it's just the same old story… person commits suicide with Doc's help, authorities call for Doc's head, Doc lives to fight another battle.

Even the government has had its problems with suicide. In the past few years, America has witnessed the suicides of White House lawyer Vince Foster and Admiral Michael Boorda. There's suicide all over the place, and outside of these ones, which involve national security, none have told us anything but that there are lots of cowards out there.

And the coverage they get is phenomenal. Why?

Of all deaths, suicide is one of the most disturbing. To think that there are forces out there so strong that they can make someone take their own life… it really is sad. It's tragic. But does that mean we have to be bombarded with these images every time we open a magazine or click on the TV? Need we be reminded?

With all of the fame and the glory our media seems to be showering down on victims, they may as well scream out, "Suicide, it's the cool new alternative to living. When you feel bad or can't cope with events of your life, just hop on the boat. It's quick, it's easy it's a way out."

Americans are beaten, raped and killed every single day, but very rarely will their cases get as much attention as a bunch of cult members drinking poison. It's sad, and I'm afraid that every kid out there who needs attention is going to see suicide as a way of getting that attention. Attention is what's usually behind teen suicide anyway.

As tragic as the act of suicide is, we don't have to make it out to be more than it is, an act of desperation by someone who doesn't know the value of their own life.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Blame it on the Twins, not the rain

Leigh Torbin

Somewhere in Oxford, Miss. today, Lamar Chance is dressed in solid black. The former Assistant Director of Media Relations at UMass, who now holds a comparable position at Ole Miss, is hardly mourning his beloved Tar Heels' lost to Arizona though. Rather, he is saddened by the onset of opening day, the American tradition that baseball and Yankee fans alike have awaited since October…

I mostly disagree with Lamar. For all the pages of this paper I've filled with senseless hockey dribble over the years, baseball is still my favorite sport. No matter what exorbitant ticket fee the Boston Red Sox decide to charge this year, you'll find me on warm summer nights at Fenway with a hot dog and jumbo bag of peanuts.

But, Lamar is right in one respect… baseball is indirectly responsible for nearly all of the ills of our society today. I am not talking about some Crossetonian sociological BS of how these egregious ills are mirrored in the big business aspects that have corrupted the once-innocent child's game. No, through its historical actions, baseball has inflicted actual malice to the fabric of America, injuring it in a palpable and irreversible manner.

With the whimsical spirit of April Fools' Day in mind (although all of what you are about to read is sad but true), several of America's shortcomings can be traced historically to a personnel action made 52 years ago by the Minnesota Twins.

The Twins were known as the Washington Senators in 1945 and they were desperate for ballplayers. Due to the war, they tried out a pitching prospect from the La Salle school in Santiago, Cuba by the name of Fidel Castro. The Senators didn't like his stuff, but Castro still went on to some reasonably noteworthy accomplishments back home.

When the Cold War heightened, Castro went to New York City where he was wined and dined by both President Kennedy and Soviet Premier Nikita Krushchev. Castro was pursued like a free agent, and shuttered natural geographic sense, he signed a multi-year deal with the Reds, not the Yankees.

Subsequently, if Castro had allied his nation with the U.S. and not Russia, the Cuban Missile Crisis and Bay of Pigs Invasion never would have occurred. Relations with Cuba would probably be like those with Canada and Mexico.

Many people, including Oliver Stone in his epic JFK, have argued that it was pro-Cuban sympathizers who arranged for the assassination of President Kennedy on that fateful day in Dallas in 1963.

So, aboard Air Force One, beside a blood-splattered and newly-widowed Jackie Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson was inaugurated as our nation's new chief executive. Johnson would never had become president with Kennedy alive.

Immediately upon arriving in Washington, one of Johnson's first acts was to increase our presence in Vietnam. Thus, Johnson turned what could legitimately be called a "police action" at the time into a full-scale war that not have been the deadliest, but was certainly the most gruesome in American history.

While the war did give us Apocalypse Now and Platoon, overall, the escalated Vietnam Conflict is the root of most of America's problems today. People don't trust their own government much anymore, something certainly amplified by the publication of the Pentagon Papers, which exposed the terrible misuse of force in Vietnam by the Nixon Administration, and its lies about the Army's effectiveness.

The high school and college dropouts of the '60s are now often the parents of dropouts in the '80s and '90s, perpetuating a growing American problem. Having the war beamed via satellite into every living room in the country certainly helped desensitizing America to violence, which makes movies like the ones above perfectly acceptable viewing these days. Drug use skyrocketed after war escalated and now shows no signs of calming down.

I could go on seemingly forever with the long term hazards of Vietnam, but there's only so much space here.

Just remember this on opening day. If a grand American holiday is being overshadowed by dark clouds in your life today, someway, somehow, it can probably be traced back to the Minnesota Twins and a bad personnel decision.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Mike Burke, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by e-mail to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu
Letters may be edited for length, clarity, and style.

Abortion law tragedy

Editor's Note: On May 8, the Collegian celebrates its 30th anniversary as a daily newspaper. To commemorate this occasion, the Collegian will be publishing editorials spanning the last 50 years. Today we feature a piece originally published on September 16, 1970.

1967 - 1997
1970

The tragic death of a coed from a nearby school as the aftermath of an attempted abortion and the weekend visit of Bill Baird were a grim coincidence which once again focused the attention of much of the University community on the problem of abortions. Again, we may predict, emotions will soar, indignation will rise, rhetoric will become sharper, and the gulf will widen between those who continue to defend time-honored standards and those who insist that all which is not new is worthless or irrelevant. Ultimately, the heat of passions may subside as new issues take their place at center-stage and we shall find that some new light has been shed. Each time the discussion is intensified there is hope that a few more adults will have ventured from the comfort of their cherished moral strongholds and may have even dared to share with students the bold search for a code of action which is more closely related to reality and for a legal framework which meets today's needs.

Change will come, as it has in the past, even in Massachusetts. Only four years ago, it became legal to provide birth control information and devices to married women — and now a federal court has ruled that the Massachusetts law prohibiting similar services for unmarried women is discriminatory. Unreal and essentially punitive restrictions on abortions will almost surely have a similar fate in the near future.

In the meantime, what of the present and the couples who during this year will know personally the anguish and fear of the couple in Holyoke? It would be comforting to hope, but unreal to believe, that prevention would be uniformly successful. We as a community, therefore, must be prepared to recognize the needs of those among us who are troubled and to meet those needs effectively with resources which are available.

For some couples faced with an unplanned pregnancy, all that is needed is support for their belief in each other and encouragement that parental wrath over premature marriage will be much less severe that they, in their anxiety, can picture. Marriage which had been planned will be hastened, but no serious problem will follow. For others the need will be for information that now, even in Massachusetts, a safe, legal abortion can be obtained for reasons of health (usually psychiatric). The number of therapeutic abortions performed in Massachusetts has probably increased four or five times in two years. Others need to learn of legal opportunities for abortion which are now readily available in New York, less than two hours away.

The especially tragic feature of the recent death is that today it didn't need to happen. Somehow the couple, whose affection was so binding that they had the will to share a bold and dangerous plan to solve their problem, should have had access to better information. Perhaps most important, they should have been able to share a trust in some resource in their school communities (one of which was UMass) from which they could have gotten help. At some time in the future, abortion services will be more readily and openly available; in the meantime, there are adults in the University community who can be trusted and are eager to be helpful in finding answers to problems.

The staff of the health services solicits the trust and confidence of students. We aim to help anyone face a health problem and find an answer which is satisfactory, practical, and consistent with self-respect. We may not always succeed, but we are always willing to try.

Robert W. Gage, M.D. is the former director of University Health Services.

Examining 209

Camille Tuason Mata

Proposition 209 was an amendment to affirmative action, lobbied for and supported by California Governor Pete Wilson and his cronies. According to the NAACP (California chapter), amendments such as this have been proposed for years by preceding governors and other political well-to-do's who consider affirmative action as the sliding backdoor into universities for those non-white individuals who would not have been able to get in otherwise, due to poor grades and low SAT scores.

Such a stereotype could not be further from the truth. Unfortunately, erroneous stereotypes have contributed to the passage of Proposition 209.

What Proposition 209 has done is to affix a "race preferential bias" wording onto the Affirmative Action legislation, and in passing it, California universities may no longer include an ethnic checklist as part of the application. Therefore, the gender identification as well as the physical ability check-list will remain intact, other marginalized categories that are also protected by affirmative action.

If one collected data of the number of non-white applicants' entry into California universities over the past 10 years, one will be able to observe that there has been a marked increase. The rising numbers can then be juxtaposed against the appearance of bills attempting to defile the efforts of affirmative action. Proposition 209 being one of them. Can we assume that there is a correlation? (I think so). If we take this a step further, we may even be able to accuse Governor Wilson of being unable to cope with racial difference at California universities by virtue of this amendment.

Why was the racial aspect of affirmative action targeted? Has there not also been an increase in women entering universities? What about those who are differently abled? Why weren't the two latter elements targeted?

It appears, in isolating and criticizing the "racial preference bias" (assuming, of course, there is a racial bias) the issue is race and the racism is this long held (if not pervading) perception that non-white individuals are not as qualified as white individuals. Should we sit comfortably with this accusation?

Apparently, Governor Wilson is not alone in his racist viewpoint. In Texas, affirmative action was struck down as a utility point for entry into medical school, no thanks to a prospective white medical student who accused a Texas medical school for "discriminating" against him on the basis of race, as he was passed over for "not-as-qualified" non- white applicants. He sued and won. with the Texas court agreeing that the other applicants had indeed been accepted solely on the basis of race. As a result, Texas schools may no longer use the ethnic check-list on their applications, a ruling amid wording on applications that universities are committed to racially diverse campuses.

Apparently, neither the state of Texas nor Governor Wilson bothered to check in with admissions administrators. If admittance into a university were based solely on race, GPA and SAT scores, there would also be a number of white applicants denied. Fortunately, these are not the only three criteria considered. When considering "qualification," admissions administrators also look at extracurricular activity, job experience (not WHAT, but rather whether or not there has been working experience) — basically candidates who will contribute to and maintain the running of the universities' services. Look around UMass, for example, besides local workers, who else operates the People's Market, Earthfoods, The Hatch, The University Store, The Munchie Stores? Are those students we see?

But let's retreat a bit and consider the other tools of criteria, namely the GPA. What factors can influence the rise and fall of the GPA? Could over-extending oneself due to family obligations affect GPA? Perhaps the fact that English is the second language could lower GPA. What about self-esteem, could this impede one from achieving a high GPA? What about school? If society continues to enforce upon non-white individuals that they are unqualified (and then re-enforce this by legal mandates), they eventually believe that. Therefore I believe self-esteem would definitely be a factor.

I have an old high school chum from Laos, a refugee, whose second language is English. She had difficulty in school because of this "handicap", (which could hardly be considered a handicap since she spoke the Lao language brilliantly), but there were other factors. Her chores at home precluded her from devoting as much time on school work as she would have liked. She was required to cook the evening meal, clean the house and therefore had very little time to afford toward after-school activities and studies. She managed to get her Bachelor of Science in Medical Technician and currently works at Hood Company.

Another friend (Cuban-American) is one of the most eloquent speakers and writers I know. He also has a very good command of American history, world history, and the electoral process, yet his GPA would be considered rather low. He has been involved in a number of campus rallies and was instrumental (along with others) in achieving a diversity section in the Collegian. He is currently working towards his Bachelor of Arts degree.

How does one determine, then, qualification?

A number of statistics were invoked to justify Governor Wilson's erroneous claim, one of which showed the total of rejected applicants to those accepted, categorized by race. The greatest number was white applicants. Fortunately, also included were numbers indicating the total number of applicants; the number of white far exceeded non-white. In real numbers, if a university attracts 1,500 white applicants versus 435 non-white, the number rejected of the former group will naturally be greater than the latter. Not all white applicants will be accepted and that goes ditto for non-white applicants. Even if all the applicants were white, the probability of acceptance remains 50/50 (this percentage is used loosely, by the way) given that eligibility is determined not simply by SAT scores and GPA.

I ask the question, again, "why wasn't gender or physical ability targeted"?

It is not my intention to pit marginalized groups against the other, but I find it rather suspicious that race would be upheld as the example of the "ineffectiveness" of Affirmative Action, for if we adhere by Pete Wilson's logic the "preferred" race is non-white and applicants are being admitted despite being unqualified. We can safely stipulate that he accuses California schools of reverse racism. When universities maintain a higher number of white students to those who are not white, why isn't this decried as racism? And why is it that whenever white students are accepted, the assumption is always that their entry is credited to "good qualification," not affirmative action, while with non-white students, it is almost always the reverse?

When the majority of universities around the country, private and public, accord entry to a higher number of white students, why are they not accused of "racial preference?" Better yet, would a politician support such an allegation if it were made…perhaps by Joe Kennedy?

Camille Tuason Mata is a UMASS student.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Developing Nations

Tuesday, April 1, 1997

COURTESY ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hundreds of mourners carry the body of Abdullah Khalil Salah, 20, at his funeral on Easter Sunday, March 30, 1997. Salah was killed by Israeli troops during protests in Ramallah in the occupied West Bank. There have been 12 days of protest in West Bank since Israel began building a new Jewish settlement, called Har Homa, in occupied East Jerusalem. Father Michel Sabah, the Catholic Patriarch of Jerusalem, said in his Easter message that for Palestinians, "the evil is all around us." He said "Violence is still in the hearts, and blindness to the rights of others is still in the minds, of leaders." On Sunday, the Arab League voted unanimously to restrict diplomatic and trade ties to Israel.

"We don't judge you because you're white; we don't judge you because you're black; we don't judge you because you're brown. We judge you because of what you do and what you practice. And as long as you practice evil, we're against you." — Malcolm X, Rochester, N.Y., 1965.

Take action against opression everywhere, write for the Developing Nations Desk. Contact Lisa at 5-1851, or come down to the Collegian in the Campus Center Basement.

Easter Statement by Christian Palestinians

Editor's Note: The following is a statement by the Sabeel Palestinian Christian organization, delivered on Good Friday, on the Israeli settlements at Abu Ghneim ('Har Homa'), located on the outskirts of Occupied East Jerusalem.

"Hear this, you rulers of the house of Jacob and chiefs of the house of Israel, who abhor justice and pervert all equity, who build Zion with blood and Jerusalem with wrong!… Yet they lean upon the Lord and say, 'Surely the Lord is with us! No harm shall come upon us'. Therefore because of you Zion shall be plowed as a field; Jerusalem shall become a heap of ruins…" (Micah 3:9-10).

On Tuesday, March 18, 1997, Israeli bulldozers started their work to build a new Jewish settlement on Jabal Abu Ghneim, near Bethlehem, contrary to the expressed wish of the international community. The intention is to build 6,500 housing units for 25,000 Jewish settlers on approximately 462 acres. It is Palestinians, rather than Jews, who have dire housing needs. Even while there are huge vacant land areas in West Jerusalem (much of it Palestinian owned before 1948), and more than 12 percent vacant apartments even in the settlements on the West Bank and Gaza (all illegal), Israel confiscates more Palestinian land. A major objective of the project is to ensure Jewish demographic superiority in the Jerusalem area.

The beautiful and serene landscape overlooking Bethlehem will be ruined, and will be replaced by apartments, shopping centers and hotels that will transform the beauty of nature into vulgar stone structures. But whatever its architectural value and ecological damage, the project is unjust.

The building of the settlement is an act of injustice against the people from whom the land has been confiscated. Politically, it aims at closing the circle of exclusively Jewish settlements around Palestinian Jerusalem and changing its demographic character. It is a further step in Judaising Jerusalem before the final status talks. It aims at weakening Palestinian claim over East Jerusalem by creating new facts on the ground, which will hinder the attainment of their legitimate national aspiration.

Economically, by building hotels, shopping centers and tourist industries on the settlement, Israel will devour the tourist trade from the Palestinian towns of Bethlehem and Beit Sahur (Shepherds' Field) and deprive the Palestinians of their main livelihood. Bethlehem and Beit Sahur will be places where tourists will go for a brief visit while the economic benefits will be diverted and reaped by "Bethlehem." Israel's Har Homa shopping center.

Moreover, the construction will threaten the remains of five fifth and sixth century Byzantine churches and monasteries in the area of Abu Ghneim.

The project reflects the arrogance of Israeli power, its obsession with domination over, and economic exploitation of the Palestinians. It has and will fuel resentment, deepen the hate, ensure the passion for revenge, and bring about an inevitable future of bloodshed and violence, already seen in the suicidal bombing in Tel Aviv on March 21, 1997, so rightly condemned as an inhuman act of terrorism.

We in Sabeel condemn the violence of the construction at Abu Ghneim, perpetrated by the State of Israel. It is a violence against the aspirations of a whole nation. It is a violence directed against the peace process. It is a violence against the future generations of Palestinians and Israelis who must live as neighbors in peace and security. It is a violence against the environment and against a Christian archeological site. The American veto also is interpreted by many as an act of violence against justice, giving the Israelis the "green light" to proceed. Alas, the project will adversely affect the future of millions of people who ultimately must share Jerusalem and its hinterland.

Christians should condemn all violence that deprives future generations of the right to live in peace with justice, including the unrelenting repressive policies of the state. The structural evil of state policies is no less offensive than individual acts of violence.

We call on the government of Israel to abandon its violence against the Palestinian people, its partners in peace, and to consider the grave outcome of its actions.

We invite it:

• To interpret the biblical injunction which Christians share with Jews, "love your neighbor as yourself" (Leviticus 19:18; Mark 12:31) as having an inclusive interpretation, that includes the Palestinians.

• To accept the sharing of Jerusalem as a key to a just peace.

• To terminate the building of settlements, which makes a fetish and idol of the land.

We call on the U.S. government to fulfill its commitment to peace, by injecting the concept of justice into the peace process as its most important ingredient. Without justice for the Palestinians, the peace process is a sham. Unless the outcome of the peace process achieves the withdrawal of Israel from the Occupied Territories (including East Jerusalem) there will not be justice, and without justice, there will not be security. The United States is entrusted with an historic responsibility to create a just peace.

Both Palestinians and Israelis are strangers and sojourners on the land, which belongs to God: 'The land is mine; with me you are but aliens and tenants' (Leviticus 25:23). Let us share it under the one creator God, who has placed both of our people on it.

Having endured a prolonged Crucifixion, the Palestinians await the dawn of Resurrection.— Jerusalem, Good Friday, 1997

The truth about Deng Xiao Ping

Li Minqi

Editors Note: The following was submitted in response to another editorial which appeared on the first Developing Nations page this semester about the life of Deng Xiao Ping, the Chinese leader who passed away this past February.

The first "Developing Nations" page of the Daily Collegian published an article with the title "Deng Xiao Ping, paramount leader of largest Developing Nation and Citizen of the World," written by Yang Lingyan, a Chinese graduate student.

It is remarkable to see that the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, which is supposed to be based as one of the most progressive universities in this country, published an article which gave readers misleading information about the Chinese Revolution, Chinese socialism, and the era of Deng Xiao Ping. It makes me feel obligated to say a few words.

The author begins her article by saying that Deng Xiao Ping "led his people to turn the nation pragmatically from a starving Stalinist regime of 1.2 billion people into a rapidly growing economic superpower." (A minor problem: China's population was 600 million in the mid-1950s, about 800 million when Mao died, and did not reach 1.2 billion until the early 1990s.) Starving as they were, the life expectancy of Chinese people was increased from 35 years in 1950 to 65 years in 1976. In this respect China was well ahead of many so-called "middle-income countries," despite her much lower per capita income.

China's per capita production of grain (a major indicator of "starving"), had grown rapidly between 1950 and 1957. It dropped sharply in the early 1960s, but has grown steadily since then and came back to the 1957 level by mid-1970s. This achievement was made despite an increase of population by about 200 million and a loss of almost half of the total arable land. By contrast, in the same period, the per capita production of grain in many Third World countries had declined like what has happened in China between 1984 and now.

People usually give Deng Xiao Ping credit for his agricultural reform which led to de facto privatization of China's agriculture and supposedly brought about the agricultural miracle in the early 1980s, however, without asking the question how this "miracle" could be achieved without the infrastructure built under the collective communes and failing to notice that this "miracle" has been replaced by stagnation in grain production since more than a decade ago.

"A rapidly growing super power?" As if the Chinese economy was not already growing rapidly before Deng came to power. Between 1952 and 1978, China's GDP per capita had grown at an average annual rate of 3.9 percent. Among the 100 more Developing Countries, only about a dozen countries had higher growth rates than China. In the 1950s China began with an industry smaller than that of Belgium's and became a world-class industrial power when Mao died. And the achievement was made with little foreign capital and technological assistance.

Is China becoming a superpower? Well, the Chinese economy is indeed growing very rapidly. However capitalism does not always, and actually usually does not bring about rapid economic growth, certainly not in this country, nor in Europe, nor in Japan, nor in most Third World countries, and not in "free" and "democratic" Russia. This rapid economic growth is simply based on the cruel exploitation of hundreds of millions of Chinese workers. It is not unusual for a Chinese worker in a private factory or a foreign-owned factory or a so-called "town and village" factory to work more than a 12 hour day, 365 days a year, receiving a wage of one-fortieth of what an average U.S. worker receives, and working under the most terrible and dangerous conditions. It is the cruel exploitation of hundred of millions of Chinese workers that makes huge profit for Chinese and foreign capitalists. Exploitation under capitalism is a primary necessary condition for any rapid economic growth. But this kind of economic development based on the exploitation of "cheap labor" also leaves China increasingly dependent upon foreign technology and equipments (in contrast to Maoist economic development which pursues indigenous technological progress).

China is fixed to an unfavorable position in the capitalist international division of labor — to be exploited by advanced capitalist countries, and therefore destined to stay as a dependent and underdeveloped capitalist country.

Yan Lingyan also portrays Maoist China as a repressive and totalitarian society where people have no freedom and rights whatsoever, an "idelolgy dominated every inch of every citizen's daily life."

Maoist China was so totalitarian that ordinary working people were provided right to employment, to free health care, to a basically free education, to housing (free, or unbelievably cheap), and to many other basic needs. These were the rights that Chinese working people had under socialism, the rights that were as inalienable for Chinese working people as freedom of speech for Americans. All of these benefits are called the "Iron Rice Bowl" in China. Which means that workers have got an "iron rice bowl" that will not be broken, and thus they do not have to worry about their basic needs anymore.

Nor did the author say anything about how Chinese workers practiced "two participations." The "two participations" basically means: cadres (managers, bureaucrats, party leaders) must participate in manual labor, and workers must participate in management. The fact is, despite its many flaws and opintradicitons, under Maoist China, ordinary working people to a large extent had control over social and economic development and over their own lives — something far beyond what a worker in an ordinary capitalist society can imagine. When Deng Xiao Ping came to power, he threw away the "two participations" and restored the Soviet-style Stalinist economic system — the one-man system, under which workers have no say in factory. Still not satisfied with the Soviet system, he launched the campaigns to break the "iron rice workers' "iron rice bowl." Thus taking away those fundamental social and economic rights that Chinese workers acquired after the Revolution and turning them into capitalist workers who have to sell their labor power to make a living.

Yang Lingyan writes: "Mao Zedong often compared himself to and even scorned the first emperors of the most powerful dynasties throughout 3,000 years of Chinese history." Here, again, she tries to describe Mao as a new feudal emperor. What she says here is actually based on one of Mao's well-known poems written in the 1930s (The Spring of the Qin Garden/On Snow or Qin Yuan Chun / Xue), in which after summarizing the achievements of all the great emperors in Chinese history, Mao finished his poem by saying a sentence paraphrased as, "Who can really be counted as heroes in history? Let's find them in today's world." For anyone who is familiar with Mao Zedong and the Chinese revolution, it is apparent here that Mao is saying that great achievements of the ancient emperors were by no means comparable to the great cause that contemporary communist revolutionaries are pursuing, which will lead to the liberation of the great majority of people from all kinds of oppression and exploitation. At the very least, the meaning of the sentence is subject to different interpretations, and a proper interpretation must be based on correct understanding of the historical context. The author however, imposes her interpretation on the readers without citing any sources and giving any explanation of the context, as if Mao had indeed said something which could be understood, without ambiguity, that he was comparing himself to ancient emperors. It is even more mysterious where the word "often" comes from. For to my knowledge, and to the knowledge of many people, Qin Yuan Chun / Xue, is the only case among Mao's thousands of published works where Mao talks about "The first emperors of the most powerful dynasties throughout 3,000 years of Chinese history."

The author describes the Maoist era as an era of "ideological extremism," while the era of Deng Xiao Ping is one of "pragmatism." Well, Mao was so ideologically extreme, that his wife, his brother, and his sister all died in the revolutionary war. His son was sent by him to Korea, to fight U.S. imperialism, later losing his life. And what of Deng's sons and daughters? It is common knowledge in China, that his sons and daughter are among the richest, and therefore the most corrupt families in China. These "pragmatic" people certainly know how to make use of their father's influence to turn themselves into billionaires (in today's China, there is definitely an equivalence between billionaires and corruptness).

Deng has a well-known saying, "White cat or black cat, it is a good cat as long as it catches mice." It can be said nowadays that the following is the watchword of the Chinese ruling class, "socialism or capitalism, what makes me rich is a good system."

When Mao died, hundreds of millions of people inside and outside China cried, with their own tears (but of course, they were "ideologically dominated" weren't they?) When Deng died, who cried except his relatives?

Why do people have so different opinions about Mao Zedong and Deng Xiao Ping? This is not difficult to explain if you understand that these two great men served the interest of two completely different social classes and groups. In Maoist China, ordinary working people made enormous gains in both material and spiritual terms. But the ruling class was not free to exploit people, and the intellectuals who were, historically, a privileged group lost their economic and social privileges. Under Deng's China, there has been rapid economic growth, but social inequality has also been developed rapidly. Last year, according to official statistics, 40 percent of China's urban families suffered from an absolute decline in the real living standard. The Chinese capitalist economy continues to grow at a rate of near 10 percent, but it no longer benefits the great majority of people. More importantly, ordinary working people have lost their social and economic rights provided by socialism, and also lost their control over their own lives. Nowadays, the rulers are free to exploit people, and the people are free to be exploited.

Towards Mao Zedong, the Chinese upper class and middle class have nothing but hatred, but Chinese working people will always remember him as their "great leader." Towards Deng Xiao Ping, not only the Chinese ruling class and intellectuals, but also the western media have already had a lot of good words. And Chinese working people will not forget him either, for it is him who took away everything that Chinese working people have achieved with the socialist revolution. But of course, sooner or later, with a new great revolution, Chinese working people will take all of these things back.

Li Minqi is a UMass Graduate Student.

COURTESY MARTIN LUTHER KING WEBSITE

Martin Luther King Jr. (1929 – 1968)

A time to break silence

The following are excerpts from the historic address Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. delivered at a meeting of Clergy at the Riverside Church in New York City on 4 April 1967, a year before he was assassinated. Although this was not the first time he had expressed opposition to the Vietnam War, it was the first time he linked it to the civil rights movement. And it was the first time that he directly attacked the Johnson administration's war policy.

"Over the past two years, as I have moved to break the betrayal of my own silences and to speak from the burnings of my own heart, as I have called for radical departures from the destruction of Vietnam, many persons have questioned me about the wisdom of my path. …Why are you speaking about the war, Dr. King? Why are you joining the voices of dissent? … And when I hear them… I am nevertheless greatly saddened, for such questions mean that the inquirers have not really known me, my commitment or my calling. Indeed, their questions suggest that they do not know the world in which they live…"

"We were taking the black young men who had been crippled by our society and sending them eight thousand miles away to guarantee liberties in Southeast Asia which they had not found in southwest Georgia and East Harlem. So we have been repeatedly faced with the cruel irony of watching Negro and white boys on TV screens as they kill and die together for a nation that has been unable to seat them together in the same schools. So we watch them in brutal solidarity burning the huts of a village, but we realize that they would never live on the same block in Detroit…"

"They (the Vietnamese) must see Americans as strange liberators… All the while the people read our leaflets and received regular promises of peace and democracy, and land reform. Now they languish under our bombs and consider us, not their fellow Vietnamese, the real enemy… They know they must move or be destroyed by our bombs. So they go — primarily women and children and the aged."

"They watch as we poison their water, as we kill a million acres of their crops… They wander into the hospitals, which as least 20 casualties from American firepower for one "Viet-cong" inflicted injury. So far we may have killed a million of them, mostly children… They see the children degraded by our soldiers as they beg for food. They see the children selling their sisters to our soldiers, soliciting for their mothers…"

"The war in Vietnam is but a symptom of a far deeper malady within the American spirit, and if we ignore this sobering reality we will find ourselves organizing clergy and laymen concerned committees for the next generation. They will be concerned about Guatemala and Peru. They will be concerned about Thailand and Cambodia. They will be concerned about Mozambique and South Africa… Such thoughts take us beyond Vietnam, but not beyond our calling as sons of the living God…"

"Increasingly, by choice or by accident, this is the role our nation has taken — the role of those who make peaceful revolution impossible by refusing to give up the privileges and the pleasures that come from the immense profits of overseas investment…"

"A true revolution of values will soon look uneasily on the glaring contrast of poverty and wealth… This business of burning human beings with napalm, of filling our nation's homes with orphans and widows, of injecting poisonous drugs of hate into veins of peoples normally humane, of sending men home from dark and bloody battlefields physically handicapped and psychologically deranged, cannot be reconciled with wisdom, justice and love. A nation that continues year after year to spend more money on military defense than on programs of social uplift is approaching spiritual death…"

"These are revolutionary times. All over the globe men are revolting against old systems of exploitation and oppression and out of the womb of a frail world new systems of justice and equality are being born. The shirtless and barefoot people of the land are rising up as never before…"

Arts & Living

Tuesday, April 1, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New Hamlet is fine work of art

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

HAMLET
Directed by Kenneth Branagh with Kenneth Branagh, Kate Winslet, Derek Jacobi
Playing at Academy of Music

The hype of the art house circuit has finally arrived to Northampton — Kenneth Branagh's epic monster Hamlet. Uncut and featuring a cast of the same magnitude of a '70s disaster flick, Hamlet weighs in just a few minutes shy of four hours. Also, it is the first time a full production of Hamlet has ever been filmed.

By tackling such a daunting task, Branagh not only creates a dazzling Hamlet, he makes going to the movies an event — reminiscent of an era where seeing a movie was doing something substantial and not just something to do. The addition of an intermission to the film suggests the "quality" that's associated with the theater.

Yet, Branagh's latest never tries to divorce itself from its medium. Hamlet is filled with striking images that are unique to film — the majority of which come from Elsinore's main hall: two-way mirrors line the walls of the room as the floor is suggests the life-sized chess game that Hamlet sets up.

As the eponymous melancholy Dane, Branagh seems to be neither melancholy, nor a Dane. Updating the setting into the 19th century, Hamlet — with his bleach-blond tresses and jet-black waistcoat — looks like a classy Nazi. Branagh's interpretation of the character correlates: gone are the days of Hamlet sitting around postulating "to be or not to be." Branagh stares and screams and seems to insert action into a character who seems to have none. His Hamlet and his Hamlet are sleek and beautiful — true wonders that anything can seem sleek at four hours long.

Branagh also does well in his choices for supporting roles. Highlights are a gracefully aging Julie Christie as Gertrude and a smarmy Derek Jacobi as Claudius. There is something revolting about these two heads of state frolicking about like two love-sick teens, something that makes us empathize with Hamlet's mission.

As another standout performance, Kate Winslet's Ophelia shines in her dementia. Gone are the days of demure flowers: behind Branagh's mirrors lies a strait-jacketed Ophelia in a padded cell. She thrashes and screams, showing the pain after Polonius' murder.

Hamlet is not flawless, however. Several scenes betray themselves as sub-standard: Hamlet's meeting with the ghost of his father looks like something of a ride at Disney World and Branagh's final speech before intermission is done with a painfully obvious blue-screen behind him. Of the star- studded cast, Robin Williams' Osric seems to be the only performance untouched by Branagh's skillful hand as a director — the messenger's effeminate portrayal is unfunny and bordering on the offensive. These flaws are minor and barely scratch the surface of a monumental film. A

COURTESY PETER MOUNTAIN

Kenneth Branagh writes, directs and stars in Shakespeare's Hamlet as the obsessive prodigal son determined to avenge his father's murder.

COURTESY DANNY CLINCH

The bad boys from Boston, The Mighty Mighty Bosstones, return with their 6th full-length release.

The Bosstones pay homage to ska roots

By Adam Dlugacz
Collegian Staff

MIGHTY MIGHTY BOSSTONES
LET'S FACE IT
Mercury\Big Rig Records

The Bosstones are back, and after the disappointing Question The Answers, they have an awful lot to prove. The Mighty Mighty Bosstones success can mostly be attributed to their combination of hardcore punk, heavy metal and ska into an amalgamation that boils over with fun. In other words — the Bosstones are the perfect party band. However, after the release of their last album, there was a feeling that maybe the novelty had worn off and success had gotten to the heads of these Boston natives.

Let's Face It isn't the complete return to form that some of us had been hoping for but it is a start. The Plaid Boys of Boston have forsaken some of the speed and metal of their past albums for a much more roots-oriented ska album. The ferocious guitar licks of Joe Gittleman are no longer the mainstay of the songs as the horns have moved to the forefront. The Bosstones seem to be moving in the direction of other ska bands like Hepcat, the Slackers and others who are going for a more rock steady approach.

The newer side of the Bosstones is best exemplified on tracks like "Royal Oil" and the title track "Let's Face It". "Royal Oil" which enjoyed some commercial success as a single before the album came out is a total roots song that harkens back to the day of Desmond Decker, The Wailers and the Specials. The song's slow molasses-like beat will have you skanking in no time. "Let's Face It", an anti- racism and sexism song uses a reggae beat and had lead singer Dickey Barrett toasting, albeit in a rather hoarse voice.

"Noise Brigade" and "The Rascal King" kick off the album in fine fashion showing off the Bosstones new found mellower side, but will keep your feet moving. These songs also bring out most of the Bosstones' strengths. The combination of the horn section with Dickey's trademark vocals never sounded better and if you've liked the Bosstones since Devil's Night Out, you will thoroughly enjoy these songs.

Perhaps the one song that really shows the Bosstones at their best is "1-2-8", which could also be titled "Someday I Suppose Pt. 2". The song's catchy chorus hooks you in, the guitars pound you, and the horns provide you with the momentum to dance to the beat. The only dissappointing thing is that this is the style the Bosstones do best and it seems they have forsaken it.

While this album is a huge improvement over Question The Answers it does have its downfalls. The biggest problem are the lyrics. The Bosstones are fun when talking about drinking beer, or evading cops, or about bars, but when it comes to more serious issues, they fall short.

For instance, the lyrics to "Let's Face It" — "It's so hard to face that in this day and age somebody's race could trigger somebody's rage and somebody's preference can drive some total stranger to make somebody somehow feel the wrath of their anger... Be racist, be sexist, be bigot, be sure." While those lyrics are nice, it's something we've all heard a thousand times and it hasn't helped a thing. Maybe if the Bosstones sang about the fact that they were an interracial band and were so successful they'd have something a little more tangible.

The album also falls short on songs like "The Impression That I Get", "Another Drinkin' Song" and "Nevermind Me." Those songs are plain cheesy, they drip sap, and the Bosstones have to understand that they are at their best when they're playing high powered ska-core or even the newer more rock steady stuff. It's the emotional slowed down songs that are terrible and were the down fall of their last album, as well as this one. B

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Nachos 5.45 2.98
Vegetarian Potato Skins 7.25 3.63
Fried Cheese & Onion Rings 6.25 3.13
1/2 PRICE!
Judies
DOWNTOWN AMHERST
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

Meeting Notice
Top of the Campus, Incorporated (TOC, Inc.) will hold its annual meeting in Campus Center 903, May 8, 1997, 2:00p.m.

OOPS!
•Free Estimates
•Lifetime Repair Warranty
•Auto Glass Replacement
•Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA
549-2880
(One Mile from UMass on the bus route)

ACADEMIC MANAGEMENT SERVICES
Summer Jobs! Windows of Opportunities Job Fair!
Saturday, April 12th • Over 100 Positions Available
• Office Positions in Customer Service, Data Entry
• Seeking Individuals with Stong Communication Skills, Computer Keyboard Experience
• Flexible Work Schedule (Days, Evenings, Saturdays)
• No Sales, Paid Training, Fast Paced Environment
• Potential for Continued Employment During School Breaks
• Casual Office Attire
Saturday April 12th, 1997 8:00am to 3:00pm PLACE: Providence Marriott One Orms Street Providence, RI
Please Schedule an Interview for the AMS Job Fair by Calling (401) 435-2900
AMS is currently located at: 20 Vision Boulevard East Providence Rhode Island 02915 Moving to Swansea during the Summer of 97

Way Cool.
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS SOFTWARE ASSOCIATION
41 Main Street • Florence, MA 01060 • 413-584-3449 • fax 413-584-2495
SOFTWARE JOB FAIR '97
Tuesday, April 1, 11 a.m–7 p.m.
Springfield MA Sheraton Monarch Hotel Grand Ballroom
OVER 30 COMPANIES SEEKING!
• Software Engineers • Technical Writers • Systems Analysts
• Network Specialists • MIS Professionals • Application Programmers
• Quality Assurance • System/LAN Administrators
• Software Managers ...and many more!!!
FREE ADMISSION · BRING YOUR RESUME
SPONSORED BY
Fidelity Investments · JavaNet · APPLIED PC · MassMutual The Blue Chip Company SM · Computer Pro Technology
For more information: http://www.wmsa.org

Folk icon Odetta enchants her crowd

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

ODETTA
Iron Horse Music Hall
March 29, 1997

With 40 years of professional singing experience, and a catalogue of seemingly hundreds of folk tunes in the English language embedded in her mind, the pleasant lady, Odetta, took the Iron Horse stage on Saturday night.

Odetta appeared as she always has — elegantly and colorfully dressed, with just her acoustic guitar, the only thing accompanying her voice in song. Well, then again, she did prompt many sing-alongs to many age-old tunes, such as the opener campfire tune, "Kumbaya," which was first brought into our culture by her peer folk singer Pete Seeger.

She continued the evening with traditional spirituals as well as blues and topical songs, such as "Johnny's Gone For A Soldier," passed on from Ireland after the 1916 Easter Rebellion In Dublin. This was sung in her straight, deep storytelling voice that sounds wiser as she has gets older. From this otherworldly, authoritative tone, she sunk right into the deep, folk blues of "I Hate To Hear That Lonesome Whistle Blow." On this song, she employed a very lowdown voicing reminiscent of Howlin' Wolf.

Continuing on through the spiritual "I'm A Poor Wayfaring Stranger," Odetta, after 30 minutes, realized she had the crowd's full attention and so she continued feeding lyrics to the audience so that the people could sing the lines with her, to bring the full force and soul of the songs out into the open.

Odetta's performance and the large crowd of people who attended, proved to any skeptics that there is still a desire to hear these age-old tunes, most of which are not necessarily written as much as they were just performed by one person and passed down orally through generations. This oral tradition would often occur until some Library of Congress or Smithsonian field worker finally put them to disc and paper. Dan Bern's opening performance further proved that folk is alive and well, and that the subjects of folk have moved from "Stagger Lee" and "John Henry" to Monica Seles and Kurt Cobain.

COURTESY NICK DOUGHERTY

Up and coming folk musician Dan Bern impressed his audience at the Iron Horse last Friday.

Rising star Bern surprises Iron Horse

By Justin Beland
Collegian Correspondent

DAN BERN
Iron Horse
March 28

The circle proved to be unbroken Friday night at the Iron Horse, as Dan Bern, one of the most engaging new singer/songwriters in recent memory opened for the legendary Odetta. Bern, a relative newcomer to the folk scene left a lasting impression on the crowd as he weaved beautiful melodies with his unique brand of lyrical poetry and humor. He opened his set with "Jerusalem," the first track off his self-titled debut album on Sony/Work records, by singing to his audience, "If you must put me in a box, make sure it's a big box." This indicated that, though primarily a folk singer, there is certainly no single label that he can be tagged with.

Bern's next song, about the stabbing of tennis star Monica Seles, was written that very day, and Bern told his audience that he was playing it to earn "brownie points" with Odetta. Bern expressed his admiration for the folk pioneer several times, saying she was an inspiration for him to get into folk music in the first place. Even though his career is young, Bern has already attracted quite a following, and cheers erupted when he played the crowd favorites "Kurt," in which he laments over the loss of Kurt Cobain, another inspiration of his, and "Marilyn," a song which he describes as "a love song for two people who never met," Marilyn Monroe and author Henry Miller.

Though only on stage for about 20 minutes, Bern won the crowd over almost instantly and with no difficulty at all. He left the stage to tremendous applause from the crowd; a crowd which was undoubtedly happy to see that a folk scene which has been wavering in recent years has an extremely talented young artist to breathe new life into it.

After the show, as fans approached him to give their praise, Bern said this newfound fame has come very gradually. Regarding the praise he gets, he said though he hasn't quite gotten used to it, but "why would you want to?" Bern, who acknowledged that he tries to write a song a day, said that though some songs deal with topical and political issues, they're all things that effect him personally. "If it doesn't touch me, why write about it?" he asked. "I write about things that make me laugh, make me cry, get me mad, and if those are issues that are out there, well, okay." Bern's talent has led many music critics to name him "the Real Deal," a name he says he enjoys.

Bern will be in our vicinity again, opening for Ani DiFranco in Durham, N.H. on April 20. (He also mentioned that he and DiFranco may be working on a record together in the Fall). "The Real Deal" proved he deserves that name to the Iron Horse crowd on Friday, and since his tour schedule shows no signs of letting up, it won't be long before Dan Bern secures a status as one of the best new artists in the business.

BC coach latest OSU interview

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Add Boston College coach Jim O'Brien to the list of candidates for the Ohio State coaching job.

O'Brien arrived in Columbus yesterday to interview for the position, sports information director Steve Snapp said.

"He has meetings with (athletics director Andy) Geiger and other university officials," Snapp said.

Snapp said he did not know if O'Brien would be offered the job during the meetings. O'Brien, 46, has coached at Boston College for 11 seasons.

O'Brien left campus late yesterday afternoon with a comment to reporters.

Ohio State has tapped Boston College for a coach before. The Buckeyes took Gary Williams from BC in 1986 and he coached Ohio State to a 59-43 record in three seasons before leaving for Maryland, his alma mater.

O'Brien is 168-166 at BC and 234-216 in 15 seasons of college coaching. The Eagles are 41-20 in the last two seasons and have won 17 or more games in four of the last five years. They made it to the NCAA final 16 four years ago, and won the Big East regular-season and tournament titles this year.

O'Brien has two years left on a contract that reportedly pays him between $350,000 and $400,000 a year.

Geiger also has talked with Kevin Stallings of Illinois State, Steve Alford of Southwest Missouri State and Mike Jarvis of George Washington. Two coaches thought to be top candidates going into the search, Bob Huggins of Cincinnati and Pete Gillen of Providence, apparently have not been contacted.

Geiger plans to interview finalists for both the men's and women's jobs on campus this week. The vacancies were created March 10 when Geiger fired men's coach Randy Ayers and women's coach Nancy Darsch.

San Diego State coach Beth Burns, a former Ohio State graduate assistant, also reportedly met with Geiger yesterday.

Amy Tucker, associate head women's coach at Stanford, said she met with Geiger for about an hour in Cincinnati on Sunday. The former Ohio State player said Geiger did not offer her the job during the interview.

Martina Hingis on top of the world

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — Martina Hingis became the youngest No. 1 player in tennis history yesterday, making her the teen to beat. The 16-year-old Swiss sensation likes her new role, and she's unconcerned about any pitfalls or pressure that may await her. "Everyone is expecting you to beat every player in the world right now," Hingis said yesterday at Hilton Head Island, S.C., where she'll compete this week in the Family Circle Cup.

"But if you don't make it, it doesn't matter. In tennis you have so many chances. When you don't play well in one tournament, the next week it's another one."

Hingis, who claimed her fifth title of 1997 at the Lipton Championships on Saturday, supplanted Steffi Graf in the WTA Tour rankings released yesterday. Graf had held at least a share of the No. 1 ranking since June 1995.

Monica Seles, who reached the top of the rankings at age 17 in 1991, was the youngest previous No. 1.

Because Graf has been sidelined for two months with a knee injury, Hingis was assured of No. 1 even if she lost her opening match at Lipton. Instead she won the tournament, blitzing Seles 6-2, 6-1 in the final.

"I am unbeatable in this year right now," Hingis said. Her record in 1997 is 26-0, and her dominance has been deceptive. She lacks the power of Graf or Seles, but she anticipates well and mixes her shots with an intelligence uncommon for one so young.

Hingis left Key Biscayne with a crystal trophy, $215,000 and plenty of testimonials from those she beat.

"She's very fast, and she gets back a lot of balls," Seles said. "She creates shots out of places you don't expect them." "When she's playing well, you have to play almost perfect tennis to beat her," Mary Joe Fernandez said.

"I think there is once in awhile, once in a hundred years, this kind of player," Jana Novotna said.

Melanie Molitor, Hingis' mother and coach, clearly is doing something right — although the child prodigy might be reluctant to admit it.

"You don't want to really listen to somebody else," said Hingis, sounding like a typical teen, "because you have to be on the court by yourself anyway."

Molitor named her daughter after Martina Navratilova and began entering her in tournaments in Czechoslovakia at the age of 4. Hingis became the youngest French Open junior champion at 12, and the youngest Grand Slam champion in this century at the Australian Open in January.

Now, she is the youngest No. 1, fueling anticipation of her next meeting with Graf. Hingis has lost five of six matches against Graf, but they have yet to play this year.

Graf will be sidelined for at least four more weeks.

"Steffi at her best and Martina at her best is a great match," Fernandez said. "Martina has the legs to run down Steffi's big forehands. She's able to come in and put Steffi on defense, Steffi has the big serve and can maybe outhit her on her forehand side. "I can't say that one is better than the other."

Hingis looks forward to the showdown.

"For sure one day it's going to come," she said, "and we'll see who's the better player."

QUIT FOOLING AROUND!!
ha! ha! WRITE ha! ha!
ha! ha! FOR ha! ha!
ha! ha! SPORTS! ha! ha!

BE A GOOD NEIGHBOR
American Heart Association
Volunteer.

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD--
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

Do we know how to spoil you?
Worker-owned CollectiveCopies

Knowledge Grows Here!
Summer Session at Stony Brook
Terms start June 2 and July 14
260 courses in 40 subjects
Day and evening classes
Low NYS tuition
Live on campus or commute
Please send me the 1997 Summer Session catalog or check out our web page at Http://www.sunysb.edu/summer/
Name
Street/Box No.
City State Zip
Telephone Area of interest
School currently attending Anticipated year of graduation
STONY BROOK STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK
Mail coupon or call 24 hours 1-800-559-7213. E-mail: summerschool@ccmail.sunysb.edu Or write: Summer Session Office, Dept. CN, University at Stony Brook, Stony Brook, NY 11794-3370

Calvin Klein
25% off
Calvin Klein Basic Underwear Styles
2 Weeks Only!
March 27-April 10
J·RICH CLOTHING FOR MEN
22 Masonic Street
Northampton • 586-6336
Open 7 Days

FAMOUS FOR 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
I always get Fish n' Chips at Pete's
PETE'S
ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA
YEAR 'ROUND
http://www.javanet/~mrburger/

MUSKIER TOURS & SUMMER DISCOVERY
Counselors needed for our student programs and/or our pre-college enrichment programs. Applicants must be 21 years old by June 20, 1997
We Need:
• Mature
• Hard Working
• Energetic individuals who can dedicate 4-7 weeks this summer working with teenagers.
For more information and applications:
Please call us at (516) 621-0710 in NY or (888) 8SUMMER or Email : staff@summerfun.com
Visit our tour director on April 14th in rm. 902 Campus Center from 9-5

PUB SPRINGFIELD
382 Dwight St. • Springfield, Ma • 413-734-8123
9pm Largest Gay Entertainment Complex in Southern New England 2am
Dance DOWN UNDER Club!!
ALL MALE REVIEW FRIDAY NIGHTS
Dancers and Bartenders Wanted Call Bob

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over our lease or will sublet starting June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brendywine. Rent includes heat and hot water. Call 549-0530

Summer Apt. Available 6/1 with Fall option. Clean, 2 bedroom in Brandywine. $75/month includes gas, hot water and heat. On bus line 1 mile from UMass 549-0879

AUTO FOR SALE

87 Ford Escort A/C, F/M, 5-speed 104K miles, $1725 (413)256-1238

1985 Toyota Corolla good shape, 129K miles. $1000 Call 253-3264

1983 Red Renault Alliance Coupe Only 76K miles, automatic transmission, runs well, body in excellent condition, new brakes, starter, battery. Clarion AM/FM cassette. Must sell! $1000 or B.O. 549-4584

1992 Ford Explorer 4x4, A/C, 5-speed, 2 door, 90K, looks and runs excellent! $9500. 549-6994

EMPLOYMENT

PAINTERS- Full-time summer, EXPERIENCE PREFERRED, vehicle, references, heavy lifting required 9:00-5:00 ONLY. 247-9480

Summer in Maine- Camp Androscoggin for boys needs staff to teach tennis, soccer, lacrosse, baseball, swimming, sailing, archery, photography, nature, fishing, mountain biking, art, ropes, radio. Have Fun. Have An Impact. Write, e-mail, or call Collet: 801 West Street, Harrison, NY 10528 (914)835-5800 http://www.coolworks.com/showme /camp/androa

EDUCATION MAJORS!!
DON'T JUST WORK THIS SUMMER. COME GROW PROFESSIONALLY AT AMERICA'S PREMIER BROTHER/SISTER CAMPS WINADU FOR BOYS DANBEE FOR GIRLS IN WESTERN MASS.
SALARY / ROOM / BOARD AND TRAVEL INCLUDED!!
COME VISIT WITH OUR REPRESENTATIVE. THURSDAY, APRIL 3RD 802 CAMPUS CENTER 10AM - 4PM (WALK-INS WELCOME!)
FOR MORE INFO CALL 800-494-6238

Capa Cod West Yarmouth Resort needs reliable maids Saturday only, 9:30am - 4:30pm $80.00 per day. Bonus if you stay through 8/30. (508)775-0985

Drivers Wanted College students, anyone to sell Good Humor Ice Cream from one of our vanding trucks. Work outdoors this summer. Be your own boss. RTS available in your area. Earn $750-950/weekly. Male or female. Apply now. Call

EMPLOYMENT

Mon.-Sat. 9am-3pm. only. (203)366-2941 or (800)899-1009

NEED MONEY $50 a week, short morning hours. Contact Mark or Alycia at 545-3500 or stop by The Collegian in the Campus Center Basement.

SUMMER JOBS
Communication Assistant- MA Telecommunications Relay Service, Holyoke, MA. Requirements: Typing 50wpm; clear speaking voice; good phone skills; dependable; positive attitude; full-time and part-time positions. Flexible shifts. Call (413)493-1100 for an appointment

Vermont Adventural Farm and Wilderness is now hiring summer staff. We need people who want to provide positive guidance and support to adolescents coming of age in the 90's. Counselors, nurses, cooks, general staff. Organic farming, backpacking, rock climbing, waterfront, carpentry, crafts. Challenging wilderness environment in the Green Mountains of Vermont. Contact Philip Tobin (802)422-3781 or f e n d w @ s o v a r . n e t (http://www.fendw.org)

Hadley Office has 10 part-time openings for Field Service Reps in its Customer Service Division. Responsibilities include Marketing, Service, and light Deliveries in Amherst, Hadley, and Northampton areas.

$8/$12 hour
Call 584-7696
10am. to 4pm
Ask for Frank Biasi

EMPLOYMENT

Hadley Office has several part-time positions available in its Marketing Dept.
- Evening and Weekend Shifts
- Fun Atmosphere
- Daily, Weekly, and Monthly Bonuses
- On Bus Line
- 15 to 35 hours a week $7.87/0 hour

Call 584-7696 between 2pm and 9pm.

Need a summer job? Know the web? Sell MCI Internet Websites to anyone, whenever you want to work. Low cost, nice income for you. Call (800)372-7683 or e-mail for more information. dlenger@aol.com

Leasing Agents Full and Part Time for the busy summer session. Must be outgoing, friendly, and willing to work many hours. Responsibilities include collecting rent, processing applications, answering phones and general clerical work. Please apply in person at Cliffside Apartments between 1-4pm. No phone calls please. EOE

Earn great money and valuable Sales/Marketing experience. Mensolino's Mensboards are coming to UMass! We need one highly motivated individual to direct our sales project. Contact David at (800)563-6654

Technical Support/ISP Looking for a great part-time job? We are a local, progressive, internet service provider that is looking for Quality, Energetic, and Reliable persons to join our team. Requirements: experience in Windows '95, Windows 3.1, Mac, Dialup Networking and TC PIP. Call our job hotline today! (413)587-

EMPLOYMENT

4333 or e-mail jobs@crocker.com

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast! Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

Cruise and Lend Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. CS0017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Sugarloaf Estates Ultra modern, two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers, and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Now leasing Spring and Fall! Call 665-3856

4 bedroom apartment 2 bath, 2 large living rooms. Located on bus route in South Amherst. Call 256-1581

Summer Rental- West Hyannis Port Cape Cod three bedroom. Walk to Craigville Beach. Available 5/25-8/31. (508)778-8519

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-8000

FOR SALE

Lite Speed Titanium 50 centimeter road bike. Ridden once. Need immediate funds. Paid $1700, asking $1150 or B/O. 253-6452

Buy wholesale, not retail. The last phone card you will ever own. MCI Pre-paid only $2.00 for 10 minutes. This card is rechargeable. Mail $2.00 and SASE to: Collegrete Communications, P.O. Box 785, Attleboro, MA 02703 (800)372-7683

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT
30 hours, $395
American Academy
1-800-869-Prep
(please leave your name and number)

LOST

Gold Chain and Pendant in Boyden. Great personal value to me. Please call Hilary 256-4546

MUSICIANS

DRUMMER WANTED
Punk/Ska Band 25 Liars needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming. Call Dave and Ryan 665-9112

PERSONALS

Jason- You wanted on me in the I.D. Office. I think you're hot so please meet me if interested, in TOC @ 9:00 tonight for an experience you won't forget.

PERSONALS

Edwin, There is so much to say but I don't think I can ever say them all. Just remember that I love and care about you very much. I can't imagine spending my life without you. I'm always here for you babe! Te quiero mucho! Love, Su Novia Sue

FOR RENT

Two bedroom apt. ASAP! Mill Valley Estates. Rent negotiable. Call 253-0592

SERVICES

Rental Problems Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Piercings by the Boardad Lady 272 State St. Northampton. 586-0629

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

Summer/Fall Option 1 bedroom in a 2 bedroom. Sunny, huge, clean. 10 min. from campus. Available 5/15 or 6/1. Jen 259-1581

SUMMER SUBLET

CHEAP SUBLET- Summer/Fall Option. Two bedroom apartment on Sunderland bus line. $500/month. Shelly 665-0087

SUMMER SUBLET

3 bedroom Puffton available 6/1 549-5541

TO SUBLET

Four girls to sublet an apt/house for Fall '97. Must be on bus route. Please call either Roxy at 6-2778, Heather at 6-1872, or Katy/Renee at 6-3114.

1 bedroom apartment available immediately. Call Tricia for more info. (617)247-2388

TRAVEL

EUROPE $175.
Within USA $79 - $129.
Caribb./Mexico $199. r/t
Cheap Fares Worldwide!!!!!!
http://www.airhitch.org
AIRHITCH (800)326-2009

Party Weekend in Vermont April 4-6, only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Montreal- Party Weakend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus $115. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian Classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Collegian MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and phone # of the author. Failure to supply the required info in on the classified order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the classified order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or typo.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, APRIL 1

Colloquium — Aorewa McLeod, a Five College Women's Studies Research Associate from the University of Auckland, New Zealand, will give a Colloquium entitled, "Silenced Narratives: Why New Zealand Women Stopped Writing," at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke college. Informal reception to follow talk. Free and open to the public.

Open house — Thatcher Foreign Language Programs and Thatcher International Program are hosting an open house from 6:30–7:30 p.m. in Thatcher Hall, Northeast Residential Area. Visitors will have the opportunity to learn about programs, sign up for one or more of them next year, or just get refreshments.

Workshop — A yoga and meditation session will be held by the Ananda Marga Club at the Main Lounge in Butterfield Residence Hall at 8 p.m. This session will introduce attendees to basic meditation and Yoga techniques. There is no fee or registration. All are welcome. Please contact 253–9533 for more information.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2

Exhibit — The Bottom Drawer, a sculpture and painting exhibit by Harriet Diamond and Linda Batchelor, will open today and run through April 24 in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space in the Student Union. An opening reception will be held April 4 at 5 p.m. and an open panel discussion will be held April at 10:45 a.m.

Film — The Student Union Visual Arts and Performing Arts Space "Faces" series will screen a video on Marc Chagall at 4:30 p.m.

Forum — A "Society and Starvation" forum will be held on the Student Union steps from noon–1 p.m. Speakers will address problems in society and what students can do to help these issues. This event is sponsored by MassPIRG.

Lecture — The Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies (PAWSS) will sponsor a talk by Dr. Cynthia McClintock on "Peace and Rebellion in Latin America After the Cold War," at 8 p.m. in the Hasbrouck 20. The event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series will feature Lorna McLean, a visiting Canadian historian, on "Gender, Community and Crime in the 19th Century Ontario," from 12:15–1:30 in the Campus Center, room 162–175. Coffee and tea will be available. Feel free to bring a lunch. Free and open to everyone.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will meet in the Campus Center, room 903, at 7 p.m. New members are always welcome; come and read or just to listen and talk. For more information, call Tim at 546-0562 or Kaye at 546- 1459.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold its weekly meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Reading — The Five College Women's Studies Research Center will host a reading and book signing for editor Arlene Avakian and local contributore Martha Ayres, Sally Bellerose, Jyl Lynn Felman, Jennifer Iré and Cheryl Savageau, of the book Through the Kitchen Window: Women Explore the Intimate Meanings of Food and Cooking at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College. Informal reception to follow talk. Free and open to the public.

Seminar — The UMass Amherst Neuroscience and Behavior Program Seminars will feature James E. Crandall, Developmental Neurobiology, from the E.K. Shriver Center, on "Early Development of the Cerebral Cortex," hosted by Thomas Zoeller, at 4 p.m. in Room 319 of Morrill Science Center II.

THURSDAY, APRIL 3

Discussion — The Five College Coastal & Marine Sciences Alum Career and Grad School panel discussion will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Amherst College, Pratt Museum, room 5.

Workshop — Thinking about Graduate School? Grad students and professors will offer advice and tips on taking the GRE, applying for grad school, etc., at 5:30 p.m. in Gunness Student Center. Everyone is welcome. Organized by Tau Beta Pi National Engineering Honors Society.

NOTICES

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Financial aid — Applications for summer financial aid are now available at Financial Aid Services. You must be a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass; taking summer classes through Continuing Education; going on approved summer international exchange program through IPO; or working on a graduate dissertation. Deadline is April 18. Late applications will not be accepted. –

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, conact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thurday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

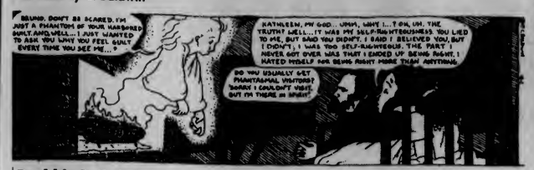
Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PSA, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

VEGETABLE SONORA ○ SCAMPI ○ T-BONE STEAK ○ CHICKEN BBQ ○ PASTA ROJA
PORTBELLO MUSHROOM ○ CHICKEN QUESADILLA ○ MUSHROOM ONION CHEESEBURGER
BLACKENED CATFISH ○ SPANISH ORZO ○ STUFFED PORK CHOPS ○ NACHOS
BERKSHIRE BREWING COMPANY ○ MARGARITAS ○ BLACK FOREST CHEESECAKE
SCREAMING COWBOYS ○ AND MUCH MORE...

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network



2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
Full menu 'til 1 a.m. - Every night!

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 1, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Kidnapped by UFOs?"		Frontline (In Stereo)		World of National Geographic		Imaging America
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am Journal	Mysterious Man of the Shroud		"The Last Boy Scout" (1991, Drama) Bruce Willis.		News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Mysterious Man of the Shroud		"The Last Boy Scout" (1991, Drama) Bruce Willis.		News		Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Roseanne	Ellen (R)	Home Imp.	Spin City	Practice "Part V" (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		48 Hours "Hitler's Children" (1990, Comedy) Tom Hanks.				News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy	Mad Abo. You	Something So	Frasier	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Moesha (R)	Social Studies	In the House	In the House	News	LAPD	R. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Mad Abo. You	Something So	Frasier	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	"Hot Shots! Part Deux" (1993, Comedy) Charlie Sheen.		News				Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy	Mad Abo. You	Something So	Frasier	Caroline	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Kidnapped by UFOs?"		Frontline (In Stereo)		Imaging America		Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Roseanne	Ellen (R)	Home Imp.	Spin City	Practice "Part V" (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld		Mad Abo. You	Real TV	NBA Basketball: Boston Celtics at Chicago Bulls. (Live)				Mad Abo. You	Martin
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	"Predator" (1987, Science Fiction) Arnold Schwarzenegger, Carl Weathers.						"Stone Cold" (1991) Brian Bosworth.
A&E	69	Quincy "A Test for Living"		Law & Order "Rage"		Biography "Annette Funicello"		"Cracker: Men Should Weep" (1994, Mystery) Robbie Coltrane, Barbara Flynn.
CNN	24	World View		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Rtvs.	Moneyline
COM	26	Tick	Baseball-a III	Daily Show (R)	Comic Relief	Gallagher: Wa Need a Hero (R)		Robin Williams: Off the Wall		Viva Variety	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	63	Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings "Russian Giants" (R)		Wild Discovery: Lowland		New Detectives (R) (Part 1 of 3)		CIA-Secret Warriors		Wild Discovery: Lowland
ESPN	27	(4:00) Major League Baseball		Sportscenter		Major League Baseball: New York Yankees at Seattle Mariners. (Live)						Sportscenter
LIFE	59	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"With a Vengeance" (1992, Suspense) Melissa Gilbert-Brinkman.				Living	Mysteries
MTV	53	(5:30) Music Videos (In Stereo)		Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Unplugged (In Stereo)		Music Videos (In Stereo)		Buzzkill	World Tour (R)	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	68	Pete & Pete	Ren & Stimpy	Doug	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Teal	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	55	Twilight Zone	Darkside	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Seaquest DSV (In Stereo)		Forever Knight (In Stereo)		VR.5 "Parallel Lives" (In Stereo)		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)
TLC	25	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Medical Detect	Danger Zone	Ancient Prophecies One (R)		Science Fiction, Science Fact		Medical Detect	Danger Zone
TNT	31	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball: Los Angeles Lakers at Seattle SuperSonics. (Live)					Inside-NBA	"The Road Warrior" (1981)
USA	60	Renegade "Most Wanted"		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote (In Stereo)		Boxing: Hector Camacho vs. Sugar Ray Leonard.				Wings	Wings
HBO	42	"Tucker" (1988, Drama) Corey Haim. (In Stereo) PG-13				"Chocolate" (1996, Suspense) Sharon Stone. R				Countdown	"Crash Dive" (1997) Michael Dudikoff.
MAX	43	(5:00) "Ladyhawke" (1985) Rodney Dangerfield.				"Fatliners" (1990, Suspense) Kelly Sutherland.				"April Fool's Day" (1986) Deborah Foreman.		Erotic
SHOW	41	(5:55) "Eight Men Out" (1988, Drama) John Cusack. PG				"Fast Money" (1996, Drama) Yancy Butler.		"Silver Thunder" (1993, Adventure) Roy Scheider.				Red Shoe

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

University³ By Frank Cho

Loodoo By Mike Rybicki

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21-April 20
The best way to handle financial problems this week is by cutting expenses. Reevaluate exactly what is a necessity and what is a luxury, and you should notice results almost immediately.

TAURUS
April 21-May 21
A professional decision begins to impact your working environment early this week. Although change can be stressful, try to think of all the implications—there may be some that are favorable to you, especially financial.

GEMINI
May 22-June 21
Getting together with a partner means more than doubling your effectiveness for a particularly knotty problem. Avoid taking credit cards when you go shopping this week, because the temptation to spend what you don't have may be too great.

CANCER
June 22-July 22
A problem that flares up again may be nearly solved, if you step back from it and change your perspective a little. Avoid all distractions to improve your odds of finding a solution, and don't allow office politics to interfere with your efforts.

LEO
July 23-August 23
Someone in a position of power is likely to notice anything unusual that happens this week. Making an extra effort to impress them, without being obvious, is likely to pay dividends at this time. Put on your thinking cap, and go for it!

VIRGO
August 24-September 22
A good week for making long-term plans. Your insight is keen, and your diplomatic streak is running strongly—you can probably get certain people to do just about anything. Arrange for a discussion on a controversial subject.

LIBRA
September 23-October 23
Advice from an old friend proves to be right on the money in financial matters. Seeking alternate sources of income may prove fruitful—perhaps you can market a skill you didn't realize you had. Avoid a tendency to overspend and break the budget.

SCORPIO
October 24-November 22
A recent fling may have left you feeling broke. Economizing in little ways will keep creditors at bay and leave you feeling stronger. If health problems are bothering you, do your own research. The experts may have missed a vital clue.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23-December 21
An itch to travel may be an early sign of burnout. Take easy steps to refresh your energies—eat well, sleep enough and ask for extra TLC from friends and family. Planning a vacation carefully means it will be relaxing instead of stressful.

CAPRICORN
December 22-January 20
An evening get-together is fun for everyone involved, so perhaps you should issue a few extra invitations. Just to spice things up. A chance you take in the romantic arena could pay off big-time, if you say what you really feel.

AQUARIUS
January 21-February 18
This week, your practicality is a virtue as you stretch your paycheck through a pinch. Plan on a few indulgences in the near future, though, so you don't feel deprived. A close chat's forming now could be just what you're looking for.

PISCES
February 19-March 20
Something you've been pondering for a long time could suddenly become very clear, if you stop agonizing and focus on another topic for awhile. Enjoy a younger person's fresh ideas and optimism for a break in your everyday routine.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

Quote of the Day

"People who wish to commit murder, they better not do it in the state of Florida because we may have a problem with our electric chair."

Florida's Attorney General Bob Butterworth

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams

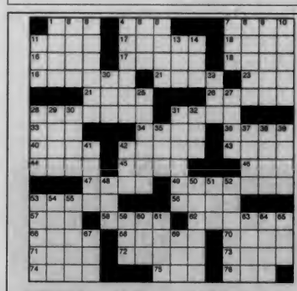
University³ By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH: Hamburger, Grilled Cheese, Chicken Wings
DINNER: Roast Turkey, Southern Fried Steak, Garden Chili

Worcester

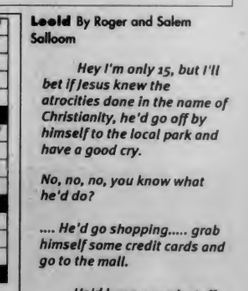


LUNCH: Hamburger, Spaghetti, Harvest Burger, Falafel
DINNER: Roast Turkey, Pastabilities, Sicilian Spaghetti

Hampshire

LUNCH: Hamburger, Grilled Cheese, Chicken a la King
DINNER: Roast Turkey, Southern Fried Steak

Berkshire



LUNCH: Hamburger, Harvest Burger, SPaghettii
DINNER: Roast Turkey, Ribs, Pastabilities, Sicilian Spaghetti

ACROSS
1. Corn-attacking sound
4. Ruffian
7. In apple-pie order
11. Doña's digs
12. Midwest airport
15. "Yes, lad, ___ easy" (Housman) (2 wds.)
16. Gung ho
17. Habituality
18. Billions of years
19. Deviatize
21. Alimony payers
23. 22nd letter
24. Place: Fr.
28. Conjecture
29. Forwards anew
31. Features of violins
33. Poison
34. In a frenzy
36. Looked at
40. Goddess with a temple at Philae
42. Looking down on
43. Carry on wildly
44. In case
45. Certain club
46. Actor Tommy ___ Jones
47. Double-reed instrument
48. Generosity
52. Army vehicles
56. Watchdog gp.
57. Busy month for a CPA (abbr.)
58. Actor Guinness
62. Louisiana county
66. Gulf War heroes (abbr.)
68. Martini swimmer
70. Fillet's lack
71. Snout
72. Rich fabric
73. Director Bunuel
74. Fedr
75. Call it quits
76. Geller's claim to fame (abbr.)

DOWN
1. Grotto
2. Hong Kong's locale
3. Walk like a duck
4. Fawned
5. Television setting
6. Water or Iran ending
7. ___ tack
8. Meaning of "amo" (2 wds.)
9. Wines and ___
10. Toady's responses
11. Bounder
13. Last name in dinosaurs
14. Chemical suffix
20. Bonn "on"
22. NOO
25. Operative
27. One who takes advantage
28. Annoy
29. Let up
30. Snow gear
31. Library offerings
32. Tiny Tim's instrument
35. Country singer Bandy
37. Eli's alma mater
38. Prehistory times
39. Low grades
41. Prevent
42. "Long, Long ___"
48. Jamboree inits.
50. Attach
51. Home to "His Master's Voice"
52. Distort
53. Pleasure trip
54. ___ safe
55. Make an error disappear
59. Alamitos
60. Note in Giulio's scale
61. Summon
63. Debt memos
64. Clip
65. "Tim Dickens, ___ Feinster"
67. Marsh
68. French beverage

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Leold By Roger and Salem Salloom

Hey I'm only 15, but I'll bet if Jesus knew the atrocities done in the name of Christianity, he'd go off by himself to the local park and have a good cry.

No, no, no, you know what he'd do?

.... He'd go shopping..... grab himself some credit cards and go to the mall.

He'd buy so much stuff he'd start foaming at the mouth and start telling o bunch of jokes.

Moses, Mohammed and Ron Kurtz were already there.

UM to face Connecticut if weather allows

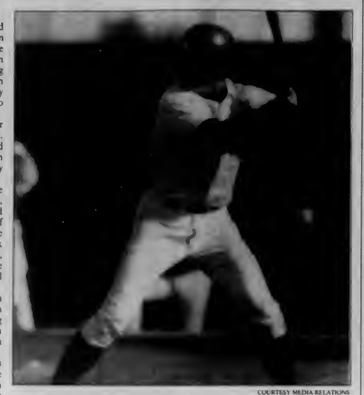
By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts baseball team went into this weekend's action against Virginia Tech a little worried, having rolled in on the heels of an error-filled 14–8 win over Holy Cross on Wednesday. The Hokies were last year's A–10 West regular season champions, and UMass had to begin conference play with a three game set against what many consider the Minutemen's main competition for the A–10 crown.

But after dropping the opener 11–2, the Minutemen rolled, spanking Virginia Tech 7–1 in the second of a double-header on Saturday, and then coming back to beat the Hokies 4–2 on Sunday. The Minutemen are now in first place in the Atlantic–10 East division, and have some momentum heading into today's scheduled match–up at Connecticut (3:00 p.m.). If, as expected, the game is postponed, the Minutemen will next play at Hartford on Wednesday.

"We played well for two of the three games," UMass coach Mike Stone said." It's real good for us to win a game like [Sunday] it's good for our development to win a game where we have to come from behind, because we've usually been up in the games that we've won. Scott Barnsby pitched a great game [as well]."

UMass had its most dramatic and most important win of the season on Sunday. Down 2–1 in the top of the ninth, sophomore transfer Adam Correa hit a three run home run, giving the Minutemen a dramatic 4–2 win over the Hokies. Junior Scott Barnsby pitched a complete game six–hitter to improve to 2–0 on the year.



"The team showed a lot of character coming back and winning.[on Sunday]. [Adam] Correa did what every kid dreams about, hitting a home run in the ninth to win the game." Barnsby said.

UMASS vs. UCONN

The Minutemen have won eight of their last ten, and have had their second straight A–10 Player of the Week. Sophomore catcher Brain Samela took the honors by batting .545 last week, including three doubles and a home run. Bryan Mazzafero won the award for the week ending March 24th.

Samela and senior catcher Jason Kudrikow have provided punch from behind the plate. Kudrikow is batting .529 this year (9–for–17), and Samela is hitting .433 with two home runs in nine games.

"We're fortunate to have two guys swinging the bat as well as they've been," Coach Stone said. "Jay had a great game Sunday, and Brian was player of the week in the A– 10."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Doug Clark and the Minutemen hope to keep their winning streak alive today versus UConn, if in fact they actually play.

Women's Lax struggling; Seek turn–around today

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

It was the best of times, and it was the worst of times.

Oddly enough, Charles Dickens seems appropriate when you refer to the historical leap backwards the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team (1–3) has taken in their last two games. From the not–always–rational statistics category, in the Minutewomen's first two games against No. 14 Harvard and Holy Cross, the difference between goals scored and allowed was a very manageable 16–7 in favor of UMass.

WOMAN'S LAX vs. BROWN

But, in two games versus No. 10 Yale and No. 7 Temple, that stat has jumped up to 26–52. Unfortunately, these stats do make sense, and the team will have to correct them at No. 15 Brown (3–2) this afternoon at 4:00 pm.

For UMass coach Francesca McClellan, the best of times for her team has quickly evolved into the worst of times. Due to certain, wintery–like conditions, the game will probably be cancelled today, and for some people, that could be a blessing in disguise. But for the coach, she wants her team to get back on track as soon as possible.

"We need to regroup," McClellan said. "At this moment, we need to concentrate more on what we need to do, then what the other team is going to do.

"We could really be upset about this situation, or we could move on and try to get this thing fixed. We have nine games left in the season, so we have a little time to work with."

Freshman goalie Megan Haggerty (13.25 GAA, .515 save percentage) has literally jumped from the frying pan into the fire. After two solid starts, the defense has collapsed in front of her, allowing 94 shots on net in comparison to 20 shots in the first two games. Gradual acclimation to a new position has become a emotional and physical onslaught of major proportions for such a young player, and her confidence has to be at stake. The Minutewoman defense will have to help the freshman out, and keep the offensive pressure to a minimum.

On the other end of the field, though, junior Becky Tavani has a similar save percentage (.550), but her defense has allowed much fewer shots on goal, resulting in a 6.80 GAA. Only in their 14–5 loss to Maryland did the Bear defense allow more than ten goals to be scored on Tavani.

To counteract that, UMass has had good news to report, and that is sophomore attacker Laura Korutz. Last season's second leading scorer has begun to feel the flow, and to help the defense, the offense has to start to control the ball more efficiently and precisely.

The Minutewomen will return home to Totman Field this weekend, facing New Hampshire at 4:00 pm on Friday afternoon, and St. Joseph's at high noon on Sunday.

Chicago and LA top pre–season predictions

JOHNATHAN M. PLACE ON BASEBALL

With the championship game of the NCAA Final Four basketball tournament between Kentucky and Arizona over, many pools being analyzed, torn up and discussed due to the results, and the fact that New England was spanked with a Nor'easter on the eve of April Fool's, it is not surprising that Major League Baseball's opening day will go unnoticed. Let's be honest, come October, no one will care or remember if the White Sox beat the Bluelays, today, or if Yankees went into extra innings against the Mariners, but they might remember the two feet of snow they had to trudge through to get to class.

But still, you know you'll watch almost every game. We will all be glued to the television this summer complaining about a typical Red Sox (Or Yankees, gotta be P.C.) three game losing streak, yelling about Dan Duquette, saying Jimmy Williams should be fired by All–star break, and all the rest of the trash we talk. But, in the big picture, these games just don't matter, right? Wrong.

Remember last year, when the Red Sox ended the second half of the season as the hottest team in the league? Well, if they had managed to win a game in the first two months of the season, the Sox would have been a shoe–in to go to the playoffs. So I may sit here and tell you today's games mean nothing, but don't believe me, they do.

Today's match–ups may not be too far away from what we will see seven months from now. From what all the experts are speculating, New York, Chicago, Seattle and Toronto will all be contending to the big show in October. The big question is who will win? I think it is time baseball gives us one of the most exciting years in history. Since the recent juicing of the baseball, last year, maybe this year will record the lowest number of home runs in baseball history. Fortunately, that will never happen. It is interesting, however, to toss things up in the air and predict who you think will win the whole tamale.

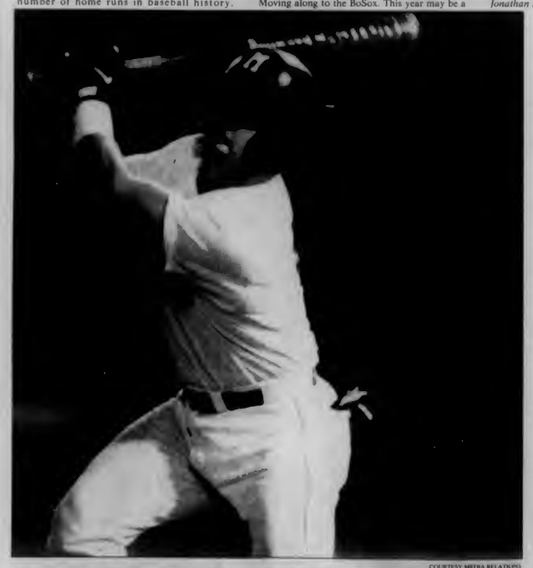
On the National side of things, the Braves have once again been crowned NL Champs without even playing one game. Talk about the team of the '90s. Since 1990, no team in sports has been as dominating or more hyped.

I'm afraid, however, that L.A. will take the NL by storm. Mike Piazza has been waiting for his chance to go all the way. With his dynamite bat and solid performance behind the plate, it just might be enough. Last year, no other batter went to the opposite field more successfully than Piazza. From top to bottom, the Dodgers' rotation seems solid enough. Hideo Nomo will lead the charge, while Ramon Martinez comes in as No. 2. The line–up leaves nothing to be desired. Eric Karros, Raul Mondesi and Todd Zeile sequentially follow up Piazza from third to sixth. Last year, the one–two–three–four punch combined in knocking 114 four baggers out of the park.

My juicy pick for the American league is Chicago. Putting personal feelings about Albert Belle aside, this team rocks the Central Division. I'm pulling for Frank Thomas to finally get a chance to go to the dance. (Cleveland, you had your dance. Now you're going back to the pre–Major League days.) This time the Big Hurt will have a partner to tango with, in Belle. The only problem with the White Sox is that in the everyday line–up is a bunch of old men — Harold Baines, Ozzie Guillen and Ron Karkovice. They still can perform, but if Chicago doesn't win this year, how long can these guys play?

Moving along to the BoSox. This year may be a humbling experience, or a season that will surprise everyone. The whole year is riding on the production of the team's suspect rotation. Tom Gordon will lead the charge on the mound, but no one has much confidence in his consistency. Now that his painful divorce is over, the one that distracted him last year, he should improve on his 12–9 record. If Tim Wakefield can put two halves of a season together and Aaron Sele can bring back the killer curve ball he used to dominate with, the rotation might be dangerous. But everyone knows that Wakefield will only play for half the season, and Sele's confidence is shot to hell.

In the most recent Sports Illustrated, Roger Clemens made a great point. What Dan Duquette has to do is the let the rotation work things out for themselves. Even if Sele loses his first three outings, don't send him back down to Pawtucket with his tail between his legs. Keeping him up in the 'bigs' is the only way he will bring back the fire he had during his rookie campaign.



Mo Vaughn will be solid, so forget about the sub–.300 average he had during spring training. No matter what he has said about the ball club, when the first pitch is thrown, there is not one other player in the league who demonstrates as much class as the Hit Dog. He'll play out the remainder of his contract, and then we can worry about it.

So, I've got Chicago versus Los Angeles this year in the World Series. A little different than what the experts are saying, but what the hell, I ain't no expert. If you could have seen my Final Four grid, you would seen that none of my teams are still alive, let alone made the final four.

It has come to that time again, when cotton candy, roasted peanuts, and ballpark franks have become a regular part of our everyday diet.

Play ball!

Jonathan M. Place is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore catcher Brian Samela was named A–10 player of the Week after going 6–for–11 last week, as the Minutemen went 3–1.

Simon leads 'Zona home

By Hal Bock
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — For most teams, Kentucky's pressure defense is 94 feet of misery, hands swiping at the ball all over the court, making the trip from one end to the other an awful adventure. For Arizona's Miles Simon, it was an opportunity, a chance to convert the Wildcats' quickness into a national championship. "We're not scared of them," he said on the eve of last night's NCAA tournament title game. "If we can beat the pressure it will just mean easier shots for us down the court."

Simon knew that South Carolina had beaten Kentucky twice with that formula.

"Our guards have the same capabilities as South Carolina's guards and can cause the same kind of problems," he said. They did and it did.

Simon refused to let Kentucky's reputation for defensive disruption shake his confidence. Rather, he converted their intensity into an advantage for Arizona. He scored 30 points, converting 14 of 17 free throws in the 84–79 overtime victory. This was Simon at his best, setting the pace, making the big plays and big shots.

It was typical of his style.

Coming out of high school, he was turned down by North Carolina, where he wanted to play. There was no room for a shooting guard at Chapel Hill, but there was space at Tucson. So Simon pinned the rejection letter on his wall and then blistered the Tar Heels in the NCAA tournament semifinals.

Now favored Kentucky, the defending champion, was on deck. Simon was ready.

"He's our leader," freshman Mike Bibby said. "He helps everybody out there. He's been there before. And everybody just listens to him. He knows what he's doing out there."

Simon likes that role.

"I've been looked on as a leader since my freshman year in high school," he said. "I like to direct players and be a second coach out there."

That's why the start of Arizona's season was so difficult for the first coach, Lute Olson. Simon was academically ineligible by NCAA guidelines for the first 11 games.

"He decided to take a vacation the first semester," was the way Olson chose to describe it.

When Simon got academic clearance to rejoin the Wildcats, he started just one of his first eight games back. He didn't regain his starting job until February, but by the time the NCAA tournament was under way, so was Simon.

He was the MVP of the Southeast Regional, scoring 30 points in the overtime win against Providence that thrust Arizona into the Final Four.

Then, when North Carolina shot to a 15–4 lead in their semifinal match, Simon brought the Wildcats back. He scored eight of the 10 points that got Arizona back in the game and assisted on the other basket.

He finished with 24 points, told North Carolina coach Dean Smith how honored he was to play against him, and turned his attention to one last game — 40 minutes and then five extra ones for achampionship.

At the end, he held the game ball, another trophy to place next to North Carolina's letter of rejection.

JORMA KANSANEN/COLLEGIAN

Freshman Stephanie Pavlick and the women's lacrosse team try to get back on track today against Brown.

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Bob Dobbs • Photos by Rick Stedman

What do you see as the most pressing issue for UMass students today?

"Everybody always tells me what a big head I have... but I'd swear that it's been shrinking over the last few days."	"Two words: White Trash!"	"The rampant lack of glamour here at the University."	"Ever since I got elbowed by Tyrone Weeks, I haven't been able to see straight. So, Ty's elbow is very pressing for me."	"Genetic experiments gone wild. I said Jay Leno or Conan O'Brien, not both."	"Students who look like something out of a Star Trek episode. It worries me."	"On this campus, it is socially unacceptable for men to wear bras."
Connor O'Chris Better than you	Billy Joe Bob Ooks Somewhere in 'Bama	Le Suzanne Paris Model	LeQris Sta'amm Minuteman guard	Jayconan Lenobrien Late Nite TV	Kamali Thornell Starship UMass	Meredith Lucas Sports Bra

HOROSCOPES

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Your next date will force you to seriously consider bestiality. Christ, do you ever take a shower? Please refrain from drinking the toilet water at work.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You'll never guess who's sleeping with your mother — and we'll never tell you. You can pick your friends, you can pick your nose, but you'll still never guess who's bopping your mom.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You're going to die right now. That's a damn shame since the wealthy, nympho girl of your dreams will be the first to find your carcass.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — A disease favored by basketball players who would've just shaved their heads anyway.

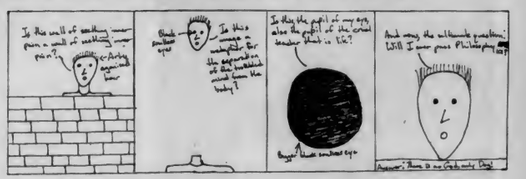
LEO (July 23–August 22) — If you have a soul, do not do your child the disservice of naming him (or her) Leo. The kid will be a royal fuck–up, trust us.

VIRGO (August 23–September 22) — The good news is you're about to bring a bundle of joy into the world. The bad news is you're 18, haven't been a "Virgo" (if you catch our drift) for some time, and it's your third bundle.

LIBRA (September 23–October 22) — Writers of this piece, both Libras, should beware of right–wing, NRA member loonies who objected to "Virgo" section above. Other than that, you're perfecto.

SCORPIO (October 23–November 21) — You were born to be a loser, plain and simple. Might as well hop on the Internet and find some way to end it all now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22–December 21) — Looks. Brains. Riches. If you had any of it, your resume might not read like the directory of the local mall's food court.



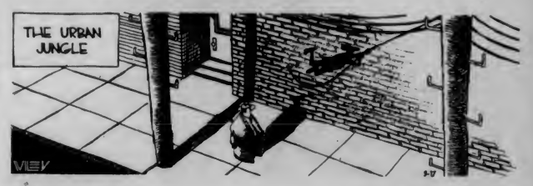
CAPRICORN (December 22–January 19) — Horace Mettlemeier is not the man for you, so don't marry him. If you don't know who he is, disregard this message.

AQUARIUS (January 20–February 18) — Ignore the advice of your friends, family and psychotherapist. They are, in fact, all out to get you.

PISCES (February 19–March 20) — Honey, you're 5'11" and fit into a size –3 — and you still claim you're fat. Here's a tip: eat something.

For entertainment purposes only, you loser

LE PHILOSOPHIE By Pretentia



WHO REALLY CARES? By Someone

FIRST IMPRESSIONS by Kenneth WP Scott

NON-SEQUITOR by Wiley

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 1-800-HOT LUST for more information.

Scrodville		Jonestown
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Human Feces Anything but Scrod Scrod Feces Giblets (Human)	Charbroiled Flesh Satan burgers Satan Fires (Fries) Satan on a platan	Cyanide Kool-ade Phenobarbitol Strong Liquor Drano	Tossed Genitalia Catch o' the day Lunch Lady Stew Clifford the Big Red Dog
Sweden		Meatville
LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
Open Bar (must be 12) Coach Cal Bugs (slimy, yet satisfying)	Swedish children Wax Swedish Moms Stonewilly's Sperm	Duct Tape Fajitas Diarreah Sphincter Baby! Coctail Weenies	Make your own Fetish Compost Phlegm Beanburger

Quota of the Day

"You're happy... DIE!"

–Joe Schmo
Collegian Graphics

Quote of the Day

"Do you let your dog see you naked?"

–Overheard
Collegian Graphics

Sports Notice:

Despite the ridiculously large amounts of snow which fell upon the valley last night, all UMASS sports events will be played as scheduled.

Booze, BMWs no obstacle to rising UMass hoop stars

By Dan Shaughnessey & Kerby Langford
Wanna-be Collegian Staff

For the last two seasons, the Massachusetts men's basketball team was led by the backcourt of Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso, who were born on the same day in the same island. Wanting to keep that tradition alive, UMass head coach James "Bruiser" Flint has been looking for a duo to match the graduating seniors' backcourt prowess.

He just hopes their past won't catch up with them.

After a long search, Flint has announced the signing of Methuen native Luke Meredith and Andover product LaQris Sharif Sta'amm, two guards who were born on the same day in the same hospital, Lawrence General, on a small island in the Merrimack River.

"I saw them play against each other on the Horseshoe. Even though Sta'amm left early because his BMW was being buffed, and Luke was clearly drunk, muttering things like 'You in my house, you in Methuen, baby,' they had a connection you could feel. I had to have them. Carmelo and Edgar were special, but to be honest with you, these two could be the best."

Once seen as potential NBA prospects from an early age, the pair fell along the basketball wayside and made a triumphant return to the court. Though neither has been playing basketball for years, Bruiser believes in his two new guards.

"They can play," Bruiser said. "I recruited Luke when he was 11 and playing youth ball in Methuen, but we all know the tragedy. It's a rough town, Methuen, and it can eat you alive. But to be honest with you, if white trash like Chris Herren can work out at Fresno State, we'll take our chances on Luke. Sta'amm never had it so tough, but when Meredith was dodging bullets, Sta'amm was dodging BMW's. It's almost the same thing. Sta'amm left the game for years, I'm just glad he decided to make his return with us."

Big Talent, Big Problems

Those who know basketball history know the story of Luke Meredith, known to many as the "Pimp Daddy". Meredith was so good at the age of ten that he was recruited by Valparaiso, South Alabama, Fairfield and Montana, but decided to enter the NBA draft. Luke was picked eighth overall.

"We saw potential, even though he was ten [years old]," Laker coach Pat Riley said. "We figured he'd crack an NBA starting lineup in eight or nine years."

Meredith, best known for his ill-fated "Unsilent Majority" comic, was traded to Denver on draft day for Kiki Vandewegde and Alex English, but he never reported to the Nuggets. He went to Italy, and played for seven years with Team Lasagne in Milan, garnering European Player of the Year honors at the age of 15. But it was not all good for the Pimp Daddy.

"I was shit-faced the whole time," Meredith said. "The Italians, they can drink that wine, I'll tell ya. I used to polish off a bottle before game time, and used to do shots of Jaegermeister during time-outs. I would rage at the clubs all night, but something was missing. I think playing pro ball before I grew pubic hair hurt me emotionally."

Meredith returned to America in 1991, shaved his head, finished high school in Methuen, quit the bottle and stopped playing hoop. But his love of basketball and booze combined to from an alliance he couldn't resist. He started playing hoop again, but the booze problem only seemed to help him now.

"I just need one beer before a game now," Meredith said. "And one at halftime. Oh, and I still do the shots of Jaeger during timeouts. But I don't need booze so much anymore. I just need it to relax. Is that so bad?"

How he hooked up with Sta'am is an interesting story.

Back in the day

The history between Shammgod and Sta'amm spans roughly a decade when the pair were the top two youth prospects in the Merrimack Valley. Back then, things were simpler. Stamm had all the advantages Meredith, who grew up on "the other side" of the river, never had. By the age of 10, when Meredith was swigging 40's in a drunken haze, Sta'amm was the picture of success.

After inking a lucrative shoe deal with Stride-Rite, an ad deal with Toughskins, a six-figure sponsorship deal with OshKosh and a weekly late-night show on Nickelodeon, he went on to become a high ranking official in the Church of Scientology. Sta'amm got weekly phone calls from all the big boys, John Thompson, Dean Smith and Mike Krzyzewski — he was going places. Then it happened.

One day, while D-ing up against Meredith in the under-12 Greater Lawrence Y-League Championship, the young hoodlum tagged Sta'amm with an elbow up-side the head, sending him crashing into the bleachers and the arms of a 300 pound, 35-year-old proctologist. Scarred for life, Sta'amm swore he would never play the game he loved again. Luke swears that listening to House of Pain lyrics over and over made him do it.

"Bust a nut inside your eye," was all Luke could mutter as he left the court.

Sta'amm turned to a life of journalism. He quit his successful Y-League team, Buffy's Boys and became the squad's beat writer for the Lawrence Eagle Tribune. Upon graduating from high school, he went on to UMass where he continued his love for basketball writing, covering the Minutemen in their '96-'97 campaign. After the team fell to Louisville in the first round of NCAA action, Sta'amm broke down on the floor of the Pittsburgh Civic Center, eyes burning with regret. "It could have been me, it could have been me," he screamed at the top of his lungs. He was determined to play ball again.

Re-united and it feels so good

Now the two are on the same team. Luke, a junior All- American candidate, and Sta'amm, also a junior All-American candidate, have resolved their differences, though Sta'amm was heard to call Luke a "Bon Jovi-loving piece of white trash" at a recent practice. But there is love.

"He's a good kid, I guess," Sta'amm said. "Growing up in Methuen doesn't help, but he's okay now. If he could cut out the booze, he could be the best."

As Luke and Sta'amm begin their careers, they reflect on what they hope to accomplish at the collegiate level.

"I guess what I'm looking forward to most, more than the gymbags full of cash and the free cars, are da bitches. I hear there's a great agent in Hartford who can hook us up," Luke said.

Sta'amm agreed. "The bitches, definitely the bitches."

Sta'amm thought for a minute, and then added,

"Oh and I guess a chance to win a National Championship would be cool too."

Doctor L, also known as Luke meredith is leaving his white trash past behind him in persuit of his dreams.

LeQris Sta'amm, basketballer extraordinaire prepares for his role in the UMass backcourt next season.

Men's Hoop to face Coleman, washed up Child TV All-Stars

By Booty Schwag
Collegian Staff

In a move designed to increase lagging attendance at the Mullins Center, the Massachusetts men's basketball team, in conjunction with the cast of "227" and the Jesus Christ Church of Latter Day Saints, has scheduled an exhibition game with the 1980's Child TV All-Stars. Game time is scheduled for 7:00 p.m.

The Child TV All-Stars have been competing professionally for years, but did not reach prominence until 1992, when the cancellation of the TV show "Growing Pains" freed up the services of point guard Kirk Cameron. Cameron, who played Mike Seaver on the show, has averaged 28 points and 9 assist a contest, despite a curious habit of wearing a brown leather jacket and acid washed jeans over his uniform.

"That Seaver kid is tough," UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "They play good defense, they work the ball around the perimeter well, and they take good shots. To be honest with you, we're going to have to play good basketball to be successful tonight."

The Child TV All-Stars also boast of point guard Gary Coleman, best known for his work on the hit show "Different Strokes" Coleman leads the team in assists, but was benched during a game against the Sweathogs on Saturday when he reportedly yelled at All-Star head coach Balki Baltokomous over lack of playing time. Sources close to the ballclub say Coleman said, "What choo talking about, Balki!" during practice. Coleman will not start, but is expected to play.

"Yeah, Coleman won't pop off again. I got his little punk- ass under control." Coach Baltokomous said.

The All-Stars also have the ageless John Ritter, who's on the team because we couldn't find a picture of anyone besides Danny Pinatauro (the kid from "Who The Boss") to put in this story.

"Yeah, I'm upset," Collegian Sports Editor Chris Stamm said. "Our pictures of Dana Plato keep getting stolen by Jorma."

A special presentation will be given at halftime by the Jesus Christ Church of Latter Day Saints. Church ministers will lead the crowd in a rendition of it's early 80's TV commercial smash hit, "Who Broke my Window?" Promoters also hope that the kid who sang the now notorious "I confess, I confess" will make an appearance.

Coach Flint is the man behind getting the Latter Day Saints to Amherst. According to Flint, he was a bit of a "badass" in his youth, but the tear-jerking commercial righted his ways.

"Man, that changed my life," a weeping Flint explained. "Whenever I saw that ad, I would stand up and sing, "I broke your window", and then cry for the rest of the day. I knew I couldn't be a punk anymore. It's going to be special for me."

Contrary to popular belief, the Minutemen aren't taking the TV All-Stars lightly.

"They can play," Charlton Clarke said. "But I used to watch Jimmie Walker when I was little, and I know his moves. He tries to pull any Dyno-mite with me, he's gonna get a facial up in his grill."

"Mike Seaver can be guarded," Tyrone Weeks added. "And I'll tell you how. We're gonna get that Kate and make her run around naked, shakin' that ass."

There was an incident during a TV All-Stars game against the cast of Friends in which Kate, Mike Seaver's girlfriend, ran around naked. Seaver only scored five points.

For UMass, the game will mark the debut of Luke Meredith and Chris Stamm, who are looking forward to the challenge.

"The way I see it, I peaked at ten, and so did these guys. Now we're all old and sucky. It'll be an interesting matchup."

The game will be broadcast live on UVC.

John Ritter, on the team because we have this photo.

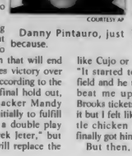
COURTESY AP

Sox sign softball team; mascot beats Bonnies

By Vinny Del Torbino
Collegian Loonie

Convinced that the Hale-Bopp comet is the sole cure for the Curse of the Bambino, the Boston Red Sox committed mass suicide on Saturday in a Chestnut Hill mansion by watching a tape of Game 6 of the 1986 World Series.

Searching for the best team in the Commonwealth to replace the Dead Sox by tomorrow's opener in Anaheim, "GM Dan Duquette returned to his Amherst roots and signed the UMass softball team.



"The folks in Boston should really dig this bunch," Duquette said. "They've won nine A-10 titles in 11 years, and we haven't won jack squat in ages. Plus, with a Harry and a Bert on the roster, we don't even have to get used to new names."

The news was delivered to the former-Minutewomen by the Lord himself, who spoke in the form a tremendous lightning bolt that abruptly ended Saturday's drubbing of Dayton. With the pesky twin-bill out of the way, the team was reminded through mental telepathy to remove their cleats when entering Totman gym so they don't tear their ACL's, and went to their locker room. There Commander Scott of the USS Enterprise beamed the team to Anaheim.

The relocation was more than welcomed by the four players from the greater L.A. area, who will have an opening day homecoming. The four are also pleased it's the Angels and not the Dodgers they're facing so they will have thousands of empty seats for their relatives to choose from.

"Am I excited to be playing home... heck yeah, no diggity, no doubt," said Kim Gutridge of La Mirada, just a hop, skip and a jump down the road. "I'll get to eat at a Carl Jr's tonight instead of those crappy McDonalds places they have back east. Carl Jr's is a McDonalds with fried chicken and a Pizza Hut. It's just so much more."

Danny Pintauro, just because.

COURTESY AP

The team's strong Yankee-fan contingent has also been swayed to join the club for a run that will end with their World Series victory over the Cubs in October, according to the Lord's publicist. The final hold out, sophomore second sacker Mandy Galas, had held out initially to fulfill her dream of turning a double play with "that hottie Derek Jeter," but finally caved in and will replace the disgruntled John Valentin at second.

Meanwhile back at the ranch...

In their haste to leave Hampshire County for Orange County, the Minutewomen left something behind. Mort, the team's fabled rubber chicken and unofficial mascot was left behind in the rain-soaked dugout.

Early Sunday morning, the Easter spirits rose into the neglected chicken while grounds-keepers Mike Isabel and Dennis O'Neill prepared some kerosine to burn the standing water off the field, like Sherman in Atlanta, for a doubleheader against St. Bonaventure.

The combining forces produced an explosion in the UMass dugout from which a deified dynamo emerged. The all- powerful rubber chicken charged at the grounds crew.

"That thing was scary, like Cujo or something," Isabel said. "I started to chase me around the field and he told me he was going to beat me up and steal my Garth Brooks tickets. Finally, I got a read on it but I felt like Rocky chasing that little chicken around. Dennis and I finally got him cornered though."

But then, as O'Neill sliced the chicken with a rake, Mort turned to a gel, like the bad guy in Terminator 2, and slithered away down a drain. Reportedly, Mort then took over Goodell, but his admission for chickens plan was mocked and we was nearly served up at the Berkshire DC.

At noon, while the Bonnies thought they had two easy forfeit wins, Mort emerged in a tattered UMass uniform, like the Incredible Hulk, and proceeded to single-handedly sweep the twin-bill 17,281-0 and a much closer 8,476-0, allowing only a scratch single to Jen Bovee on the day.

• In late breaking news, Mort is expected to ink a $50 million deal with Frank Purdue today, saying that "I'm way too fast for one of those Nike sympathy fests. What's Kenny Lofton got that I don't? I'm finger licking good, baby!"

"I think Mort could be the ultimate role model for fine young chickens everywhere," Purdue said.

The new ad will reportedly have "The Mort-inator" beating the piss out of Chicago Bulls forward Will Purdue in a game of one-on-one. Rumor has it Dennis Rodman will make a special appearance and kick cameramen wearing T-Shirts for Weaver and Tyson chicken in the balls. A major movie role opposite Jenny McCarthy and is also in the works.

Brazil's Rudinho drinks 151, gets hooked

By Yor Mah
Collegian International Correspondent

ROME, Italy — Angels sung in the distance; the air was electric with excitement; the sun shone down on the seven hills of Rome; and, oh yeah, there was a football match being played in Olympic Stadium.

Amid world-wide protest and outrage, Rudinho, the ageless Brazilian National team captain, came through again for his samba-azamba mates in their match against the FIFA World All-Stars. The massively historical confines of Olympic Stadium held witness to the most bizarre site in football history — including England's World Cup win.

The executive consultant for the Massachusetts soccer program headed a cross past Manchester United's keeper Peter Schmeichel in the final seconds of injury time for the 3-2 win. But, that was not the bizarre thing about this match. No, mate, not bloody close. The only bloody thing was Rudinho's face, with blood streaking down his wrinkly mush from the fishing hook enkodged in his forehead.

Yeah, that's right, a fishing hook.

Due to a freak fishing faux-pas on vacation in the Virgin Islands, the Satchell Paige of international football had to gut out his hapless injury. Attempting to cast his line into the Caribbean Sea, the Brazilian captain fell pray to one of the oldest fishing accidents. Unintentionally, he entangled his hook in a tree, and while yanking it out, caught it right smack in the forehead.

Weighed down by masculine pride, Rudinho refused medical attention from the locals. Instead, a bottle of 151 rum kept his injury well-lubed for the game a week later.

"Yeah, I would just slap a shot of rum on my forehead, and let it trickle down," Rudinho said of his unorthodox, first-aid treatment. "Not the best way to drink 151, but still damn good therapy for both mind and body, I say."

His much younger head coach agreed...kind of.

"Actually, I think he did more of the drinking part than anything else," coach Christobal Chamidingo said. "Come on, a week with a five-inch fishing hook stuck in your head? What else are you going to do? Maybe a little samba, with a little lady, and some Campari on the side, but that's it."

Consequently, after clearing customs and the metal detector at Rome International Airport, outrage from the international football community followed him to the pitch.

"I feel ya, I wood looov it, I mean, looov it if they loont tha match!," ex-Newcastle United manager Kevin Keegan babbled incoherently, on the 19th hole of St. Andrews yesterday. "Even against Man-United players, mate."

"Michael, cast your line off shore...hallelujah!," U.S. National team defender Alexi Lalas belted out.

The two have a history, culminating in fisticuffs three years ago in a not-so-friendly in Giants Stadium. "Captain Hook, how does it feel? Call me Howdy-Doody again, why don't ya!"

By no artistic surprise, the game was tied at 0-0 until the final five minutes. Brazil's Bebeto curved a twenty-five yard blast past Schmeichel at the 87:01 mark. FIFA struck right back just :30 later, with Dutch international Danny Blind sending World Player of the Year George Weah into the box on a thirty yard pass down the right flank.

"Ah, it was more in his general direction than anything," Rudinho said. "I spit in their general direction!"

Controversy literally hit Weah a little later, and while he and Rudinho went up for a header, the Brazilian appeared to consciously head-butt the Serie A star. The fish hook caught Weah right in the mush, causing a three-inch gash, and forced him out of the game. No yellow card was assessed by the English referees (no kidding?), and the game continued.

"Ah, Weah's a wimp," Rudinho said. "No eshones."

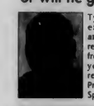
The Wunderkind's, Brazil's Juninho and Liverpool's Robbie Fowler, both were sent on breakaways in the final 2:19 behind panting defenses, setting up Rudinho for the late-game heroics. As the head ref put his lips to the final whistle, Roberto Carlos sent a long cross into the box, with Rudinho's fishing hook beating Marcelo Balboa's pony tail to the far post header, and the 3-2 win.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVI Issue 110 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, April 2, 1997

Texas Blues

Townes Van Zandt (left) and Guy Clark both released new live recordings. Check out our review (See Arts & Living, page 6).

Will he stay or will he go?

Tyrone Weeks is expected to announce if he will return to the UMass frontcourt for a fifth year based on recent changes to Proposition 48 (See Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Aid workers unable to reach refugees

KISANGANI, Zaire (AP) — One hundred thousand Rwandans are camped in dense forest along a road in eastern Zaire, and rebels forcing them slowly southward are making it hard for aid workers to reach them with food.

U.N. officials say the relief workers' task is even more difficult than in November, when 600,000 Rwandans walked out of the Zairian forest and all the way home.

This time, the refugees have further to go — at least 300 miles — and rebels fighting to end President Mobutu Sese Seko's 31-year dictatorship are pushing them ever southward, despite their exhaustion.

The Zairian rebel alliance won't let the refugees near Kisangani, a major river port the rebels captured March 15. It insists the refugees turn around and go home.

"This is not only inhumane, it will also make it logistically impractical to reach them," Pam O'Toole, spokeswoman for the U.N. refugee agency, said yesterday in Geneva.

NATION

FAA orders airlines to inspect Boeing jets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration, acting after a flap ripped off a Boeing 767, will soon order operators of the aircraft to inspect all takeoff and landing flaps.

"We intend to issue an airworthiness directive" requiring the inspections, FAA spokeswoman Allison Duquette said yesterday. But she said it was not yet clear when the agency would do that.

Boeing, anticipating the FAA's move, issued a bulletin informing operators to be prepared to inspect the oldest 767s in service, especially those with the most flight hours.

The expected order is the result of an incident last week in which a 21-foot section of a flap tore loose from the wing of a Delta jet preparing to land at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. The plane landed safely and no one was injured.

John Clabes, an FAA spokesman in Oklahoma City, said the expected order does not mean that the Boeing jetliners are unsafe, but it will require that "everybody take the proper precautions in a timely manner."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 47 LOW: 24	HIGH: 53 LOW: 29	HIGH: 52 LOW: 32

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

UM student killed; foul-play suspected

Editor's note: This article originally appeared in yesterday's paper. It is being re-printed due to the closure of the University yesterday.

Former University of Massachusetts freshman Jeffery Levitz, 18, of 45 Old Maple St., Stoughton, was found dead with a gunshot wound to the head on Sunday in Colonie N.Y., a suburb of Albany.

According to Colonie Police Detective Lt. Steven Heider, a man walking through Shaker Bay, an upscale development area, found the body on a trail in the woods.

Heider believes that the body had been there since the time of its death.

Due to his badly decomposed body, police were not able to make a positive identification of the body, but a wallet containing Levitz's license and credit cards were found on the body.

Based on results of an autopsy conducted Monday by Dr. Jeffrey Hubbard at the Albany Medical Center Hospital, Hubbard confirmed the deceased as Levitz.

Levitz, a former resident of Cashin Residence Hall withdrew from the University on Dec. 23, 1996.

He left UMass on Feb. 1 with a group of female friends headed for Troy, N.Y, seven miles northeast of Albany.

He was last seen driving away from his friends and going to visit his Aunt in Albany.

According to his parents, Robert and Deborah Levitz, he never made it.

A search team was formed on Feb. 4 after his parents reported him missing to the Troy Police Department.

Levitz' car was located in Colonie a few days later.

At this time Detective Heider has ruled the cause of death a homicide due to the gunshot wounds to the head.

The investigation is ongoing.

— Leigh Faulkner

SGA nullifies results of privatization question

The results for last week's referendum question on privatization have been thrown out by the Student Government Association (SGA) Election Commission.

According to Election Commissioner Jodi Bailey, the wording of the question was too confusing.

"The question was voted on by over 1000 voters and only 252 [ballots] were voted on correctly," Bailey said.

The question consisted of parts A, supporting privatization at the University of Massachusetts, and B, opposing it. Within their selection, voters were supposed to select how they would like A or B to be achieved. Most students filled out both A and B.

The Election Commission voted on the matter, and decided to add the question to next fall's Senate election ballot.

"We are going to take off the privatization question and put it on next year's Senate election ballot," Bailey said. "It wasn't understood by all students and to be done accurately, students have to have sole input.

"Even the people who wrote the question voted wrong on it."

Maydad Cohen, from Campus Design and Copy, as well as a member of the Board of Student Businesses, had sent a four page petition to the SGA, urging them to cancel the vote, because of the confusing wording of the question.

"I wrote the petition just in case the Election Commission decided to count the question," Cohen said.

The Board of Student Businesses will meet Wednesday to discuss the issue.

— Victoria Groves

UMass faculty members win Eisenhower grants

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

Two University of Massachusetts faculty members have recently received an Eisenhower grant to continue their work in bringing modern technology to the mathematics classrooms of four area high schools.

Edward and Mary Ann Connors, both of the Mathematics and Statistics Department, have been educating high school teachers from the public schools of Chicopee, Easthampton, Hampshire Regional and Holyoke on using calculators to make mathematics more accessible to high school students.

"The name of the project is 'Implementation of Technology Across the Secondary School Mathematics Curriculum,'" Mary Ann Connors said. "And that's precisely what we're doing, using calculators as a lab tool to have students and teachers explore and discover mathematics."

Edward Connors said in many high schools, the mathematics curriculum as a whole isn't sufficiently connected.

"It's fragmented. In many schools, the same people teach algebra, and others geometry..." Edward Connors said. "There's little communication."

"[The calculators] facilitate making connections between algebra, geometry, trigonometry, calculus and statistics," Mary Ann Connors said.

The "technology" takes the form of Texas Instruments' TI- 92 calculator, which looks more like a little computer than anything else. In fact, Edward describes it as "the calculator that thinks it's a computer."

The model is a graphing calculator capable of carrying out many more complex functions than previous models, providing a split screen for viewing more than one graph simultaneously and making available a text editor.

Additional equipment can make the calculator more specifically useful for classrooms. One piece, which interfaces with the calculator produces the screen's image on a form that can reproduced with an overhead projector, allowing teachers a virtual electronic chalkboard.

With this special display, students could hook their calculators to the overhead, doing examples in front of the class or displaying saved homework.

The calculator, which sells for $260 at the University Store, can be obtained by high schools at wholesale prices for about $160, a price that Edward Connors explains is very affordable.

"Schools can buy 10 of these calculators for the price of one computer," Edward Connors said.

Also, Texas Instruments has a loaner program, through which schools cam borrow numbers of calculators for a period of about three weeks. If schools choose to buy some, they can save their proofs of purchase and use them to receive additional technology.

The Connors' program teaches teachers about the use of this technology with hopes that they can reap rewards in their own classrooms, as each of the Connors have been doing for a number of years. Mary Ann Connors says that she has been bringing technology to classrooms for over 30 years, and Edward Connors has been working with a calculus class in Easthampton.

Requests for proposals for the Eisenhower grants began what Edward Connors describes as a "fortuitous chain of events." culminating in the receipt of a $58,000 grant through the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education, whose focus this year happens to be on both mathematics and technology.

With this grant the Connors have brought about 25 interested teachers to four already completed in-house workshops, and will follow-up with an intensive two-week session this summer.

"The teachers are very excited about the course," Mary Ann Connors said. "It's wonderful to see them excited and the students excited about it."

She explained that all of the teachers taking part have volunteered, and want to be there, and they include young and old teachers alike.

"I believe dedicated teachers always stay abreast of the latest methods in order to prepare students for the future," Mary Ann Connors said. "We must be aware of developments."

Eisenhower grants use federal funds, but are distributed through the states. in this case, the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education. They are for use in programs of professional development in education.

Campus is calm after storm; police cite no major problems

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

With the arrival of an early spring blizzard and the cancellation of classes at the University of Massachusetts yesterday, many campus officials were left anticipating potentially dangerous student actions across campus.

During a snow storm in early December 1996, the UMass campus lost power, and a crowd of 500 students marched to Amherst College to start a snowball fight and caused severe of destruction to property and some personal injuries.

However, UMass Police Chief Jack Luippold said the campus was a lot calmer last night than in the previous storm.

"After the basketball game last night sometime after 11 p.m. and into the early morning hours there were a lot of snowball fights on campus, but nothing to the level of what happened last time. I don't believe anyone went downtown," Luippold said.

Luippold also said that across campus, "some windows were broken but not many. Two individuals were arrested in separate incidents for malicious destruction [of property], for breaking windows with snowballs."

According to police reports, at 1:20 a.m. a student was arrested breaking windows at French Hall Greenhouse and charged with malicious damages over $250.

Again, at 2:15 a.m., another student was arrested for breaking windows at Kennedy Residence Hall with snowballs and charged with destruction of property over $250.

The police station also received reports from Residential Staff at Brooks Residence Hall that they had a broken window. Nobody was arrested.

"We anticipated the possibility of snowball fights with the cancellation of classes," Luippold said. However, he said there were no major problems on campus due to the storm.

Due to the storm and icy road conditions, there were also two car accidents reported. One occurred on Governors Drive between two vehicles. A driver, with minor injuries was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton and the second driver refused medical attention.

The second accident occurred off-campus between an automobile and a PVTA bus.

LAUREN ROSKY / COLLEGIAN

Frosty and friends

Sarah Jillings, a history graduate student, Catherine Sangster, a linguistics graduate student and Don Blair, a senior philosophy and classics major make a snow man yesterday on North Pleasant Street in Amherst.

JQA fire evacuates residents; candle determined to be cause

By Leigh Faulkner
Collegian Staff

Editor's note: This is an updated version of the story that originally ran yesterday. It is being re-published due to the the closure of the University yesterday.

Minor damage occurred in a resident's room on the sixth floor of John Quincy Adams Residence Hall in Southwest Residential Area when his room caught on fire at 4:40 p.m. Monday.

The fire, which reportedly took place in room 615, "was ruled accidental as the result of a candle," University of Massachusetts Chief of Police Jack Luippold said.

UMPD received an active fire alarm call from the Cluster office and the sixth floor of JQA.

"A few minutes after that we received phone calls from residents saying that there was smoke coming out from under a resident's door," Luippold said.

Two residents who live on the sixth floor, Aaron Nichols and Joe Tessari said they smelled smoke coming from the floor and went to locate the fire.

According to Nichols and Tessari, they wanted to pull the fire alarm but said their Resident Assistant Aaron Cash wouldn't allow them to, allegedly telling the residents they would be written up if they pulled it.

Another resident, Adam Chiavoli pulled the alarm once he saw the smoke coming out from under the door of room 615.

Cash refused to comment.

However, Chiavoli said, "I think Aaron [Cash] was just a little nervous and didn't realize the severity of the situation."

Residential staff was allowed back in the building at 5:20 p.m. and residents were let back in at 5:35 p.m. — an hour after the fire began.

Fire fighters reported only minor damage to the resident's room. Sprinklers were not activated in the halls.

Laura Forester contributed to this article.

Bombers die in suicide attack outside Jewish settlement

By Ibrahim Barzak
Associated Press

NETZARIM, Gaza Strip — Israeli troops shot and killed two Palestinians and two others blew themselves up in bungled suicide bombings yesterday, one of the deadliest days yet in a growing crisis in Middle East peacemaking.

The bombers apparently had meant to destroy Israeli school buses outside Jewish settlements in the Gaza Strip, Israelis said. The attacks come during a deadlock in Israeli-Palestinian peace talks, which broke down last month over new Israeli construction in disputed east Jerusalem, and triggered new accusations from both sides.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu insisted that the suicide bombings were evidence that Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat has sanctioned attacks by Islamic militants.

"Today's twin attacks (are) proof that the terror campaign continues," Netanyahu said.

Arafat said it was Israel's prolonged security closure of Palestinian areas that created a climate of violence. "We are all doing our best... to control the situation," Arafat said. Both sides refuse to resume peace talks unless the other makes key com-

Turn to KILLINGS, page 2

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor:
Seema Gangatirkar

Copy Editor:
Lisa Oliveri

Photo Technician:
Lauren Kosky

Production Supervisor:
Marc Dionne

Production Staff:
Matt Guilmette
Daniel Bodah

Clinton to liquor industry: No business with kids

By Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton, who scored political points in taking on the tobacco industry, targeted liquor distillers' TV ads yesterday.

"Liquor has no business with kids," he declared.

But even as Clinton argued he was protecting children and helping parents, he struggled to explain why his move against liquor ads — which stopped just short of recommending a regulatory ban — did not touch the far more pervasive television advertising for beer or wine.

He acknowledged that his aim, for now, is a return to the status quo last fall — before distillers lifted their 50-year, self-imposed ban on radio and TV ads. Vintners and brewers, a politically powerful lobby that spends millions of dollars in Washington, have freely advertised all along.

"I think we ought to start with the principle of no backsliding," Clinton said in outlining his request that the Federal Communications Commission study the impact of lifting the ban and make recommendations for possible federal action.

"We must do nothing, nothing, that would risk encouraging more of our young people to drink hard liquor," Clinton said in a Roosevelt Room ceremony with Vice President Al Gore.

Distillers voted in November to end the ban after Seagram's ran a limited number of ads in Texas. Ever since, FCC Chairman Reed Hundt has sought an official inquiry but the commission remained deadlocked 2-2 on the question.

Hundt hoped Clinton's announcement would sway dissenting commissioners James Quello and Rachelle Chong, and allow the investigation to proceed.

While saying he hoped the industry would voluntarily agree to stay off the airwaves, Clinton said that if the agency finds liquor ads harmful to youngsters, "I think the FCC has grounds to act."

Pressed several times to explain why beer and wine ads were left out of the directive, Clinton said: "I think the liquor industry itself once thought that there was a distinction to be drawn, if for no other reason than alcohol content, between beer and wine and hard liquor, which is why they observed this distinction for 50 years... I think they were right."

He appeared to leave open the possibility of broadening the FCC study, saying that "if there is no difference, if there are problems, the FCC can evaluate whatever evidence comes in."

But White House spokesman Mike McCurry later told reporters, "I'm not aware of anyone foreseeing a next step that suggests that you look at beer and wine. I think we're just taking it one step at a time."

Cracking down on tobacco industry ads aimed at children proved a good issue for Clinton in his re-election campaign. Yesterday's liquor announcement, which mostly reiterated past policy statements, was meant to reinvigorate a similarly good "pro-family" issue that Clinton first seized upon in a Father's Day radio address last year.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Relaxing on the side of the street

Roberto Soto, a senior education and biology major, and Heather Chu, a freshman art major, enjoy the sun, while waiting for a bus in Amherst yesterday.

killings

continued from page 1

promises.

The Palestinians demand that Israel stop construction of a Jewish neighborhood in east Jerusalem, the sector they claim as a future capital. Until the work stops, Palestinians say they will refuse to help Israel on security, such as detecting Islamic militants plotting attacks on Israelis.

Netanyahu insists that Arafat restore order and peace before negotiations resume. He refuses to halt the construction.

In Washington, President Clinton discussed the growing crisis with King Hussein of Jordan, who recently and dramatically blamed Netanyahu for the breakdown in relations. Clinton declared Middle East leaders should show "zero tolerance" for terrorism. Clinton said he would send Secretary of State Madeleine Albright to the region once he decides on a strategy to end the negotiating impasse.

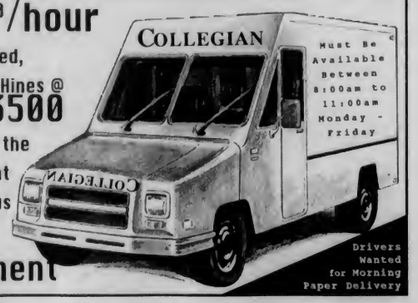
Yesterday's first explosion went off about a mile from the Jewish settlement of Netzarim, south of Gaza City. A Netzarim school bus was running late, which meant it was away from the site when the bomb exploded.

Palestinian police disputed Israeli allegations that the other explosion, at Kfar Darom, was a suicide bombing. They said Israeli troops threw explosives at a taxi and a donkey cart, killing a Palestinian bystander and wounding seven taxi passengers.

But Israel's military chief, Lt. Gen. Amnon Shahak, said Islamic militants set off both blasts. He said the suicide bombers wore Palestinian police uniforms and were Islamic militants belonging to either the Hamas or Islamic Jihad groups.

Israel TV said the explosive kits were similar to one used by a Hamas-affiliated suicide bomber who killed three Israeli women in a Tel Aviv cafe on March 21.

A caller to Israel Radio claimed responsibility in the name of Hamas, but Hamas political leaders and the Izzedine al-Qassem military wing of the group denied involvement.



Two other callers to Israel TV and Israel Radio's Arabic service claimed the attacks on behalf of other, previously unknown groups. North of the West Bank city of Nablus, about 1,000 Palestinians clashed with troops at an Israeli army checkpoint.

Israeli troops there shot and killed a plainclothes Palestinian policeman, Haitham Mansour, Palestinians said. Hospitals treated 32 protesters for wounds from rubber bullets and for tear gas inhalation.

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUM
WOMEN'S STUDIES
"Different Paths, Many Choices"
DATE: WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2, 1997
TIME: 5:00 p.m.
LOCATION: Campus Center 162-175
SPONSORED BY:
UNIVERSITY CAREER CENTER
UNIVERSITY ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
WOMEN'S STUDIES
This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion.
ALUMNI PANELIST
Maren Brown '85 — Program Director, UMass Arts Council, Fine Artist
Jeanne Burke '96 — Director of Teen Programs, YMCA Northampton Teen Center
Robin Johnson '86 — Assistant Office Manager, Assistant Volunteer Coordinator, Technical Resource Specialist, Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts
Tania Phelps '92 — Elementary Special Education Teacher, West Street Elementary School, Granby Public School System
Light dinner reception follows program

NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY
COLLEGE FINANCING 101
Each year thousands of college students are forced to drop out. The problem is not with their academic standing, it is their financial status. They can't pass or CLEP out of "College Financing 101". The Massachusetts Army National Guard has over $21,000 available to each student who qualifies. Through programs such as the Montgomery G.I. Bill and 100% Tuition Waiver, students can concentrate on grades, not bills. The Tuition Waiver is good at 28 participating state colleges, community colleges and universities.
All it takes is about two days a month and two weeks a year. Serving your country and community today can help build a better tomorrow.
For more information about the Massachusetts Army National Guard call today:
1-888-NGPRIDE
(1-888-647-7433)
MASSACHUSETTS ARMY NATIONAL GUARD YOU CAN

Staying in Amherst This Summer?
Looking for a job?
THINK SCH!
Full & Part Time Jobs
Are Available Working For Summer Conference Housing

Wanna drive on the sidewalks with this really cool van...deliver for the Collegian.
$10.00/hour
If interested, call Alycia Hines @ 545-3500 or stop by the Collegian at 113 Campus Center Basement

SMART CHOICES FOR Summer
Work with UCS in Providing Residence Hall Accommodations to over 70 Conference Groups Meeting at Umass This Summer
Many Different Types of Jobs are Available
Applications and Job Descriptions are Available at the Conference Services Offices Room 918-Campus Center Ninth Floor
Completed Applications are Due By Friday, April 11, 1997

Jury candidate: McVeigh seems like a "nice kid"

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

DENVER — A prospective juror looked across the courtroom at Timothy McVeigh on yesterday and couldn't believe the young man with the buzz cut, blue oxford shirt and quick smile could be a terrorist bomber.

"He looks like a nice kid," said the middle-aged woman. "It's overwhelming for me to think that this person who looks like the average type of person could do such a thing."

But the soft-spoken woman said she could still recommend death for whoever was responsible for the April 19, 1995, blast that tore apart the Oklahoma City federal building and killed 168 people, including 19 children.

"If he has done this," she said, "you pay for your crime." McVeigh leaned forward, arms on the defense table, eyes glued to the woman as she spoke. In the front row, McVeigh's father, William McVeigh, sat with his head down.

As jury selection crept along — only nine prospects had been interviewed after a day and a half — the woman was the latest prospect to reveal strong feelings about the case.

Most of the comments, however, have dealt with the blast itself and its aftermath rather than the state of the evidence.

Only one prospective juror, an agent for photographers and artists, said she's already made up her mind that McVeigh's guilty, based on what she seen of media reports.

All but one of the candidates have said they would be willing to recommend execution — a requirement to serve on a capital trial in federal court.

One of the prospects was dismissed yesterday — the first publicly announced dismissal — after she cried in court while describing her problems with stress.

The woman initially said that despite her problems she felt she could serve.

"I'm a very honest person and I'm a good listener and there are a lot of qualities I would bring to this," she said.

American Heart Association.
Fighting Heart Disease and Stroke

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Tracks

Animal tracks cut through the snow by the campus pond yesterday.

Three killed in Air Force plane crash in Honduras

By Freddy Cuevas
Associated Press

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — A U.S. Air Force cargo plane overshot a runway, crashed into a busy street and burst into flames yesterday, killing three of those aboard.

After touching down on the runway of Tocontin International Airport in the Honduran capital, the plane rose into the air again. But it dropped down again, went off the end of the runway and slid 200 yards and into the road, said Col. Fernando Soto, chief of the government civil aeronautics office at the airport.

The plane caught fire as it came to a stop on a major artery often crowded with cars and pedestrians and lined with offices, stores and fast-food restaurants. It wound up about 100 yards from two gasoline stations.

"I had just gotten off of a bus when I saw the plane was coming right at me," said Luis Armando Montoya. "I ran desperately for the other side of the street. It is a miracle I am safe, but I am still frightened."

The spokeswoman for the U.S. Embassy, Marti Estell, said three people aboard the C-130 died and all seven others were injured. Their names were withheld pending notification of relatives. No one on the ground was reported injured.

Soto said it was not clear what caused the crash. The Air Force was investigating.

The plane was part of the 440th Airlift Wing based at General Mitchell International Airport in Wisconsin and was flying out of Howard Air Force Base in Panama. U.S. officials said it was carrying food and electronic goods for U.S. servicemen based in Honduras.

The United States has at least 800 personnel based at Palmerola air base, 40 miles north of the capital. The three most seriously injured were taken there for treatment, Capt. Jerry Warner said at the base.

Col. Jose LaGuardia, chief of the Tegucigalpa fire department, said the plane spilled more than 4,500 gallons of fuel as it slid from the runway to the street.

Pedro Ayala, whose farm equipment dealership was near the crash, said he gave first aid to some of the survivors.

Alfredo's
PHOTOGRAPHIC ART-LOCAL
AMHERST PHOTOS MAKE
GREAT GRADUATION GIFTS
SPORTS PHOTOS - POSTERS
39 S. PLEASANT ST. 413 - 253 - 1707
GIFT CERTIFICATES AVAILABLE

SPRING SALE
Now until April 15th
August the First
• 20% off most loose Beads, all Bags, Purses, Pillows & Tapestries.
• 10% off all paper products including Journals, Albums, Cards, Notecards, Stationary.
• Free pewter charm with $5 purchase & This Ad
197 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 256-0276

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Curtain Daily 7:00pm (NO SHOW SAT. APRIL 5)
MATINEE SUNDAY APRIL 6. at 1:00pm

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET
A KENNETH BRANAGH FILM
For your convenience – Due to length of film
TICKETS MAY BE PURCHASED IN ADVANCE FOR ANY SHOWING
Box-office Daily from Noon thru Showtime
Phone Res. 584-9032 (1-5pm ONLY)
-of course TICKETS AT DOOR - But Arrive Early -
ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435

Take It To The Hoopla!
new balance
Haigis Hoopla VII
April 26 27
Register Now for the Ultimate UMASS 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament!
SPALDING
DAILY COLLEGIAN
DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
HOWARD JOHNSON
SPORT COURT
April 26 to 27
REGISTER NOW, SPACES ARE LIMITED!!!
THREE OR FOUR PLAYERS PER TEAM
REGISTRATION FEES: Before April 9, 1997 $15 per player
After April 8, 1997 $18 per player
If you have any questions call the
New Balance Haigis Hoopla office at (413) 545-5689
Remember: Registration Deadline April 18, 1997

TWELFTH ANNUAL MATHEMATICS COMPETITION
APRIL 9, 1997 AT 7:00 PM
IN ROOMS 101/103 LEDERLE GRADUATE CENTER
FIRST PRIZE: $1600 IN CASH
SECOND PRIZE: $1000 IN CASH
THIRD PRIZE: $400 IN CASH
CORPORATE SPONSORS; EDS(ELECTRONIC DATA SYSTEMS) AND CSC(CONSULTING & SYSTEMS INTEGRATION)
The competition is open to all Freshman and Sophomore degree students currently enrolled at UMass Amherst. Continuing Education students, previously 1st place winners, and relatives of Math/Stat faculty are not eligible.
SIGN UP IN ROOM 1623-D BY APRIL 8 AND BRING ID ON APRIL 9.

Way Cool.

ZUMIEZ
downtown Amherst

ACADEMIC MANAGEMENT SERVICES
Summer Jobs! Windows of Opportunities Job Fair!
Saturday, April 12th • Over 100 Positions Available
• Office Positions in Customer Service, Data Entry
• Seeking Individuals with Strong Communication Skills, Computer Keyboard Experience
• Flexible Work Schedule (Days, Evenings, Saturdays)
• No Sales, Paid Training, Fast Paced Environment
• Potential for Continued Employment During School Breaks
• Casual Office Attire
Please Schedule an Interview for the AMS Job Fair by Calling (401) 435-2900

A Branch Beyond
Silver Jewelry Specialists
Great Selection Low Prices
236 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 253-4997 Mon-Sat 11-6

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors
78 Sunderland Rd. North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $59.95
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(One Mile From Umass on the Bus Rt.)

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Ouist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Ouist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The call of conscience

All recognize the right of revolution; that is, the right to refuse allegiance to, and to resist, the government, when its tyranny and its inefficiency are great and unendurable. But almost all say that such is not the case now.

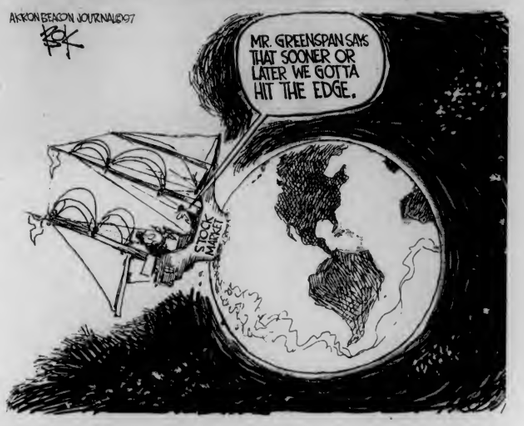
— Henry David Thoreau, 1849

When the naturalist and pacifist from Concord penned these words almost 150 years ago, he cited the seemingly ingrained habit of citizens to offer their government the benefit of the doubt. But, why given the growing number of examples of government waste, fraud and mismanagement? The fact is that all of us, to varying degrees, carry faulty beliefs or myths inside us which foster passivity — even when our own interests are being disregarded. One of these myths is: the main way to make a difference is to vote. Another one is: A lot of companies are being forced to layoff workers because of the economy. Or try: we cannot afford to slash the military budget because it would leave the country weak.

Beliefs such as these, reinforced in general conversations and on television and in the printed media, are rarely examined carefully. But scrutinize each one. With mounting alarm, countless citizens and even many elected representatives — are pointing to the need of campaign finance reform. As it now stands, important state and Federal positions are available — or at least malleable — to the highest bidder. The pressure to raise massive sums to purchase advertising, particularly on TV, leads even decent candidates to mold their messages to suit the agendas of top contributors. This is not to say voting is useless; rather, it is but a tool — and hardly the most potent one — to advance one's views. Regarding layoffs, while some companies do suffer, others are recording record profits. And some of the most profitable firms are receiving huge subsidies and tax breaks from Uncle Sam while the salaries of top men ement soar. This corporate welfare is hush-hushed while every dollar going towards the impoverished is publicly debated.

As for the military budget, does anyone recall the "peace dividend?" In the late '80s, concerned citizens anticipated an upsurge of government spending on social programs occasioned by the breakup of the Soviet Union and the end of the Cold War. Instead, Pentagon political wonks decided such a priority shift would send the wrong message. Weapons and parts are warehoused in obscene quantities, officials soberly explain the need to be prepared to fight two world wars and dissenters are muffled through the usual refrains about "national security" and weakening the nation. And thus do countries decline.

So how do we break free the stranglehold of such beliefs before something really horrific happens or we go bankrupt? Again, many of us have been taught to look to daily news reporting for the real story. Less publicized are the advertising and corporate mandates which determine which slant to put on what stories — and what stories to omit. The news glut is also numbing. In the words of Thomas Merton: "News becomes merely a new noise in the mind, briefly replacing the noise that went before it and yielding to the noise that comes after it." Clearly then, to become better informed one must seek out alternate sources of information. Libraries are good sources for books and magazines written by independent thinkers and lectures, workshops and study groups can help liberate one from the crushing weight on mainstream disinformation. This is not to say that mainstream writing intentionally falsifies the news. But as historian Howard Zinn reminds us: "It is important to continuously ask oneself: 'What is being omitted.'" For example, if the governor is in town for a business ceremony, did the media cover the demonstrators outside or point out this same firm just pushed through layoffs of the rank-and- file?



Overall the average citizen faces daunting obstacles to discovering what is really going on — but it can be done. Perhaps the most destructive myth is the view that nothing ever changes. Yet the abolition of slavery and child labor (at least in the United States) and the 8-hour workday and unemployment insurance only came after prolonged and widespread agitation and organizing. It is estimated that only 25 percent of the early colonists wanted an end to British rule. And more recently Texaco made huge concessions regarding its treatment of African-American employees after Rev. Jesse Jackson proposed a boycott of their products.

To return to the words of Thoreau once more: "Action from principle, the perception and the performance of right, changes things and relations." Common sense, principles and courage have been present at every real advancement of the human species. Somehow, alone and in unison, we must muster a deeper commitment to the demands of conscious and resist being co-opted by the myths and slogans of mass society. We are only powerless if we insist on it.

R. Jay Allain is a 1973 graduate of UMass.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Freedom for sexists

Editor's Note: On May 8, the Collegian celebrates its 50th anniversary as a daily newspaper. To commemorate this occasion, the Collegian will be publishing editorials spanning the last 50 years. Today we feature a piece originally published on Feb. 22, 1971.

1967-1997
1971

The Queen is dead: Long live the Queen!

One can only admire Jim LaMacchia's courage and sincere intentions in running for Winter Carni Queen. Miss America-type contests do, in the words of Mr. LaMacchia, "dehumanize women and perpetuates a system of competiveness and goal-orientation for their own sake." The selection procedure of the Winter Carni Queen has been less than regular and did not need to be challenged. Mr. LaMacchia has succeeded in making people question "sexism" and its manifestations on campus.

But who speaks for the old, for tradition, for those who cling to their past and cannot change?

The General Court's decision to void last week's Winter Carni election and to hold new elections this week was a just one. Like so many Supreme Court opinions, however, the General Court neglected to resolve the basic issue in question — does a female Winter Carni Queen infringe upon the rights of men and liberated women? By failing to rule on this, other than by inference, the Court has disregarded the rights of a minority to practice a peculiar life style, that did not prevent another group from practicing its style of life.

The Winter Carni female Queen is a voluntary tradition. No one is forced to "degrade" themselves. No one is forced to vote. If the Court had wished to take a broader look at the basic question, it might have ruled that a Winter Carni King would be established, to insure the equality of opportunity both sexes.

What happened Friday has been happening throughout the world with alarming frequency: weathermen and pukes trash buildings, thinkers disregard facts in favor of feeling, all traditions are mocked without questioning their worth. Humphreys are not allowed to speak, the distinction between pigs and people is made. Rights are abrogated in the name of freedom, people are destroyed for the Peoples' Cause.

A great many students are going to be hurt by what amounts to the farsification of the Winter Carni farce. The next time a blow is about to be struck for equality and sex liberation, I hope that those revolutionaries of the New Society remember that one day, they too, will be old.

Don Glickstein is a former Collegian columnist.

The suicidal sensation

Editor's Note: This column originally appeared in yesterday's paper. We are reprinting the column due to the closing of school yesterday.

Mark McGrath

It seems like suicide's in again.

The deaths of 39 people in San Diego last week confirmed that, at least in my eyes. The question most people are asking is "why?" Why did these people choose to hold the ultimate going away party? I know, I know... they were trying to hitch on with the alien spaceship, discarding their souls' containers (bodies) for a better way. Yeah, Yeah, Yeah we get the picture...

The question is still "why?" If not why they did it, then why were they so dumb? What led them to "D_," our favorite charismatic alien and cult leader? I saw his recruitment tapes on television and I have to admit, he was one fantastic speaker. But comets, $5 bills, UFOs, Christianity, castration and suicide? Come on guys, you don't think we're going to go for that, do you? Why?

Perhaps the biggest "why" may involve the amount of television and press coverage you received. For the three days following your "event," all I saw or heard were reports on the mass suicide. Pictures of your dead bodies covered with purple cloaks, your farewell tapes, explanations of your cult.

If I had it my way, your story would never have made its way out of California (where it fits quite comfortably with the prevalent cultural themes). All I could think was, "They're glorifying a bunch of nutcases because they did something crazy." Why? Was the media alerting potential suicidal cult members out there to the dangers of such activity, or were they trying to create a new sensation? If you ask me, it's the latter.

Hey kids, suicide's in.

Just look at John E. Curtis Jr., the former CFO of Luby's, the largest cafeteria chain in the country, who took his own life two weeks ago and who was also featured prominently in many major news magazines. Curtis, who was earning more than $350,000 dollars per year slashed his wrist and upper abdomen with a kitchen knife before severing his jugular vein.

Thank you, Mr. Curtis.

I have a few words for you... you're an idiot, an absolute idiot. You weren't even 50 years old, you had a wife and three children, the youngest just 15 years old. You made more money each year than I'll ever see in my life, and you decided to leave yourself face down in a pool of blood.

But apparently, you had a couple of really good reasons for what you did. You didn't want to have to tell your Board of Directors that your profit margin was down, though still healthy. Or was it that you couldn't bear to lay off 1 percent of your 13,000-person work force? John. Listen to me — that's only 130 people. You know there were other ways.

Then there's the issue of assisted suicide and our dear friend, Dr. Kevorkian. His little episodes are so regular that they remind me when to change the baking soda in my refrigerator. Every time it's just the same old story... person commits suicide with Doc's help, authorities call for Doc's head, Doc lives to fight another battle.

Even the government has had its problems with suicide. In the past few years, America has witnessed the suicides of White House lawyer Vince Foster and Admiral Michael Boorda. There's suicide all over the place, and outside of these ones, which involve national security, none have told us anything but that there are lots of cowards out there.

And the coverage they get is phenomenal. Why?

Of all deaths, suicide is one of the most disturbing. To think that there are forces out there so strong that they can make someone take their own life... it really is sad. It's tragic. But does that mean we have to be bombarded with these images every time we open a magazine or click on the TV? Need we be reminded?

With all of the fame and the glory our media seems to be showering down on victims, they may as well scream out, "Suicide, it's the cool new alternative to living. When you feel bad or can't cope with events of your life, just hop on the boat. It's quick, it's easy, it's a way out."

Americans are beaten, raped and killed every single day, but very rarely will their cases get as much attention as a bunch of cult members drinking poison. It's sad, and I'm afraid that every kid out there who needs attention is going to see suicide as a way of getting that attention. Attention is what's usually behind teen suicide anyway.

As tragic as the act of suicide is, we don't have to make it out to be more than it is, an act of desperation by someone who doesn't know the value of their own life.

Mark McGrath is a Collegian columnist.

Big Brother on the web

Matt Wurtzel

The government is threatening to curtail our freedom of speech and right to privacy with new laws concerning the Internet. About a year ago President Clinton signed the 1996 Telecommunications Act that brought competition into phone and cable markets, but also brought the specter of censorship to the Internet. Now the President is sponsoring legislation that allows the government to peek into anybody's encrypted electronic mail.

Although political analysts suggest Congress will not pass the bill, I fear those reports are wrong because Congress is the same body that passed the Communications Decency Act (CDA). The CDA is the amendment to the 1996 Telecommunications Act that makes varying forms of "indecent" speech on the Internet illegal.

Meanwhile the Supreme Court is hearing challenges to the constitutionality of the CDA brought by a coalition of groups that include the American Civil Liberties Union, the Center for Democracy and Technology and a librarian's union.

The CDA does not simply outlaw pornography on-line, but it eliminates sex and health education and some everyday speech we take for granted. Its language is broad because some of the original Congressional proponents of the amendment were hoping to also ban pro-choice speech and sex education on-line. Its wide berth potentially places a large group of Americans at risk of being thrown in prison for two years — the punishment if found guilty under the CDA.

Imagine going to prison for simply talking about sexual experiences with friends in an Internet chat room. It is legal for us to talk on the telephone about it, but under the CDA we could not hold such discussions in chat rooms without the fear of imprisonment. Last week when the Supreme Court heard arguments against the CDA, Justices Breyer, O'Conner and Souter shrieked at the thought of high school and college students behind bars for talking about simple rites of passage.

Maybe we could do without teenagers and college students talking about sex on the 'Net, but can we let art fall by the wayside of the Information Superhighway? If the CDA were enforced, web pages dedicated to artists like Michelangelo, Boticelli or other great masters who painted or drew nudes would become illegal.

Maybe the police will knock on former Surgeon General C. Everret Koop's door to arrest him for his web site dedicated to health issues that includes some sex education information. A middle aged woman worried about breast cancer could no longer comb the 'Net for the latest information.

CDA supporters argue that protecting children from pornography is worth curtailing an adult's freedoms. However, these nearsighted individuals overlook the difficulty of getting on the 'Net and the ease of curtailing a child's use of the Internet. CDA proponents equate the Web with the Internet — to them the two are interchangeable rather than the Web being a part of the vast Internet. Although it is easy to log on to the Web, it is a challenge to master other parts of the 'Net like chat, telnet and newsgroups.

Most people had a friend in middle school who had all the cable channels thrown to man in the late 1980s. Remember sleeping over that person's house all set to watch the fabled late night broadcasts on Showtime and "Skinamax," but to your disappointment his or her parents had locked out the two channels?

This technology exists for personal computers. Microsoft has built into Internet Explorer, the software Goliath's web browser, filtering systems that eliminate porn and other unwanted sites — similar plug-ins exist for Netscape Navigator, the most commonly used web browser in the world. A few programs even go further than simply blocking children out of the Internet's red light district, but it locks them out of whole areas of their parent's computer like dirty files or simple personal finance applications like Quicken.

Despite existing technology that empowers parents to censor what their children see, CDA supporters are simply out to curtail our rights in the name of protecting children. When we find reasons to curtail one constitutional right, then the other rights come into question on varying grounds. What's next?

Matt Wurtzel is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury Flashbacks BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Missed the Collegian's annual April Fools issue because of the storm?
Check out our web site at:
http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian for all the fun.
Big hair metal is back!

Third-biggest snowstorm paralyzes Mass.

By Jon Marcus
Associated Press

BOSTON — A record-setting spring blizzard gave students and workers across New England the day off yesterday, but the fun soon turned to drudgery as falling tree limbs left nearly a million people without power and authorities predicted that it could take days to clear all the roads.

The April Fools' Day blizzard was the third-biggest snowstorm in Boston history, smashing the previous snowfall record for the entire month of April in just a few hours.

Two feet fell at Logan International Airport and as much as three feet in areas of western Massachusetts and eastern New York. One Boston commuter, Karen Wallach, called it "Mother Nature's April Fools' joke."

Nearly 13 percent of the region's population was without power during the peak of the storm, and emergency crews were called in from as far away as Maryland and Canada. Officials estimated that it would take at least three days to fully restore power.

Massachusetts Gov. William F. Weld declared a state of emergency and most schools and many universities and colleges were closed — including Harvard Law School, for the first time in nearly 20 years.

Public transportation was crippled, cars were buried under snowdrifts, roads were barely passable, interstate highways were closed, airports were shut down and major cities looked like ghost towns. Even snowplows and sanders got stuck.

High winds broke off a mast on the U.S.S. Constitution, the world's oldest commissioned warship, moored in Boston Harbor. Navy officials said the damage was minor and would be repaired before the ship's 200th anniversary this summer.

The effects of the storm system also continued to be felt in other states along its path.

Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Ridge declared a disaster in eight northeast counties and the National Guard was dispatched with front-end loaders to dig out cars stalled in the middle of some highways. Interstate 84 was closed by an accident involving eight tractor-trailers and two cars.

About 1,000 motorists spent Monday night and yesterday morning stranded in their cars and 4,000 others stayed in shelters. Volunteers with snowmobiles and four-wheel drive vehicles rode to the rescue.

Two feet of snow fell in some sections of New Jersey, causing delays on NJ Transit commuter trains. Service was suspended on the Port Jervis line because of fallen trees and signal problems. And the Baltimore Orioles postponed their opening-day game against the Kansas City Royals because of cold weather and high winds.

In Massachusetts, minor flooding and coastal erosion left a house on Nameloc Street in Plymouth teetering at the edge of the ocean.

Still, as far as flooding goes, "it's actually not been a bad storm," said William Harrison, fire chief and emergency director in coastal Duxbury.

The biggest problem was downed trees and utility poles, which broke electric wires and left nearly a million New Englanders in the dark. At 5 p.m., 205,000 homes in Massachusetts alone were in the dark.

"Trees are coming down like crazy, like toothpicks," said Paul Miller, an inspector for Boston Edison, as he took a break in his idling truck in Lexington.

More than 160 trees were reported down in Boston alone, where Public Works Director Joseph Casazza said the cleanup would take several days. Six of the city's 27 ambulances got stuck in snowbanks.

New England Electric had 250 crews out working to restore power, and 180 more on the way from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and eastern Canada. Boston Edison had 100 crews working, and called in 36 more from New York, Pennsylvania, Vermont and Ontario, Canada.

Two of the three major transmission lines leading from the Seabrook, N.H., nuclear power plant were knocked out, and officials said the plant would be shut down today if the problem wasn't fixed by then.

Three of the four main power lines to Cape Cod and southeastern Massachusetts also were out of service, and Commonwealth Electric spokeswoman Cindy Angus said the company was hoping that the fourth didn't give out.

U.S. says Russia still building war bunkers

By John Diamond
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Russia continues to build bunkers to protect its leaders in case of nuclear attack, a Pentagon official said yesterday.

"The Russians are building and have been building for some time various underground facilities in Russia," Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said. "These were done in the Soviet Union and they're being continued by Russia today."

"We do not regard the program as a threat," Bacon said. "We don't understand why they are continuing to do this but they are."

Better to spend money on underground shelters, than on new kinds of offensive weapons, Bacon said.

The existence of extensive shelters and shelter construction in Russia and, earlier, the Soviet Union has long been known. Bacon's comments, however, came the day of a report in The Washington Times that quoted a top-secret CIA study on the Russian program.

"The underground construction appears larger than previously assessed," the CIA reported, according to the newspaper. "The purpose of the Moscow-area projects is to maintain continuity of leadership during nuclear war."

Bacon pointed out that the United States maintains underground facilities to shelter leaders and key military commanders in the event of a nuclear attack. The United States employs other means, such as aircraft capable of serving as command posts in a nuclear war.

China warns U.S. against interfering on Taiwan after Gingrinch pledge

BEIJING — The United States should keep its nose out of China-Taiwan relations, China said yesterday in an attack on Newt Gingrich's promise that Washington would defend the island against Chinese attack.

"We don't need any foreigner making indiscreet remarks on this question," Foreign Ministry spokesman Shen Guofang said.

Gingrich, who is wrapping up a four-nation tour of Asia, was in Tokyo on yesterday where he met with the head of the powerful Ministry of International Trade and Industry. He was to visit Taiwan today.

China regards Taiwan, which the Nationalists have ruled since they fled the advancing Communists in 1949, as a breakaway province. Beijing has not ruled out using force to retake the island.

Gingrich told a senior Chinese official Sunday, the final day of a three-day stay in China, that the United States would defend Taiwan if China launched an offense.

Asked about Gingrich's comments, Shen said Beijing wants Taiwan to reunify peacefully with China. If Taiwan declares independence or foreign forces interfere on the island, "then of course we will take other necessary measures," he said.

"Whatever method is used to resolve the question of Taiwan as an internal affair of China," he said at a twice-weekly briefing, restating Beijing's longheld position.

Shen accused the United States of supporting pro-independence forces on Taiwan and hindering peaceful reunification with China by "selling large amounts of advanced weapons" to the island. The United States says it sells only defensive weapons to Taiwan.

Washington has recognized China's claim over Taiwan since President Richard Nixon's historic opening of ties in 1972. But a 1979 law, passed after Washington switched formal diplomatic recognition to Beijing, requires the United States to aid in the defense of Taiwan, a staunch Cold War ally.

Gingrich's visit to Japan — he arrived on Sunday — came just days after the Cabinet approved a sweeping reform package aimed at overhauling the troubled financial system and cutting government regulation.

During a luncheon speech yesterday at the Japan National Press Club, he said Japan can both strengthen its economic recovery and soothe trade troubles with Washington with a single policy: deregulation.

Reliance on rising exports or government spending will only weaken the economy, he said. He said the key to opening the economy is transferring power from bureaucrats to Parliament.

"Any move toward deregulation must involve increasing the influence of directly elected representatives at the expense of an unaccountable bureaucracy," he said.

In Japan, bureaucrats write the country's laws, and are credited with engineering Japan's rise to affluence after its defeat in World War II.

New immigration policies take effect

By Darlene Superville
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A new law that makes it easier for the government to deport illegal immigrants and block the entry of others took effect yesterday after a federal court turned back a challenge by immigrant-rights groups.

"We're going forward. The law and accompanying regulations are being implemented as originally planned," said Andrew Lluberes, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

But the law has thousands of illegal and legal immigrants fearing the future. Several hundred people, many of them Haitians, took to the streets yesterday near an INS office in Miami to vent their frustrations. Many of the immigrants had come to the United States in search of new lives.

"Now all of a sudden they've changed the rules. They're telling them to go back home," said Cheryl Little, executive director of the Florida Immigrant Advocacy Center.

In Washington, both sides returned to court yesterday as the American Civil Liberties Union and the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights pursued another part of their complaint. A judge scheduled a hearing on that issue for Friday.

Having lost their bid to delay the law's starting date, the groups want U.S. District Judge Emmet Sullivan to issue a temporary restraining order blocking provisions that deal with political asylum for immigrants.

Under the new law, INS officers may refuse entry to anyone bearing invalid or fraudulent documents unless a credible fear of persecution or asylum claim is made. It also reduces the rights of federal courts to review decisions about deportation and exclusion. Advocates for immigrants maintain the INS is violating the law and the intent of Congress by not ordering immigration officers to routinely inform people of their right to apply for asylum and consult with an attorney.

INS says immigrants will be told of that right at a point in the process called "secondary inspection." If the initial INS agent isn't sure how to proceed, the immigrant is sent to another agent. If the second agent denies admission, the individual must be told of the right to apply for asylum.

But advocates say they should be informed much earlier in the process.

Robert Rubin of the Lawyers' Committee said that under the law, immigrants with valid reasons for fleeing their homelands are being summarily denied admission because they can't articulate them. Previously, such decisions could be appealed to an immigration judge.

"If that is not immediate and irreparable harm, I don't know what is," Rubin said in court, arguing for an injunction. Linda Wendtland, a lawyer for the Justice Department, which oversees the INS, said an injunction would be moot because the complaint doesn't name specific individuals or make a "concrete showing of injury."

On Monday, the groups scored a brief victory when Sullivan decided that the law shouldn't take effect until Saturday. They argued that the government failed to publish regulations implementing the provision 30 days before it was to take effect, as administrative law requires.

But an appeals court overturned Sullivan early yesterday. Other provisions of the immigration law, signed in September, will:

- Make it easier to deport illegal aliens unless they can prove their removal would cause "exceptional and extremely unusual hardship" to a close relative who is a U.S. citizen or legal permanent resident.
- Bar aliens seeking to re-enter the country after living here without authorization. Undocumented immigrants who spend 180 days here unlawfully after April 1 will face three years of banishment, or 10 years if they stay a year or more.

The MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Celebrating 30 years of daily publication

1997

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

1987

LARGEST COLLEGE PAPER IN NEW ENGLAND
The Massachusetts Daily COLLEGIAN
RSO-UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS, AMHERST — 113 CAMPUS CENTER 545-3500 VOLUME CXIX ISSUE 36

1974

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
Collegian
VOLUME CI, ISSUE 105 TUESDAY, APRIL 2, 1974

1967

MDC Forecast: Blizzard

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Cast your vote in the MDC Vietnam Poll

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
Vol. XCVI, NO. 61 TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1967

Arts & Living

Wednesday, April 2, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Two Texan singers share new releases and a legacy

By Joshua Boyd
Collegian Staff

TOWNES VAN ZANDT
The Highway Kind
Sugar Hill Records

GUY CLARK
Keepers — A Live Recording
Sugar Hill Records

Two of Texas' best singer-songwriters in this last half of the 20th century are in record stores again, this time both with live recordings. Guy Clark (a native of Monahans, an oil town in the west part of the Lone Star State), and Townes Van Zandt (Fort Worth) shared much more in life than just the same home state.

They shared a long, loving friendship. They shared musical influences such as Hank Williams, Sr., and Lightnin' Hopkins. They shared many bottles of beer and liquor, especially Van Zandt, whose alcoholism put him into a nearly seven year personal exile. They shared the same Durham, N.C. record label, Sugar Hill. One thing that is unfortunately no longer shared is life. Van Zandt passed away on New Year's Day of this year, due to complications from a hip injury.

The Highway Kind finds the rambling Van Zandt in various solo live settings over the past few years until his death. Van Zandt's life was one of the highway kind. He followed in the footsteps of the influences listed above in that he was always either on the road, or hidden from the public. Despite his upbringing in a prominent oil family, he decided to not let family tradition rule his life and fell in love with music, specifically music about the road, lost souls, wild women and lots and lots of alcohol.

The opener "Still Looking For You," a self-deprecating song about desire, is sung the way all the cuts on The Highway Kind are — with a deep and low voice which employs the same high, lonesome voice bending as Hank Williams often used. His only accompaniment on the 11 live tracks is his subdued guitar. His words are always the most important to him.

The song listed as "A Song For" is actually the song "Lover's Lullaby." Van Zandt was just having fun in calling it the former. "Lover's Lullaby" is about his eternal friend Jeaneane, also his ex-wife and mother of his children, and it is a beautiful song. He sings his sad credo on "No Deal": "I come through this life a stumbler, my friends and I expect to die that way." "Rake" is a classic reminiscent about wild youth.

Van Zandt always loves to channel old musicians with his covers. His 1994 album Road Songs was all covers. On The Highway Kind, he brings out the sad soul of Hank Williams' "I Heard That Lonesome Whistle Blow," Peter LaFarge's ballad of the drunken "Ira Hayes" and the Roy Acuff tune with bluegrass flavors, "Wreck On The Highway." He also took his buddy Guy Clark's tune "Dublin Blues" into the studio, with nice accompaniment by a band that includes Kelley Joe Phelps on dobro and Rise Payne on fiddle.

Clark's album, Keepers, is called that because, as he says, "They're the [older songs of his] that I still sing, every night... and I wouldn't do 'em if I didn't think they held up." These classics, like "South Coast Of Texas," "Better Days" and "Texas — 1947" hold up like a designated driver holding up his drunken pal. The album is completely live and has a spectacular band, consisting of his son Travis on bass, Suzi Ragsdale on accordion, Verlon Thompson on guitar, singer-songwriter Darrell Scott on various string instruments like dobro and mandolin and Kenny Malone on various percussion. All except Malone lend harmony vocals.

These harmonies between Clark and his cohorts elevate songs like the spare love song "Like A Coat From The Cold," "The Last Gunfighter Ballad" (originally done as a duet with Johnny Cash in the '70s studio version) and "That Old Time Feeling," which Clark says is "the first song I wrote that I kept." The band gets into some country and blues rave-ups also, such as "Heartbroke," "Homegrown Tomatoes" and "A Little Bit Of Both." The album is dedicated, saying simply "for Townes Van Zandt 1944– 1997." These two albums show two of the most talented singer-songwriters in the century bearing their soul to audiences who loved their music and will pass on the tales of their common legacy.

COURTESY LYNNE COOK/SUGAR HILL RECORDS

The lineup of Guy Clark's live recording, Keepers (L–R): Darrell Scott, Suzi Ragsdale, Kenny Malone, Guy Clark, Verlon Thompson and Travis Clark.

COURTESY SUGAR HILL RECORDS

The late Townes Van Zandt.

BARNSTABLE RECREATION

SEASONAL OPENINGS AVAILABLE AS FOLLOWS:

POSITIONS	RATE	MUST HAVE
SUPERINTENDENTS	8.50	SFA, CPR
GATE ATTENDANTS	6.00	SFA, CPR
BATH ATTENDANTS	5.00	NOT REQUIRED
LIFEGUARDS	7.50	SFA, BLS/CPR, LGT, WSI
SWIM INSTRUCTORS	8.00	SFA, BLS/CPR
SAILING INSTRUCTORS	8.00	LGT, BLS/CPR
SEASONAL RANGERS	6.50	SFA, CPR
CAMP COUNSELORS	6.50	SFA, CPR
CAMP DIRECTORS	8.00	SFA, CPR

CALL (508) 790 - 6345, M - F, 8 - 4 FOR AN APPLICATION AND JOB DESCRIPTION.

OTHER POSITIONS AVAILABLE: GYMNASTIC INSTRUCTORS, TRACK COACHES, TENNIS INSTRUCTORS

"There is such a thing as a free ride."

Announcing the AT&T "Ultimate Road Trip" Sweepstakes.

Going abroad this school year? AT&T would like to help pay your way.

10 Grand Prize Winners – Round-Trip Air Transportation from the U.S. to the country where you'll be studying.

Plus thousands of chances to win high-quality currency converters (hey, you may find it more valuable than the air transportation).

To enter, call

1 800 257-5424 ext. 300

Or you can enter on-line at http://www.att.com/student_abroad

Do it today.

No purchase necessary. Void where prohibited. Sweepstakes ends 5/1/97. Open to residents of the U.S. 18 years or older, enrolled at a U.S. college or university during the '97-'98 school year and traveling internationally for 14 days or more. See your Study Abroad Counselor or http://www.att.com/student_abroad for official rules and details.

© 1997 AT&T

TONITE

LIVE MUSIC

Featuring

TRICK KNEE

-The Music of Sex-

9:30-1:00

Drink Specials

Captain Morgan & Coke - 16 oz - 2.00

Sloe Gin Fizz - 16oz - 2.00

Rolling Rock -12oz Bottles - 1.50

Red Dog - 16 oz Draft - 1.50

fun food · spirits

THE PUB

amherst

15 East Pleasant St.

Knowledge Grows Here!

Summer Session at Stony Brook

Terms start June 2 and July 14

260 courses in 40 subjects

Day and evening classes

Low NYS tuition

Live on campus or commute

Please send me the 1997 Summer Session Bulletin; or check out our web page at Http://www.sunysb.edu/summer/

Name

Street/Box No

City State Zip

Telephone Area of interest

School currently attending Anticipated year of graduation

STONY BROOK
STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK

Mail coupon or call 24 hours 1-800-559-7213
E-mail: summerschool@ccmail.sunysb.edu
Or write: Summer Session Office, Dept. CN,
University at Stony Brook, Stony Brook,
NY 11794-3370

Live in New York City This Summer

NYU Summer Housing
May 18–August 9, 1997

Living in an NYU residence hall offers a safe and convenient home base while you are working, taking classes, or doing an internship.

- Minutes from New York's business and cultural centers.
- Apartment-style and traditional residences; single and double occupancy.
- Outstanding sports-recreation facility.
- Over 1,000 day and evening courses.
- Apply early to secure a space.

For more information, call toll free
1-800-771-4NYU, ext. 918

New York University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity institution.

National buying power means you save more!

SUPER SALE

April 4 | April 5 | April 6 | April 7

Super SAVINGS!

*Whatever you need for cycling fun, it's ON SALE next weekend at SuperSale! Looking for a new bike? A lightweight helmet? Comfortable cycling shorts? Get the best brands and save money at SuperSale, America's biggest and best bicycle and accessory sale. Don't miss it!

EVERYTHING WE HAVE IS ON SALE!

Some Examples:

TREK Tubes reg. $12-$15 for 3 ..... 3 for $6.99
TREK Mini Pump reg. $22.00 ..... $15.99
TREK Handle Bar Ends reg. $20.00 ..... $14.99
TREK Computers reg. $34.99 ..... $24.99

TREK BIKES ARE ON SALE!

Our best deals of the season on Mountain, Road, Hybrid and BMX bikes.

NORTHAMPTON BICYCLE

EST 1971

319 Pleasant St., Northampton

586-3810

http://www.javanet.com/~nohobike

Marc Jackson flies the Temple coop

By John F. Bonfanti
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Temple center Marc Jackson will give up his final year of college eligibility to enter the NBA draft, sources told The Associated Press.

Jackson scheduled a 3 p.m. news conference at the school to make the announcement.

The Atlantic 10 Player of the Year, Jackson, a 6-foot-10, 270-pound junior, was the Owls' leading scorer and rebounder the past two seasons, averaging 16 points and nine rebounds last season.

He will be only the second Temple player to leave school early. Junior Donald Hodge was drafted by Dallas in 1991.

Jackson could declare himself eligible for the draft and go back to Temple for his senior year, whether he's drafted or not, as long as he doesn't sign with an agent.

"We've sat down and talked about his options for some time," Temple coach John Chaney told the Philadelphia Daily News. "He has to make his judgment, based on what's the worse that could happen to him."

Most draft evaluators don't see Jackson as a first-round choice. Don Leventhal, in his most recent rankings, had Jackson rated as the sixth pick in the second round, No. 36 overall.

But Leventhal's ratings don't include several other underclassmen who are expected to announce they will enter the draft, players who figure to be selected ahead of Jackson. While first-round picks get guaranteed contracts, with this year's final pick in the first round guaranteed a three-year deal at about $1.75 million, second-round selections don't.

Still, Jackson may have other, more lucrative offers in Europe if he doesn't make it in the NBA. Former Owl Derrick Battie, a solid, but unspectacular college player, made $150,000 last year playing overseas.

Jackson's strength is his size and soft touch around the basket. His weakness is his limited leaping ability.

Sox season opens tonight in Anaheim

By Ken Peters
Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The Boston Red Sox and Anaheim Angels, both of whom experienced hard times in 1996, get a fresh start with some fresh faces tonight when they play their season opener.

Boston's Tom Gordon (12-9) will face Mark Langston (6-5) in the game at Anaheim Stadium.

Each team looks considerably different than on the final day of last season, but probably not different enough to be serious contenders for division titles.

Over the winter, the Red Sox fired manager Kevin Kennedy and also said goodbye to longtime ace Roger Clemens, outfielder-DH Jose Canseco and outfielder Mike Greenwell.

They added, among others, manager Jimy Williams, pitchers Steve Avery and Bret Saberhagen, and outfielder Shane Mack.

Only six players remain from Boston's AL East champions of 1995. Bemoaning all the changes, Red Sox first baseman Mo Vaughn said, "When you change roles from year to year, it makes it tougher to fill in the gaps. You just hope you can fill them in before you're 6-19."

Last season, Boston began with a franchise-worst 2-10 record and went on to win only six of its first 25. The Red Sox could not overcome that poor start despite posting the majors' best record after the All-Star break, winding up third in the division at 85-77.

The Angels, who lost a one-game playoff to Seattle after tying atop the AL West in 1995, slumped to 70-91 in 1996, 19 1/2 games out. They also have a new manager, Terry Collins, and while their roster hasn't been shaken up as much as the Red Sox, there are many other changes with the club, including Anaheim replacing California in the name.

The Angels will be starting their first full season with the Walt Disney Co. running the show. Gene Autry remains the majority owner, but Disney bought in last year and has assumed operational control.

Among the changes are new, pin-striped uniforms, a new logo, and even a newly remodeled stadium, with phase one of a two-year project completed.

"I feel like this is a new team. Although I didn't test the free agent market, I might as well have," said outfielder Tim Salmon, who was given a $22-million, four-year contract extension though the 2001 season.

Gone are DH Chili Davis, two-time Gold Glove-winning first baseman J.T. Snow and utility man Rex Hudler, a sparkplug for the team over the past few seasons.

Also gone is popular left-hander Jim Abbott, who was 2-18 last season and didn't show any signs of improvement this spring, posting a 13.50 ERA. Abbott, sent home from camp early, was unconditionally released Monday by the Angels, who ostensibly will have to eat the final two years of his three-year, $7.8-million contract.

Back, in his old role as pitching coach, is Marcel Lachemann, who resigned as manager last season, then was asked by Collins over the winter to rejoin the staff.

Newcomers include starting pitchers Mark Gubicza and Allen Watson, plus first baseman-DH Eddie Murray and catcher Jim Leyritz.

"You can't put a value on experience and leadership," Anaheim shortstop Gary DiSarcina said.

"When you add the guys that we've added, it's going to rub off. Eddie Murray commands respect as soon as he walks into the clubhouse, and it's the same with the other guys who have been brought in, although not on Eddie's level. It can't do anything but help."

The Angels and Red Sox also have in common the fact that they had forgettable exhibition records this spring. Boston was 11-19, with only one AL team with a worse mark — the Angels at 9-21.

PONTIAC SUNFIRE

DRIVING EXCITEMENT FOR AROUND $13,500

Call 1-800-SUNFIRE

©1997 GM Corp. All rights reserved. Always wear safety belts, even with air bags.

*See your participating Pontiac dealer for details on the $400 College Graduate purchase incentive. GM reserves the right to change or withdraw this offer.

$13,514 MSRP including dealer prep and destination charge. Tax, license and other optional equipment extra. Prices higher in CA, MA and NY. Price as of 9/1/96, subject to change.

AFRAID OF OVER-STUDYING?? TAKE A BREAK! WATCH HARD ROCK LIVE PRESENTED BY PONTIAC SUNFIRE SUNDAY 8 P.M. AND 1 A.M., MONDAY 8 P.M., SATURDAY 5 P.M. ALL TIMES EST/PST. ONLY ON VH1. www.hardrocklive.msn.com

Calipari receives fine and reprimand for insulting remark

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - New Jersey Nets coach John Calipari received an official letter of reprimand from team officials 11 days after he called a reporter a "a (bleeping) Mexican idiot."

Calipari, fined a record $25,000 by the NBA on March 26, made the comment to Dan Garcia of the Newark Star-Ledger after a practice March 20.

Calipari has apologized, maintaining it was an ill-advised attempt at humor.

Nets chief executive officer Henry Taub and club president Michael Rowe issued the reprimand Monday after a two-hour meeting with Calipari.

"It was a very serious meeting in which ownership expressed their concerns over coach Calipari's actions a week earlier and the damage to all concerned," Rowe said. "Management reviewed all possible courses of action that were left to be taken. In view of the NBA fine, it was felt there was no benefit in assessing additional monetary penalties."

Calipari is a former coach of the University of Massachusetts.

TRAVEL SMART!

FROM NEW YORK

	One Way	Roundtrip
London	$199	$370
Rome or Milan	$340	$635
San Jose, Costa Rica	$246	$460
TOKYO		$879
SYDNEY		$898

Subsidized flights.
Fares to worldwide destinations. Eurailpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.

PRISM TRAVEL

212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

FOR RENT

Great apartment uptown! 5 min walk to campus. One bedroom. Begin 6/1. $630/month 256-6441

Take over our lease or will sublet starting June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywine Rent includes heat and hot water. Call 549-0530

Summer Apt. Available 6/1 with Fall option. Clean, 2 bedroom in Brandywine $775/month includes gas, hot water and heat. On bus line. 1 mile from UMass. 549-0879

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Pontiac Grand Prix $900 in new parts. $2000 or B/O. 587-0328

1991 Ford Escort GT red, excellent condition, runs great, standard, stereo, A/C, sun roof, $3900/B.O Call Ian 665-0486

87 Ford Escort
A/C, F/M, 5-speed
104K miles, $1725
(413)256-1238

1985 Toyota Corolla good shape, 129K miles, $1000. Call 253-3264

1983 Red Renault Alliance Coupe Only 76K miles, automatic transmission, runs well, body in excellent condition, new brakes, starter, battery, Clarion AM/FM cassette. Must sell! $1000 or B/O 549-4584

EMPLOYMENT

We need two people to work in Southern Vermont Country Inn Do dishes and rooms, wait tables, food prep, etc. Room and board plus salary, tips. Call (802)874-4140

PAINTERS- Full-time summer; EXPERIENCE PREFERRED; vehicle; references, heavy lifting required. 9:00-5:00 ONLY. 247-5480

Summer in Maine- Camp Androscoggin for boys needs staff to teach tennis, soccer, lacrosse, baseball, swimming, sailing, archery, photography, nature, fishing, mountain biking, art, ropes, radio. Have Fun. Have An Impact. Write, e-mail, or call Collet. 601 West Street, Hannson, NY 10578 (914)835-5800 http://www.coolworks.com/showme/camp/andro

NEED MONEY $50 a week, short morning hours. Contact Mark or Alycia at 545-3500 or stop by The Collegian in the Campus Center Basement.

SUMMER JOBS
Communication Assistant- MA Telecommunications Relay Service, Holyoke, MA. Requirements Typing 55wpm; clear speaking voice, good phone skills, dependable, positive attitude, full-time and part-time positions. Flexible shifts. Call (413)493-1100 for an appointment.

Vermont Adventure! Farm and Wilderness is now hiring summer staff. We need people who want to provide positive guidance and support to adolescents coming of age in the 90's. Counselors, nurses, cooks, general staff. Organic farming, backpacking, rock climbing, waterfront, carpentry, crafts. Challenging wilderness environment in the Green Mountains of Vermont. Contact Philip Tobin (802)422-3761 or faradw@sover.net (http://www.faradw.org)

Need a summer job? Know the web? Sell MCI Internet Websites to anyone, whenever you want to work. Low cost, nice income for you. Call (800)372-7683 or e-mail for more information. dlenger@aol.com

Leasing Agents Full and Part Time for the busy summer season. Must be outgoing, friendly, and willing to work many hours. Responsibilities include collecting rent, processing applications, answering phones and general clerical work. Please apply in person at Cliffside Apartments between 1-4pm. No phone calls please. EOE

Earn great money and valuable Sales/Marketing experience. Memolink's Memoboards are coming to UMass! We need one highly motivated individual to direct our sales project. Contact David at (800)563-6654

Technical Support/ISP Looking for a great part-time job? We are a local, progressive, internet service provider that is looking for Quality, Energetic, and Reliable persons to join our team. Requirements: experience in Windows '95, Windows 3.1, Mac, Dialup Networking and TC PIP. Call our job hotline today! (413)587-4333 or e-mail jobs@crocker.com

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St. D40, NYC, NY 10014

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. CS6017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Sugarloaf Estates Ultra modern, two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers, and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Now leasing Spring and Fall. Call 665-3856

4 bedroom apartment 2 bath, 2 large living rooms. Located on bus route in South Amherst. Call 256-1561

Summer Rental- West Hyannis Port Cape Cod three bedroom. Walk to Craigville Beach. Available 5/25-8/31 (508)778-6519

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

Two Metallica tickets for April 4 in Hartford. $70 or B/O. Call 546-5718

Laptop Notebook $99, VGA Color Monitor $75, Hard Drive $10, Software $5, 386 Motherboard $25. Call Steve 568-3325 ext. 2

Lite Speed Titanium 50 centimeter road bike. Ridden once. Need immediate funds. Paid $1700, asking $1150 or B/O. 253-6452

Buy wholesale, not retail. The last phone card you will ever own. MCI Pre-paid only $2.00 for 10 minutes. This card is rechargeable. Mail $2.00 and SASE to: Collegiate Communications, P.O. Box 785, Attleboro, MA 02703 (800)372-7683

FOUND

Gold Earrings @ Totman 3 weeks ago. Call Phil 6-4074

Small Black and Tan Hound mix, very sweet, graying female. Red collar, no tags. Found in East Leverett on Easter Sunday. 549-3586

Keychain with name Karen house key and car keys. Call Katie 546-5318

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT
30 hours, $395
American Academy
1-800-808-Prep
(please leave your name and number)

LOST

EWARD! Gold Chain, small diamond. Melanie 548-5738

LOST

Watch Lost at Skinner bus stop on Friday. Fossil, silver band. Girl who found it, please return. Veronica 549-7314

MUSICIANS

DRUMMER WANTED
Punk/Ska Band 25 Liars needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming. Call Dave and Ryen 665-9112

ROOMATE WANTED

Two bedroom apt. ASAP! Mill Valley Estates. Rent negotiable. Call 253-0592

SERVICES

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State St. Northampton 586-0629

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

Mill Valley Summer Sublet 3 bedroom, 2 bath, fully furnished. On bus route 1 month FREE! 253-6503

2 bedroom apartment in Brandywine. Fully furnished $775/month. Call 549-6452

Summer/Fall Option 1 bedroom in a 2 bedroom. Sunny, huge, clean. 10 min. from campus. Available 5/15 or 6/1. Jen 259-1581

SUMMER SUBLET

CHEAP SUBLET- Summer/Fall Option. Two bedroom apartment on Sunderland bus line. $500/month. Shelly 665-0087

3 bedroom Puffoe available 6/1. 549-5941

TO SUBLET

Four girls to sublet an apt/house for Fall '97. Must be on bus route. Please call either Rory at 6-2778, Heather at 6-1872, or Katy/Renee at 6-3114

1 bedroom apartment available immediately. Call Tricia for more info. (617)247-2388

TRAVEL

EUROPE $175.
Within USA $78 - $129.
Caribb./Mexico $199 -/?.
Cheap Fares Worldwide!!!!!!
http://www.airhitch.org
AIRHITCH! (800)326-2069

Party Weekend in Vermont April 4-6, only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus. $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

EMPLOYMENT

EDUCATION MAJORS!!
DON'T JUST WORK THIS SUMMER, COME GROW PROFESSIONALLY AT AMERICA'S PREMIER BROTHER/SISTER CAMPS WINADU FOR BOYS. DANBEE FOR GIRLS IN WESTERN MASS.
SALARY / ROOM / BOARD AND TRAVEL INCLUDED!!
COME VISIT WITH OUR REPRESENTATIVE THURSDAY, APRIL 3RD 802 CAMPUS CENTER 10AM - 4PM (WALK-INS WELCOME!)
FOR MORE INFO CALL 800-494-6238

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or demeaning nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the Law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 2

Wednesday, April 2

Exhibit — The Bottom Drawer, a sculpture and painting exhibit by Harriet Diamond and Linda Batchelor, will open today and run through April 24 in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space in the Student Union. An opening reception will be held April 4 at 5 p.m. and an open panel discussion will be held April at 10:45 a.m.

Film — The Student Union Visual Arts and Performing Arts Space "Faces" series will screen a video on Marc Chagall at 4:30 p.m.

Forum — A "Society and Starvation" forum will be held on the Student Union steps from noon–1 p.m. Speakers will address problems in society and what students can do to help these issues. This event is sponsored by MassPIRG.

Lecture — The Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies (PAWSS) will sponsor a talk by Dr. Cynthia McClintock on "Peace and Rebellion in Latin America After the Cold War," at 8 p.m. in the Hasbrouck 20. The event is free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series will feature Lorna McLean, a visiting Canadian historian, on "Gender, Community and Crime in the 19th Century Ontario," from 12:15–1:30 in the Campus Center, room 162–175. Coffee and tea will be available. Feel free to bring a lunch. Free and open to everyone.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will meet in the Campus Center, room 903, at 7 p.m. New members are always welcome; come and read or just to listen and talk. For more information, call Tim at 546-0562 or Kaye at 546- 1459.

Meeting — The Animal Rights Coalition will hold its weekly meeting at 7 p.m. in 306 Student Union. New members welcome.

Reading — The Five College Women's Studies Research Center will host a reading and book signing for editor Arlene Avakian and local contributors Martha Ayres, Sally Bellerose, Jyl Lynn Felman, Jennifer Iré and Cheryl Savageau, of the book Through the Kitchen Window: Women Explore the Intimate Meanings of Food and Cooking at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College. Informal reception to follow talk. Free and open to the public.

Seminar — The UMass Amherst Neuroscience and Behavior Program Seminars will feature James E. Crandall, Developmental Neurobiology, from the E.K. Shriver Center, on "Early Development of the Cerebral Cortex," hosted by Thomas Zoeller, at 4 p.m. in Room 319 of Morrill Science Center II.

THURSDAY, APRIL 3

Discussion — The Five College Coastal & Marine Sciences Alum Career and Grad School panel discussion will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Amherst College, Pratt Museum, room 5.

Theater — Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance produces Phaedra by Elizabeth Egloff, directed by Courtney Munch. Starts today, and runs through Saturday, April 5. Show time 8 p.m. Admission is free but reservations are suggested. Box office hours are 1–4:30 p.m. weekdays, and until 8 p.m. performance nights.

Workshop — Thinking about Graduate School? Grad students and professors will offer advice and tips on taking the GRE, applying for grad school, etc., at 5:30 p.m. in Gunness Student Center. Everyone is welcome. Organized by Tau Beta Pi National Engineering Honors Society.

FRIDAY, APRIL 4

Conference — Student and community activists from across the country will participate in workshops and grassroots organizational training at Hampshire College's Eleventh Annual Fight for Abortion Rights and Reproductive Freedom conference from today–Sunday, April 6. Sponsored by the Hampshire College Civil Rights and Public Policy Program. Free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible. For schedule of events or more info, call 582–5645.

NOTICES

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Financial aid — Applications for summer financial aid are now available at Financial Aid Services. You must be a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass; taking summer classes through Continuing Education; going on approved summer international exchange program through IPO; or working on a graduate dissertation. Deadline is April 18. Late applications will not be accepted.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Member O.C.M.P.
"we accept all major credit cards"

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
$1 drinks Rum & Coke & always $1 Bud light draft

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 2, 1997

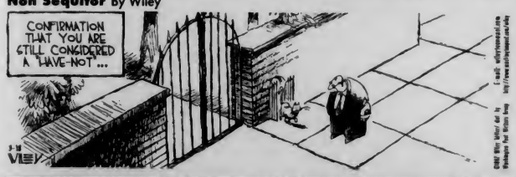
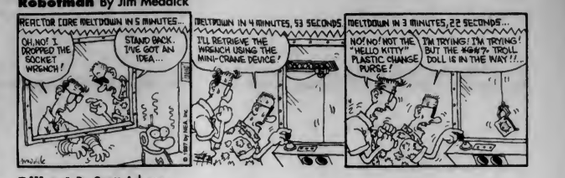
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ®		Mark Russell	Peter Bear Rts	Discover America		W.E.B. Du Bois – A Biography in Four Voices (In Stereo) ®
WFSB	3	3 News ®	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Nanny ®	Temporarily	Feds "Somebody's Lyin'" ®		EZ Streets (In Stereo) ®		News ®	Late Show ®
WBZ	4	4 News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Nanny ®	Temporarily	Feds "Somebody's Lyin'" ®		EZ Streets (In Stereo) ®		News	Late Show ®
WCVB	5	5 News ®	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ®	Grace Under	Coach ®	Drew Carey ®	Arsenio ®	Primetime Live ®		News	Nightline ®
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		Sister, Sister	Smart Guy ®	Jamie Foxx ®	Wayans Bros.	News		Jenny Jones (R) (In Stereo) ®
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ®	Newsradio ®	Single Guy ®	Wings ®	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Med Dog" ®		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	6 Fresh Prince	Martin ®	Judge Judy ®	Real TV ®	Sentinel "Black or White" (R) ®		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News		NJPD	Real TV ®
WVIT	9	10 News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy ®	Newsradio ®	Single Guy ®	Wings ®	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Med Dog" ®		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	10	11 Simpsons ®	Roseanne ®	Home Imp.	Seinfeld ®	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five ®		News		Coach ®	Deep Space 9
WWLP	11	22 News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ®	Newsradio ®	Single Guy ®	Wings ®	Men-Badly	Law & Order "Med Dog" ®		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	12	4 Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ®		Mark Russell	Lincoln Center	Great Performances "Emmeline" (In Stereo)				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	13	28 News ®	ABC News	Seinfeld ®	Ent. Tonight	Grace Under	Coach ®	Drew Carey ®	Arsenio ®	Primetime Live ®		News ®	Nightline ®
WSBK	14		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)	Seinfeld ®	Mad Abo. You	Sentinel "Black or White" (R) ®		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	Martin ®	Mad Abo. You	Real TV ®
WTBS	15		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	NBA Basketball: Atlanta Hawks at Charlotte Hornets. (Live) ®					NBA Basketball: Rockets at Suns
A&E	16		Quincy "A Question of Death"		Law & Order "Heaven" ®		Biography: John Dillinger			American Justice "Mob Ladies" 20th Century (R)			Law & Order "Old Friends" ®
CNN	17	23 WorldView ®		Moneyline ®	Crossfire ®	Prime News ®	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live ®		World Today ®		Sports Illus.	Moneyline ®
COM	18	26 Tick ®	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	Dream On	Dream On	Dream On	★★½ "Top Secret!" (1984, Comedy) Val Kilmer, Lucy Gutteridge		Daily Show		Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	19		Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings "Avenger" (R)		Wild Discovery: Grizzlies		Discover Magazine	CIA-Secret Warriors		Wild Discovery: Grizzlies
ESPN	21		Up Close	Sportscenter		Major League Baseball: Chicago Cubs at Florida Marlins. (Live) ®						Major League Baseball: Teams TBA
LIFE	20		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Dream Is a Wish Your Heart Makes: Fulicello"			Living	Mysteries
MTV	22		(5:30) Music Videos (In Stereo)		Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Music Videos (In Stereo)			Real World ®	Jenny M.	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	25		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug ®	Rugrats ®	Hey Arnold! ®	Happy Days	Love Lucy ®	Bewitched	Newhart ®	Odd Couple ®	Taxi ®
SCIFI	29		Twilight Zone	Darkside	Quantum Leap (In Stereo) ®		Seaquest DSV (In Stereo)		Forever Knight (In Stereo) ®		Sightings (In Stereo) ®		Quantum Leap (In Stereo) ®
TLC	30	24 Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Wondr-Weathr	Ultrascience	Ancient Prophecies One		Real Bionic Man (R)		Wondr-Weathr	Ultrascience
TNT	35		In the Heat of the Night ®		In the Heat of the Night ®		★★½ "The Road Warrior" (1981, Adventure) Mel Gibson,					★ "Beastmaster III: The Eye of Braxus" (1996) Marc Singer
USA	32		Renegade "Study" (In Stereo)		Highlander: The Series ®		Murder, She Wrote (In Stereo)		"A Prayer in the Dark" (1997, Drama) Lynda Carter, (In Stereo) ®		Wings ®		Wings ®
HBO	33		(5:45) ★★★ "Ghost" (1990, Fantasy) Patrick Swayze. PG-13 ®				★½ "Two if by Sea" (1996) Denis Leary. ®		Twister		Tracey Takes	Larry Sanders ★★½ "Mo Money" (1992) ®
MAX	34		★★ "Tommy Boy" (1995) Chris Farley. PG-13 ®		Double Team		1.Reform " (1996) Cotter Smith. (In Stereo) ®		★★★ "Copycat" (1995, Suspense) Sigourney Weaver. ®				★★★ "Long Kiss G
SHOW	36		(4:45)		★★ "Weekend at Bernie's II" (1993) PG ®		★½ "The Scarlet Letter" (1995, Drama) Demi Moore. ®					★★★ "10" (1979, Comedy) Dudley Moore, Julie Andrews ®

Bruno By C. Baldwin



Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

University² By Frank Cho

Attention Student Comic Artists

The Collegian loves your creative work — but we can't run it if it's not here. There are a number of artists on our waiting list hoping for a shot at spaces you currently hold. If you have a scheduling conflict or if you wish to reduce your contributions, please call Chris Conner at 545–1809.

Today's D.C. Menu Call 545-2626 for more information.

Sorry, no menu today due to technical difficulties. But does it really matter anyway?

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
An investment in your future that you made long ago (perhaps you've forgotten it?) begins to pay off this week. Getting the best deal when you negotiate is a simple matter of being a good salesperson, so polish all your giggles!

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
A good week to accomplish small, distasteful tasks. The feeling you'll get upon completion will move you more than offset the bother of the week itself. A careful plan of attack could make your tasks even easier.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
Accepting advice from someone considerably older could be a good move if you're in the process of making a big decision. Take action to protect your health in the face of some hazard—this is not a good week to go without wearing a seatbelt.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
Someone who's looking for a handout could benefit much more from an opportunity. Express your faith in their abilities, and then let them handle the rest. A relaxing interlude with a friend keeps you lively in the time ahead.

LEO
July 23–August 23
Social activities are best conducted in the sunshine this week. Plan a cookout or spend time at a park to make the most of your spare time. Treat a youngster to a special, unusual activity—the quality time will mean a stronger relationship.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
If you spend much time shopping this week, avoid high-pressure sales tactics. The strain on your budget could be tremendous. Anticipating a tense situation may mean you'll worsen it, or even create it. Just be yourself, and breathe deeply.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Finishing up something you started a long time ago brings a real sense of accomplishment. Congratulations! Pay close attention to a friend or acquaintance who has trouble doing things in moderation. Your assistance may be needed.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
If you're feeling a conflict of interests, consult an expert for advice. Although it's frustrating, you may need to delegate some authority in this situation to keep from becoming the object of jealousy or distrust.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
You may feel responsibilities closing in on you, perhaps even threatening to choke you. Resist the temptation to run away from all obligations. Communicating with the people involved may help make things seem less threatening.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
A marvelous evening is in the offing—whether you've planned a special interlude for a significant other or just need a relaxing evening at home, you'll be pleasantly surprised by how much you enjoy yourself.

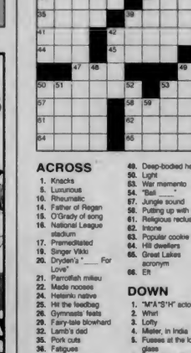
AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
When you finally sit down to schedule a big date, you may encounter unexpected setbacks or problems. Be open to the possibility of delaying it until a more opportune time, and you'll find a way to work everything out to your satisfaction.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
A haunting memory encroaches on your peace of mind this week. Discuss it with a friend who is aware of your past, and they may be able to help you diffuse your misgivings. Head to the barbecue grill for weekend fun in the sun.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

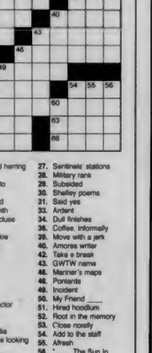
Close to Home By John McPherson

The Norstadts devise a subtle plan to force their newly returned adult son to move out.



Quote of the Day

"I went through Heaven's Gate. The proof is in the pudding"



-Seen on a T-shirt

ACROSS
1. Knacks
6. Luxurious
10. Rheumatic
14. Father of Regan
15. O'Grady of song
16. National League stadium
17. Premeditated
19. Singer Vikki
20. Dryden's "____ For Love"
21. Parrotfish milieu
22. Made noooses
24. Helsinki native
25. Hit the feedbag
26. Gymnasts' feats
29. Fairy-tale blowhard
32. Lamb's dad
35. Pork cuts
36. Fatigues
37. Son ____ gun! (2 wds.)
38. Exploited
39. Rocky Horror Picture Show girl
40. Don't bet ____! (2 wds.)
41. R-V link
42. Enthuses
43. Unlike CIA operations
44. Presidential exits
45. Oath of surprise
46. Admonishes
47. Author McBain et al
49. Deep-bodied herring
50. Light
53. War memento
54. "Bali ____"
57. Jungle sound
58. Putting up with
61. Religious recluse
62. Intone
63. Popular cookie
64. Hill dwellers
65. Great Lakes acronym
66. Eft

DOWN
1. "M*A*S*H" actor
2. Whirl
3. Lofty
4. Mister, in India
5. Fusses at the looking glass
6. Star of The Pride And The Passion
7. Gp. with the right stuff
8. Perish
9. Golf club part
10. Gentleman's tie
11. Oversaw the prom
12. ____ Come The Brides'
13. Arm or stick preceder
18. John Bull's penance
23. Blockheads
24. Discover
26. Kind of fund
27. Sentinels' stations
28. Military rank
29. Subsided
30. Shelley poems
31. Said yes
33. Ardent
34. Dull finishes
36. Coffee, informally
39. Move with a jerk
40. Amores writer
43. Take a break
43. GWTW name
46. Mariner's maps
48. Portents
49. Incident
50. My Friend ____
51. Hired hoodlum
52. Root in the memory
53. Close nosily
54. Add to the staff
55. Afresh
56. "____ The Sun In The Morning" (2 wds.)
59. Cry of discovery
60. Heavy weight

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Leold (leold@javanet.com) by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1994

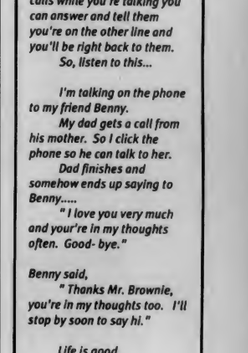
My dad has this feature on our home phone called " call waiting". So that if someone calls while you're talking you can answer and tell them you're on the other line and you'll be right back to them.

So, listen to this...

I'm talking on the phone to my friend Benny.

My dad gets a call from his mother. So I click the phone so he can talk to her.



Dad finishes and somehow ends up saying to Benny.....

" I love you very much and your're in my thoughts often. Good- bye."

Benny said,

" Thanks Mr. Brownie, you're in my thoughts too. I'll stop by soon to say hi."

Life is good.

SPORTS NOTICE:
There will be a mandatory Sports Staff meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the Collegian office.

SPORTS

Wednesday, April 2, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Weeks to announce plans today; Travieso participates in shoot-out

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts men's basketball forward Tyrone Weeks will announce his intentions concerning his eligibility at a press conference today.

The 6-foot-7 Weeks has the option of returning to UMass for another season because of a change in Proposition 48 rules that was voted on by the NCAA earlier this year. Because he is scheduled to graduate this May, Weeks, who sat out his first year at UMass due to Prop 48 regulations, could remain at UMass for one more season.

Weeks would not comment on his situation following the Minutemen's 65-58 loss to Louisville in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

"I'm going to decide soon," Weeks said after the NCAA game. "I don't want the University of Massachusetts to have to wait on me."

The press conference will be held at 4 p.m. today. See tomorrow's Collegian for the story.

* * *

UMass guard Carmelo Travieso and coach James "Bruiser" Flint were on hand for the festivities surrounding the Final Four in Indianapolis this past weekend.

Last Thursday night, Travieso was one of the contestants in the three-point shootout, while Flint judged the slam dunk contest. The two contests, as well as a women's three-point shootout, feature some of the nation's top seniors in those categories.

Travieso struggled as one of the shootout's first two contestants, hitting for 11 points in the contest.

Flint's job did not call for him to be on the floor, but instead in a judge's seat. Joining Flint on the sidelines were the mayor of Indianapolis, Cincinnati coach Bob Huggins and Marshall Faulk.

* * *

Flint has also been devoting some of his time to acting. The coach did not have to prepare much for his big screen role — he is playing the coach of UMass in the recently released The Sixth Man.

The movie, starring Marlon Wayans and Kadeem Hardison, is the story of a college basketball player whose brother comes back as a ghost to help the team. Hardison plays the ghost, while Wayans has the role of a University of Washington hoop player.

Flint is not the only recognizable face in the movie, as several other college hoop names make appearances in the movie.

The Sixth Man is currently playing at a theater near you.

Arizona knocks off Kentucky for title

By Mike Nodel
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Self-doubt was never an option, self-pity never a possibility. Fearless and peerless, Arizona simply used overtime to show why it deserved to preside over all of college basketball.

When the Wildcats came out of the huddle at the start of OT, having blown a four-point lead with less than a minute left in regulation, "it was still our game to win," Arizona captain Miles Simon said.

And so, they won.

Displaying the resiliency that became its trademark in the NCAA tournament, Arizona opened overtime with a 10-2 run and finished off defending champion Kentucky 84-79 Monday night for its first national title.

Arizona (25-9) reached the Final Four after finishing fifth in the Pac-10 and getting the fourth seed in the Southeast Regional. Kentucky (35-5) was trying to join Duke as the only repeat champions since UCLA's stretch of seven straight titles ended in 1973.

In its six tournament games, Arizona either needed to come from well behind to win or needed to pull out a game after losing a late lead.

Along the way, Arizona became the first team in tournament history to knock off three No. 1 seeds — Kansas, North Carolina and now Kentucky, three programs that have won more games than any schools in college basketball history.

"They've gone through three number one seeds," Arizona coach Lute Olson said, "and in every one of those cases, that was the point. Are we tough enough? Can we be the ones that run other people out of gas? Can we get the tough rebound down the stretch, even though you're exhausted?' And I think they answered that for everybody tonight."

With freshman point guard Mike Bibby starting alongside three juniors and a sophomore, next season was supposed to be Arizona's time to shine. That everything happened more quickly than even Olson thought possible just made his team's accomplishments more remarkable.

"This team, there's no fluke," Kentucky coach Rick Pitino said of Arizona. "They're a great team who got better and better." Arizona won the first overtime championship game of the 1990s by repeatedly burning Kentucky's vaunted fullcourt press, by holding All-American forward Ron Mercer to nine shots, by going 34-of-41 from the free-throw line, and by getting a career-high 30 points from Simon.

"Miles Simon's toughness is unbelievable," said Olson, who finally won a title in his fourth Final Four appearance after coaching Arizona to the decade's best record. "Miles' understanding of the game is beyond anything that you can teach. He just has a feel for it."

Simon, who missed the season's first 11 games due to academic ineligibility, was named the Final Four MVP. He was 14-of-17 from the free-throw line, including 4-of-4 in overtime. Some of the foul shots came after he and Bibby broke Kentucky's press; others came after he took charge when Arizona's offense broke down.

"Miles was in a zone," teammate Michael Dickerson said. "He kept saying, 'They can't stop me! They can't stop me!' And he had 30 points, so they obviously couldn't stop him. And we kept giving him the ball."

Dickerson, Arizona's top scorer this season, was held to five points for the second consecutive game. But he helped shut down Mercer.

Dickerson, Simon and Jason Terry took turns making life miserable for the NBA-bound sophomore, who had 13 points and committed five turnovers.

"I haven't been played like that all year," said Mercer, who had 20 points against Syracuse in the 1996 title game and was one of Kentucky's few returning players. "They made it very tough. Every time I curled around, they had somebody waiting for me."

Mercer went through long stretches without even touching the ball, but he did make a long, off-balance 3-pointer with 51 seconds left in regulation that cut Arizona's lead to 72-71. After Bibby made two free throws, Anthony Epps hit a 3-pointer with 12.1 seconds left to send it into overtime at 74-74.

But Arizona took command in OT, scoring all 10 of its points on free throws after beating the press that had helped Kentucky win its previous 11 NCAA tournament games.

"If I had my druthers... I wouldn't have pressed at all," Pitino said. "I did not want to press much because I felt that pressing wasn't the way to go."

Said Scott Padgett, who led Kentucky with 17 points: "They did a great job of handling our pressure. Before the game, they said they could do it... and they went out there and kept their cool."

Nobody was cooler than Simon and Bibby.

"We've been working on the press since day one," Bibby said. "I think the greatest competition is what we see every day in practice. And our team is just so quick out there."

Whalers bailing out of Hartford

I guess I don't have a sense of humor. I had no clue that the Sports Notice in yesterday's Daylee Kolenjun was just a joke, and that UMass games were cancelled yesterday. So I drove to Hartford wearing my hand-made UMass softball replica game uniform, with No. 44 on the back, to see what's left of the team that was teleported to Anaheim.

Much to my dismay, this paper lied. The game was cancelled, and I found myself all alone and cold in one of my least favorite states. While I was there, so the day wasn't a complete waste, I went over to the great mall on Trumbull Street, beckoned by a giant going-out-of business sign that is visible clear out to Nashville and Minneapolis.

They're calling their lone major league sports team the "Hartford Bailers" an hour to our south. The Whale is skipping town after this season... lost and gone forever, oh my darling Clementine. For the remainder of this column the franchise will be simply referred to as _, the team formerly known as the Hartford Whalers.

_ owner Peter Karmanos Jr. and Connecticut governor John Rowland broke off talks last week and the team's up for bids like a Hoover vacuum on contest's row on "The Price is Right." Rowland offered a new $147 million facility with 80 luxury boxes and guaranteed Karmanos $51 million in revenues each year until the new facility is built.

Prompting several members of the Hartford media to wonder whether or not Karmanos was bargaining in good faith, he decided that the reasonably fair deal was so radically far off of what he needed that he's paying $24 million to get out of his lease.

In October the _ might wind up in Nashville, Minneapolis or join BC basketball coach Jimmy O'Brien in Columbus, Ohio. A local group led by the owner of the CBA's Connecticut Pride is also valiantly attempting to save the whale, but nothing has been resolved at all about the _ future.

• One of the best, true hockey brawls in years occurred last week in Detroit where the NHL's MVP (Most Valuable Pest), according to Don Cherry's Rock 'em Sock 'em 7, Claude Lemieux played his first game in the aptly-named Joe Louis Arena since bashing Red Wing Chris Draper's face into a Denver dasher board during last year's playoffs.

An aside to the MVP comment above, former Collegian NHL columnist Matt Vautour says it stands for "Most Vicious Prick."

Netminders Patrick Roy and Mike Vernon locked in a bloody centerpiece match amidst a full-ice donnybrook. Generally goalies just wrestle each other to the ground and watch guys like Red Wing enforcer Darren McCarty beat the crap out of people. Roy was bloodied and actually injured his shoulder in the fight.

• With the season over, several teams have begun tapping the college hockey market to improve themselves for either a Stanley Cup run, or next year in the case of the Boston Bruins who last week signed Hobey Baker finalist Randy Robitaille out of Miami, Ohio.

Meanwhile, Hobey Baker winner Brendan Morrison might sign soon with the Devils as that team looks ahead to a possible second cup in three years. The Michigan forward who led the nation in scoring this year, would be a solid addition to a club that proved its commitment to win with the acquisition of Dougie Gilmour last month.

The question always is though if Morrison could shake the so-called Curse of the Hobey. Just as many recent Heisman winners have stunk out NFL stadiums. Heard anything about 1996 winner Brian Bonsu or 1994 winner Chris Marinucci lately? The steady play of 1995 winner Brian Holzinger in Buffalo and All-Star play of 1993 winner Paul Kariya is encouraging though.

Meanwhile, three of Michigan's underclassmen will also test out pro waters. Junior Marty Turco, who was expected to become the winningest goalie in NCAA history next year, signed with Dallas yesterday, joining teammates Bubba Berenzweig (NY Islanders) and Bill Muckalt (Vancouver).

Three 1996-97 Minutemen have already tried their hand in the AHL. Warren Norris has signed a free-agent deal with Toronto and been assigned to his home-town St. John's Maple Leafs. Wilbraham's Rich Moriarty has also suited up for his local AHL affiliate, dressing for a few games with the Springfield Falcons. Meanwhile, Dennis Wright has played a few games for the Worcester IceCats, where he tussled with renowned AHL tough-guy Kevin Sawyer in his first professional game.

Leigh Torbin is a Collegian columnist.

SCHEDULE NOTICE

The UMass baseball game scheduled for 3 p.m. today at UConn has been postponed to May 8 at 3 p.m. at UConn. The Minutemen are scheduled to play at the University of Hartford on Wednesday at 3 p.m., weather permitting.

The women's lacrosse game that was supposed to be played at Brown today has been postponed until May 1 at 4 p.m. at Brown.

The UMass softball doubleheader scheduled for 2:30 p.m. today at Hartford has been postponed. No make up date has been set.

On the frozen tundra of Garber Field?
Monday night's blizzard played havoc on UMass' playing fields, putting a damper on the spring sports schedule.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 111 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Thursday, April 3, 1997

Up, up and away!

With comics getting more attention in Hollywood, we examine whether they should continue to be relegated to the children's section (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Ready for regionals

Anita Sanyal and the UMass women's gymnastics team will travel to Columbus, Ohio this weekend for Regionals (see Sports, page 12).

Results of elections ratified by Senate

Lia Wong was sworn in as SGA president last night.

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

By Victoria Groves
Collegian Staff

In a rare show of solidarity, the Student Government Association (SGA) unanimously ratified last week's election results at last night's meeting.

According to the Election Commission, this year's voter turn out exceeded last year's, with the help of MassPIRG.

"The total voter turn out was 2072, which was higher than last year. I want to thank MassPIRG, they called over 2000 people in two days," said Jodi Bailey, Election Commissioner.

Brian McCarthy, a member of the Judiciary branch of the SGA, swore in both trustee-elect Brian Tirrell, and president-elect Lia Wong.

In her first speech as president, Wong thanked the students at the University for voting, all campaign workers, her running mate Rob McDonald, and outgoing president Maurice Caston Powe, among others.

"There was an excellent turnout and I want to thank them [students] for reading the issues and taking the time to vote... I want to thank them [campaign workers] for working so hard for something they believed in," Wong said. "And I want to thank my running mate Rob McDonald for sticking with me to the end, and Maurice Caston for being a role model.

"I look forward to working with everyone on this campus, we have a bright future. I made promises and I will do my best to keep them," she said.

Tirrell was sworn in, but does not take office as trustee until July.

Area government election results were also available at last night's meeting.

Representing Orchard Hill Residential Area for the academic year 1997-1998 will be Avi Khanna, Governor; Shana Orcyk, Lieutenant Governor; Kate McLeod, Secretary; and Treasurer, Ingrid Bruns.

Turn to SGA page 3

Students and administration meet; continue discussion on UALRC

By Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

The second official meeting between the University of Massachusetts administration and the student negotiators from the Goodell Building takeover ended after two hours of discussion surrounding the Asian, Latino, African and Native American (ALANA) Academic Support Services yesterday night.

Discussion centered around the United Asia Learning Resource Center (UALRC). The final commitment from the University administration concerning UALRC reads; "9. Hiring a UALRC counselor with the next new counseling position; est. $40,000 base budget addition."

Salwa Shamapande, chair of the meeting, asked the administration what it would take for the position to be implemented.

"Does the position need to be created before there is funding for it, or vice-versa?" asked Shamapande.

Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Tom Robinson answered, "More often than not, generally, the requirements for positions is done so that funding is secured by the presentation, merits and supporting documents [for the position]."

Kenneth Burnham, interim dean of Enrollment Services, said he supported the creation of a new UALRC counselor, but that the earliest that the position can be put into the budget request is for Fiscal Year (FY) 99. The FY99 budget request begins in late September of this year.

"I will make certain that we do add it in our budget request for FY99 but I can't guarantee it will be funded," Robinson said.

Deputy Chancellor Marcellete Williams briefly explained the budget process. According to Williams, in September, each unit of the University will be asked to update their particular unit, and support their requests. That request then goes to the next administrative level until it reaches the executive level. At this level Williams and all the other Vice Chancellors integrates all the given requests.

Williams then receives requests from the Vice Chancellors, prioritizes them and a merged document is then complied with both the Vice Chancellors' requests and all other non- academic budget requests. Simultaneously, Interim Provost Patricia Crosson receives an executive plan from the Vice Chancellor for University Research and puts together the Academic side of the University budget request.

After discussion, Chancellor David K. Scott, Crosson, Williams and the Budget Director work to prioritize the total requests. Scott then has the ultimate decision in implementing the budget.

Thus far, Burnham has committed to allowing the position to be requested for in the FY99 budget — meaning that it will have to follow the process outlined above by Williams, with no guarantee the position will be implemented.

"So, let met get this straight, you're saying that it's top priority, but it can't be number one on the list," student negotiator Jacquelyn Leon said.

"I'm not guaranteeing that it will be number one, it's a very high priority, [but] I'm not sure," Robinson answered.

Student negotiator Deepika Marya then presented the 1995-1996 annual report for UALRC by Director Dr. Lucy Nguyen.

Marya read from the report, "While personnel needs have been greatly satisfied by the induction of two T.A. positions, the long-term need to hire one more full-time staff member remains, especially as Asian students continue to be the largest growing minority group on campus."

According to Marya, UALRC which has been operating at a student-to-counselor ratio of 200-to-one, has been requesting these positions for three years now in their annual report.

Burnham acknowledged the position was requested in the annual reports, but also said it was not in the budget requests.

"It's come up four times now, and it's been declined four times. It's very disappointing to us," she said. "We still don't know where your priority lies. How can we trust you that you will do it now? When you say 'priority' you should mean that you will drop everything and do it now, not 'oh maybe we'll get around to it.' We may be students, but we're not stupid."

After continued discussion over whether or not the position will be supported for in the FY99 budget process Williams said, "I'd be hard pressed to justify a no."

Vice Chancellor for University Advancement Royster Hedgepeth added that it will depend on the other requests that are in the FY99 budget requests. One example he gave was the financial aid increase which the administration agreed to in commitment three of the "living document commitments."

Frederick Tillis, associate chancellor for the Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Office, added, "You've made it pretty clear that you feel strongly about this, you may have to shave off some of the others to get what you want."

The group agreed that the ALANA Academic Support Services would need to be discussed further at the next scheduled meeting.

Williams also briefly outlined commitments from the University towards the implementation of the Native American support program.

Chess anyone?
Ben Harper and Chris Moran (L to R), both seniors at Amherst Regional High School, played a game of chess outside of Rao's Coffee in Amherst yesterday.

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN

WORLD

Earthquake hits Japan causes some injuries

TOKYO (AP) — A strong earthquake hit Japan's main southern island early this morning, and at least three people were injured by falling objects.

At least three houses were damaged, roads were torn up in several places and about seven landslides were recorded, according to the state police.

The magnitude 5.5 quake struck at 4:33 a.m. today (Japanese time), the Central Meteorological Agency said, and was centered 30 feet below the ground near Sendai on the island of Kyushu, about 560 miles southwest of Tokyo.

The national television network NHK showed footage from inside an office at Sendai town hall, where books, file cabinets and other equipment was scattered on the floor.

One person in the town was cut after being hit by a chest of drawers, while a second suffered a broken arm, local police said. The agency said there was no danger of tidal waves.

A magnitude 6.2 quake struck the same area on March 26, injuring at least 22 people and damaging at least seven houses. Roads were torn up and 23 landslides were recorded.

NATION

Smokers' lawyer won't appeal decision

MIAMI (AP) — A lawyer for a half million Floridians suffering from smoking related illnesses won't appeal a judge's rejection of the bulk of their claims against cigarette makers.

Dade Circuit Judge Alan Postman on Friday threw out allegations that the tobacco industry didn't warn the plaintiffs about the health risks of smoking, concealed what it knew about those risks, and tried to use advertising to fool consumers about the risks.

"It's a blow to the smokers of Florida, without a question," said Stanley Rosenblatt, who represents the smokers. "But it's not a crippling blow. It just makes our job harder."

Rosenblatt said he wouldn't appeal, because it would further delay the trial in the $25 billion class-action lawsuit, now set for Sept. 8.

"That's what the tobacco industry would love," Rosenblatt said. "We'd piddle around for a couple of years while smokers would go on dying."

Postman allowed the plaintiffs to continue with claims alleging cigarette makers committed fraud and misrepresented its research over the years.

Philip Morris attorney Michael York said claims that smokers were defrauded into smoking against their will weren't valid.

"The plaintiffs want you to believe that people can't quit smoking," York said. "We very much believe the evidence will show they can."

Rosenblatt also represents more than 150,000 flight attendants in a separate class-action lawsuit claiming they were sickened by second-hand smoke.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 35	HIGH: 55 LOW: 35	HIGH: 55 LOW: 35

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics.....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 10
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 12

UM proposes creation of honors college at school

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

Administrators from the University of Massachusetts this week urged the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education to create an honors college at UMass-Amherst.

Deputy Provost Norman Aitken represented the Amherst campus at Monday's meeting of the Board's Commonwealth College subcommittee. Aitken presented a slide show and promoted the idea of building an honors college, to be designated the Commonwealth College, at UMass-Amherst.

"Can you imagine us not being the Commonwealth College?" Aitken asked the Board members.

Aitken stressed to the subcommittee that, as the flagship institution of the state system, UMass-Amherst should also house the Commonwealth College. He said the campus would double the number of the 1,600 honors students presently on campus and consider constructing a new building for honors classes.

In an interview after the meeting, Aitken said he felt the Amherst proposal and presentation had gone well.

"They seemed very interested in it and asked us what services we could provide to higher education in the state as a whole," Aitken said. These services could include helping other state colleges develop honors programs at their campuses.

UMass-Amherst is not the only college interested in housing a Commonwealth College, however. The Board of Higher Education began discussing six months ago the possibility of establishing a special honors college.

Turn to HONORS, page 2

Census' mixed-race category stirs debate

By Paul Shepard
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Linda Mahdesian grew up feeling a part of the black Chicago neighborhood in which she was raised. But as the daughter of a black father and white mother, she never felt completely at ease identifying herself as black when filling out forms at school or work.

"All my life, I could never truly identify myself," she said. Now Mahdesian and others of mixed race may gain a new measure of recognition from the U.S. Census Bureau.

The bureau is considering counting people of mixed race as a separate category for the first time, an idea that is stirring an emotional debate.

Supporters say the move would help foster a sense of pride and self-affirmation among the swelling ranks of mixed-race Americans, many of whom feel ignored by the larger society.

But some civil rights advocates worry that the new category would reduce the numbers of blacks and Hispanics recorded in the census, imperiling minority voting districts and financing for minority aid programs.

For Ramona E. Douglass, a California activist who is of mixed parentage, the issue is simple.

"I don't want to be invisible anymore," said Douglass, president of the Association of MultiEthnic Americans, a San Francisco-based advocacy group for multiethnic and multiracial people.

"The census form allows me to select 'other' as a choice, but I'm not an 'other'," Douglass said. "I'm a multiracial person and I should be represented."

A preliminary decision on whether the next census will include a new category for multiracial people is expected from the federal Office of Management and Budget in June or July.

Debate over the new category underscores what some demographers have called a silent explosion in the number of mixed-race people in the United States.

Between 1960 and 1990, the number of interracial married couples ballooned from 150,000 to more than 1.1 million, according to census figures.

The number of children of interracial families leaped from 460,300 in 1970 to more than 1.9 million by 1990.

"America is changing in ways previously unimagined," said Rep. Thomas Sawyer (D-Ohio) who chaired a House subcommittee on census reform. "We could become perhaps the first transethnic and transcultural society."

For example, Sawyer said, 60 percent of Japanese people who marry in America wed someone of another race. Such trends should compel the government to make sure the census accurately reflects "who we really are," he said.

America's method for tracking race has always been fluid. The first census in 1790 gave just three choices: free white male, free white female or slave.

In 1890, the census included categories for octoroon and quadroon to measure those of one-eighth and one-fourth black ancestry. It also listed Chinese and Japanese as separate races. The last census offered five options: black, white, American Indian or Alaskan Native, Asian or Pacific Islander, and other. It asked a follow-up question to get a separate count of Hispanics, who can be of any race.

Candidates for bombing jury discuss views on death penalty

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

DENVER — All citing the Bible, two prospective jurors in the Oklahoma City bombing trial said they could recommend execution with a clear conscience, while a third said she couldn't live with herself if she did.

The candidates for the panel that will sit in judgment of Timothy McVeigh were questioned as jury selection entered a third day. Their answers took the tone of a theological discussion. A computer analyst who teaches a Bible class for teenagers said he considered the Christian belief of turning the other cheek but still concluded "you could support the argument for the death penalty."

"I'm not a strong advocate of the death penalty," he said, "I think it should be used in very rare cases."

Another prospect, also a computer analyst, said she recalled Jesus' teachings that only those without sin should cast the first stone. "I don't feel capable of throwing that first stone," she said.

"I could consider all of the evidence but I couldn't live with myself if I had to decide if somebody was to be put to death," said the woman identified as Juror No. 101.

The next woman questioned, a farmer's wife identified as Juror No. 779, used her own view of the Golden Rule to back the death penalty.

"I was always taught: Do unto others what you would want others to do unto you," she said. "If he's guilty, he should get the death penalty."

Because the federal charges of murder and conspiracy against McVeigh carry a penalty of death by injection, a willingness to impose the death penalty is a requirement. Of the 19 questioned so far, only two have opposed it.

With the process plodding along and some prospects being questioned for an hour or more, it is expected to take weeks to whittle the pool of 350 prospects to 12 jurors and six alternates. In another development, U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch scheduled a hearing today on a petition filed by a group of news media representatives who want public access to the jury selection process.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor:
Jacob W. Micheals

Copy Editor:
Seema W. Gangatirkar

Photo Technician:
Jennifer W. Jutras

Production Supervisor:
Mark W. McGrath

Production Staff:
Sam W. Smullin
Leon W. Latino

Tenn. passes Amendment

By Karin Miller
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Just after the Civil War, the 15th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution guaranteed that no one could be denied the right to vote because of their "race, color or previous condition of servitude."

Only 127 years later, Tennessee became the last state to formally agree.

The state's House of Representatives and the Senate voted unanimously yesterday to make amends, unanimously approving a resolution that ceremoniously ratified what has been the law of the land since 1870.

"It's embarrassing, only that the state hasn't done it already. Let's get on with it," said Sen. Steve Cohen (D-Memphis).

The resolution was sponsored by Rep. Tommie Brown (D-Chattanooga) who learned in September from constitutional scholar Gregory Watson of Austin, Texas, that Tennessee had never post-ratified the amendment.

The 15th amendment was submitted to the states for ratification after it was approved by the 40th U.S. Congress on Feb. 26, 1869. Three-quarters of the 37 states in existence at the time approved it; the bill was ratified on March 30, 1870.

Sen. Keith Jordan (R-Franklin) reminded his colleagues that because Tennessee was the first state to rejoin the union after the Civil War, it was not required to ratify the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments as were other Southern states.

Many states post-ratified the amendments later, including Delaware in 1901; Oregon in 1959; California in 1962; Maryland in 1973; and Kentucky in 1976.

■ honors

continued from page 1

called the Commonwealth College, to attract academically talented students to the state system of higher education.

The Board has received 11 proposals for creating a Commonwealth College, including one from North Adams State College.

Tom Aceto, the president of North Adams State College, proposed the creation of honors colleges at Amherst and North Adams to the subcommittee.

"Why not offer multiple options?" Aceto asked the Board members. "That makes a lot more sense than to just single out one institution, one kind of campus."

Aaron Spencer, chair of the Board's Commonwealth College subcommittee, spoke about instituting honors programs at several or all of the state's more than 24 colleges and universities.

"This ought not to be a 'winner takes all' program," Spencer said. "That is the direction my head is going in."

The subcommittee will makes its recommendation to the full Board in the next two to three months, at which time the Board as a whole will decide if, and where, a Commonwealth College should be built.

Material from the Associated Press contributed to this article.

People watching...

Ki-Joe Nam, 3, enjoyed the sunshine and watched people passing by in front of Health Services yesterday afternoon.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
March 31
A two vehicle accident occurred on Governors Drive. One operator, Asaph M. Murfin was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

Alarm — Fire
There was a false fire alarm in Grayson Residence Hall.

Annoying Behavior
March 29
A large group of people were being loud and disturbing residents on Orchard Hill Drive.
Residents complained about bongo drums on Orchard Hill Drive.
March 31
There was a snowball fight on the Southwest Mall.
There was a snowball fight on Fearing Street.
April 1
A window in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall was broken due to people throwing snowballs.
Bottles were thrown at individuals participating in a snowball fight in Van Meter Residence Hall.
Snowball fights took place on North Pleasant Street, Massachusetts Avenue, Infirmary Way and Eastman Lane.
Jeffery Durocher, 18, of 211 Patricia Ln., Dracut, was arrested for throwing snowballs and breaking a window in French Greenhouse. He was charged with destruction of property of more than $250, and possession of a class D drug.
There was a snowball fight near Kennedy Residence Hall.
Kyle Quinlan, 19, of 7 Granaudo St., Southwick, was arrested for throwing snowballs and breaking a window in Kennedy Residence Hall. He was charged with destruction of property of more than $250.
Individuals from Brett Residence Hall were throwing bottles at Plant employees attempting to clear the sidewalks.
Snowball fights occurred on Sunset Avenue, and Fearing Street.

Assist Agency
April 1
A broken window from Emerson Residence Hall was reported to Housing Services.

Disturbance
March 28
There was a food fight in the Hampshire Dining Common.
There was a report of students arguing with Student Security in Washington Residence Hall.
March 29
Robert M. Farrow, 21, of 104 Maplewood Ter., Hamden, Conn., was arrested for disorderly conduct, indecent exposure, resisting a police officer's lawful arrest and assault and battery on a police officer.
March 31
There was a snowball fight on Eastman Lane.
April 1
Residential Staff from John Adams Quincy Residence Hall requested assistance with a large unruly party.
There was a snowball fight on Orchard Hill Drive.
A snowball fight occurred at Brooks Residence Hall and windows were reported broken.

Hazardous Materials/ Spills
March 28
Heavy equipment was leaking diesel fluid on Forestry Way.

Health/Safety Hazard
March 28
There was a problem controlling the temperature in Tobin Hall.

Larceny
March 28
An individual from Patterson Residence Hall reported a past larceny of a laptop computer.
A small amount of cash was reported stolen from the Hampshire Dining Common.
March 29
Tires were stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 33 on University Drive.
March 31
A vehicle in parking lot 49 on Clark Hill Road was broken into and the stereo was stolen.
A resident from James Residence Hall reported personal items stolen.
There was a report of a trumpet stolen from the practice room in the Fine Arts Center.

Suspicious Person/Activity
April 1
There was an individual throwing snowballs at Gorman Residence Hall.

Traffic Stop
March 28
A 16-year-old juvenile was arrested for operating a motor vehicle without a license, and without authority from owner.
Michael A. Dagilus, 23, of 32 South St, Montague, was arrested for operating a vehicle without a license.

Vandalism
March 28
A vehicle was damaged in parking lot 22 on University Drive.
Another vehicle was damaged in parking lot 22 on University Drive.
April 2
Racial graffiti was scratched into a wall in the 10th floor of the Campus Center.
Snowballs were thrown at windows of Mackimmie Residence Hall.

Come visit the Collegian on line at:
www.umass.edu/rso/colegian
and don't forget to eat a good breakfast!!!

Take It To The Hoopla!
new balance
Haigis Hoopla
Register Now for the Ultimate UMASS 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament!
SPALDING
DAILY COLLEGIAN
HOWARD JOHNSON
April 26 to 27
REGISTER NOW, SPACES ARE LIMITED!!!
THREE OR FOUR PLAYERS PER TEAM
REGISTRATION FEES: Before April 9, 1997 $15 per player
After April 9, 1997 $18 per player
If you have any questions call the
New Balance Haigis Hoopla office at (413) 545-5689
Remember: Registration Deadline April 18, 1997

EXCLUSIVELY for FACULTY and STAFF
Form 1040 U.S. Individual PAIN.
APPLICATION FOR TIAA AND CREF SUPPLEMENTAL RETIREMENT ANNUITY CONTRACTS
PAIN KILLER.
For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets—money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.
Instant tax savings.
Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pretax basis, so you pay less in taxes now. And since earnings on your SRAs are also tax-deferred until you receive them as retirement income, the money you don't send to Washington can work even harder for you.
Loans and more.
What else do SRAs offer? A valuable loan option, plus a full range of investment choices and the financial expertise of TIAA-CREF—America's largest retirement organization.*
The sooner you act, the sooner relief begins.
To find out more, stop by your benefits office or give us a call at 1 800 842-2888. We'll show you how SRAs can lower your taxes.
Do it today. It couldn't hurt.
Visit us on the Internet at www.tiaa-cref.org
TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.
*Based on assets under management.
CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2733, ext. 5509, for a current CREF prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money. Date of first use: 3/97.

DELIVER FOR THE COLLEGIAN*
* must provide own car
$10.00/hour
If interested, call Alycia Hines @ 545-3500 or stop by the Collegian at 113 Campus Center Basement
Must Be Available Between 8:00am to 11:00am Monday - Friday
Drivers Wanted for Morning Paper Delivery

'PIRG addresses homelessness

"Society and Starvation" forum shows how to give aid

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG) held a "Society and Starvation" forum yesterday afternoon on the steps of the Student Union, in which a variety of speakers addressed the issue of homelessness in society and what students can do to help.

Glennoy Buchanan, a volunteer at the Amherst Shelter for Adolescents, stressed his belief that "a society is only as strong as its worst citizen."

Buchanan explained his experience in working with adolescents who due to problems such as abuse, neglect and incest have become homeless. Buchanan said that despite all of the problems in society which can become overwhelming, tuning in and realizing that anything we can do to help is important.

JENNIFER JUTRAS / COLLEGIAN
Amherst Select Board member Hill Boss.

Presenting a different approach, Vin Lyon, a graduate anthropology student at the University of Massachusetts, pointed out the "systematic issues" around the country which affect the number of homeless people.

Lyon, also a former associate of the Grove Street Inn shelter in Northampton, presented statistics concerning the unequal distribution of wealth within the country. According to Lyon, the amount of money controlled by the wealthy has increased by about 24 percent over the last 25 years. In addition, the amount of low-income renters has increased while the amount of units available to them has decreased, leaving 4.7 billion people without residency.

Presently, there are no policies to address these issues which is why the Living Wage Campaign, a coalition of about 25 groups, has formed to work on increasing minimum wage to a "living wage." This "living wage" would make it so that those whose jobs are with benefits could make $7.50/hr. and those without could make $9.50/hr. They say workers would be able to afford housing this way.

Further building on Lyon's speech, Dedrick Snoek from the Next Step Collaborative, emphasized the problems of the nation's existing economic situation and that the homeless are not at fault for their condition.

Snoek, who also works on the Living Wage Campaign and at the Emergency Shelter in Northampton, explained that most homeless people are "invisible," in that they try not to make their situation known to others due to the risk that they'll lose the respect of peers, employers, etc.

Snoek explained that to help out, students may donate to charity and volunteer at shelters. Also, Snoek encouraged students to study the economic systems established in the country and the distribution of wealth responsible for much of the homelessness.

"Do you really want a slim workplace so that we can compete with Hong Kong?" Snoek asked.

Hill Boss, who was re-elected to the Amherst Select Board Tuesday, and a member of the Amherst Friends for Homeless, also discussed ways for students to help out within the community. Boss mentioned an annual event which takes place every last Sunday in October named "Shelter Sunday," in which volunteers gather for three hours and raise $15,000 to be given directly to local social service agencies.

Students may also attend the annual volunteer fair every September in the Campus Center where agencies request their needs and students may sign-up to help out.

Laurie Sarafin, from the Franklin County Winter Shelter, read a letter entitled, "Thoughts of Homeless," written by a homeless person expressing their feelings of overwhelming hopelessness. Sarafin stressed the need to show support and bring hope to the homeless "so that they know they are not alone."

Veronica MacDonald, a sophomore psychology and anthropology undergraduate at UMass who is a member of MassPIRG, was the host of the forum. MacDonald summed up the forum by announcing the upcoming "Into Amherst Day" on April 26 at 9 a.m. in the Triangle Park in Amherst. This event will be for volunteers to work on both social and environmental issues within the community by cleaning up shelters, rivers and soliciting pledges.

Use of hallucinogen up among nation's youths

BOSTON (AP) — A loss of reputation and a drop in potency and price have boosted the popularity of the hallucinogen LSD among young people, according to a drug specialist.

"Here's a drug that's very cheap, widely available and doesn't turn up in routine urine tests," Mark Kleiman of the University of California at Los Angeles told the Boston Globe.

"All of that wouldn't be enough however, if LSD still had among kids the horrible reputation it got at the end of the '60s," he said. "What put an end to the first wave of LSD use was the casualties. Everybody knew somebody who had a very, very, very bad trip."

A single dose of LSD today may cost $5, less than it was 30 years ago, and the doses are smaller.

Smaller doses mean fewer users are hospitalized, and that and the lack of some obvious drug-using signs may hide LSD's popularity today.

However, Michael Cunniff of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration's office in Boston said LSD "is really everywhere" in New England and the rest of the country.

Surveys by the University of Michigan's Institute of Social Research showed that the percentage of students nationwide in the 8th, 10th and 12th grades who said they had used LSD at least once rose from 1991 to 1996.

And the percentage was higher than that for students in the three grades who said they had used cocaine or heroin.

"There's no question there's been a resurgence of LSD in recent years," said Lloyd Johnston, who runs the study.

However, Wayne Alexander, principal of Barnstable High School, thought the use of LSD was far behind the use of marijuana. And a teen-ager in Attleboro said twice as many young people there smoked marijuana than used LSD.

A quiet place

Junior educational, Latin American and Spanish studies major Deborah Shaner enjoyed the plantlife in Durfee Conservatory yesterday afternoon.

■ SGA

continued from page 1

In Northeast Residential Area, the following students were elected to positions: Jay Duponi, Gov.; Jennifer Garrett, Lt. Gov.; Chris Campbell, Secretary; and Erik Jernberg, Treasurer.

Representing Commuter Area government will be Mike Meideros, Gov.; Rick Barrik, Lt. Gov.; Quetial Mount, Secretary. The position of Treasurer remains vacant.

Southwest Residential Area will be represented by Daniel Friedman, Gov.; Emily Livingston, Lt. Gov.; Sheila Tunney, Secretary, and Astar Lambert, Treasurer.

Representing Sylvan Residential Area will be Eleanor Gerome, Gov.; Justin Cardullo, Lt. Gov.; Bill Toffell, Treasurer.

Dan Kitteridge was elected to the position of governor in Central Residential Area but said he is hesitant to take the position because it would mean giving up his senatorship.

"I'm not sure I want this job," he said. "I enjoy being a senator and being on the Ways and Means Committee... I was a write in. I don't know who did it."

All three remaining seats in Central Residential Area are vacant.

The position of secretary is also vacant in Sylvan Residential Area because of a tie involving write in votes.

Eleven students were written in for the position, all receiving one vote each. They have yet to be contacted about whether they seek the position, but those who do will be voted upon by the senate body during an upcoming meeting.

Friedman, Livingston and Tunney were the only newly elected area government officers to be sworn in at last night's meeting.

One motion was also passed at the meeting, involving the final exam schedule which currently holds exams on Saturdays, a holy day in some religions.

Written by Senator R.I. Lemar (Orchard Hill Area), the motion was written after a discussion at Hillel House concerning the SGA's support of Jewish issues.

"The University would never even think of putting exams on Sundays. I can imagine some religions being very upset that their holiday be used for exams... The final exam schedule does not mention religious conflicts," Lemar said.

Sen. Jen Casasanto (Southwest Area) agreed with the motion.

"I think this is a really good motion. If they can give us leeway enough if we have two or three exams scheduled in one day, if there is one on a religious holiday, they can be flexible on that too... Let's go down to the faculty senate and bring this up," Casasanto said.

Collegian News, You hear it first.

Making up isn't hard to do.
University Transcript
Spring semester grades
00136 Statistics ..... B
English 101 ..... INCOMPLETE
Biology 200 ..... A-
History 201 ..... B-
If you have a course to make up--or if you simply want to get ahead in your coursework for next fall--come to Northeastern University this Summer. With Northeastern's flexible part-time Summer scheduling--4 week, 5 week, and 10 week classes offered morning, noon, and night--making up and getting ahead--isn't very hard to do.
Call 617-373-2400 or TTY 617-373-2825, http://www.neu.edu/uc
First Summer session starts June 9; Register May 27-29
Northeastern Universtiy
Part-time Programs
Northeastern University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action educational institution and employer

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.- Sat. 9a.m.-11 p.m. Tel: 549-2692.
Shop Scott's & Save Lots$!!!!
- THANK YOU FOR YOUR PATRONAGE -
Busch & Busch Light 30-packs $11.99 +dep.
Bud Ice & Ice Light 30-packs $14.99 +dep.
Corona 12-pack bottles $8.99 +dep.
Harpoon IPA 12-pack $9.39 +dep.
Keystone Light 30-packs $10.99 +dep.
Miller Genuine Draft reg & light 24-12oz bar btls $9.99 +dep.
Red Dog & Ice House 12-pack bottles $6.99 +dep
Petes Wicked 6-packs (All Flavors) $4.99 +dep.
Cider Jack 6-packs (Apple, Cranberry) $4.99 no dep.
Check out our Other Great In Store Specials
Cuervo Gold Tequila 750ml $10.99
Captain Morgan 1.75 & 2L Coke $17.99
Jim Beam 750ml $8.49
Poland Springs Vodka 1.75L $8.99
Alize Liquor 750ml $11.99
Romana Sambuca 750ml $16.99
After Shock & Avalanche 750ml $14.99
Beringer White Zinfandel 750ml $4.99
Turning Leaf Chardonnay 750ml $5.99
Boone's 750ml 3 for $6.00
Tequila Monster 750ml $4.99
Go Yellow
Check Out Our Other Great In Store Specials
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Tele-Check for your personal check
SCOTTS

Thats Right!
Screen Printed T-Shirts On 100% Cotton!
Many Colors to Choose From!
COOL DESIGN HERE
Only $5.60
PRINTSHACK APPAREL UNLIMITED
322 Russell Street • Hadley, Mass
3A Minimum Includes 1 side 1 color Ex 4.31.97
Call Today 586-6933

Stinger
ECLIPSE by PIONEER
COME IN TO SOUND MOTION
See the New Stuff for '97
FOR THE BEST IN CAR AUDIO, MOBILE COMMUNICATIONS AND AUTO SECURITY. ALSO THE BEST INSTALLATION AROUND
123 Russell St (RT 9), Hadley MA 01035 • (413) 586-6227
Viper
Pantera
MB QUART
clarion

Something Every Friday
April 4th
8 pm
Bluewall Cafe
Leighann Lord followed by Michael
"TWO THUMBS UP!"
MICHAEL
PG
Sponsored by Campus Activities through a Grant from the Auxiliary Services Office and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and the Daily Collegian

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W. P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor
Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Presten Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1958. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Stop cloning around

Bob Dunn

The scientific world got turned on its collective ear a couple of weeks ago when it was announced that a team of scientists successfully cloned a sheep.

Yee–freaking–ha!

Cloning has been, for many years now, the golden goose of scientific thought. Authors and futurists have been debating the plausibility and practice of cloning for years, more so lately. The idea was given terrifying treatment in Jurassic Park and lampooned in Multiplicity (Yeah, I paid money to see it, you got a problem with that?) but only in the last few weeks has the idea been seriously looked at. The President even got involved, promising to deny federal funding for any experiments in human cloning.

That didn't stop Sen. Tom Harkin (D–Iowa) from getting onto the floor of the Senate saying that not only would cloning experiments continue but that they should continue to the point where cloning humans is perfected. Harkin went on to say that halting human experiments would be "demeaning to human nature."

Huh?

Let's take this one step at a time. First off, cloning itself is the most wasteful use of time and technology since the Newton. Hooray! Some guys made a sheep! Well, you know what? There are sheep being produced every day without the benefit of a test tube; I've seen some. We certainly don't need to waste time and money making pseudo–sheep in a laboratory.

What some people fail to realize is that in order to produce "Dolly" the cloned sheep, 277 failures had to precede her. One out of 277 makes for a success rate of about 0.0036 percent. Granted this is a first try, and mistakes will be made when attempting any kind of new procedure, but keep in mind we're talking about living beings here, and many of those 277 failures were sheep with major birth defects who suffered and died shortly after birth.

So, you've made a sheep. Congrats. Oppenheimer would be proud, but what next? Why, people, of course! Never mind the extremely low success rate, never mind that there is no real practical purpose to clone humans, never mind that the scientific community is just so gosh–darn happy to have a brand new toy to play with that they'll ignore the moral and ethical implications of it, let's just crank out some clones!

Why would you possibly want to clone people in the first place? We've got far too many real people on the planet already, and most of them are jerks. What possible role could clones fill? Is it ethical to breed clones for organ transplants, manual labor or cannon fodder? Is it a good idea to try and clone even a single person when the possibility for failure is so high?

I'm not talking about run–of–the–mill genetic engineering here. I'm not arguing about the benefits of mutating viruses in the hopes to find cures for diseases. I'm not talking about breeding generations of fruit flies in the hopes of learning more about genetic predisposition, disease transmittal or anything else we could glean from the little critters. I'm talking about a bunch of eraserheads in lab coats getting a wild hair up their butt and deciding to be God for a day.

I can hear them all out there, yelling and waving their slide rules around like villagers with torches screaming about "the halt of progress" and "scientific persecution," and all the other hyperbole and rhetoric that the supposedly "higher minds" spout when their grant money looks like it's about to be cut off. Frankly, they all need to quit their whining and get back to work on something important. Oh, you made a sheep? Really? How's that AIDS vaccine coming along? Is that cancer cure ready for the shelves yet? Well, at least we'll have plenty of wool around.

No one is saying theories shouldn't be advanced. No one is saying that scientific progress should stop altogether. Overall, science has improved the quality of life for most of the people on the planet. But, there has to be a line drawn, here and now.

Do not pass go, do not collect a Nobel prize, abandon all hope ye who enter here, knock it off. You've proven cloning is possible, yippee. I hope you get a plaque, maybe get your face on the cover of a journal or something. Now, you can stop. In this day and age, don't we know enough to leave Pandora's box closed?

Bob Dunn is a Collegian columnist.

Blind leading the blind

Editor's note: On May 8, the Collegian celebrates its 30th anniversary as a daily newspaper. To commemorate this occasion, the Collegian will be publishing editorials spanning the last 30 years. Today we feature a piece originally published on Feb. 2, 1972.

1972
1967-1997

The Ad Hoc Committee on Teacher Evaluation wasn't completely a waste of time and effort; they did come out with one good recommendation. Recommendation number six in their series of seven recommendations reads: "There should be established an Office for the Evaluation and Improvement of Teaching, reporting to the Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs, which would be responsible for the administration and interpretation of the Course Evaluation Questionnaire and for the development of services to help the faculty further develop their teaching skills."

It is astonishing how little training is required of college professors. More is required of a candidate for high school teaching, as far as teacher training is concerned, than is of a professor. It is even more shocking when you realize that high school and elementary school teachers receive their preparation in college. What you have, then, is a professorate that has had little formal teacher training itself, and no elementary or high school teacher training, going into schools of education to train primary and secondary teachers. It isn't quite the blind leading the blind, but rather a more miraculous medical process of the blind giving sight to others.

And so we finally have an attempt (which is the recommendation) to put within the faculty's reach, some type of formal teacher training that would not be embarrassing as other ways. This Office of Teacher Improvement would be staffed with experts in teaching techniques, who could help a faculty member to improve his style and help his students stay awake.

Some of the methods are quite interesting. Video taping can be used. The faculty member would have one of his lectures taped, or he could be shown how to use the equipment, then he would sit down and look at it with a professional or by himself and try to analyze what he is doing right and what he is doing wrong.

There is another scheme used called micro–teaching. The faculty member tries to teach one concept to about five or six students in a limited amount of time, usually five to 10 minutes. After he is done, the students tell him what he did right and wrong, thereby giving the instructor immediate feedback.

There are many other methods of helping the faculty to improve their teaching, but to aid the faculty in upgrading teaching is a long–range solution to a problem. It does nothing to help the students that are here and trapped by bad teaching. A bad teacher does more than just waste the students' time, he robs them of what could have been an exciting experience in learning. A student's time here is limited; he must have a method by which he can decide where he wants to spend that time and with whom.

The administration would like an evaluation system around to evaluate that small portion of the University devoted to teaching. The faculty should have an evaluation system around so that they can start to learn how to teach. And students need an evaluation system so that they can avoid the faculty members that waste their time.

Nich Apostola is a former Collegian columnist

The other Chestnut Hill

C. Taylor Conner

We stood for the final time as a class of 41 in May, 1994, all of us identically adorned in the blue blazers, shirts and ties and white chinos of the graduation ceremony.

I arrived at the University of Massachusetts, my first public school, in the fall, hoping to take a breather from the claustrophobic trappings of Chestnut Hill Academy in Philadelphia. We'd been in a school of 500 students — kindergarten through 12th — for 10 years, so the majority of our class, as was expected, elected to attend small or moderately sized private colleges.

The choices came down to Syracuse, Michigan or UMass for me, an obvious tipoff that big schools and big snowstorms were my leaning. And while I may silently curse the frigid, white blanket which spreads across my car, doorstep and walkway for months at a time, I'm wholly convinced Western Mass. was the best possible place for me.

It hasn't always been that way.

Imagine yourself as the son of a Harvard Business graduate, a man who implored you to go to Syracuse primarily for name reasons. Consider the number of plastic smiles you'd receive when you told some of your friends' parents you'd be attending a state school that wasn't a tough out–of–state contender like Virginia or North Carolina.

Had I not been a big, dumb jock recruit, I might have even been viewed as a failure within a system that boasts a 100 percent college matriculation rate, with many attending Ivy League or "Little Ivy" institutions.

Despite the fact I loved and still love CHA dearly (although from the initial tone of the piece you might think otherwise), the elitist sentiments resonating throughout its walls had become a tad tiresome by the close of my studies. I was well aware we came from a privileged environment — I didn't need to hear it in some subtle or overt form on a consistent basis.

Yet, the majority of my classmates, who I still feel are my 40 brothers, went out into the ranks of the collegiate and retained much of this mode of thought. In their defense, however, the thinly veiled snobbery of the prep school education is a learned behavior — which is why I set out to break free of its naive constraints.

Perhaps I already had a slight advantage on the rest of the bunch. My mother had been the first college graduate in her immediate family and my father's father never even completed high school. In addition, I was black and tended not to see the world in as idyllic a light as many of my peers.

When you grow up around the area of Chestnut Hill, as many of my classmates did, with an actual Cricket Club directly across the street from your school, I suppose you might fall prey to a highly idealized scope of the way things are. Even as many of CHA's finest were steeped to the neck in waves of dysfunction — ranging from parental hyperpressure to alcoholism — everyone went about their business as society folks, folks for whom a Jane Austen novel mirrored reality.

You had to be conscious of your every maneuver for fear of the disapproval of those whom you knew were always watching — and you knew they'd tell.

So how do well–adjusted people possibly emerge from the crushing omnipresence of Big Brother in a J. Crew/L.L. Bean outfit? How do you cope with the paradox of the woodsy warmth of a country–style house offset by its coldly stoic inhabitants?

More specifically, how do CHA grads handle college when they've already endured the average burnout of a second– year law student?

Those of us, myself included, who got an early grasp on when to turn on or turn off your society face seemed, for the most part, to escape with minimal scarring. Hell, I even had one buddy, now an alcoholic with a Dean's List GPA at an Ivy League school, who never even pretended to play the "tea and crumpets" niceties game. Ironically, for all of his aberrant nihilism, maybe he was the smart one.

Sadly, however, many of us who were on the precipice of self–destruction before even receiving a diploma hit the wall when the intoxicating taste of college life first greeted them. A brilliant friend at another Ivy League school dabbles in hardcore narcotics and his decision–making often rivals that of George Costanza.

Another pal, a talented but parentally harangued squash player who attends a small Connecticut college, has dropped out of school and smokes beyond–cathartic amounts of marijuana.

And although he would return, yet another of my classmates failed out of a prominent Southern university, his excessive senior year workload at CHA replaced by excessive drinking during his first term.

Of course, there are also the kids who never had a worry, will never change and who will never lose my love regardless of how much like their fathers they become.

This is precisely the reason those 40 other men are still 40 brothers in my mind — family is family.

C. Taylor Conner is a Collegian columnist.

Better with age?

Luke Meredith

Here's my life, in a nutshell.

I wake up, I go to class, write columns about ex– girlfriends, teeth and Bon Jovi, watch SportsCenter, go to bed. Besides the fact that I have no money, ever, life is pretty good right now.

But it won't be for long.

You see, when this year ends, I will be a senior. As such, I will have to start looking for a job pretty soon. A real job, a job with a purpose, medical insurance and enough of a paycheck so I don't have to go back to Methuen and live with my dad until I'm 50.

You see, it won't be long before I can't do what I do anymore. Yesterday, I got slightly "funny" at five in the afternoon, and instead of thinking, "Hey, what if Scooby– Doo hooked up with Velma?" or "Why aren't their yellow Flavor–Ices?" I was thinking, "Jesus, I can't be doing this anymore. I'm too old to waste a day like this."

"I've become a lame–ass, the exact same kind I promised myself I'd never be when I was 16."

And that's the thing lately. I've already begun to live the boring life I will when I get out of college, even though I have a full year left. I don't go out and raise hell on a Tuesday night anymore, just because I can. I think about it, debating what I have to do the next day. I'll think, "Well, whose going to be there?" and "I kinda feel like sitting around the house and watching TV."

What's wrong with me?

I'll tell you what's wrong with me. I'm old, that's what. I don't listen to music like it's the most important thing in the world anymore. I don't stay up too late. I worry about my future. Basically, I've become a lame–ass, the exact same kind I promised myself I'd never be when I was 16.

Think about this. (I'm speaking to my over–21 brothers and sisters here, kiddies). What happened to us? I sometimes see 18–year–old kids hammered, not knowing a damn thing, having the time of their lives simply because they don't know better, and I think, "Man, that used to be me." I wonder sometimes if these younger kids look at me and are like, "Wow, that kid's, like, old."

I used to be just like them. My whole life was geared around Thursday, Friday and Saturday night. I would go anywhere, do anything. If my friends heard about a party, no matter where it was, I'd go. Wouldn't even care where it was. I was that kid on the PVTA with a backpack on yelling "Yeah, Hobart rules!"

Now, if you can even drag me out to a party, it has to be at a house where I know at least three people who live there, have had a decent time in the past, and have at least a 50/50 chance of getting a free cup. I used to drink gallons of Natural Light, puke it out, and then drink more. Now, I only drink "good beer" (if I'm not at the bars, I mean), and if I get drunk, it's a "classy" drunk, and nobody really has to know about it. Because I'm old, and I just can't do that anymore.

I saw some old friends, really good old friends, and we're going out tonight for my birthday. (I know, but don't worry about it. You can get me a card next week.). One of these friends likes to tell people that when he first met me, I was a fresh–faced kid who didn't have a clue about the world. In a way, he was right. But tonight, after he tells that story to everyone we run into (and believe me, Mike will), I'll have a few beers, talk to people I already know, tell stories I've already told, and go home in time for work tomorrow. I already know the night I have in front of me.

I'd rather it was like it used to be, when I had no idea what night I had in front of me. That was so much more fun, don't you think?

Luke Meredith is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury Flashbacks BY GARRY TRUDEAU

BE HEARD!

The Collegian welcomes letters to the editor. Please keep them short – around 400 words and typewritten. You can drop letters off at the Collegian, located in the Campus Center Basement. Letters can also be e–mailed to letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu.

Four-color comic books impact the silver screen

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

Comic books have given movies a shot in the arm — both financially and creatively of late. In the past few years, audiences have seen more movie adaptations from comic books than ever before. With an influx of new films due this year, we can only expect more if any modicum of success is shown. Has Hollywood run out of ideas, or are comic books starting to be recognized as well-springs of creativity for filmmakers to dip into?

The connection between comic books and films is nothing new — Superman, Batman and Captain America were being adapted for serials in the early 1940s. It seems like an almost natural translation between these serials and their comic sources. The cliffhanging ending might have its roots in the serial novels of Dickens and Hardy, but has it ever been so perfectly expressed when the credits begin rolling as Batman and Robin are tied up and being slowly lowered into a vat of boiling pig fat?

As feature films, comic movies have also seen a fair amount of success since Christopher Reeve donned Superman's tights in 1978's Superman. It spawned three sequels — the last of which Superman IV: The Quest for Peace was released in 1987. The franchise also opened the door for the darker vision of Tim Burton's 1989 Batman. Burton's gothic sensibilities pervaded Gotham's skyline- placing Michael Keaton's ironic Batman in a landscape stolen from Fritz Lang. Batman showed unparalleled success — not only as a film adaptation from a comic, but by breaking box office records for opening weekend receipts.

Burton's dark sensibilities looked almost juvenile in comparison to 1994's surprise hit The Crow. J. M. O'Barr's nightmarish tale of revenge was a cult phenomenon as a comic and the crossover was just as successful — with no small amount of help coming from the accidental death of star Brandon Lee while filming.

This summer should mark a new high for comic books on the big screen. The release of Batman and Robin is one of the few threats that The Lost World has to look out for. What might be most impressive about this franchise is that it has not only survived the departure of Burton and Keaton after the first two films (Joel Schumacher took over the helm of director with Val Kilmer as the eponymous hero with the third film — Batman Forever), but it shows no signs of letting up. Replacing Kilmer with "E.R" sensation George Clooney, Schumacher will also introduce baddies Arnold Schwarzenegger and Uma Thurman as Mr. Freeze and Poison Ivy and Clueless star Alicia Silverstone as Batgirl.

The test that comic book movies will have to face, however, is whether less well-known comics will be as successful as the Batman films. This August audiences will have the opportunity to check out Spawn, starring Michael Jae White as the eponymous hellion and Martin Sheen and John Leguizamo as the baddies and next year The Death of Superman, a filmed version of the 1992 limited series.

COURTESY PETER KOVINO

A big screen version of Todd McFarlane's Spawn is planned to hit the theaters soon.

Comic convention to hit Northampton

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

The Happy Valley's history is rich in many areas of culture, including comics. The creators of the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles — Kevin Eastman and Peter Laird — are from this area. Northampton is the home of both the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund (CBLDF) and the Words and Pictures Museum. This weekend, all of those elements will come together during the Northampton ComicCon.

Bob Mankus, who owns the Bob's Comics stores in Springfield and Northampton, and Bill Verheggen will be hosting the two-day show at the Hotel Northampton this weekend.

Among the confirmed featured guests are Dave Sim, the writer of Cerebus; Mike Zeck, an artist at Marvel comics known for his work on Captain America and the Punisher; Ed Hannigan, an artist for Marvel and DC comics; Tom Sniegoske, a writer for Vampirella; Rebecca Guay, who did the art for Black Orchid, one of DC's Vertigo line titles, and some "Magic: The Gathering" cards; and Hanibal King, who also does artwork for Magic.

Mankus said this is the second time they've done a show like this. Approximately 500 people came to the first one, in October 1995.

"[It was] excellent," he said. "That was incredibly great."

Mankus said he puts on the shows because "we find there's a lot of artists and writers and fans concentrated in this area... What we wanted to do was present a show like the New York or Philadelphia conventions in our area here. It worked out very well."

Mankus said, in addition to the professionals in attendance, the Comic Book Legal Defense Fund and the Words and Pictures Museum will be in attendance.

There will also be retailers selling current and back issues of comics, including Bob's Comics and the Card and Comics Company.

The cost for the show is $5 each day, or $8 for both days. The guests will be signing autographs for free.

Valley poetry readings

By Justin Beland
Collegian Staff

With National Poetry Month upon us, and the poetic activity heating up in and around the Valley, poetry fans at the University of Massachusetts and in the Amherst community need to be informed.

This column will hopefully grow more in-depth as it goes on, but for now, it will serve to give notice of upcoming readings (who, where and when) along with brief biographies of the poets reading, update you on forthcoming publications from both established and up-and-coming poets, and share any other news or events of note from the world of poetry. Even in the poetry-saturated community of the Valley, this info can be astonishingly hard to come across, and I hope to provide an outlet for the hungry.

In honor of National Poetry month, the Academy of American Poets has launched the most comprehensive and lively poetry site to date on the World Wide Web, at www.poets.org. The site features hundreds of poems, biographies, photographs, and even recordings of poets reading their work. It also provides a place for readers and poets alike to share their ideas about poetry, and is well worth perusing.

In local news, Sophie Cabot Black will be reading at Wooton's Books on North Pleasant Street, Amherst at 8 p.m. on April 8, as part of the Amherst College Creative Writing Center Reading Series. Black is the author of The Misunderstanding of Nature, which won the Poetry Society of America's Norma Faber First Book Award in 1994. She has also received the Masefield (1990) and Medwick (1996) Awards from the Poetry Society of America. Going beyond awards, she is an extremely engaging presence and a brilliant reader.

Karl Kirchisey, the 1996-97 Grace Hazard Conkling Writer-In-Residence at Smith College will read from his latest verse-play Fragments of a Poetic Drama, at 7:30 p.m. on April 3, in Smith's Alumnae House Living Room.

The Globe Bookstore in Northampton continues its Wednesday poetry readings on April 9 at 7:30 p.m. with Jean Valentine. Valentine's Growing Darkness, Growing Light (Carnegie Mellon Press) is already receiving pre- release accolades. Amy Dryansky also reads in what promises to be a terrific evening of verse.

The UMass English Department's M.F.A. Program brings Gillian Conoley to Memorial Hall at 8 p.m., April 10. Conoley won the Pushcart Prize in 1994, and her book Tall Stranger is nominated for the National Book Critic's Circle Award.

Lastly, combining the art of the written word with the art of painting and sculpture is nothing new, but it hits close to home as Amherst College's Mead Art Museum kicks off an exhibit called Language as Object. The exhibit features all mediums of visual art showing the ways in which contemporary artists have paid homage to and been inspired by Amherst-born-and-raised poetry legend Emily Dickinson. One example is a lithograph by artist Lesley Dill which depicts Dickinson's words "I am afraid to own a body/I am afraid to own a soul" scrawled on a woman's neck. The opening reception will be held April 3 from 5-7 p.m., and the exhibit will run throughout April and May.

Collegian Arts...
We're more than just a bunch of cartoon characters, we're the bunch of cartoon characters

THURSDAY • FRIDAY • SATURDAY 9:30-1:00 AM
Klub Kai
The Area's Newest Dance Club
$2 TROPICAL DRINKS SPECIAL
99¢ BUD & BUD LIGHT DRAFT
$1.50 MILLER LITE BOTTLES
$2 FOOD COMBO
THURSDAY NIGHT COLLEGE NIGHT All Area Colleges are invited D.J. Cool Regg
FRIDAY NIGHT Ladies Night No Cover for the Gents 'till 10:30— Ladies free all night D.J. K-Doobie
SATURDAY NIGHT Reggae Party
SUNDAY NIGHT Chill Grooves, Deep House & Funky Techno 8pm 12pm
DRESS TO IMPRESS • PROPER ATTIRE & POSITIVE I.D. REQUIRED • 21+
FRIENDLY • CLEAN • PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
MT. TOM MALL • HADLEY • 585-2774

Way Cool.

ZAMA
downtown Amherst

National buying power means you save more!
SUPER SALE
April 4 Fri. 12-8 | April 5 Sat. 9:30-6 | April 6 Sun. 12-4 | April 7 Mon. 9:30-6
Super SAVINGS!
Whatever you need for cycling fun, it's ON SALE next weekend at SuperSale! Looking for a new bike? A lightweight helmet? Comfortable cycling shorts? Get the best brands and save money at SuperSale. America's biggest and best bicycle and accessory sale. Don't miss it!
EVERYTHING WE HAVE IS ON SALE!
Some Examples:
TREK Tubes reg. $12-$15 for 3.....3 for $6.99
TREK Mini Pump reg. $22.00.....$15.99
TREK Handle Bar Ends reg. $20.00.....$14.99
TREK Computers reg. $34.99.....$24.99
TREK BIKES ARE ON SALE!
Our best deals of the season on Mountain, Road, Hybrid and BMX bikes.
NORTHAMPTON BICYCLE
EST 1971
319 Pleasant St., Northampton
586-3810
http://www.javanet.com/~nohobike

April Showers Of Value At...
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
Budweiser & Bud Light 30 PACK CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $14.99 + DEP
Coors EXTRA GOLD 30 PACK CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $11.99 + DEP
Miller GENUINE DRAFT & GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $9.49 + DEP
HARPOON, CATAMOUNT & RED HOOK ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP
MOLSON GOLDEN, LIGHT & ICE 12 PK. BOTTLES $7.99 + DEP
½ KEGS BUD, BUD LT., LITE, RED DOG, ICEHOUSE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT., MICH AMBER BOCK $39.99 + DEP
WINE OF THE MONTH
CONCHA Y TORO SUNRISE 100% VARIETALS CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, SAUVIGNON BLANC, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750ML $4.99
CARLO ROSSI WINES ALL FLAVORS 4.0 LITER $7.49
RENE JUNOT RED & WHITE FRENCH TABLE WINE 1.5 LITER $5.99
COLOUR VOLANT FRENCH VARIETALS, CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750ML $5.49
CORBET CANYON WHITE ZINFANDEL 750ML 3 BOTTLES FOR $9.99
JACK DANIELS COUNTRY COCKTAILS ALL FLAVORS 4 PK. BOTTLES $3.49
BACARDI LIMON RUM 750ML $8.99
JOSE CUERVO GOLD TEQUILA 750ML $9.99
The Famous Grouse Smuggler SALE $13.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -4.00 FINAL COST $9.49 1.75L
FLEISCHMANN'S GIN 1.75L $11.49
BLACK VELVET 1.75L $12.49
Cossack VODKA 1.75L $9.49
We Accept Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 4/3/97 THRU WEDS. 4/9/97
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Snowstorm delays spring, helps boaters

Alfresco News with Liz Anderson

Mother Nature wins this year's prize for the most extraordinary April Fool's joke when she encouraged Monday's terrific snow storm and invited winter to chill-out in the Pioneer Valley for a few days. We must not criticize her for taking part in our foolish folklore, and instead we should applaud her for increasing the water levels of rivers throughout Western Massachusetts.

Despite the fact the earth is once again blanketed in heavy "white stuff," Mother Nature has just made the beginning of this year's kayaking season even better with a surplus in run-off water from snow and ice.

Although there is a general perception that kayaking is an aquatic sport exclusively for thrill-seekers, and not a recreation that can be enjoyed by the average Jane or Joe, nothing could be farther from the truth. In fact, this adventure sport has become so safe that, according to The World Of Kayaking, more people choke on peanut butter and jelly sandwiches than die while kayaking each year.

Thanks to aquatic engineers, kayaking no longer only involves short narrow constricting kayaks that are inherently unstable, but also boats that are longer, wider and more stable than their whitewater cousins. Otherwise known as tandem kayaks, these vessels even have foot-controlled rudders for easy maneuvering.

Tandem kayaks are used only on flat water and allow their occupants to relax, while whitewater kayaks are made for the rapids and expect their occupants to leap tall waves in single strokes. Now is the time to think about enjoying both worlds of kayaking as the warming weather begins to melt the snow into run off that will flow into turbulent river rapids.

A kayak is very different from the classic rowboat most of us probably have used at least once or twice at summer camp. The kayak paddle is not fixed onto the boat and a stroke on a given side can easily turn the kayak to the left, right, or not at all.

Kayaking uses families of different paddle moves to navigate down roaring rapids or calm currents. The most basic forms of kayak paddling include the power, the forward and reverse, the sweep, the stern, the rudder and the pry/draw strokes. Kayaking is a highly technical activity and is not easily self-taught.

This spring Wildwater Outfitters is offering some of the finest and most complete kayak instruction in New England. All courses are taught by American Canoe Association (ACA) certified instructors using techniques developed by the ACA, American Red Cross and members of the Wildwater Outfitter staff.

Each class is small and consists of a student/teacher ratio of five to one on the river. The main objective of Wildwater Outfitters is to enable participants to paddle comfortably on two to three rivers after completing a weekend course. In the sea kayaking course, Wildwater Outfitters' goal is to provide students with the skills they need to paddle on a multi-day touring trip.

The Beginners Course will be held on May 17-18, June 7-8, 28-29, July 12-13, Aug. 9-10 and Sept. 6-7. This course is a two day clinic for people with little or no kayak experience. It has been designed to provide basic skills and to prepare the boater the whitewater paddling class.

The first day is spent in the classroom and on a pond where the basic strokes and the Eskimo are demonstrated and practiced. The second day of the clinic is spent on a class two whitewater river incorporating all of the strokes learned on day one, in addition to learning about the dynamics of fast moving water.

The Intermediate Course will be held July 6-7 and Sept. 14-15. This two day course allows intermediate paddlers with river experience a chance to develop and advance his/her river skills, perfect the roll and learn new and advance strokes.

The clinics places heavy emphasis on river playing and techniques that are used in river running.

Wildwater Outfitter will also be hosting clinics on Eskimo Rolling on June 7 and 28; July 12, Aug. 9 and Sept. 6. If you have not already had the opportunity to check out the UMass Outing Club's Friday night seminars on Eskimo Rolling, then take advantage of Wildwater Outfitter's half day course and learn the basics of the roll. This clinic is designed for people who have trouble learning the roll and to learn river rescue basics.

Clinics on Sea Kayaking will take place on May 31, June 1, July 12-13, Aug. 2-3 and Sept. 13-14. This one day clinic is designed for the person who is planning to go on a multi- day tour or who just purchased a sea kayak. All of the basic strokes are covered along with tandem and self rescue techniques.

Wildwater Outfitter provides all of the equipment needed for the courses. If participants own their own equipment it is recommended that they use it so they will become familiar with the equipment. Registration forms for these kayaking clinics are at the Wildwater Outfitter Store located on route 9 across from the Super Stop and Shop Center.

Don't let Mother Nature's April Fool joke get you down. Instead just laugh right along with her, and take part in one of America's coolest aquatic sports. Learn how to ride raging waves or how to coast rolling currents at the Wildwater Outfitter and enjoy the snow inspired rapids in rivers throughout western Massachusetts.

Liz Anderson is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY 13

13 — He can sneer all he wants, he still can't be Bono...

13 is a lucky number for blues fans

Jazz/Blues Weekly

By Joshua Boyd

A hot breath of air, tainted by carbon monoxide, has blown through the blues, and it's actually quite refreshing. It comes in the form of the blues-rock band 13, featuring Lester Butler. A brand new name to the world of blues, 13 formed early last year, and is made up of a cast of young, session-men from various bluesmen's bands.

Butler, a Virginia native and the writer of all the band's originals on their self-titled debut on Hightone Records, is a veteran of a big-time L.A. club band called the Red Kings (which recorded a live album King King produced by Rick Rubin and distributed on Rubin's label, then called Def American). The rest of the band has been a revolving door of players coming off jobs with Screamin' Jay Hawkins, Rod Piazza and The Blasters.

The album itself, 13 Featuring Lester Butler, is refreshing in that, as a contemporary album in the blues vein, it is not a completely soulless, clean production. This is dirty stuff we're talking about here. The sound has pure Chess-era blues fuzz and Butler's harsh harmonica playing catches one off guard like a swear in church. The originals are non-stop action, driving with hard beats and Butler's confident shouting, especially on "HNC," "Black-Hearted Woman" (with some slamming piano by Andy Kaulkin), and "Way Down South," with its funky riff giving a slight break from the straight-ahead blues thrash of the rest of the album.

The band tackles covers like a linebacker. The classic Howlin' Wolf blues "Smokestack Lightnin'" is here as well as "So Mean To Me" by Elmore James, all done with thunderstorm ferocity.

Less intimidating is New Orleans-based Black Top Records artist Gary Primich. With an image of having no image (does a person really have to say they are a "regular joe" — can't they just be one?), he is still able to get over that hurdle and present some fairly original songwriting, as on his fifth, most recent album. Company Man. Hailing from the steel-manufacturing town of Gary, Ind., Primich would often make trips into neighboring Chicago to be influenced by Big Walter Horton and others.

He took his Chicago influences down to Austin, Texas and mixed Chicago and Texas blues with a few other styles and came up with a stable harp sound that doesn't sound imitating nor too original. It's just there. It is the backbone of songs on Company Man such as "My Home," "The Briar Patch" and "Varmint," the latter two taking up a little influence from Austin blues kings, the Fabulous Thunderbirds. Some songs stand out from the Texas blues of the above songs, such as the swampy "What's It Gonna Be?," the old-time jug blues of Smiley Lewis' "Jailbird" and the organ-drenched jazz-blues of "Ain't You Trouble?"

Black Top guitarist Snooks Eaglin, a New Orleans veteran bluesman, was able to make it over to Japan for his first time at the end of 1995, and the new Live In Japan features his set from the Park Tower Hall in Tokyo. Eaglin started out way back in the early '50s in the R&B group, The Flamingoes (which also featured a young Allen Toussaint, a prominent producer and arranger), and then went on to record his R&B/Cajun-influenced blues romp for various labels as a solo artist.

His one original on Live In Japan, "I Went To The Mardi Gras," is a nice jumpy piece, accentuated by Jeffrey "Jellybean" Alexander's calypso-style drumming. Classic band chemistry can be heard on Earl King's "Soul Train," the soul blues ballad "Nine Pound Steel" and the contemporary shuffle of "Travellin' Mood." Charles Brown's "Black Night" is not as dark as the original, but commendable on Live In Japan as there is a compelling bass solo by George Porter, Jr. whose phrases help Eaglin right along all through. Guitar solos on Live In Japan are seemingly rare except on Stevie Wonder's "Boogie On Reggae Woman."

Part two of Smithsonian/Folkways' "Lead Belly Legacy" series (based around recordings the legendary folk bluesman made for Folkways founder Moses Asch), Bourgeois Blues holds up Smithsonian/Folkways' reputation for churning out large amounts of music on single discs (Bourgeois Blues features 28 songs), with the most informative liner notes around.

Lead Belly's Bourgeois Blues is scattered with such songs as the classic "Midnight Special," the title track (about a Washington, D.C. that in the 1940s was very racist), "Alabama Bound," featuring Woody Guthrie and Cisco Houston, and many others that feature either Lead Belly solo (sometimes even a cappella) or with help from the two folk stars above or by Sonny Terry, Brownie McGhee and Pops Foster. This disc's liner notes present a literary caricature of Lead Belly by Guthrie, biographical notes by Smithsonian/ Folkways archivist Jeff Place, notes on all songs and even a bibliography and discography. Smithsonian/Folkways should definitely keep up the good work.

Joshua Boyd is a Collegian columnist.

Pearl Street Nightclub
Live Music & Dance Club
TUESDAY, APRIL 15 @ 9:00 PM
NORTHAMPTON PRIDE MARCH BENEFIT DANCE
Proceeds to benefit Northampton Pride Committee
EVERY TUESDAY
GAY NIGHT
FREE BEFORE 10:00pm
Pride March Fundraiser - Tuesday April 15th
18+ 9PM-1AM
EVERY THURSDAY
THE AREA'S BIGGEST
HIGH ENERGY
A FULL HOUSE EVERY WEEK
EVERY FRIDAY 9-2am
RETRO NIGHT
FREE BEFORE 10:00pm
MUSIC FROM THE 70's, 80's & 90's
EVERY SATURDAY
TEEN NIGHT
AGES 15-19 - 7:30 - 11:30 PM
PROPER ID AND DRESS REQUIRED
LIVE MUSIC
Fri. Apr 4 @ 8:30 pm
THE BLACK REBELS
Sun. Apr. 6 @ 7:00 pm
THE INDEPENDENTS
TEDIO BOYS/WESTIES/CAN'T SAY
Wed. Apr. 9 @ 8:30 pm
THE BOGMEN
Thu. Apr. 10 @ 9:00 pm
FAT BAG
OSTRIDGE FARM
Sat. Apr. 12 @ 8:00 pm
LOBSTERS FROM MARZ
HUBINGER ST.
APRIL 18-20
THE REALLY LOUD MUSIC FESTIVAL
THE BUSINESS/WARZONE
CONVERGE/SPRING HEELED JACK
And many more... Call for showtimes or information
Advocate
Wed. April 23 @ 7:30 pm
STRIFE
BANE/LINE OF FIRE/ONE KING DOWN
UPCOMING
Thurs. April 24 ACOUSTIC JUNCTION 18+
Fri. April 25 TREE All Ages
Sat. April 26 BAD CREEK 18+
Wed. May 7 DINOSAUR JR. 18+
10 PEARL STREET, NORTHAMPTON
413-584-7771

Give Us Some Face!
Between March 24 and April 4, come to the Campus Center Concourse and have your picture taken for the new UMass I.D. Card; Monday-Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.
The photo is FREE, takes about 2 minutes, and you'll AVOID SOME BIG LINES IN THE FALL. The new card will be issued then, and it's going to make your life a lot easier! THE ALL-CAMPUS CARD can be used as your library card, Meal Plan ticket, residence hall key, and as a cash card for on-campus purchases.
I.D. Card photos are also taken in the I.D. Office, Franklin Dining Hall anytime during regular business hours.
Don't miss this photo opportunity!

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Curtain Daily 7:00pm (NO SHOW SAT. APRIL 5)
MATINEE SUNDAY APRIL 6. at 1:00pm
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET
A KENNETH BRANAGH FILM
Film Ends April 10th
For your convenience – Due to length of film
TICKETS MAY BE PURCHASED IN ADVANCE FOR ANY SHOWING
Box-office Daily from Noon thru Showtime
Phone Res. 584-9032 (1-5pm ONLY)
-of course TICKETS AT DOOR - But Arrive Early -
ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount 18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441 Discount
Featuring "Bud Dry" 30-pack $10.49
Vodka 80 $8.99
Harpoon Winter $4.99 6-pk
Super Buys!
Genuine Draft & Light $9.49/case bots!
Sam Adams Lager $16.99/case bots!
Elm City Ale $13.99/case bots!
"Fantastic Pricing!"
"MICRO MADNESS" CONTINUES!
Red Hook Pete's "ALL FLAVORS!" Harpoon Catamount
Mix & Match "TWO" 6/PKS... $9.95
Wow!
Captain Morgan $16.49 1.75 Liter
Franzia Wines 3 Liter Boxes $6.99
Check out Russell's many Indoors Specials
•All Beers Plus Deposit• OPEN 9:00AM - 11:00PM VISA/MASTERCARD •Delivery Available•

ARTS

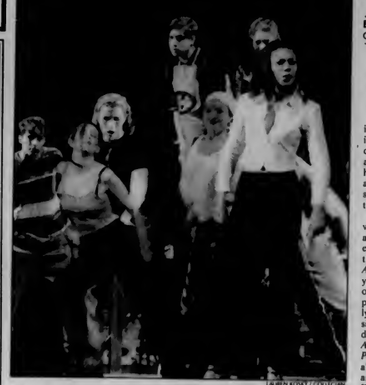
WEEKLY DRINK SPECIALS

Captain Morgan & Coke 16 oz 2.00

Sloe Gin Fizz 16 oz 2.00

Red Dog 16 oz Drafts 1.50

Pete's Wicked Mardi Gras 1.50



TONIGHT Yukon Jack Night

Thurs-Fri-Sat Dancing

No Cover Charge Before 10pm

unfoodsmith THE PUB ambient

15 East Pleasant St.

DAMIEN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Boy, these kids really are gonna live forever: the cast of Fame prepares for their debut this weekend.

Theatre Guild achieves Fame

By Sarah J. Kimmel
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Theatre Guild will be performing the award winning musical Fame at the Bowker Auditorium in Stockbridge Hall this weekend.

Fame, adapted from the book by Jose Fernandez, is the story of students attending a high school for the performing arts. The students are dancers, singers and musicians striving to be the best in their class. They are reaching to achieve their goals and to reach for the stars.

Fame was originally set in the 1980s, yet the cast and crew of this show decided to set this edition of the musical in the '90s. Directed by UMass student Tim Fisk, this adaptation was selected in the hopes of emphasizing issues such as homophobia, drug addiction, race identity and illiteracy.

The script follows these students through their four years of high school. It draws pictures of romances and falling outs. The revised script incorporates the sounds of dance club mixing, electric guitar and keyboard in order to strengthen the feel of the '90s. The set, designed by Deb Gaouette, emphasizes the feeling that hope is kept in the human heart, not in a house or school.

Fisk described the musical as an agent that "embodies all that is pure and magical in our lives."

Fisk said, "this production is greatly indebted to those who chose not to keep their hands in their pockets and feet inside the car at all times."

This is Fisk's seventh and final performance with the UMass Theater Guild.

Fame stars romantic leads, Jaime Perez as Nick Piazza and Elaine Emme as Doris Katz; supporting leads, Richard A. James as Leroy Jackson and Toks Olagundoye as Cocoa Diaz; and comedic leads, Joseph Diaz as Raul Garcia and Fatima Elmi as Lisa Washington.

Fame is being performed April 3, 4 and 5 at 8 p.m. There will also be a matinee on Saturday at 2 p.m. Tickets are $4 for senior citizens and student and $6 for adults. They may be purchased at the Fine Arts Center Box Office, at 545- 2511, or at the door. For more information call 545-0415.

Pakula falls short in The Devil's Own

By Adam Levine
Collegian Staff

THE DEVIL'S OWN
Directed by Alan J. Pakula with Harrison Ford, Brad Pitt, Treat Williams
Playing at Hompshire Six Theater

The Devil's Own is neither an intricate look Inside I.R.A. terrorism nor the suspenseful action drama it appeared to be marketed as. Rather, Alan Pakula's latest is a hopeful attempt at intriguing character analysis, which doesn't necessarily work, but has a lot of potential.

There was a time when Pakula was regarded as a magnificent up and coming drama director. His early credentials include such thrilling suspense films as Klute and All the President's Men. Yet, the years have not been kind to Pakula, or perhaps it is all a result of some poor decision making. More recently, Pakula has been the man responsible for such mediocre action melodramas including Consenting Adults, Presumed Innocent and The Pelican Brief. What is so painful about The Devil's Own, is that we are forced to witness Pakula's dignified attempt to rekindle his flame with little success.

The Devil's Own, like Patriot Games or Blown Away is Hollywood's inconsiderate portrayal of the I.R.A. as a non problematic bad guy. Regardless of one's political beliefs towards the situation in Northern Ireland, a film should have a responsibility to offer motivation for the narrative's conflict. Hollywood merely depicts the I.R.A. as terrorists who can contribute to the framework of a riveting suspense drama. If the general audience actually knew what the I.R.A. were fighting for, then the conventional film just wouldn't work as well.

Brad Pitt plays this aforementioned role surprisingly with a great deal of depth. He is Frankie Maguire, who at a young age watched his father gunned down in front of him. From this point, Pakula urges us to understand Maguire's situation and permit him to do whatever he wants in order to combat those personal demons, and still remain the story's hero. It is now years later, and Maguire has risen the ranks to become number one on the British Government's most wanted terrorist list.

Maguire has come to New York in order to purchase weapons from a shady businessman, played by Treat Williams. While the deal is going through, Maguire, who now goes under the alias of Rory Devaney, has managed to infiltrate an unsuspecting family, which includes Harrison Ford as the father with the heart of gold. Ford is Tom O'Meara, a police sergeant who has to struggle every day to do the right thing and constantly convince himself that he's really doing it. These unlikely new friends come together in the most unusual of circumstances until they must be pitted against one another in a tacky battle of the thin line between right and wrong.

Of course Maguire's deal goes all wrong and O'Meara inevitably uses his sharp insight to put all the pieces of the mystery together. However, The Devil's Own is not as much about plot as about the relationship of the two central characters. We first witness them bond over a few beers, Guinness no doubt, and a game of pool against some obnoxious anti-Irish locals. Eventually we see Maguire almost cling to O'Meara as the father figure he lost, desperately hoping he will understand his situation once the truth is in the open.

The Devil's Own could have used these characters to really dig deep into the heart of something. Unfortunately, Pakula seems to lose control of the film's direction right at the beginning. Pakula wants to say so much about the human condition and yet manages to say really nothing at all. He builds his characters up as saints without proving to us why they should be. The end result is a lack of sympathy for two interesting characters that should have created a moving climax, yet there is no reason to care about them at all. The Devil's Own wants to be the sort of psychological thriller that Pakula used to make, yet he has lost himself to a newer Hollywood where decent plots come secondary under big name stars. C

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Over ~500~ Microbrews
Attention Grad Students: Take 10% off Regularly Priced Fine Wines

SPECIALS
Wachusett $4.99/six (Country Ale, IPA, Nut Brown)
Saranac $4.99/six $18.99/case (Pale Ale, Black & Tan, Pilsner, Amber)
Guinness Stout $6.99/six
Johnny Mash Hard Cider $4.99/six

BEER SPECIALS
Lite 30-pk cans $14.99
Natural Lite & Ice case $8.99
Molson Golden 12-pk cans $7.99
Warsteiner 12-pack bottles $8.99

1/2 KEG SPECIAL
Sam Adams Boston Ale $75.00

LIQUOR SPECIALS
Malibu Rum $9.99/750 ml
Absolut $11.99/750 ml
Sauza Gold Tequila $9.99/1 L
Boones Wines 3 for $9.99

Micro-Brewed Beer Kegs in Stock
Wine Coolers · Ice · Mixers · Mini Kegs · Beer Glasses
253-5304
Rt. 9 East College Street
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt. 9E

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

IRON HORSE
Main Street
20 Center St. Northampton
ALL AGES
ALL THE TIME
friday, april 4 • 10 pm • $8 adv.
JERRY Granelli's
UFB (un-F-believable) BAND
shredding jazz grooves from Berlin, Germany
saturday, april 5 • 10 pm
LORD HILL AND freebeerandchicken wife down, it's not really free • $5 adv.
sunday, april 6 • 7 pm • $10 adv.
RAY ANDERSON's POCKET BRASS
jack wilkins · josh stewart · charlie persip
mon&tues, april 7&8, 7 pm $18.50
BEAUSOLEIL
LOUISIANA'S FINEST CAJUN DANCE MUSIC
wednesday, april 9 • 10 pm
GREYBOY ALLSTARS
thursday and friday, apr. 10&11
THE NIELDS
LOVE RIOT OPENS 4/10
MERRIE AMSTERBURG OPENS 4/11 great acoustic rock • $12 adv. • 7 pm
saturday, april 12, 7 pm • $10 adv.
MONSTER MIKE WELCH & SETH YACAVONE BLUES BAND double bill o' 17-year-old blues monsters
saturday, april 12, 10 pm • $6 adv.
yeP!
and DISCO BISCUITS
sunday & monday, apr. 13&14 7 pm
THE SAWDOCTORS
Ireland's #1 rockers on US tour • $15 adv.
MUSIC SEVEN NIGHTS A WEEK
Coming: Archers of Loaf · Skeleton Key · Bob Mould · Mer · Saunders
TICKETS For the Record at the Northampton Box Office or all 586-8686
24 HOUR CONCERT INFO: 413 584 0610

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10. always
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0155

MICHAEL'S BILLIARDS
8 Bigger 9 Is Better
• All Sporting Events Every Monday

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way · Roundtrip
London $199 $370
Rome or Milan $340 $635
San Jose, Costa Rica $246 $460
Roundtrip
TOKYO $879
SYDNEY $898
Scheduled flights. Fares to worldwide destinations. Earn/passes available.
Weekend surcharges may apply. Customs-immigration taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
347 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Classe Cafe
eat heavy, eat light, eat sweet, eat smart
eat natural, eat veggie, eat meat, eat soup
EAT GOOD IT'S HERE
morningOneonOnight
Welcome LOCMP
M-Sat. 7am-9pm
Sunday Brunch 7-3
wine & beer
166 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-2291

4 SEASONS
RTE. 9 HADLEY 584-8174
MONDAY-SATURDAY 9:00AM-11:00PM
Not responsible for typos
VISA DISCOVER MasterCard
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
• BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE • CIGARS

OREGON 24-12 oz. bott. $18.99 +dep.	BAD FROG 24-12oz. bott. $21.99 +dep.	MOLSON ICE/GOLD 24-12 oz. bott. $15.99 +dep.	R. ROCK 24-12 oz. bar bott. $13.99 +dep.	BUD & LT 30 pks. $15.99 +dep.	MICRO KEGS! SAM ADAMS, OREGON, SARANAC, KILLIANS, J.W. DUNDEE, Plus Lots More!
BUSCH & LT 30 pks. $11.99 +dep.	M.G.D. & LT 24-12oz. bott. $9.99 +dep.	BUD DRY 24-12 oz. bar bott. $9.99 +dep.	MILW. BEST & LT 30 pks. $10.49 +dep.	M.G.D. & LT 30 pks. $10.99 +dep.	KEGS!!! BUD LT, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LT, RED DOG, LITE, LOWENBRAU, LOWENBRAU $39.99 +dep. BUD Keg of the Week! $38.99 +dep.
PEACHTREE Schnapps $6.99 .750ML	4 SEASONS VODKA $8.99 1.75L	JACK DANIELS Bourbon $11.99 .750L	SMIRNOFF VODKA $14.99 1.75L	LET'S GO UMass SPORTS	ICE! 10 lbs.....$1.29, 50 lbs.....$5.99, 100 lbs.....$9.99
R.H. PHILLIPS Chard $5.99 .750ML	RABBIT RIDGE MYSTIQUE $5.49 .750ML	BERINGER White Zin $4.99 .750mL	FRANZIA Bag in Box $6.99 5.0mL	GLEN ELLEN Chard. $4.99 .750L	Sale Thru 4-9-97 college hoop

continued from page 12

before staving off South Alabama in the first round before turning back a tougher- than-you-think College of Charleston team in the second.

That meant a Sweet 16 game against everyone's (mine included) predestined darling. While college hoop fans everywhere — the mayor of Tucson and Bobbi Olsen notwithstanding — were already snapping up the hot-off- the-silkscreen "Kansas, 1997 National Champions" t-shirts, Simon and Co. said, "Wait a minute, I don't think so."

In stunning, dramatic fashion, Arizona proceeded to knock off the season-long favorite in Kansas, the regional's other Cinderella in Providence (in overtime), the all-time winningest coach in Dean Smith and North Carolina and the defending national champs in Kentucky.

No problem.

The fact that it was not Kentucky or North Carolina cutting down the nets made the post-game ceremonies refreshingly fun to watch. Both the other Wildcats and the Tar Heels are perennial poll toppers, big name schools with big name stars. Both have the marquee players who leave the collegiate ranks early to go hardship. Both have won a recent championship.

Arizona doesn't have all that. Sure, it's a big name program with its share of strong players coming out of the McKale Center. But often it is not 'Zona players who declare their eligibility for the professional draft, it is not Lute Olson whose name is on Coach of the Year ballots.

Olsen himself deserved this championship. As the coach at Iowa, Olsen took his squad to the Final Four in 1980 where the Hawkeyes were considered by many to be the most talented team. He again visited the Final Four in 1988, when Danny Manning would not be denied. He was there, too, in 1994, but again could not get his hands on that elusive trophy.

Three final fours in two decades, never a win in the semifinals, never a trip to the finals, never a runner-up plaque. Instead, Olsen had to deal with the constant reminders of his lack of tournament success, the first-round exits, the early flops. Finally now, Olsen can exorcise those demons and be thought of as a champion.

Greg Hansen, a writer for the Arizona Daily Star, said recently that if a book is to be written about this 1996-97 installment of the Wildcats, the title should read "Guts and Glory."

Guts and glory indeed.

Now that the playing days of the 1996-97 schedule have come to an close, it is open-season on coaching changes — and make no mistake about it, names are flying.

The most recent of switches comes from Jim O'Brien, former head coach of our rivals down the road. O'Brien will leave Boston College after accepting yesterday the head position at Ohio State.

The 46-year-old O'Brien, who coached at BC for 11 seasons, was offered the Ohio State job after Clemson's Rick Barnes and Georgia's Tubby Smith both turned down the offer.

The Boston Herald reported that the offer O'Brien received included a base pay of $150,000 a year, with the total package — including outside endorsements and radio/television contracts — to be worth nearly $650,000 a year.

The Ohio State vacancy came after Randy Ayers left the position. With its 10-17 record this past season, the Buckeyes finished ninth in the 11-team Big 10.

O'Brien becomes the second head man the Buckeyes have plucked from the fine Jesuit institution in Chesnut Hill. Gary Williams flew the Eagles' coop to become the Buckeye leader in 1986.

In other coaching news, Jerry Green, whose name went perfectly with the school he used to coach — Oregon — will now lead the troops at Tennessee.

Rutgers, the job nobody wants, is reportedly talking to Florida State's Pat Kennedy and Rider's Kevin Bannon. Danny Nee of Nebraska, who coached at Brick, N.J. High early in his career, was also reportedly approached by the school.

• If you didn't make it to Indianapolis this year and were relegated to watching the Final Four on TV, fear not. Applications for tickets to next year's Final Four — to be held at the Alamodome in San Antonio — are now available.

The applications, which are available until May 9, can be obtained by calling (913) 671-7707 between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. Central time, or by writing to: NCAA men's Final Four, P.O. Box 411477, Kansas City, MO 64141-1477.

There is a limit of 10 applications per person and there is a $2 handling fee per application. Applications for Final Four tix will be accepted before May 29.

Approximately 10,000 tickets will be allocated in a June lottery drawing. Tickets are $100 or $80.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

Weeks

continued from page 12

"When I went home for spring break, on about Thursday of spring break, I sat down and told my mother and my guardians that I'm going back," Weeks said. "I got a little upset watching the tournament on TV and I know that we could have done better, so my goal is to come out next year and go far in the tournament."

The main conflict for Weeks was deciding what he would do if he did not return to UMass next year. According to the team tri-captain, he was toying with the idea of, "Maybe going overseas and playing some ball, trying to make a little money. There were a couple of things I had on my mind before the ruling came out, and that's what gave me the most problems, deciding what I was going to do after school."

Weeks feels that Prop 68 is a much needed amendment to current NCAA partial qualifier legislation.

"It was kind of unfair," Weeks said. "For me, I worked hard in high school — not a lot of people can say that they graduated high school in three years. I put a lot of effort into it, I just couldn't pass my SAT. It hurt me coming into my freshman year not being able to play. I worked hard enough to get my grades up and stayed on honor role all through high school and then I couldn't play."

Bennett

continued from page 12

"It's been great," Bennett said. "We've had a lot of success, had a lot of good times. A lot of friendships have formed. I've had great success here. I have no regrets about coming here. We've been A-10 champions the three years I've been here. Hopefully we'll do it again."

The success he refers to started during his first two seasons on the Minutemen staff. Bennett went 10-0 in his first 20 appearances, with a 3.71 ERA. Even with his success, Bennett knew he had more to accomplish.

"I still had something to prove to myself, to get into a starting role. My sophomore year, when I was 8-0, I was mainly a weekend reliever, weekday starter. I still wasn't at my goal," Bennett said.

During his first two seasons in a UMass uniform, Bennett looked to older members of the squad for guidance.

"There was a lot of competitiveness within the staff," Bennett reflected. "Jay Murphy, who was the ace that year, he provided a lot of that. He was always right at your back, trying to get the most out of you. You did something wrong, he let you know about it. He was very good at pushing people to get the most out them."

UMass coach Mike Stone has been there for all of Bennett's four years at the collegiate level.

"He's been an incredible coach," Bennett said. "He adapts well to the players. He's one of the best coaches I've seen around.

"I think if he has the confidence in you, and he has confidence that you can pitch out of certain situations, he'll let you do it," Bennett added. "If you can prove yourself to him, prove that you can get yourself out of a jam, then he'll let you do it."

The faith Bennett has in Stone is reflected by the coach.

"He's been one of our most reliable pitchers over the course of four years," Stone said. "He's a real competitor, someone who has command of three, four pitches. He's a good team member."

Just as Bennett learned from Murphy when he was younger, he hopes the freshman look to him for leadership — especially Travis Veracka, who is wearing the same shoes Bennett was four years ago.

"I hope he looks at the way I pitch and learns from it," Bennett said. "It gives them an example to go by — work hard, practice, have good mound presence out there. Not just go out there and throw the ball, but work the hitter."

By mound presence, he doesn't just mean how a pitcher looks standing on the mound, but how he carries himself during the game, through thick and thin.

"If you give up a hit, just don't worry about it," Bennett said. "Don't let them see any fear in your eyes. Let them know that you have confidence to throw any pitch. You can come at them with any pitch."

In Bennett's junior campaign, he went 6-3, with a 4.35 ERA. They may not be the numbers he had in his first two years, but he became the solid starter that he wanted to be, pitching on the weekends and in clutch situations. That meant facing better teams and better hitters in harder-to-win games.

"I'm a spot pitcher. I use control," Bennett said. "I feel comfortable. I'll throw any pitch at any point in the count. I don't just try to throw it by him.

"I feel just as comfortable throwing a 3-2 changeup, or a curveball, which, at this level, throws guys off," he continued. "With a 3-2 count or a 3-1 count, they're thinking fastball. I'll give them an off-speed pitch and hope they'll be fooled by it."

What gives the right-hander the edge is his repertoire, which consists of a fastball, changeup, curveball, and slider. He has realized that with the way baseball is shaping today, no pitcher will go anywhere with just one pitch.

"The hitters are getting stronger and stronger," he said.

What helps Bennett on a more personal level are the superstitious beliefs he thinks help his pitching. Many athletes have superstitions: Ray Bourque practically beats his goalie to death with his stick before each period; Ebby Calvin "Nuke" Laloosh wore a garter belt in Bull Durham; and Jason Bennett has a list of his own.

He smiles, sighs, and thinks deeply. "Let's see, I've got the basic ones — not stepping on the line going out to the mound. The jacket's gotta be on the same hanger, every inning. My hat and my glove have got to be to the right side of me when I come off the mound."

Superstitions or not, no pitcher lives in a bubble. Everyone is looking to see what one pitcher has that is better than the next. Since last year's season of the juiced ball, it's not hard to find a pitcher in the majors to emulate.

"I like to watch [Greg] Maddux, see how he does, how he works the hitters," Bennett said. "Maddux can't go out there and just beat people with his fastball. He's got unbelievable pitches, and movement that no one else has, the way he changes speeds all the time. I try to copy that."

One thing Maddux has is respect from the umpires. When a pitch is a little outside, he gets the call.

"You have to establish a base in the first couple of innings," Bennett explained. "If you establish control early in the game, and then move it out, they'll give it to you."

As with many young athletes in the New England area, Acushnet native Bennett idolized Roger Clemens, the hurler every talented young pitcher wanted to be like.

"People knew before they faced him that the odds were against them. More than likely, he was going to dominate."

Bennett, too, has dominated. He has become what he has wanted to become, an ace pitcher. He has the respect and admiration of his coach and team, and is on the road to becoming the most successful pitcher in UMass history. When the Minutemen set their sights towards the Atlantic 10 Championships and the College World Series this year, it will be Bennett guiding the way.

"He's the kind of guy we can count on," Stone said. "He's going to be a winner."

comics

continued from page 5

dent of the Cards and Comic Company, is that people have a bad opinion of comics.

"People still think of them as kids' books," he said. "And I'll tell you there's very little kids' books. More are geared to older, more mature readers."

Comics fan James Harrahy, a freshman history major, said he thinks "a lot of people could get a lot out of comics. They're just not willing to try it because they see it as some kind of medium for 13-year-old boys with raging hormones... There's so much more to it than that."

Shadoian agreed that people shouldn't think of comics as just children's fare any more.

"The day should be over by now when people should have an automatic pejorative view of comics," he said. "There's a lot of good stuff written. Even in the old days, when comics were heavily divided into genres, there was very interesting work being done. There's no reason to sort of discount them as literature because, at least in the past, they've been printed on crummy paper.

"I think a major reason [comics are viewed badly] is that comics, since about 1955-65, were severely restricted and emasculated by the comic code authority that prohibited most sorts of subjects that could be dealt with and then a sort of Super Hero era came into being with Marvel and DC sort of dominating the field..." he said. "It became a kind of kiddie thing because it was so dominated by super heroes. It lasted for a decade and then gradually began to increase its range."

Beyond the mature themes in some books, comics have other attractions for fans.

Harrahy, said he enjoys "the developing characterization and plotlines as they develop over the course of the year. [A character] can start out as a whining jerk and over the years he develops into a more mature character."

Getting people to change their mindset about comics isn't that easy, however. According to Bob Mankus, the owner of Bob's Comics, most of the traffic in his store is from people who are repeat customers. The problem is getting people who read comics when they were younger and then stopped to try reading a comic again or they will regain interest in the field.

Mankus and Voskoboinik said comics stunts, such as the Death of Superman; Batman having his back broken; and a current storyline that has Superman with new powers and a new uniform bring media attention and older readers back into the store to see what's happening to the characters they remember reading about as children.

However, if the stories aren't well written, "people might be totally lost and put it back down," said Evan Skolnick, former writer for Marvel's New Warriors and currently the editor of Acclaim Comics' young reader line.

"I think that writers and artists in the comics industry in general try to make their work as accessible as possible to the new reader," he said.

Another area where companies are trying to become more accessible is for female fans. Although women only comprise about 10 percent of comics fans according to Mankus, there are an increasing number of books that appeal to them.

"Wonder Woman is a big draw for a lot of women. The Vertigo line that DC does. The female readership would concentrate mainly on those titles," he said.

Other non-super hero books, such as Elfquest, Strangers in Paradise and Preacher, also break the stereotype of comics being for little boys with raging hormones.

In the end, though, Skolnick said, there shouldn't be that stigma. After all, there are TV shows for kids and adults, and the same should exist for comics without prejudice. Comics featuring Disney and FOX characters aimed at very young readers such as Skolnick edits exist side by side with the stereotypical super hero comics made for young teens which exist side by side with mature comics.

It's only the prejudice of those who haven't picked up a comic book recently that makes them no more than "kiddie books."

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian columnist.

MUSKIER TOURS & SUMMER DISCOVERY
Counselors needed for our student programs and/or our pre-college enrichment programs. Applicants must be 21 years old by June 20, 1997
We Need:
• Mature
• Hard Working
• Energetic individuals who can dedicate 4-7 weeks this summer working with teenagers.
For more information and applications:
Please call us at (516) 621-0718 in NY or (888) BSUMMER or Email : staff@summertun.com or
Visit our tour director on April 14th in rm. 902 Campus Center from 9-5

R&P Liquors
• Weekly Specials on Regular Beers • Fine Wines
• Largest Selection of Micro Brews in S. Amherst • Fridge Rentals
260 West St. • South Amherst
Next Door To Bueno, The Brewhaus, & The Bombay

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect, Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385
• Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
• State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or- 1/2 mm)
• Over 90 years staff experience
• Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
• Advanced European technology painting and refinishing systems
• We provide substitute transportation
• Users of Sikkens paint products
Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities
Shop Registration # RS1212

Summer '97 at UMass Boston
See why we're one of the most popular programs in New England!
You'll benefit from
• our distinguished facalty
• morning, midday, afternoon, and evening classes
• over 400 course sections
• our convenient Boston Harbor location
• sessions starting May 27, June 30, and July 14
• mail, phone, fax, or walk-in registration
• and costs you can afford.
Here's how to get in touch!
Tel: 617 287-7904
Fax: 617 287-7922
Email: dce@umbsky.cc.umb.edu
Web: www.conted.umb.edu
Mail:
UMass Boston Summer Sessions
Division of Continuing Education
100 Morrissey Blvd.
Boston, MA 02125-3393
Name
Street address
City, state, zip
UMass Boston

Build Your $avings!
Summer Employment Opportunities
Dean of Students Office
Full or Part Time
The Dean of Students Office is currently accepting applications for the Summer Toll-Free Helpline. Full- and part-time positions are available to assist students and parents with questions related to financial aid, billing, and housing assignments. Paid training in all aspects of Bursar, Financial Aid, and Housing Assignment Office policies is provided. Dates of employment are from June 2 - August 30, 1997.
For a detailed job application, or to apply, please visit the Dean of Students Office, 227 Whitmore. Applicants must be currently enrolled students in good standing.
Application deadline is April 9, 1997.

PUB SPRINGFIELD
382 Dwight St. • Springfield, Ma • 413-734-8123
9pm 2am
Largest Gay Entertainment Complex in Southern New England
Dance DOWN UNDER Club!!
ALL MALE REVIEW FRIDAY NIGHTS
Dancers and Bartenders Wanted Call Bob

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Great apartment uptown! 5 min. walk to campus. One bedroom. Begin 6/1 $830/month. 256-8441

Teka over our lease or will sublet starting June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywine Rent includes heat and hot water. Call 549-0530

Sommer Apt. Available 6/1 with Fall option. Clean, 2 bedroom in Brandywine $775/month includes gas, hot water and heat. On bus line 1 mile from UMass 549-0879

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Pontiac Grand Prix $900 in new parts. $2000 or B/O. 587-0328

1991 Ford Escort GT red, excellent condition, runs great, standard, stereo, A/C, sun roof. $3900/B.O. Call Ian 665-0486

87 Ford Escort
A/C, F/M, 5-speed
104K miles, $1725
(413)256-1238

1985 Toyota Corolla good shape, 129K miles. $1000 Can 253-3264

EMPLOYMENT

Legal Assistants Wanted Fall 1997 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office get hands-on experience in the legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Stop by the office today and pick up an application. 922 Campus Center

EMPLOYMENT

Leaders Needed: Summer Teenage Bicycling Trips: US, Canada, Europe. Minimum 4-week time commitment. Salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program. Ashfield Rd., Conway, MA 01341 (800)343-6132

CAPE COD West Yarmouth Resort needs reliable maids. Saturday only. 9:30- 4:30 $60 per day. Bonus if you stay through 8/30. (508)775-0985

AMBITIOUS CLIMBERS Only positive, open-minded team players need apply. International company new to area seeking key individuals for Sales/Marketing Environmental/Health Industry Call for appt. 564-6132

We need two people to work in Southern Vermont Country Inn. Do dishes and rooms, wait tables, food prep, etc. floom and board plus salary. tips Call (802)674-4140

PAINTERS- Full-time summer. EXPERIENCE PREFERRED, vehicle, references, heavy lifting required. 9:00-5:00 ONLY 247-9480

Summer in Maine- Camp Androscoggin for boys needs staff to teach tennis, soccer, lacrosse, baseball, swimming, sailing, archery, photography, nature, fishing, mountain biking, art, ropes, radio. Have Fun Now An Impact. Write, e-mail, or call Collet. 601 West Street. Harrison, NY 10528 (914)835-5900 http://www.campworks.com/shownw/camp/andro

NEED MONEY?: Morning Paper Delivery $50 a week, short morning hours. Must have vehicle. Contact Mark or Alycia at 545-3500 or stop by The Collegian in the Campus Center Basement.

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER JOBS
Commonwealth Assistant- MA Telecommunicattions Relay Service, Holyoke, MA. Requirements: Typing 55wpm, clear speaking voice, good phone skills; dependable, positive attitude, full-time and part-time positions. Flexible shifts. Call (413)493-1100 for an appointment

Vermont Adventure! Farm and Wilderness is now hiring summer staff. We need people who want to provide positive guidance and support to adolescents coming of age in the 90's. Counselors, nurses, cooks, general staff. Organic farming, backpacking, rock climbing, waterfront, carpentry, crafts. Challenging wilderness environment in the Green Mountains of Vermont. Contact Philip Tobin (802)422-3761 or farpbv@sover.net (http://www.farpbv.org)

Need a summer job? Know the web? Sell MCI Internet Websites to anyone, whenever you want to work. Low cost, nice income for you. Call (800)372-7683 or a-mail for more information dlenger@aol.com

Earn great money and valuable Sales/Marketing experience. Mamoloni's Mesonado are coming to UMass! We need one highly motivated individual to direct our sales project. Contact David at (800)682-8854

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group. 332 Bleecker St. D40, NYC, NY 10014

EMPLOYMENT

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

EDUCATION MAJORS!!
DON'T JUST WORK THIS SUMMER. COME GROW PROFESSIONALLY AT AMERICA'S PREMIER BROTHER/SISTER CAMPS WINADU FOR BOYS DANBEE FOR GIRLS IN WESTERN MASS.
SALARY / ROOM / BOARD AND TRAVEL INCLUDED!!
COME VISIT WITH OUR REPRESENTATIVE: THURSDAY, APRIL 3RD 802 CAMPUS CENTER 10AM - 4PM (WALK-INS WELCOME!)
FOR MORE INFO CALL 800-494-6238

FOR RENT

Female Wanted to share home in New Salem. Separate in-law apartment with kitchen, living room, private bath, small bedroom, furnished. No pets. No smoking. $475/month. All included (508)544 8427

Sugarloaf Estates Ultra modern, two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers, and more! On bus line Minutes to Amherst. Great spaces! Now leasing Spring and Fall. Call 665-3656

FOR RENT

4 bedroom apartment 2 bath, 2 large living rooms. Located on bus route in South Amherst. Call 256-1561

Summer Rental- West Hyannis Port Cape Cod three bedroom. Walk to Craigville Beach. Available 5/25-8/31 (508)778-6519

Cape Cod group & summer rentals Waterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-8000

FOR SALE

INDIGO GIRLS
Have you heard the latest from Indigo Girls??? "Shaming of the Sun" Available April 29th. Call (800)742-7269 for a preview. www.mdgogirls.com

Two Metallica tickets for April 4 in Hartford. $70 or B/O. Call 546-5716

Laptop Notebook $99, VGA Color Monitor $75, Hard Drive $10, Software $5, 386 Motherboard $25. Call Steve 586-3224 ext. 2

Lite Speed Titanium 50 centimeter road bike. Redden once. Need immediate funds. Paid $1700, asking $1150 or B/O. 253-6452

Buy wholesale, not retail. The best phone card you will ever own. MCI Prepaid only $2.00 for 10 minutes. This card is rechargeable. Mail $2.00 and SASE to Collegiate Communications. P.O. Box 785, Amherst, MA 02703 (800)372-7883

FOUND

Gold Earrings @ Totman 3 weeks ago Call Phil 8-4074

FOUND

Small Black and Tan Hound mix, very sweet, greying female. Red collar, no tags. Found in East Leverett on Easter Sunday. 549-3586

Keychain with name Karan house key and car keys. Call Katie 546-5318

LOST

REWARD! Gold Chain, small diamond Melanie 546-5738

Watch Lost at Skinner bus stop on Friday. Fossil, silver band. Girl who found it, please return. Veronica 549-7314

MUSICIANS

DRUMMER WANTED
Punk/Ska Band 25 Lions needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming. Call Dave and Ryan 665-9112

ROOMMATE WANTED

Two bedroom apt. ASAP! Mill Valley Estates. Rent negotiable. Call 253-0582

SERVICES

GRE / GMAT
30 hours, $395
American Academy
1-800-808-Prep
(please leave your name and number)

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State St. Northampton 586-0629

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

2 bedroom/Brandywine with Fall Option. Available 6/1 Call 549-4662

2 bedroom Crestview Available 6/1 Call 549-9210 David

Mill Valley Summer Sublet 3 bedroom, 2 bath, fully furnished. On bus route. 1 month FREE! 253-8503

2 bedroom apartment in Brandywine Fully furnished. $775/month Call 549-6452

CHEAP SUBLET- Summer/Fall Option. Two bedroom apartment on Sunderland bus line. $500/month. Shelly 665-0087

3 bedroom Puffton available 6/1 549-5941

TO SUBLET

Four girls to sublet an apt/house for Fall '97. Must be on bus route. Please call either Rory at 6-2778, Heather at 6-1872, or Katy/Renee at 6-3114

1 bedroom apartment available immediately. Call Tricia for more info. (617)247-2388

TRAVEL

Ski and Party at Killington for only $189!! 2 nights condo lodging and TWO daily lift tickets. Call UMass Ski and Board Club 545-3437, 434 Student Union

Party Weekend in Vermont April 4-6 only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket! Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437.

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus. $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

TRAVEL

China Classic Tours, Inc.
270 Sylvan Avenue
Englewood Cliffs, NJ 07632
1-888-733-2742
Fax:(201) 871-3820

CHINA
Great Experience

Student Tours:
Beijing HDYN $235+air
Beijing/Shanghai/Hangzhou 9DYN $471+air
Beijing/Xian 9DYN $425+air
Departures: May-August

For details, please call or visit our web site
http://www.chinaclassic.com

WANTED TO RENT

Wanted: 4 bedroom apartment/house on bus route for Fall. Willing to take over summer lease. Call 546-4285 Amy

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, or sell a service.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the ad filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day
NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, APRIL 3

Discussion — The Five College Coastal & Marine Sciences Alum Career and Grad School panel discussion will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Amherst College, Pratt Museum, room 5.

Lecture — Mount Holyoke College's Economics Department will present a lecture on "Industrial and Trade Policies in Developing Countries: Which Role for the Government?" at 7:30 p.m. Discussing the topic in Gamble Auditorium at Mount Holyoke's Art Museum will be T.N. Srinivasan, Yale University, and Lance Taylor, New School for Social Research. Free and open to the public.

Theater — Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance produces Phaedra by Elizabeth Egloff, directed by Courtney Munch. Starts today, and runs through Saturday, April 5. Show time 8 p.m. Admission is free but reservations are suggested. Box office hours are 1–4:30 p.m. weekdays, and until 8 p.m. performance nights.

Workshop — Thinking about Graduate School? Grad students and professors will offer advice and tips on taking the GRE, applying for grad school, etc., at 5:30 p.m. in Gunness Student Center. Everyone is welcome. Organized by Tau Beta Pi National Engineering Honors Society.

FRIDAY, APRIL 4

Conference — Student and community activists from across the country will participate in workshops and grassroots organizational training at Hampshire College's Eleventh Annual Fight for Abortion Rights and Reproductive Freedom conference today –Sunday, April 6. Sponsored by the Hampshire College Civil Rights and Public Policy Program. Free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible. For schedule of events or more info, call 582–5645.

Religious — A NFTY/Kesher Reunion and Regular Service will be held at the UMass Hillel House at 6 p.m. All are welcome.

Comedy — The UMass Comedy

SATURDAY, APRIL 5

Troupe will hold its weekly improvisational comed, show, "Mission Improvable" at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center basement. Free.

NOTICES

RSOs — Francellis Nunez, secretary of registry at the Student Government Association, would like to announce that the following inactive groups are in danger of being removed from RSO status: APICS, Bridge Club, Brush Up Your Shake Spear, Cheerleaders, Clean Rivers Coalition, Collegiate 4–H, European Club, Hellenic Association, Honors Students Association, Italian American Students Association, Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance, Marching Band, Marketing Club, Omega Psi Phi, Out of State Students Association, PHNORD, Russian Club, Soviet Community Empowerment, SHMAI, Tennis Club, Travel & Tourism, Truth Task Force, Twenty/Twenty Vision and the Wrestling Club. This is the last chance for groups that have been inactive for six or more semesters to reactivate their status. To reactivate, call Nunez at 545–0341.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Financial aid — Applications for summer financial aid are now available at Financial Aid Services. You must be a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass; taking summer classes through Continuing Education; going on approved summer international exchange program through IPO; or working on a graduate dissertation. Deadline is April 18. Late applications will not be accepted.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more Information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on-site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPIRG, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

RSOs — Francellis Nunez, secretary of registry at the Student Government Association, would like to announce that the following inactive groups are in danger of being removed from RSO status: APICS, Bridge Club, Brush Up Your Shake Spear, Cheerleaders, Clean Rivers Coalition, Collegiate 4–H, European Club, Hellenic Association, Honors Students Association, Italian American Students Association, Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance, Marching Band, Marketing Club, Omega Psi Phi, Out of State Students Association, PHNORD, Russian Club, Soviet Community Empowerment, SHMAI, Tennis Club, Travel & Tourism, Truth Task Force, Twenty/Twenty Vision and the Wrestling Club. This is the last chance for groups that have been inactive for six or more semesters to reactivate their status. To reactivate, call Nunez at 545–0341.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Financial aid — Applications for summer financial aid are now available at Financial Aid Services. You must be a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass; taking summer classes through Continuing Education; going on approved summer international exchange program through IPO; or working on a graduate dissertation. Deadline is April 18. Late applications will not be accepted.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Task Force, Twenty/Twenty Vision and the Wrestling Club. This is the last chance for groups that have been inactive for six or more semesters to reactivate their status. To reactivate, call Nunez at 545–0341.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Financial aid — Applications for summer financial aid are now available at Financial Aid Services. You must be a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass; taking summer classes through Continuing Education; going on approved summer international exchange program through IPO; or working on a graduate dissertation. Deadline is April 18. Late applications will not be accepted.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

Tired of the same old over-priced, pub-style food? Sick of boring, crappy, plastic chain restaurants? For great food, cooked to order, try Walker's Grill. We don't take anyone else seriously, either.

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
19 TV–19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This week's $1 drink: Tom Collins

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 3, 1997

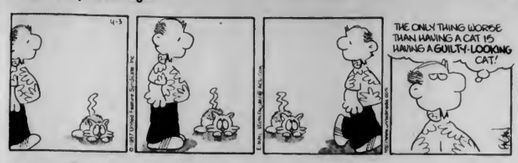
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newsnight With Jim Lehrer		Live From Lincoln Center: Orchestra			Mystery! "Cadfael"		Peter's Pan	Wait for God	Keeping Up
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Moloney "Bell and Chain"		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Moloney "Bell and Chain"		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	FoodNew	High Incident "Remote Control"		Vital Signs (In Stereo)		Turning Point		News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.							Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)	Naked Truth	Seinfeld (R)	Naked Truth		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8		Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	Cape "Reggie's Wild Ride"		Baywatch Nights "Zarpha"		News	H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	9		News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends (R)	Naked Truth	Seinfeld (R)	Naked Truth		ER "Blizzard" (R) (In Stereo)	Late Show
WTIC	10		Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Martin	Living Single	New York Undercover (R)			News	Coach
WWLP	11		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)	Naked Truth	Seinfeld (R)	Naked Truth		ER "Blizzard" (R) (In Stereo)	News
WGBY	12		Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newsnight With Jim Lehrer		1, Ol' House	Dra. and Cult	Murder-Hood	Mystery! "Cadfael"		Peter's Pan	Charlie Rose
WGGB	40		News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	High Incident "Remote Control"		Vital Signs (In Stereo)		Turning Point	News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	NHL Hockey	Boston Bruins at New York Rangers. (Live)					News	Late Show
WTBS	42		Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Video	Home Videos	Major League Baseball: Atlanta Braves at Houston Astros. (Live)					ee "Double Impact" (1991
A&E	43		Quincy		Law & Order "Manhood"		Biography "Henry Ford" (R)		Ancient Mysteries "Before Their Time: Ancient Technology"			Law & Order
CNN	44	29	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today	Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	45	26	Tick	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	Comic Relief	ee "The Fisher King" (1975, Comedy) Gene Wilder				1 Night Stand	Dream On	Daily Show
DISC	46		Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings (R)		Wild Discovery: Crocodiles		Mystery Univ.	Movie Magic	Wings "Flight Deck" (R)		Wild Discovery:
ESPN	47		Up Close	Sportscenter			NHL Hockey: Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					Baseball	Sportscenter
LIFE	48		Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait: "Bette Midler"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		ee "Murder Between Friends" (1994, Drama) Timothy Busfield,			Living	Mysteries
MTV	49		(5:30) Music Videos (In Stereo)		Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Music Videos (In Stereo)				Tbd (In Stereo)	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	50		Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug (R)	Rugrats	Secret of Alex	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Teri
SCIFI	51		Twilight Zone	Darkside	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Sesquest DSV "Games"		Forever Knight "Blood Money"		Sci-Fi Buzz	Inside Space	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)
TLC	52	28	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Real America: 48 Hours		Passion of the Saints (R)		Wolfman-Myth and Science	Real America: 48 Hours
TNT	53		In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		ee "Rocky III" (1979, Drama) Sylvester Stallone, Tela Shire,					ee "Jaws 2" (1978, Horror) Roy Scheider,
USA	54		Renegade (In Stereo)		Highlander: The Series		Murder, She Wrote		ee "The Tommyknockers" (1993, Horror) Jimmy Smits,			Wings	Wings
HBO	59		(5:15) ee "Singles" (1992)		ee "Hoods of Cards" (1992, Drama) Kathleen Turner. (PG-13)				ee "To Die For" (1995, Satire) Nicole Kidman. (In Stereo)			Telltale	To Death (In Stereo)
MAX	60		ee "Made in America" (1993)		Whoopi Goldberg. (PG-13)		ee "Ti Yi Zhou" (1994, Drama) Tanuja Tiak.				ee "Airheads"	The Return of Jonny	(1990)
SHOW	61		(4:45)		ee "A Pyromaniac's Love Story" (1995)		"PG"		ee "Lil' Bill" (1995, Western) Jeff Bridges.			"Night Terrors" (1993, Horror) Robert England. (In Stereo)

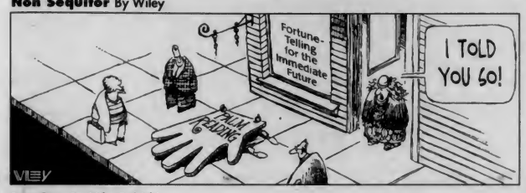


Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

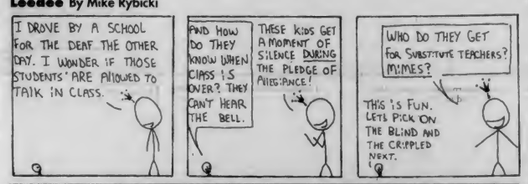
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

University By Frank Cho



Non Sequitor By Wiley

Generation X By Chris Lehman

Loedoe By Mike Rybicki

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH	DINNER
Cowburger	Greek Lemon Chicken
Quiche Lorraine	VealCordon Bleu
Meatball Grinder	Fiesta Rice & Cheese
Wheatball Grinder	1/4 (cheese) Burger

Worcester

LUNCH	DINNER
Turkey Burger	Greek Lemon Chicken
Beef Stew	Savory Stuffed Peppers
Fettuccini & Sauce	Manicotti with Sauce
Seasame Noodles & Peas	Apple Juice -

Hampshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Cowburger	Greek Lemon Chicken
Grilled Chick. Sand.	Veal Parmesan
Savory Turkey-Bacon - Swiss Folded Pita	Croutons
	Water

Berkshire

LUNCH	DINNER
Turkey Burger	Greek Lemon Chicken
Reuben Sand. on Rye	VealCordon Bleu
Fettuccini & Sauce	Garden Chili
Seasame Noodles & Peas	Manicotti w/ Sauce

Attention Student Comic Artists...

The Collegian loves your creative work — but we can't run it if it's not here. There are a number of artists on our waiting list hoping for a shot at spaces you currently hold. If you have a scheduling conflict or if you wish to reduce your contributions, please call Chris Connor at 545-1809

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
A volatile situation could be on the brink of an explosion. Use tact with a particularly difficult person to avert disaster. Your bothersdowns could be part of the problem, too, so resist the temptation to speak your mind. Avoid exaggeration when it comes to matters of the heart.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
It's time to take action on a problem that's been nagging at you for a while. More discussion will only delay things. That special someone could have something on his or her mind. And you're just the person to share it with.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
Don't allow a committee's indecision at work to drag on. Keep your head together when planning weekend activities. Someone could propose a wild and crazy idea. It may sound like fun, but is it worth the risk? Think twice before going along with the crowd.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
Where a battle of wits and power is concerned, you'd do well to stay as far away from the conflict as possible. An interesting proposal comes from an unexpected direction. Consider carefully before giving your answer. An old friend has some happy news.

LEO
July 23–August 23
If you're faced with a difficult situation, step back for a moment and take time to decide exactly what you want. Then get through to the person who has the power to fix things, and start talking. Just don't give in, and everything should work out.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
Stay away from a hurtling pair—they could try to entangle you in their conflict, and you don't want to get caught in the middle. Keep open the lines of communication with your sweetie to avoid a petty argument. Try an evening alone—just the two of you.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Put your attention to the person who can help you gain the experience you need to get to the next level. Someone may be giving you a subtle hint that you haven't yet picked up on. Turmoil at home or in the office raises your stress level.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
Speed is the key to most difficulties this week. Are you moving too slowly on a project? Backtrack fast so that you miss important details? Focus on watching your speed all the time—in traffic, too. Careful driving could be a major boon for you in the weeks ahead.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
If you're feeling trapped and stressed, treat yourself to a little adventure. Search for buried treasure, or just stage a great escape. You don't need to travel long distances to find happiness. It could be starting you right in the face.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
Avoid reckless moves that will burn your bridges behind you. Compromises will work much better at enabling you to achieve your long term goals. An intense relationship could be floundering—do you have enough in common to make it work?

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
A zest for exploration takes hold of you this week and you could be ready to climb mountains. Instead of blowing your vacation on a prohibitively expensive trip, try to change the things in your life that cause you stress. A co-worker may not understand where you're coming from.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
Although it may seem as though a committee has accomplished nothing, the groundwork is in place for some really exciting developments. Be patient, and watch things take off. Take on a little extra responsibility and you'll notice results.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Close to Home By John McPherson

"He learned how to climb out, so we greased the crib."

Quote of the Day

"If I wanted lemon on my chicken, would I be here?!"
–Overheard at Franklin

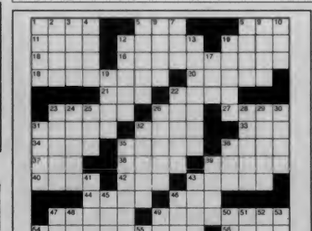
Leold By Roger & Salem Salloom

My mom doesn't like me coming home late at night, so before she goes to bed she turns out all the lights and rearranges the furniture to try to make me fall when I tip toe in.

We live in a small apartment building and the apartments look alike. One time I slept the whole night in the wrong apartment.

In the morning I had breakfast with these two nice old people. They sat very still at the kitchen table, spoke softly and were calm and peacful.

They told me not to worry about being in the wrong apartment because we were relatives.



They said we were actually related by rent checks.

Actually they do look a little like me.

How cool.

Now I have family in the building.

ACROSS
1. Breach of secrecy
5. Space between
8. Go, teem!
11. In some other way
12. Madrid mister
14. Two Years Before The Mast author
16. Author Parent
18. Teases
19. Turtles
20. Sign for another season
21. German spa
22. Alpha follower
23. Moons
26. Poke
27. Eleventh, for one
31. Not urban
32. Queen, in India
33. Book of literary sayings
34. Beachanalia
35. Goodbye Mr. Chips actor
36. Birdsong of basketball
37. Oversized tart
38. Daring Knievel
39. Choppers
40. Duchin of music
42. French article
43. Ward off
44. Wedding bird
46. Pal
47. India's neighbor
49. Kind of property
54. Putting up with
56. Defense org.
57. Bird (Latin)
58. Therefore

Women's gymnastics travels to Ohio for Regionals

Minutewomen hope for spot at Nationals

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's gymnastics team has had its best season so far. After a phenomenal home stretch, in which they won every meet, the Minutewomen continued on their warpath by defending their title as Atlantic 10 Champions.

The No. 22 Minutewomen now head to Columbus, Ohio, on Saturday for their sixth consecutive NCAA Northeast Regionals. Going in as the No. 2 seed (Ohio State is ranked No. 1) for the first time in school history with a 194.255 average score, the Minutewomen are looking to win this competition and qualify for the NCAA National Championships, April 17–19 in Gainesville, Fla.

The Minutewomen finished third out of seven teams at last year's Regionals with a score of 191.900.

The winners of the five Regional competitions will automatically secure a spot at Nationals, and seven other spots will be awarded to the teams with the highest overall scores. UMass coach Dave Kuzara predicts that at least two, and maybe three teams from the Northeast region will travel to Florida.

"I think there are five teams that can win," Kuzara said. "I think there is a chance that three teams can go on to Nationals, that's how good this region is this year, and we just want to give ourselves the best opportunity to get to the next level.

"Last year, we were like, 'We've got to fight and go out there and have fun, but this is probably the last meet of the season,'" said sophomore Michelle LoPresti. "But this year, everybody is not looking for this to be the last meet of the season.

"[Our] confidence level is way up this year," she said.

Since the A–10 championships, the Minutewomen have had two weeks to train and prepare for this meet. Kuzara said that the team is mentally prepared for this competition, and feels confident that they will continue to perform their best.

"The last couple of years I have always felt really on edge about it, but this year I just feel like, we are going to do what we are going to do," Kuzara said. "I feel pretty good about the whole meet and training has gone well."

The Minutewomen's major competition at Regionals looks to be Ohio State. Though UMass has beaten the Buckeyes the last two years, Ohio State has the home advantage. But according to Kuzara, the Minutewomen are focusing mostly on their own performances.

"We've got to really focus on ourselves, and we know it's going to be a big home field advantage for them," Kuzara said. "But we're just going to try and take it one routine at a time and really try and make things happen for us. And all we can do is control how we're going to compete."

The Minutewomen will, however, be without the help of LoPresti, who competes mostly on the floor exercise and uneven bars. Last week during practice, LoPresti had a fall on the balance beam and dislocated her left elbow.

According to LoPresti, it will be four to six months before she can return to gymnastics. But she said she is confident she will return stronger.

Kuzara said he is positive the team will be able to step up in Regionals and not let LoPresti's injury hinder it too much.

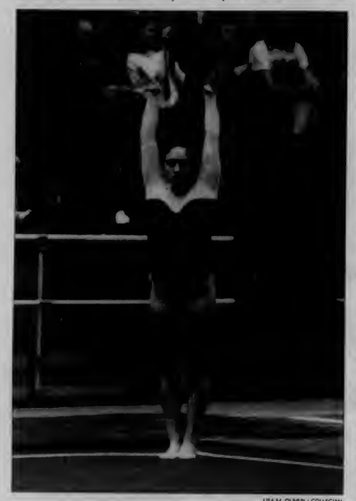
"Well, her injury has affected us a little bit, but that's part of any sport, and I think that Michelle has handled it well, and the team has handled it well, in terms of having to pick up," Kuzara said. "Obviously it sets you back a little bit, but we have never used injuries as an excuse.

"Every single person is needed to have a quality team, but I think we can pick up. It's something that we are all trying to learn from, but it was just an accident," Kuzara said.

One of the Minutewomen's strongest features is their depth. According to Kuzara, he is looking to sophomores Sara Kelly or Betsy Colucci to compete in place of LoPresti on bars. For floor, he plans to warm up three people, but make the final decision right before competition.

"Our team is so strong and deep, it's not really going to affect anybody," LoPresti said. "There is someone who can step up and take my place."

The Minutewomen's first rotations will be bars and beam, two events that are not their strongest. But according to both Kuzara and LoPresti, the Minutewomen strive on being behind, being able to prove themselves.



"Going in, we know we are not going to be in the lead of this meet in the first two rotations, because bars and beam are difficult to start on, but we know that we are a very good come–from–behind team," Kuzara said.

"We have never lost focus, we've always been able to keep fighting and scratching. So if we can stay focused through bars and beam, and if Ohio State has a break or two, I feel like we will just really be able to step on the gas and put everybody away," Kuzara said.

LoPresti has her own thoughts.

"My team, I don't know why, we just strive on being the underdogs. Every time this season, we seemed to let it go the first event and then we were behind by a point or two, but we've pulled it off a lot of times this season. I think that made our season a lot more exciting.

"I think this meet is going to be the most exciting in the longest time, because we have such a shot," she said. "We really do. We really have a good chance of going to Nationals."

USA M. OLIVER / COLLEGIAN

The Minutewomen will miss Michelle LoPresti's solid floor exercise and uneven bars performances this weekend.

USA M. OLIVER / COLLEGIAN

Lianne Laing will try to help her team finish on top at this Saturday's Regional competition.

With experience, Bennett now UM's ace

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior pitcher Jason Bennett has the chance to become UMass' best pitcher ever this season.

By Jonathon M. Place
Collegian Staff

No baseball team can win with only one pitcher. It usually taken a college team around seven pitchers, starters and relievers combined, to make a team successful. But every now and then, a team gets a shooter that a coach and a team can look to and have confidence in.

He sits quietly awaiting his questions. He answers them just as quietly. One might think after meeting him that his demeanor on the mound would be just as tame. They would be sorely mistaken.

In a likely prediction, senior tri–captain Jason Bennett will become the winningest pitcher ever to step foot on a UMass mound. Three former UMass pitchers have posted 20 career wins. Bennett currently stands at 19–4, 3–1 this season.

His winning percentage is second overall in Minuteman history, but ranks first for pitchers with more than 15 games, at .826. He also has three Atlantic 10 Championships under his cap.

Turn to BENNETT, page 9

Weeks decides to return to UM for another year

By Chris Stamm
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's basketball team re–gained a major asset in its frontcourt yesterday when senior forward Tyrone Weeks announced that he will return to UMass for his fifth year of eligibility.

Tyrone Weeks

Weeks came to UMass four years ago as a Proposition 48 partial qualifier. Due to sub–par high school exam scores, Weeks was ineligible to compete for the Minutemen his first year and was granted only three years of eligibility.

However, the 6–foot–7 Philadelphia native was allowed to return for a fifth year (fourth year of athletic eligibility) because of the NCAA's recent Proposition 68 ruling announced at the NCAA Convention in January.

The amendment allows athletes like Weeks, who were partial academic qualifiers forced to sit out their freshman year, a fourth year of eligibility. The rule states that if the student–athlete completes his undergraduate degree in four years, he can return and work towards a second undergraduate degree or a masters while competing as a fifth–year senior.

"I think this is a good opportunity for me," Weeks said in a press conference at the William D. Mullins Center yesterday. "With the second degree I can get into teaching after my basketball career is over. I would hope to get invited to some NBA camps next year or maybe play overseas, but if not, I'll be ready to start my career in education."

As an education major, Weeks will be working towards a second undergraduate degree in Afro–American Studies next year.

The third team All–Atlantic 10 selection struggled with the decision to stay or go since the Prop 68 ruling was announced mid–season. In fact, after the Minutemen lost to Louisville in the first round of the NCAA Tournament, Weeks said that he would announce his decision as soon as possible. However, it was not until last week that he made up his mind.

Turn to WEEKS, page 9

Simon was unforgettable in Arizona's championship

There was something unforgettable about Miles Simon's smile Monday night. As the junior clutched the ball he had touched so many times with success that night, it was hard to imagine there could be a more deserving person named National Champion.

If you look at the whole season, the whole year, an argument could be made for others deserving of a championship ring: the seniors who spurned the NBA draft for another year of textbooks and term papers; the record– breaking, I –can –do –anything –with –five –people –and –a –ball coach; the season–long No. 1 choice.

But look at Simon, the kid who was forced to sit and watch the first part of his team's season. As a captain and team–leader, Simon knew it was important to be at all of his team's games, so while he was serving a suspension for academic problems he went to the Wildcat games as a fan — oftentimes racking up travel bills he alone was responsible for.

He did that because he loved his team, because he felt a sense of obligation that went beyond just getting up to see the team bus off.

While early on Simon looked like he had the stuff champions are made of, Arizona didn't appear to be championship material in the tournament's early–going.

The Wildcats took it to the wire

Turn to COLLEGE HOOP, page 9

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CVI Issue 112 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, April 4, 1997

Dude looks like an old lady

Boston's classic rock Bad Boys, Aerosmith are back (again) with Nine Lives. Check out what we have to say about it (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Looking for Southern hospitality

Mike DelPercio and the UMass men's lacrosse team travel to Durham, N.C. this weekend to take on the No. 3 Duke Blue Devils (see Sports, page 10).

NATION

Six chained & shackled prisoners die in fire

DICKSON, Tenn. (AP) — A van transporting prisoners burst into flame on a highway today, killing six of them as the driver tried vainly to save the chained and shackled men, authorities said. The driver was burned on his arms and was taken to a Nashville hospital for treatment.

Cindy Armour of the Tennessee Department of Safety said one inmate survived. His condition was not immediately known. A guard assisting the driver was unhurt.

Safety Department spokesman Anthony Kimbrough said the fire apparently was started by a broken drive shaft that pierced the vehicle's fuel tank. Emergency officials said the problem may have been a broken axle rather than the drive shaft.

No other vehicles were involved, Ms. Armour said. The charred gray van came to rest on the median of Interstate 40, about 45 miles west of Nashville. Its windows were blown out and glass was scattered on the highway.

"The prisoners were consumed in the fire," said Lt. Mike Dover of the Tennessee Highway Patrol. He said the prisoners were chained and shackled to each other but not to the vehicle.

WORLD

Serb woman recalls repeated rapes

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — She was arrested on a trumped–up charge and taken to a Bosnian government–run camp. On the first night, she was raped. Then she was raped again, and again. Giving this testimony yesterday before the Yugoslav war crimes tribunal, the Serb woman recalled screaming: "God, in case you exist, why did you not protect me from this?"

Listening Milojka Antic was the man she says threatened to kill her and raped her repeatedly during the 2 1/2 months she spent in Celebici camp in mid–1992.

Slouching in his chair in the defendant's dock, Hazim Delic appeared unmoved by Antic's testimony. He smiled once as she talked and occasionally checked his watch.

Delic is on trial with two other Muslims and a Croat charged in alleged murders, rapes and torture at Celebici, a former Yugoslav Army compound in the Konjic region of central Bosnia.

According to the indictment, Zejnil Delalic was a military commander with overall responsibility for the region and camp; Zdravko Mucic, a Croat, was the camp commander; Delic his deputy; and Esad Landzo a camp guard.

All have pleaded innocent to the charges against them and all face maximum life terms if convicted.

So far, most of the 75 suspects indicted by the tribunal are Serbs, who are blamed for most of the atrocities in the Bosnian war. The tribunal points to the Celebici camp case as proof it is judging all participants in the war equally.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 29	HIGH: 62 LOW: 32	HIGH: 65 LOW: 45

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 8
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Football upgrade & retirement options mulled over by Senate

By Tomar Carroll
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Director of Athletics Robert Marcum addressed the Faculty Senate yesterday on a variety of topics, including moving the UMass football team from Division 1–AA to Division 1–A.

Marcum began by discussing the successes of the UMass athletics department, stating that UMass leads all Atlantic 10 (A–10) schools in academic achievement of student athletes with 40 percent of UMass student athletes receiving a 3.0 or higher grade point average (GPA).

"We have wanted to be the best overall athletic program in the A–10 and at the same time be the best academically," Marcum said. "We have achieved both."

Marcum also said that UMass is one of only 16 institutions of higher education in the country in compliance with Title IX, a federal law which states that overall, women's athletic programs must receive the same funding as men's athletic programs.

He credited the success of athletics department to the drive of the student athletes and coaches, and the financial support of the administration.

"The commitment really starts at the very, very top," Marcum said. "Without this commitment, we could not move forward and be successful."

Marcum then went on to comment on moving the UMass football program to the more competitive Division 1–A, saying that it was a complicated issue that the University must thoroughly examine.

"It is something that this institution should consider," Marcum said. "We need to look at the situation very carefully."

According to Marcum, upgrading the football program to Division 1–A would cost the University an addition 1.5 million dollars, but could bring in lucrative television contracts.

"I hope we do not pass up opportunities," Marcum said. (For more on this issue, see page 10).

In other faculty renate business, Chancellor David K. Scott reported on the early retirement program which 85 faculty members and 450 staff employees have opted to take.

Scott said that the University's budget for replacing these employees next year will include only 50 percent of the total salaries of the faculty who are leaving and 35 percent of total salaries of the staff leaving. This means that the University will be decreasing its numbers of both faculty and staff.

In an interview after the meeting, Scott said that the effects of the downsizing will not be felt on campus until 1998.

"It will not really be visible until 1998," Scott said.

Scott also said that administrative redesign will help to minimize the impact of the losses on the campus.

"We have to re–balance the equilibrium of the University," Scott said. "We have to make it work."

Professor Ann Ferguson, Director of the Women's Studies, led the Faculty Senate in ratifying a motion that urged the Chancellor to address matters of access to the University for low–income students.

Ferguson said that because of the welfare reform acts passed by the federal government in the past two years, 867 current UMass students may be unable to continue their education at UMass unless the University makes a commitment to aid them.

"We feel that it is very timely to go on record supporting access for low–income students," Ferguson said. "We think that it is important to address this in a much more concentrated way, because the situation is getting worse... We need to work on this now."

The motion specifically asked the Chancellor to address issues including affordable, alternative housing and meal plans, flexible and extended hour child care, scheduling policies to allow students who work or have dependents to attend classes and affordable tuition.

"Qualified student should be able to attend institutions of public education regardless of their means," Ferguson said.

The Faculty Senate also voted to

CHRISTOPHER A. CESNER / COLLEGIAN

A natural tree house

If you were an owl you could live in a hole in a tree similar to this one — but you're not.

Van Meter incident under investigation

At approximately 2:30 a.m. yesterday morning University of Massachusetts Police and medical personnel responded to a medical emergency at Van Meter Residence Hall in Central Residence Area.

"Upon responding to the call we found a young man laying on the ground and immediately called for an ambulance. He was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital [in Northampton], said Chief of Police Jack Luippold.

"As of this afternoon he was under going tests for head injuries and was reported to be in stable condition," added Luippold yesterday.

Officials do not know the cause of the accident which is under investigation.

The individual, whose name has not yet been released, is a UMass student and lives off–campus.

Police have been unable to speak with the student or witnesses. They are asking anyone who has information about the incident to please call 545–2121. All information will be held confidential.

— Leigh Faulkner

Election results corrected; new SGA officers sworn

The Commuter Area Government election results, ratified at Wednesday's Student Government Association (SGA) meeting, have been changed.

The students elected were not commuters and therefore cannot take office, according to Election Commissioner Jodi Bailey.

"The people who were elected weren't commuters and therefore weren't eligible. These people [the new officers] are actually commuters and should have been the ones voted in," Bailey said.

The new commuter area officers for the academic year 1997–1998 are: Angela Cervini, Governor; Jolynn Wells, Lieutenant Governor; Jeremy Cottrill, Secretary; and Chris Millan, Treasurer.

— Victoria Groves

AC conference on capital punishment

By Christina Poletto
Collegian Staff

On Saturday and Sunday, April 5–6, Amherst College will be hosting a conference on the topic "Capital Punishment in Law and Culture" in the Lewis Sebring Commons of Valentine Hall.

The conference, which is sponsored by the Charles Hamilton Houston Forum on Law and Social Justice and the Department of Law, Jurisprudence and Social Thought at Amherst College, has invited a congregation of distinguished scholars from around the country for the two day discussion.

Ironically, this particular weekend marks the 25th anniversary of Furman v. Georgia, a landmark case in the jurisprudence of capital punishment.

"Generally, in the past, scholarship on capital punishment has been narrowly focused on whether capital punishment is moral or constitutional," said Amherst College Professor Austin Sarat.

"We're going to focus on what capital punishment tells us about the legal system that regulates us," Sarat said.

Included within the discussion will be an examination of the historical and political uses of capital punishment in the United States and abroad, and an exploration of how the death penalty is portrayed in law, literature and throughout American culture.

The program is divided into a two part series, the first to begin at 9:15 a.m., following the 8:30 a.m. registration. Professor Sarat is scheduled to introduce the event along with William Cromwell, Professor of Jurisprudence and Political Science at Amherst College.

"Capital Punishment in the Constitution of Politics and Society," will be discussed by professors from around the country, including lecturers from Westfield State College, Amherst College, Rice University, Harvard University and University of Pennsylvania.

The second component of the days agenda will begin at 2 p.m. and continue until 4:30 p.m. The topic in discussion will be "The Culture of Capital Cases."

Professors from Mount Holyoke College, and Miami, New York, and California–Berkeley Universities will be lecturing.

On Sunday, April 6 from 9 until 11:30 a.m., "From Ethics to Policy in the Debate about Capital Punishment," will be deliberated by professors from Amherst College, Tufts, John Hopkins, and California–Berkeley.

"We're lucky to have them present," commented Sarat on the impressive list of professors scheduled to attend Amherst. "They represent a wealth of experience and understanding in capital punishment."

A $20 registration fee is mandatory for participation in the conference. Admission for Amherst College community members are free.

For further information about this two day event, contact Amherst College Professor Austin Sarat at 542–2308 or Jean Zilewicz at 542–2380.

Stock market turmoil has 'bear' resting on investors' lips & minds

By Farrell Kramer
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Hugh Johnson, a market pro since Lyndon Johnson was president, decided Wednesday to pull some of the $260 million his firm manages for investors out of the stock market.

That decision was not taken lightly. But the market has been so weak recently that even the most seasoned Wall Street investors are beginning to whisper the unthinkable.

"It's a correction," Johnson says. "Now the question is, is it going to deteriorate into a bear market?"

Important government figures on employment in March, due out today, are more critical now than ever. A stronger–than–expected job picture might prompt the Federal Reserve to raise interest rates again, dampening the economy.

If that's so, the 6 1/2–year bull market may be in jeopardy. The trouble, of course, is that no one really knows.

Like many others, Johnson, First Albany Corp.'s chief investment officer, doesn't think a bear has yet come knocking. But bear markets are like quicksand, often hard to recognize until it's too late.

Stocks tend to ebb and flow, but since the fall of 1990 a rising Dow Jones industrial average has been pretty much a constant. Despite two presidential elections, an uncertain economy, military operations from Haiti to Bosnia and political scandal, investors have been consistently rewarded.

The current rise took the Dow from about 2,360 to a high of 7,085.16 on March 11. It has since lost 8.6 percent — almost completely erasing its gains for the year. Yesterday, the index closed at 6,477.35, down 39.66 points.

Last March was the last time the market had a case of the jitters, shortly after a February 1996 jobs report was released that showed real strength. The Dow tumbled 171 points.

The problem then was a concern that the Feds would stop cutting interest rates to stimulate the economy.

The concern now is that it will raise them again, after doing so last week for the first time in more than two years.

Genetic cloning explained in lecture

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

In a frank and informal "inter–action," University of Massachusetts professor of Biology of Cancer and AIDS and recipient of the Teacher of the Year Award, Albey Reiner, spoke yesterday in the Campus Center.

The inter–action titled, "Cloning: Simple Biology, Profound Consequences," dealt with the basic biological methods used to clone animals thus far and discussed some of the ramifications if cloning were to extend to human beings.

The inter–action is a student initiated concept, organizing resources and forums for interdisciplinary communication and coordination.

Reiner began by differentiating between two types of cloning — the cloning of genes and cloning in order to make an identical copy of a living organism. The cloning of genes, which has been done to replicate the human insulin gene, is the isolation of genes, cloning them and then making copies and expressing them in cells, according to Reiner.

The "other" type of cloning in which living organisms are copied involves using egg cells and embryo cells. Reiner began with the example of a tadpole that was created about 22 years ago by fusing an egg cell and an embryo cell. Genetic material was removed from an egg cell and an embryo cell removed from an embryo, with the nucleus still in tact. These two cells were then fused together, which created a tadpole, according to Reiner.

"It acts as if it's a fertilized egg and turns into a tadpole. They cloned an embryo cell and created a tadpole, but it didn't turn into a frog." When questioned if this tadpole was really a clone, Reiner responded "if it turned into a frog, we might all agree it was cloning."

Turn to REINER, page 2

CHRIS CESNER / COLLEGIAN

UMass professor Albey Reiner spoke about cloning in the Campus

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor:
Mike Burke

Copy Editor:
Lisa Chiu

Photo Technician:
Chris Cesnek

Production Supervisor:
Mark McGrath

Production Staff:
Lizzie Brown
Sandi Krauss

■ Reiner

continued from page 1

Bringing the discussion up to date, Reiner then began to talk about last year's successful cloning of a lamb. The difference he cited between cloning a lamb and a frog was "you actually do get an animal from the embryo. You get a lamb," said Reiner.

"One year ago that wasn't news, it wasn't exciting," said Reiner of the lamb cloning. This year they did it with monkeys, that's a little more personal."

Reiner then pointed out "if you clone an adult cell then you don't need men," which led to a short discussion of a female utopia, in which it would be possible for women to clone women without the aid of men by using adult cells.

Reiner concluded his interaction by citing several positive reasons generally given to clone, including saving endangered species, allowing infertile couples to reproduce and removing cells and cloning them in a laboratory in order to remove defects.

Interested in writing for the News Desk? Come on down to the Collegian Office and speak with Laura Stock, news editor.

Zionists for Action sends students to conference

By Sarah J. Kimmel
Collegian Staff

Twenty five University of Massachusetts students will depart this Saturday evening for the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC) Annual Policy conference in Washington D.C.

The AIPAC conference is a three day seminar of high level briefings from top Israeli and American politicians about the Middle East. Among these featured speakers are Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, Vice President Al Gore, United Nations Ambassador Bill Richardson, Ambassador Dennis Ross, Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich, Minority Leader Richard Gephardt, and Senators John Kerry and Ted Stevens.

These speakers will be addressing such issues as the Middle East peace process, U. S.–Israel relations, and pro– Israel political activism on campus and in the community. One of the lectures, by Vice President Gore and Melvin Dow, president of AIPAC, is titled, "In search of the new Middle East." There are also several forums that students may attend that focus on topics such as, "Making Waves: How technology is Changing American and Pro–Israel Politics," and "What's in a Name: Are We Heading Towards a Palestinian State?"

The Policy Conference will culminate with the largest pro– Israel lobbying effort of 1997, where over 2,000 activists will go to Capitol Hill to discuss with Congress the importance of a strong U.S.–Israel relationship. The activists are students from 270 colleges from all over the United States.

Special events, such as a 3–D virtual reality tour through the Middle East, are also offered. Students will be able to tour the area on very large maps, touch life size models of weapon systems developed by the U.S. and Israel as well as feel the threat that unconventional weapons pose to Israeli citizens.

The UMass delegation to the AIPAC Conference is sponsored by the Zionists for Action, the pro–Israel organization at UMass in conjunction with UMass Hillel.

Jay Bragg, the University of Massachusetts campus liaison to AIPAC, says that the Policy Conference is important so that students may "Better understand the importance of a strong U.S.–Israel relationship." Bragg also said that "It is important for University students to be provided with information that will foster leadership."

Former Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres said, "AIPAC is the strongest bridge between the American people and the state of Israel."

Former Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said, "AIPAC has been and will remain the spearhead of the special relations between Washington and Jerusalem."

Arms threatening U.S embassy removed from Albanian homes

By George Jahn
Associated Press

TIRANA, Albania — Police seized dozens of submachine guns and boxes of ammunition from homes around the U.S. Embassy yesterday, to put an end to gunfire that hit several cars in the diplomatic compound overnight.

A U.S. diplomat said Marines traced the origin of some of the gunfire and worked with Albanian police to stage the raids. None of the Marines returned fire, but were prepared to respond if necessary, the diplomat said on condition of anonymity.

In the rest of the country, the lawlessness that began in February — when shady investment schemes collapsed and took most Albanians' life savings with them — continued to grow.

A woman and her 15-year-old son were killed in Fier, 30 miles south of Tirana, after they refused to pay protection money. In Gjirokastra, near the Greek border, armed rebels stormed the Greek consulate seeking entry visas.

And even in Tirana, the most secure city in Albania, a man with a submachine gun opened fire yesterday on another man in the downtown area. He missed, and fled when police appeared.

European countries have been discussing how to help end the lawlessness.

But the top international envoy for Albania, former Austrian Chancellor

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
April 2
There was a two vehicle accident on University Drive.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
April 2
A vehicle in parking lot 13 on Authority Way was broken into and the stereo was stolen.

Health/Safety Hazard
April 3
Large potholes were reported in parking lot 21 on University Drive.

Larceny
April 2
An individual from Leach Residence Hall reported that tires were stolen form his bicycle.

An individual reported a jacket stolen form the Fine Arts Center.

An individual from Gorman Residence Hall reported two individuals entered his room and took personal property. The case is under investigation.

University Productions and Concerts (UPC) reported four portable radios and a charger stolen from the office located in the Campus Center.

Traffic Stop
April 2
Joshua I. Walker, 21, 102 Eastman Ln., Amherst, was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for operating an unregistered motor vehicle with a suspended license.

Anthony Kansco Guglluzza, 24, of 3642 Degbigny St., Metairie, LA, was arrested on University Drive with a warrant.

April 3
Trevor G. Spiers, 25, of 1040 North Pleasant St., Amherst, was arrested on Montague Road for operating a vehicle under the influence of alcohol, driving out of marked lanes and defective rear lights.

Vandalism
April 3
An ID card reader at Mackimmie Residence Hall was damaged.

CHRISTOPHER A CESNEK \ COLLEGIAN

Door puzzle

This close up of a pair of doors belongs to a building on campus. Can you guess which building it belongs to?

Tel Aviv University
Where your classroom is a country

Experience today's Israel in the country's most dynamic city.
Rich in history.
Full of life.

- Study for a year, semester, or summer in the Overseas Student Program
- Courses in English for transfer credit
- Intensive Hebrew language instruction
- MA program in Middle Eastern History
- Environmental Studies at the Arava Institute

Financial aid available for some programs.

For more information, contact:
Tel Aviv University
Overseas Student Program
Office of Academic Affairs
360 Lexington Avenue
New York, NY 10017
800-665-9818
212-557-5820
TAU OAA@aol.com

edge
EDGE SALUTES MEN'S INTRAMURAL EXCELLENCE

Intramural Champions

Basketball

The Tofu Twinkies: William Condon, Darren Glidden, Rick Rodrick, Matthew Quesenberry, Aiden Murphy, Dan McNamara, Kevin Sweeney, Jason Brightman, James Titus
Floor Play III: Ainslee Press, Kyle Rothenberger, Becca Myers, Amy Robertson, Amy Ott, Laura Phelan, Kate Putnam, Katherine McClellan, Erica Johnston
Hoop Screams: Chris Chamides, Kathryn Gleason, Becca Myers, Amy Robertson, Shelly Fowler, Michael Reiss, Jim Strub, Katherine McClellan
Sugar Free: Christopher Antonetti, Daniel Gladstone, Ted Curvy, Brett Davis, Jeff Gearing, Jim Williams, Marc Ross, Lyle Henry

Wallyball

Oysters with No Pearls: Adam McNamara, Stacy Hare, Alex Luhowy, Eric Savage

Spring Ice Hockey

Night & Day: Joseph Albano, Daniel Wassung, Chris Smith, Ryan LaVangie, Joseph Flaherty, Mike Montessi, Matt Trinceri, Bart Moylan, John Curry, Michael Curry, Jonas Killeen, Philip Dorman

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Mark McGrath • Photos by Ken W.P. Scott

In light of its poor elections turnout last week, how can SGA get more students interested in what they do ?

"I think they should put their pictures on their flyers. The way it is [now], they're just names. Maybe having public debates outside during the day when students can see will help."

Juliet Gikonyo
junior, biochemistry
Nairobi, Kenya

"Perhaps they should speak to some of the larger lecture halls, announcing when the elections are, who's running and what they're all about."

Tanaka Barosy
junior, biology
Brooklyn, N.Y.

"I don't think they're known. They should advertise what they're about, going outside and giving speeches would help."

Amanda Koelker
senior, dance
Berwick, Me.

"They have got to get out there more. I have no idea who anybody is, so I'd like to see them speaking."

Sandi Okun
junior, wildlife and fisheries conservation
New City, N.Y.

"They need to be more involved with student activities. The spring concert... what's with the spring concert? Isn't that student money? Our money should be put toward something we can all appreciate."

Mike Billand
freshman, political science
Remsen, N.Y.

"I think that they should let students know what power they have, how much money. They should let their beliefs be known. I think that if you let the student body know what you can do for them, you'll get them more involved."

Chris DeMarco
junior, fisheries and wildlife conservation
Shelton, Conn.

"I think that the major problem with SGA is that they've set themselves apart from the campus by becoming a monster RSO. SGA is made of people who are already involved and their friends. It's like an old boy's network. We should make them accountable and make them stand in front of students. Currently, they spew a lot of rhetoric, but everyone's out for him or herself. They're not doing enough for students."

Tracy Johnson
senior, nursing Hubbardston

Aren Leekong
junior, economics/communications
Brooklyn, N.Y.

UM hosts effects of violence symposium

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts will be hosting a day– long symposium addressing violence and its effects on families on April 23 in the Campus Center.

The event, which is being sponsored by the UMass Center for the Family and UMass Extension's 4–H Youth and Family Development Program, will bring together experts from numerous fields to discuss the problems with societal violence.

"This symposium underscores our goals for the Center for the Family," said Maureen Perry Jenkins, the center's director said in a press release. "By bringing together researchers, outreach professionals and policy makers, we hope to go beyond discussions of violence and families and move toward comprehensive solutions."

James Garbarino, a professor of human development and family studies at Cornell University and internationally renowned for his work with violence, children and families will be the keynote speaker, presenting his talk, "Children and Families in a Socially Toxic Environment."

In addition, the seminar will host UMass communications professor Sut Jhally, and his presentation, "Scared to Death: Media and the Representation of Violence."

According to Jhally, his presentation will be about understanding media violence.

"If you ask a question about violence in the media," Jhally said, "You have to ask the right question. The wrong question is 'does watching it make you violent?' The right question is, 'Does watching media violence make you more scared of the world?'"

Four separate panel discussions will also be held within the symposium, each dealing with a different shade of violence. Panel members include public officials, professors and representatives from community interest groups.

"Violence in Neighborhoods and Communities," will bring together Kathleen Alexander, community education and staff development training at the Northampton District Attorney's Office; Rebekah Crampton, an associate justice in the Springfield Juvenile Court and Chris Womak of the Boston mayor's office.

"Violence Against Children" includes Garbarino; Joyce Strom, the executive director of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention and Debra Sicilia of the Department of Social Services in Springfield.

The panel discussion on "Partner Violence" includes Mary Christine King of the UMass School of Nursing; Laurie Salame from The Americorps Domestic Violence Project; Patricia Mota–Guedes of the Everywoman's Center and Steven Botkin, from the Men's Resource Center in Amherst.

All events during the symposium will take place in the Campus Center and are scheduled from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Registration is necessary. For additional information or to register by today's deadline, contact Brian Runck at 5–5020.

UM ranks 16th in world competition

By Mark McGrath
Collegian Staff

A team of three University of Massachusetts students placed well in an international undergraduate programming competition in San Jose, Calif. early last month.

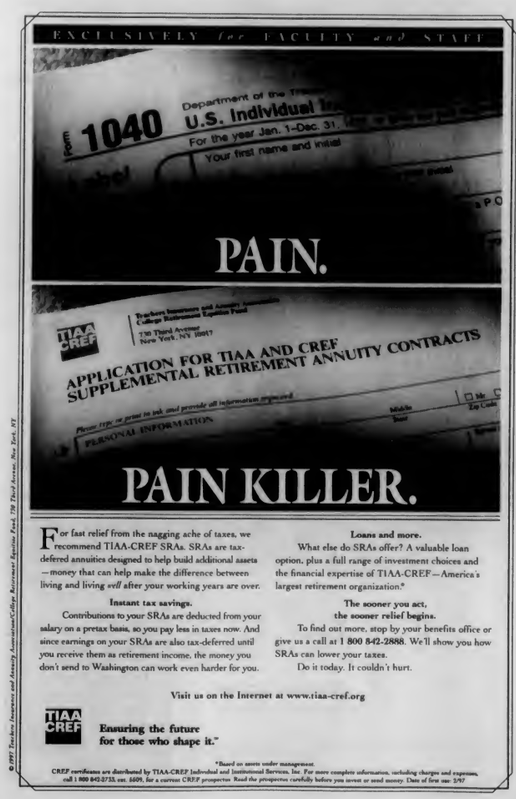
The team, which consisted of undergraduates Brian Hanechak, Ben Horowitz and John Sullivan, placed 16th overall in the finals of a contest which included over 1000 teams worldwide.

The contest, sponsored by the Association for Computing Machinery, the leading computer science technical society, pitted teams of three against each other in a battle of wits and resourcefulness in solving computer problems.

The team, organized through the Computer Science Department, began its route to the finals last fall, when interested UMass students faced off against each other within the department to determine the makeup of the team.

The students who made the cut were Horowitz, working on a second bachelor's degree to go with his Philosophy from Wesleyan; Hanechack, a computer science and mathematics major and John Sullivan, an international student from the University of Cork in Ireland.

"The students who competed are among the brighest in the department," said Richard Moll a professor and the coach of the team.



Next, they went to the Regionals, which were hosted by Westfield State College, and again finished second, this time tied with Harvard for the distinction of following M.I.T. With that performance, they earned a berth in the California Finals.

"The invitation to the international finals and our fine showing, both regionally and in the international finals is a tribute to these students and the strength of our undergraduate program," Moll said.

The team will start up again next fall. Interested students can contact Professor Moll in September through the Computer Science Department.

Collegian News...
We're always looking for tips, so if you know of a breaking story, call the Collegian News Desk at 5-1762.

EXCLUSIVELY for FACULTY and STAFF

For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets — money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.

Instant tax savings.
Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pretax basis, so you pay less in taxes now. And since earnings on your SRAs are also tax-deferred until you receive them as retirement income, the money you don't send to Washington can work even harder for you.

Loans and more.
What else do SRAs offer? A valuable loan option, plus a full range of investment choices and the financial expertise of TIAA-CREF — America's largest retirement organization.*

The sooner you act, the sooner relief begins.
To find out more, stop by your benefits office or give us a call at 1 800 842-2888. We'll show you how SRAs can lower your taxes.
Do it today. It couldn't hurt.

Visit us on the Internet at www.tiaa-cref.org

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.

*Based on assets under management.

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2733, ext. 5509, for a current CREF prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money. Date of first use: 2/97

© 1997 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Fund, 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY

SPRING SALE
Now until April 15th
August the First

- 20% off most loose Beads, all Bags, Purses, Pillows & Tapestries.
- 10% off all paper products including Journals, Albums, Cards, Notecards, Stationary.
- Free pewter charm with $5 purchase & This Ad

197 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 256-0276

TOC Bar & Grill
Molson Golden & Ice Promo Night
Tonight @ 9:00 PM

Winning is easy!!! Get a scratch card and WIN.
Prizes will be hockey sticks, pucks, T-shirts and Hats.
One lucky customer will be entered into the "Shot for the Gold Contest"
11th Floor Campus Center Hours: Mon. - Fri 4:00 - 12:30
Sat 5:00 - Close

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prester Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The dawning of the New Age

As the sun rose in the great eastern city of Asmara, capital of the ancient Aksumite Empire, and biblical home of the legendary Queen of Sheba, a large, powerful bird departed the earth to take flight towards its home in the west. It had flown across the Great Ocean to see the land called Africa, where man was conceived. Over the course of its journey, the bird would travel for more than 19,000 miles, visiting the Island of Goree, the Cape of Good Hope, the great Victoria Falls and the womb of humanity — the Olduvai Gorge. The bird would arrive home as the sun rose in the great western kingdom of America, its light shining upon a gleaming obelisk in her municipal city. Emerging from within the body of the great bird, the new Queen and her daughter were greeted by their King, as they all went to worship together on the holy day called Easter.

Around the world, millions of devotees gathered to mark the resurrection of their earthly spirit of salvation. Known to his followers as Christ, he would be remembered on this day of hope and renewal as the Great Redeemer, that one who would one day return to institute a new era of peace and enlightenment for the whole world. Many believe that the second coming of Christ is imminent, and that he will return at some point during the 1,000 day period which will begin tomorrow and end on Jan. 1, 2000.

"There is a great need for clarification on this question, and it may have already been provided by the Heaven's Gate cult."

Martin F. Jones

At numerous other Easter Sunday services, however, there was a sobering message about the need to keep one's faith during a period of tremendous fragility across the globe. In the holy city of Jerusalem, and nearby settlements across the West Bank, tensions continued to mount over the recently initiated construction of a Jewish housing complex in the eastern sector of the city. Concurrently, a resolution was passed by the Arab League calling for a freezing of all normalization of diplomatic ties with Israel. And finally, entroute to Tokyo, House Speaker Newt Gingrich intensely warned of U.S. retaliation against any military action against Taiwan by the Chinese, with whom he had just completed a diplomatic visit.

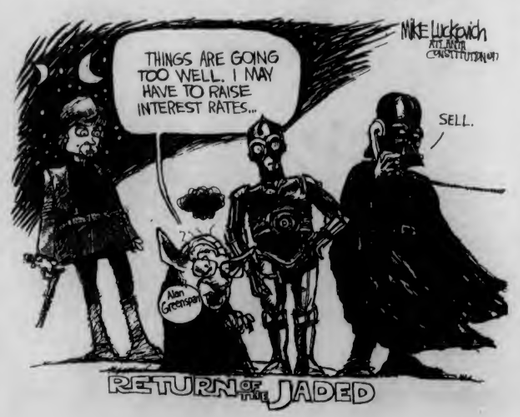
But by far, the most disturbing reflection which characterized the Easter sermons was the tragic suicides of 39 members of a UFO cult called Heaven's Gate. Over a period of three days, the cult members "exited their bodies" to ascend to "the Level Above Human" where they believed a spaceship trailing the Hale–Bopp comet awaited their arrival. They saw the arrival of the Hale–Bopp comet as a cosmic signal that it was time to initiate their great departure, and that the end times were near. A press release explaining their actions stated that they intended to "offer a doorway to the Kingdom of God at the end of this civilization, the end of this age, the end of this millennium."

Clearly, the mass suicide was a terrible tragedy, one which resulted from a deadly combination of a turbulent, decadent world, alienated groups of people disillusioned with life, and a charismatic, yet terminally ill cult leader who convinced his followers that through the mass suicide they would all enter the Kingdom of Heaven. As the world watched the 69th Oscar Awards on the night of March 24, the Heaven's Gate cult quietly and meticulously organized and initiated their divinely inspired departure from this life.

Bizarre as it seems, the Heaven's Gate cult suicide did serve as a wake–up call for humanity. Many of the ideas promoted by the cult were fed and nurtured by not only years of UFO conspiracies and movies such as Independence Day, but also by much of the traditional Judeo–Christian doctrines which preach of salvation in the afterlife, and that our time on earth is served merely to establish our place in a spiritual realm such as heaven. While the Heaven's Gate cult believed that suicide would deliver them to heaven via a spaceship, many of us have been taught since childhood the same basic doctrine: that the only sure way to peace and happiness is through death followed by deliverance into the place known widely known as heaven. Given the state of the world today, the mass suicide of the Heaven's Gate cult members should surprise no one.

And so we may yet learn an important lesson here, one that should pave the way towards a new consciousness around the world. The lesson simply put, is that life is a precious miracle, and that our world, even in its current state, is a miraculous place to be. Heaven, that conceptual paradise towards which many people believe they will transcend, is right here on earth. Entry to the Kingdom of God bears no prerequisite admission, for we already exist within it. As this millennium draws to a close, it is time for the people of earth to collectively realize this truth. Out of this earth we came, and back to it shall we return. The solution therefore to the world's problems is not a transcendental escape on an imagined spaceship, but rather to see the reality of this life and of this earth in all of their true glory, and to treat them both accordingly.

The world we live in today, consequently, is the result of the decisions which humanity has made in the past, and the future will be defined by those it is making in the present. Now, the time has come to recognize that the future is ultimately what we make it. Hopefully, the sun will one day rise again with the dawning of a "New Age" in which the human evolutionary level towards which the Heaven's Gate cult aspired to, is instead, reached through our collective activities right here on this earth. No longer must we continue to needlessly inflict upon ourselves the scourges of war, hatred and poverty. Indeed, while it seems that the mass suicide was a cop–out to taking responsibility for life's shortcomings, those of us who foolishly continue to contribute to the suffering of humanity are no better. Because they are too selfish, too arrogant and too stubborn to change, a small minority of people with more than their share of resources and power are making life a living hell for everyone else. The naive masses in turn accept this reality, for so many of them have been convinced that one day they will eventually die, and if they are obedient, they will go to heaven and live forever in a spiritual paradise.



The press release issued by the Heaven's Gate cult contained a statement asserting that "... No one can enter the Kingdom of Heaven by trying to live a good life in this world, and then thinking that when this world takes your body, you get to "go to heaven." The only time that Next Kingdom can be entered is when there is a Member or Members of that Kingdom who have come into the human kingdom, incarnated as we have, offering clarification of that information..."

Well said. There is a great need for clarification on this question, and it may have already been provided by the Heaven's Gate cult. Could it be that our ascension to the next evolutionary stage will require us to turn our attention to the here and the now? Can there truly be a "New Age" on earth if so many of the world's people choose only look forward to life in some kind of afterworld?

The timing of the Heaven's Gate suicide is quite extraordinary, as that week's front cover of Time revisited the whole question of the legitimacy of the belief in Heaven. It may very well turn out that the Heaven's Gate cult members have actually become unknowing martyrs towards the realization of a perspective that stands in total contrast to the group's own belief system. The bizarre nature of the Heaven's Gate cult and its leader Marshall Applewhite has significantly moved us all to address what may be the greatest barrier to establishing a real–life utopia on earth — our near–unshakable commitment to living that utopia in another realm. It has in fact, all but destroyed what should be a concrete devotion towards improving and preserving this life that God has blessed us with right here! When that principle has been upheld to an adequate degree, only then will the earth cease to become a wasteland for those who would escape to their heavenly elsewhere and continue their life of boundless greed and gluttony.

Our goal then should not be to live forever in some spiritual paradise, but to work hard at earning our claim of stewardship over this earth by preserving the environment, supporting the vast planetary wildlife, and uplifting all of humanity. When there has finally been established an actual global consecration of this hallowed truth, only then will the dawning of the New Age truly become a reality.

Martin F. Jones is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

A never–ending circus

Editor's Note: On May 8, the Collegian celebrates its 30th anniversary as a daily newspaper. To commemorate this occasion, the Collegian will be publishing editorials spanning the last 30 years. Today we feature a piece originally published on Feb. 8, 1973.

It has been several months since I resigned from the UMass Student Senate, Amherst's own Barnum and Baily sideshow. After a full year of wasted Wednesdays, I used my disgust over a Senate reapportionment decision as a pretext to bail out of there. It was the most intelligent decision I ever made.

In writing, I find it extremely difficult to convey to the reader an accurate impression of these Wednesday night Circuses. In order to understand, in case you've never been down there under the big top, you've got to see it for yourself. But this I am not recommending. Watching "Ozzie and Harriet" re–runs on the tube would be a much more worthwhile expenditure of energy.

"It has been several months since I resigned from the UMass Student Senate, Amherst's own Barnum and Baily sideshow."

Matt Tuckoff

But they're spending our money, you say, ...hundreds of thousands of dollars. Sure they are, but don't waste your time fretting about it. I spent an entire year of fretting, about my money and yours. Fretting in vain. While I entered the Senate with high hopes of restoring some degree of responsibility in the handling of student money, I was only one vote. The majority of my fellow senators had concerns other than responsible student action. You might as well accustom yourself to an annual fork–over of 35 or so dollars to the Senate, to be spent as they see fit. Like it or lump it.

After my resignation, or escape, I receive a Boy Scout letter from Senate Speaker John Hogan, who presided as Ringmaster for the Chattering Chimps during my term as Senator. John, in very formal fashion, appealed to me to retract my decision to resign. If I remember correctly, he urged me to disregard the petty politics and go on with the work I had undertaken as Senator from Field House.

Well, last week John succumbed to the overwhelming pettiness, the all–pervading boredom, the schoolboy shenanigans, and the monumental insignificance of the Student Senate. It took me only a few months in the Senate in order to make that discovery. Poor John blew almost four years. It's difficult to live with yourself after wasting all that time. Time is just to precious to squander.

John's resignation last week left the Senate in what is traditionally the most ludicrous of situations: the "power vacuum." Now the students at UMass are asked to sit tight and witness the scramble of the opportunists, the little power seekers who are the mainstay of the Senate. For most student senators, elevation into a "prestige" position is the goal of a substantial portion of his or her effort, a prime motivator. It looks good on the records for graduate school, so they tell me.

I went down to the Senate proceedings last night, in order to check up on the cast of characters in the big scramble for the podium in front of the Senate Chambers. It should be remarked that the position of Speaker of the Senate inevitably gets in front of the Collegian cameras to a far greater degree than any other position in the Senate. Last year the pages of the Collegian were graced many times with various poses of John Hogan's lighting a pipe–full of Middleton's Cherry Blend, or some such concoction.

When I asked about the candidates, I was informed that the election for speaker may not occur this week, for lack of adequate attendance. Ho–hum.

Matt Tuckoff is a former Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Massachusetts Injustice system

To the Editor:

Prison guards woke up 140 prisoners in the middle of the night on March 8, put them in leg irons and handcuffs, and took them to the airport for a charter flight to Dallas, Tx. — to a prison system with conditions even worse than Massachusetts, far from family and friends.

Back in 1995, Governor Weld took the first 299 prisoners hostage in his budget publicity stunt to get more money to build more prisons. Weld sent these prisoners away from their families down to the Texas control units. One prisoner has already died of AIDS (he was refused his medicine in Texas) and others developed serious health problems that went untreated. Meanwhile their families are left in Massachusetts wondering how they are going to afford to make visiting hours in a Texas prison.

The DOC [Department of Corrections] manufacture the overcrowding crisis and claims it is so severe they had to send another 140 prisoners to Texas "indefinitely." There are empty beds in Massachusetts's prisons but because the state of Massachusetts classifies its prisoners into higher security units than necessary, they end up with overcrowded high security prisons. Add this over–classification to the ever increasing number of people put behind bars in the so–called war on drugs and it's no surprise that the United States is number one in the world in per capita incarceration.

Undersecretary of Public Safety Robert Krekorian admitted that these transfers are bad for prisoners and their families. Eighty of the original transfers were returned to Massachusetts over the weekend and Krekorian tried to claim that this was because of the kindness of the criminal "injustice" system.

"We're trying to rotate the inmates down there, if you will, precisely for the reasons that people have suggested that when you send an inmate to Texas, for all intents and purposes you sever their family ties," Krekorian said.

Conditions in Massachusetts prisons are not good by any standards, and the criminal "injustice" system does not work. While we fight to change the system we are also fighting for smaller reforms. The Revolutionary Anti–Imperialist League [RAIL] is currently organizing to end control unit torture in Massachusetts prisons, and to have the deported prisoners returned to this state.

Chris Johnson
Revolutionary Anti–Imperialist League

More UMass mis–communication

To the Editor:

I am a student who depends upon financial aid to attend the University of Massachusetts. This morning I found out that my Mass State Scholarship had been dropped. Now I have been in contact directly with the Financial Aid Office for a loan increase — at no point was this brought to my attention. I found out from the Registrars that I had only 10 credits. I knew then, that the direct cause was "Leadership in the Nineties" a course taught by Rick Townes.

Rick made it clear that there was a problem with the class not showing up on our schedules. Rick took the proper actions because, he knew that this would directly affect financial aid. These actions took place before my scholarship was dropped.

This to me is a clear cut example of a management error, due to miscommunication. I, the student in desperate need, should not have to suffer. This is just another classic example of unjust actions taken by management. This is the very reason I slept outside in the freezing cold [outside the Goodell Admin takeover] with only a step as my pillow.

Jessica Miller
Amherst

Don't forget the little guys!

To the editor:

Did you know that on March 8 the men's gymnastics team won ECAC's? Or how on March 22 Jeff Lavalee came in second in all–around competition helping his team to a second place finish in the EIGL's (Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League)? How many of the gymnastic team's accomplishments have you even heard about? Probably not many, but you probably know about every win and loss the men's basketball team has had throughout their season.

Yes I, like many other Collegian readers, like to hear about those exciting overtime basketball games played at the Mullins Center, or the hockey games where the decisive goals are scored in the last five minutes. The only problem is that I also like to hear about other sports teams as well, teams that don't seem to get a lot of attention, but are just as deserving of the publicity. Maybe my concern is more of a personal issue because I am a member of the UMass women's track and field team, a team that I feel does not receive the kind of recognition it should. Nonetheless it is aggravating to see the whole last page of the Collegian filled with pictures of basketball players, or hockey players, and not athletes from other sports. I'm not trying to put down, or lessen the accomplishment of other fellow athletes; I believe that all athletes deserve credit and recognition for what they have contributed in order for their team to be successful. My point is that I don't think it's fair that other collegiate teams such as track and gymnastics are being overlooked...

Overall I think the Collegian does a good job covering the activities that it writes about, and I enjoy reading it everyday. Expanding the coverage of sports would not only be beneficial for me, since then my team's accomplishments would be recognized, but it would also be beneficial for the paper because it would appeal to more readers. Not all readers are just interested in the basketball games.

Monica Elmore
Southwest

Clinton: burning down the woods

To the Editor:

When we heard about the Clinton Administration Plans to increase prescribed burning from 750,000 acres to 1.3 million acres next year to clear over–populated national forests, I was appalled. By going in and setting millions of acres of our precious forests on fire, he is not only playing with our delicate eco–systems, but he poses the risk of scorching any valuable land. I agree with Forest Service Chief Mike Dombeck, who told lawmakers, "There isn't a burn that's not dangerous." If the prescribed burning was to rage out of control, we would have a dangerous situation which would be detrimental to our eco–system. Our nation's forest has been pillaged and raped by greedy clear cutters and now the Clinton administration seeks to torture our forest as a solution. Perhaps what is needed is some new method or a compromise which would ultimately benefit our sacred forests.

Cara Ginsberg
Amherst

A breath of fresh air

To the Editor:

Well, it's about time! After reading page after page of meaningless drivel, day after countless day, Daniel Bodah's anti–censorship article who a breath of fresh air. Why must we be continuously subjected to the trivialities of everyday campus life when there are so many pertinent issues in our society to report? Is it really necessary to repeatedly print idiosyncratic editorials about what went on at the Pub on Friday night? Do we really need yet another journalist to express their opinion of the food 'n the Dining Commons? Hey, it's college. The food sucks. Get over it.

It is unfortunate that the Collegian often places important topics, like freedom of speech, on the back burner in order to clear up space that we can read about someone's best friend's favorite pick–up lines. It may be written to be light– hearted and humorous, but reality tells us that there are more news–worthy stories to print. While we may not agree with Mr. Bodah's politics entirely, it is nice to see that someone on your staff finds it necessary to bring issues such as censorship to the campus community. Hopefully in the future, the Ed/Op page will follow Mr. Bodah's lead and attempt to education the UMass population. After all, we are here to learn, not merely to be humored over food selections such as "chicken pucks" and "seavioli."

Suzanne Fortsch
Northeast
Bill Dempsey
Sunderland

Write a letter to the editor!
Here are the rules.
1) Keep it short (400 words).
2) Include a name, phone number and address.
3) Send letters to Mike Burke at the Editorial/Opinion desk, 113 Campus Center, Amherst, 01003

"Turn that @!?#%&* down!"
(We've got what it takes to get that reaction.)
9.99 CD 6.99 Cass
9.99 CD 8.99 Cass
9.99 CD 7.99 Cass
19.99 CD Only 2-CD SET
11.99 CD 8.99 Cass
12.99 CD 9.99 Cass
12.99 CD 9.99 Cass
MUSIC • SOFTWARE • MOVIES • BOOKS
MEDIA PLAY
All product shown at everyday low price.
STORE HOURS: MON-THURS: 10AM-9:30PM; FRI-SAT: 10AM-10PM; SUN: 11AM-7PM
Hampshire Mall, Hadley, (413) 582-0410 • Newington Commons Plaza, Newington, (860) 594-7272
Stateline Plaza, Enfield, (860) 253-4777 • Crossroads Buckland Hills, Manchester, (860) 648-5870
81-8235-047

Arts & Living

Friday, April 4, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Music matters: not the politics

I think that a couple of people in the world of hardcore may be confused as to the purpose of this column. I will therefore devote an entire column to you, my fans, in hope of answering some questions.

First of all this is a column dedicated to hardcore music, not a political forum. However because of the nature of hardcore music, politics eventually come into the mix. Therefore politics sometimes come across in this column, I'm willing to admit that. So I will say this about politics, I think politics sucks, I also think that militancy and intolerance of any kind have no place in hardcore. That is why I tend to put down the hardline all the time. I also like to make fun of Earth Crisis because it's fun.

Back to the music, (which is what hardcore is really about anyway). I like what most people would consider old school and mid school hardcore. I therefore love bands like Minor Threat, Black Flag, The Descendents, Agnostic Front, Murphy's Law, Gorilla Biscuits, Youth Of Today, Agent Orange, DYS, Bad Religion, etc. That style of music was fun, frenetic, fast paced and full of energy — in essence it was how hardcore was meant to be played.

I also like post hardcore and emo because they both seem to be logical progressions of hardcore. Bands like Quicksand, Falling Forward, Dag Nasty, Fugazi, Shift, Rites Of Spring, and Soulside all took hardcore to it's next logical plateau. I like the intricacy and complexity of these bands, and while I admit that it does sometimes get slow, it is interesting.

I hate metal, I have always hated heavy metal, and I always will. Sure some metal is fun to listen to, and it does have a certain influence on hardcore, however there is a real problem when people are putting Slayer and Napalm Death in the same sentence as Minor Threat or the Cro–Mags. We have to understand that death metal is not hardcore and no matter what you say there is a difference. I do not have a problem with heavy metal bands playing hardcore shows or being on hardcore labels, but I don't have to like it.

Here's something that a lot of people seem to have a problem with, but it's something I can't help. I'm from New York, Long Island to be specific. That is the scene I come from, I'm influenced by, and am closest with. I can't help it that I live in New York and I make no apologies for it. Barring Hallraker, the Afflictions and Onslaught the only time I hear from the local crowd is when they're complaining.

Listen guys, hardcore is not as big as some of you think it is, it is the best scene, in my opinion, to be involved with, but it is not the be all and end all of existence. It is a form of music and it is a way for kids who feel shunned from mainstream society to represent themselves in an honest way. When we start judging each other and worrying about every record review we start to lose out on the fun and intent of hardcore.

Adam Dlugacz is a Collegian columnist.

Arts AND Living

Back in the saddle again — Aero–Force One has taken off again with the release of Nine Lives, Aerosmith's ace new album.

COURTESY NORMAN SEEFF

Aerosmith returns with Nine Lives

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

Aerosmith is the cockroach of the rock n' roll animal kingdom. No matter what is thrown at them, they refuse to die. Heroin? Band infighting? Nervous breakdowns? Sexual addiction? Management firings? Sex–symbol daughters? The death of AOR radio? Old age? Please — the self–described "Bad Boys from Boston" are back with Nine Lives (Columbia), a strong new album continuing the Aerosmith tradition of hard–rock riffs, overblown power ballads, and Steven Tyler's utterly ridiculous sexual innuendos and double entendres.

Why is it that Nine Lives debuted at number one on the Billboard charts upon its release? Because Aerosmith fulfills a need in the collective psyches of the rock audience. Aerosmith is the rock n' roll id. Loud, carnal, and as subtle as a blow to the head with a hammer, the band could be synonymous with the term "guilty pleasure". If Beavis And Butthead were a band, guess who they'd be? Am I making myself clear? Most of the drivel filling the airwaves today is far too self–conscious to even think about adressing the truth of the matter. Let's face it, rock music is not an intellectual medium. Thank God. The term "rock n' roll" was black slang for sex. Sex is the bottom line in rock music. And Aerosmith is the last word in rock music about sex.

But enough Freudian analysis of the cultural significance of Steven Tyler's perversions and fetishes. Let's talk about the album. The first thing the listener notices (aside from Tyler yapping like a Chihuahua on ritalin) is not the music itself, but the sound. Even at low volume, this record is loud. Chalk that up to Kevin Shirley's bone–breaking production. "Nine Lives" kicks off the album with a ferocity previously unassociated with Aerosmith. The sound is damn near thrash, and you can be sure this is a response to the Great Punk Revival of '94, a resurgence which should have rendered the Aero Force obselete. However, the rest of Nine Lives is pretty much Aerosmith–by–the–numbers.

Which is not necessarily such a bad thing. Since Permanent Vacation, their "comeback" album a decade ago, Aerosmith have generally followed the same formula for each album. Soaring power ballads ("What It Takes", "Cryin'", "Amazing"), morality and survival pieces ("Monkey On My Back", "Livin' On The Edge"), and lewd, witty rockers ("Love In An Elevator", "Fever", and, of course, "Dude [Looks Like A Lady]") have always been the three main ingredients, and who can argue with multi–platinum success? Vacation, 1989's Pump, and '93's Get A Grip all sold well into the millions, so basically, if it ain't broke, don't fix it.

And they haven't. Nine Lives has got enough of the above to please any "Smith fan (excluding those traditionalists who hate everything the band has done since 1979 – but that's their loss). From the punchy brass highlights of "Falling In Love (Is Hard On The Knees)" to the raunch of "Pink", "Attitude Adjustment" and "Crash", Aeroamith meets the "kick–ass" quota of their recent albums. Likewise, "Hole In My Soul" is destined to be the power ballad of choice at senior proms all over America this year, and "Fallen Angels" closes the album in a similar epic vein.

Musically, the band is in top form. Joe Perry reaffirms his status as a perennial guitar hero, Brad Whitford is his able rhythm sidekick, Tom Hamilton's plummeting bass lines feel like a kick below the belt, and Joey Kramer's drumming is the perfect blend of muscle and dexterity. Tyler's voice is as elastic as ever and his lyrics are as effective as they ever were (which isn't necessarily saying much, actually). Favorite couplets: "Some kind of verbooty / That fits me like a velvet glove / She's talkin' to me juba to jive", followed by "Jellybean / Thorazine / Trancesdental Jet–Lag". What? Who cares. The bottom line is this – Nine Lives is prime Aerosmith. Much like the band itself, this record is charismatic, absurd, heartfelt, and completely unpretentious. Plus, it kicks ass. Aerosmith may have lived the archetypical life of rock n' roll excess, but they haven't used up their ninth life yet.

MAKE A DIFFERENCE AS A PEACE CORPS VOLUNTEER

We have a unique opportunity for someone very special.

The person we're looking for might be an accountant, a forester, or a teacher. Or maybe a retired nurse, a farmer, a mechanic, or a banker.

We need someone to join the 6,500 people already working in 91 developing countries around the world. Someone who can help others to help themselves.

Someone who would like to spend two years in another country. To live and work in another culture. To learn a new language, acquire new skills and sharpen existing ones.

We need someone special. And we ask a lot. But only because so much is needed. If this sounds interesting to you, maybe you're the person we're looking for. A Peace Corps Volunteer. Find out. Call us at (413) 545-2105 or visit us on campus:

INFO. MEETING: FEB. 10, 7 PM
ROOM 905-909, CAMPUS CENTER

PEACE CORPS
The toughest job you'll ever love.

Something Every Friday
April 4th
8 pm
Bluewall Cafe
Leighann Lord followed by Michael
"TWO THUMBS UP!"
MICHAEL
PG
Sponsored by Campus Activities through a Grant from the Auxiliary Services Office and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and the Daily Collegian

Headspin is Hip–Hop

Gabe Rosenber

Let us all take a moment before we commence the inaugural edition of Headspin to celebrate the fleeting career of one of hip–hop's shooting stars, Christopher Wallace, aka Biggie Smalls.

Biggie might not have had the best rhymes or the best flow, but he was certainly one of the most entertaining artists to explode across the hip–hop nation in a long time. Biggie was an artist who pulled no punches. His refreshing honesty, unique voice, and dope beats made Ready To Die one of the most listenable albums in recent years. I prefer to remember Biggie as I first heard him through an unreleased twelve inch, "Dreams of Fking and R&B Bch." It was the Notorious one at his best: bass pumping, voice gravely, Biggie clowning on attractive R&B singers. It's a pity that the mass media will focus on Biggie's darker side rather than on his accomplishments and his body of work. Biggie's last album Life After Death... is out now.

• Also due out this spring is a new release from the sage of Hip–Hop, KRS–ONE. The songs to check are "The MC" and "Throwdown" featuring the Cold Crush Brothers. Peep it: "A real MC never dis New York/ If

Turn to HEADSPIN page 7

Gene's newest stays afloat

By Marc Santo
Collegian Staff

GENE
Drawn From the Deep End
Polydor

British pop fans beware! The London bared Gene is back with their sophomore release Drawn From the Deep End, and frontman Martin Rossiter is moodier than ever. To everyone who knows Gene and listened to Olympian, be prepared to spend more countless hours in your room.

Only this time around, you probably won't be sulking or contemplating suicide. Drawn From the Deep End introduces a new side to the band. No, Martin Rossiter isn't on Prozac — the ballads of self pity are still there, but there is a sense of hope revealing a possibly content side to Martin. Maybe the success of Olympian shed some light on the man, or maybe — as lyrics suggest — he's in love.

To those who don't know Gene, brace yourselves for an emotional and intense album. The ballads are slow — bountiful in orchestration and rich with emotion. The remaining songs are typical of their ballads that begin with Martin whispering, but Gene is known to finish their songs with intensity. Guitars distort and Martin almost always ends up screaming.

The album is Morrissey–esque lyrically and late ride musically. Drawn From the Deep End is a roller coaster ride through emotions that shouldn't be missed. B+

India nite

The Indian Students Association (ISA) will present its annual "India Nite" this Sunday. The cultural show will feature traditional Indian dances, instrumental performances, a skit on immigration and other expositions that will serve as an orientation to Indian culture.

The scheduled performances will include three professional acts. The first will be given by the Asian Music and Dance Department who will perform a classical Indian dance. Professional dancer, Aparna, will also be performing a traditional dance. Several UMass undergraduate students will present a light music performance, and there will be performances by students from Smith College and Mount Holyoke College as well.

The ISA puts on this annual gala to expose students on campus to Indian culture. Among its other activates are the productions of Indian Independance Day celebrations and the Festival of Diwali, or Festival of Lights.

The main purpose of the ISA is to help new Indian students orient themselves, and to help students out with any problems they might have.

The show will last approximately two and a half hours and will be followed by a traditional Indian dinner and a film.

The program starts at 5 p.m. and will last throughout the evening. Admission is free for the cultural show and film. The cost of the dinner is $5.00.

— Christine Soh

COURTESY AMY FELD

Lord Hill mixes up alt-rock roots in Northampton.

Lord Hill performs CRC benefit

By Jean Sienkewicz
Collegian Staff

Imagine what the result would be if Pearl Jam circa 1993 and Jane's Addiction circa 1990 were transplanted from Seattle and L.A. respectively to the Berkshires of Western Massachusetts. Toss in the twist of bongo/conga percussion and some disco bass and you've ultimately got Lord Hill circa now.

An eclectic quintet hailing from Housatonic, Lord Hill is a band often billed as "hipsters of homegrown mod–rock." At first listen, they break down any expectations the mod–rock description might feed your head. One lead vocalist sounds uncannily like Perry Farrell and another (they have three) belts it out with as much soul and passion as Eddie Vedder ever did — the trait that had me hooked on Pearl Jam in high school.

Aside from that, although Lord Hill has those short Jane's guitar lead–ins and Stone Gossard–ish wailing rhythms, Lord Hill manages to separate itself from past influences. By incorporating folk and bluegrass roots, sweet harmonies and a variety of instruments (Six and 12–string acoustic guitars, harmonica, mandolin, piano, organ, banjo and an assortment of percussion) into their lively improvisational set–up, Lord Hill has proven themselves to be truly a band of their own.

Having performed previously with Pete Seeger, as well as at notable events such as the 25th Anniversary of Woodstock in Bethel NY., the Lord Hill show at the Iron Horse in Northampton this Saturday night promises to be a night of talented and experienced musicians pumping out danceable, appealing tunes (both originals and covers) and in general, a good time for all.

Lord Hill and the opening band, Free Beer and Chicken, perform at the Iron Horse Music Hall Saturday night at 10 p.m. Tickets are $5 in advance and $7 at the door. For more information, call the Iron Horse at 584–0610. The shows is a benefit for the UMass Cannabis Reform Coalition with a portion of the proceeds going to the Amherst chapter of NORML.

http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Curtain Daily 7:00pm (NO SHOW SAT. APRIL 5)
MATINEE SUNDAY APRIL 6 at 1:00pm
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET
A KENNETH BRANAGH FILM
Film Ends April 10th
For your convenience – Due to length of film
TICKETS MAY BE PURCHASED IN ADVANCE FOR ANY SHOWING
Box-office Daily from Noon thru Showtime
Phone Res. 584-9032 (1-5pm ONLY)
-of course TICKETS AT DOOR - But Arrive Early -
ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435

Take It To The Hoopla!
new balance
Haigis Hoopla VU
Register Now for the Ultimate UMASS 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament!
SPALDING
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Champion
DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
HOWARD JOHNSON
SPORT COURT
Presented by the UMass Sport Management Department
April 26 to 27
REGISTER NOW, SPACES ARE LIMITED!!!
THREE OR FOUR PLAYERS PER TEAM
REGISTRATION FEES: Before April 9, 1997 $15 per player
After April 9, 1997 $18 per player
If you have any questions call the
New Balance Haigis Hoopla office at (413) 545-5689
Remember: Registration Deadline April 18, 1997

WANTED
The Collegian is taking applications for:
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES
We are looking for Enthusiastic, Energetic, Organized and Self-motivated Freshmen, Sophomores and Juniors from any major.
If you are guilty of any of these traits, contact Luis or Craig at the Collegian Advertising Office at 545-3500 or stop in and fill out an application at 113 Campus Center Basement

The UMass Theatre Guild Presents: Fame
Bowker Auditorium
April 3, 4, 5 8:00pm
w/ Sat. 2:00 Matinee
Tickets Available at the FAC Box office 545-2511, or at the door.
Featuring: DJ Cool Ress
Students and Senior Citizens $4.00 Adults $6.00
For more information, call 545-0415
Concieved and Developed by David De Silva
Book by Jack Femenias
Lyrics by Michael Gore
Music by Steve Margoshes

Rick Pitino
Will be signing copies of his new book
SUCCESS IS A CHOICE
at the University Store Campus Center
Tuesday, April 8, 1997 1p.m. following his appearance at the weekly Sports Luncheon
Copies are now available at the University Store
Campus Center 545-2619
M-F 9-5 Sat. 11-4
UNIVERSITY STORE

Women's tennis starts new season

By Mike Corey
Collegian Staff

Once again, another spring in New England has Massachusetts sports teams struggling to get outside for action. It was just last week that UMass women's tennis coach Judy Dixon had her Minutewomen outside practicing, preparing for their first spring match.

However, due to the inclement weather, UMass begins the spring season inside in home match today as it takes on Fairfield at Hampshire College at 5 p.m.

After a 5–2 fall season, UMass went 3–1 with matches in February as the Minutewomen took care of Fairfield, Colgate, and Central Connecticut with their only loss coming at the hands of nationally ranked Yale. Likewise in the fall, UMass' only two losses were to nationally ranked teams: Amherst College and Dartmouth.

One thing is for sure, the Minutewomen throughout the year have played consistent tennis, but in the mind of Dixon, they need to take that next step in search of a national ranking themselves.

"We beat the teams that we should beat, but we have to beat a ranked team in order to get a national ranking," Dixon said. "Right now we lose to the ranked teams, and we beat those teams that aren't ranked, the teams that we should beat. I think we have to get a little bit a little more ferocious. We're looking for that breakthrough match."

As the Minutewomen begin the spring season they will also be looking for the resurgence of No. 1 singles player freshman Ola Gerasimova, who in the fall was hampered by an injury and only competed in five matches.

"She's sort of been rushed along, and she's struggled some, but she's had some good fight and some good results," Dixon said. "But I think that she's developing into a more mature player, and I think that every match that goes by, she just tucks a little more information into her back pocket."

In the No. 2 singles spot, junior Marie Christine Caron fills the void that has once troubled the Minutewomen in the past at that position, and she adds experience to the lineup.

"She makes a difference in our team tremendously," Dixon said. "She is a very talented and athletic player" as the lone senior on the team, Liz Durant will be looking to put together a strong spring at the No. 4 singles spot as she closes out her career.

"She hoping to put some matches together in the spring and take this maturity and use it the rest of the way," Dixon said. "I count on her to make a difference in the lineup."

For UMass at the No. 3 singles spot, sophomore Jackie Braunstein has been consistent for the Minutewomen, likewise so has junior co–captain Caroline Steele at the No. 5 spot, and junior co–captain Lana Gorodetskaya at No. 6 singles.

The doubles point is probably the most important point in the match, as the team taking two out of the three, wins the point. The Minutewomen have done well in doubles this season as Steele and Gerasimova are the No. 1 doubles team, with Durant and Caron at No. 2, while at No. 3 is Braunstein and Gorodetskaya.

"I've been very happy with our doubles, and that has been one of our strengths this year, that we have had very good doubles combinations," Dixon said. "I consider now that we know how to play doubles well."

The Minutewomen have only lost the doubles point three times this year, which have been in the three matches they have lost against Amherst, Dartmouth, and Yale.

Fairfield will be no easy task for the 8–3 Minutewomen, who will be looking to start off the spring with a win. UMass will be without the services of Marie Christine Caron at No. 2 singles who is unable to play in the match. Instead freshman Gillian Kane will be making the start at No. 6 singles and everybody will move up one spot.

"Fairfield is a very tough match for us, we beat them 4–3 last time, and without Marie, I expect that this will be a very difficult match for us," Dixon said.

Fairfield comes into this match at 3–6, coming off a 9–0 loss to Seton Hall. UMass holds the all–time lead in the series at 4–0 which began back in 1989.

"The difference in the match last time was, we were much more emotional and much more intense than Fairfield was, and we wanted it more," Dixon said. "The talent, Fairfield versus UMass, was similar, but it was a matter of wanting it more."

Due to this week's inclement weather, several games were either postponed or rescheduled. Here is a list of some of the rescheduled games:

Women's lacrosse
Today's game against New Hampshire has been rescheduled for April 19 at 1 p.m.
Sunday's game against St. Joseph's is still on as scheduled.
Last Tuesday's game at Brown has been rescheduled for May 1 at 4 p.m. in Providence.

Baseball
Tomorrow's doubleheader against Dayton has been pushed back until Sunday.
Sunday's game against the Flyers has been moved to Monday.
Last Tuesday's game at Connecticut has been switched to May 8 at 3:30 p.m. in Storrs.
Last Wednesday's game at Hartford has not yet been rescheduled.

Softball
Last Tuesday's game at Hartford has not yet been rescheduled.

O'Brien has work cut out for him at OSU

By John Seewer
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Jim O'Brien wasn't Ohio State's first choice when its head coaching position opened up. He wasn't even number two.

But the former Boston College coach said he was excited by the opportunities that are in place at the Big 10 school.

"I was extremely impressed by the commitment to success of the people I talked to, and I believe there is reason for great optimism," O'Brien said in a written statement.

O'Brien planned to meet with his new team yesterday afternoon and then attend a news conference.

He accepted the Buckeyes' offer Wednesday after two other coaches — Clemson's Rick Barnes and Georgia's Tubby Smith — turned down the job.

O'Brien inherits a program that has plummeted from a national contender to one that has had four straight losing seasons — a first in school history.

The program also was put on NCAA probation for one year in 1994 after investigators found 17 recruiting violations.

A steady stream of crimes and misdemeanors by players followed. Five players were kicked off the team for disciplinary reasons. But O'Brien also sees potential within the Ohio State program. All five sophomore starters return from last year's team that finished 10–17.

A new 19,500–seat arena will be ready for action in the fall of 1998.

But perhaps most importantly, other coaches have proved that success can be found at Ohio State. O'Brien's predecessor, Randy Ayers, won two Big 10 titles and was the national coach of the year in 1991.

■ men's lax

continued from page 10

has also contributed eight assists on the season.

While the offense will undoubtedly play a major role in this weekend's tilt, the defense, the goaltending in particular, will be just as important. UMass netminder John Kasselakis has seen all but 15 minutes this season in the UM cage and has posted a .633 save percentage and a 7.54 goals against average.

His counterpart, Duke's Joe Kirmser, has shared time with two backup goalies this season, but still owns the Devil cage. Kirmser has put up a 7.2 GAA and a .676 save percentage in 386 minutes of work.

It's definitely a challenge [to face a good goalie] because you want to match saves with him," Kasselakis said. "The goalie can set the tone for the whole game. He didn't have a good day last year, so I'm sure he's going to be ready this year."

■ women's lax

continued from page 10

with 21 points (12 goals, 9 assists), with the threesome of senior Carolyn Wood (9, 5, 14 points), junior Megan Maher (8, 4, 12), and sophomore Anne Vandergrift (7, 3, 10) bunched up right behind her.

On the other hand, UMass does not have any player that has broken double figures in scoring yet, but the attack combo of senior Stephanie Walsh (5, 1, 6) and sophomore Laura Koruz (5, 3, 8) can be an imposing duo. Walsh is on the verge of breaking the 100–point barrier for career scoring, while Koruz has been the UMass offense of late, scoring six points in her last two games. But, after letting up 45 goals in the last two games, defense will be the tale to tell.

The mission for the Minutewomen this week has been the return to fundamentals. For Pearsall and McClellan, the mission has been successful, and they want to bring that side of the story to the field on Sunday.

"I think we've had some really good practices this week, and they've been tough mentally and physically," Pearsall said. "We've been working on our skills, and we've got back to basics. They're really ready to play, and they want to play today. They know they've been practicing real well, and they want to put that into a game situation."

McClellan agreed.

"It's going to be a fresh start," McClellan said. "The kids are really looking forward to these group of games, and want to put their best foot forward and feel better about their team play.

"Every game from here on in we need to play our game, and play our game well. We have a lot of coin–toss games coming up, which is really exciting for us because it is time for us to put on a show."

■ softball

continued from page 10

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Rutgers batters will have to face the imposing Danielle Henderson this weekend when the Minutewomen and Lady Knights do battle at Totman Field.

The Lady Knights have been having a mediocre season so far. They now stand at an even 10 wins and 10 losses, with a 6–3 home record. Rutgers is a young team, led by the pitching duo of sophomore Juliette Brooks and freshman Angie Fancuberta. Brooks has been putting in the best performances, with a record of 7–4, and an ERA of 2.48. Fancuberta has struggled in her rookie season, with a record of 3–6 and an ERA 4.59.

The Lady Knights have had little problem at the plate however, with a batting average of .300. Danielle Dolbow has been a solid force for them, hitting at .429, as has Brooks, with an average of .396.

Even so, they should have their hands full against the Minutewomen's Danielle Henderson. Henderson has been named the Atlantic 10 Pitcher of the Week for the second straight week, having put in a spectacular performance last weekend. Henderson struck out 24 batters in 19.2 innings, a performance which included her 200th strikeout in the win over Dayton. The strikeout put Henderson as sixth on the all–time career list at UMass. She now has a record of 5–9, with an ERA of 1.58.

Joining Henderson in the A–10 honors is freshman Nicole Faessler who was named Rookie of the Week. Faessler had her first career home run against St. Bonaventure, a two–run homer. She leads the team with her .357 average, and .714 slugging percentage.

Hewlett-Packard — Performer of the year.
We like the sound of that.
Hewlett-Packard, the world's most admired technology company, is also Forbes magazine's 1995 Performer of the Year. We are a world leader in the design, manufacturing and distribution of computer and electronic test and measurement equipment because of a core set of performance-based values we call "The HP Way." Currently, we have employment opportunities available for Electrical Engineering majors (BS, MS, or Ph.D) in the following departments:
• Research and Development • Technical Support
• Manufacturing • QA
• Marketing • Custom Solutions
Successful candidates must have excellent interpersonal, problem solving, and written/verbal communication skills. Individual must be self-motivated, detail-oriented, and able to work in a team environment.
Interested candidates please contact the University Career Center and meet with our hiring managers on campus April 8, 1997. Anyone interested in meeting with the hiring managers are invited to attend a social gathering Monday, April 7th. It will held in Room #803 from 6:00 pm to 8:00 pm. To learn more about HP and our employment opportunities, visit our Homepage on the World Wide Web at: http://www.jobs.hp.com
Hewlett-Packard Company is an equal opportunity employer dedicated to affirmative action and work force diversity.
HEWLETT PACKARD

Best Locations!
Showings Start April 7th
Lincoln Real Estate
25 N. Pleasant Street
253 - 7879

SpRing Whitewater!
Whitewater Rafting is one of the best ways to break out of the mid-semester blues! Our great Spring Rates make the most exciting season a real bargain.
From April 15-May 15 raft for as little as $54 on the Zoar Gap section of the Deerfield River.
ZOAR OUTDOOR
Charlemont, Massachusetts
CALL NOW TO BOOK YOUR SPRING RAFTING ADVENTURE!
800 532-7483

WEEKLY DRINK SPECIALS
Captain Morgan & Coke 16 oz 2.00
Sloe Gin Fizz 2.00 16oz
Red Dog 16oz Drafts 1.50
Petes Wicked Madri Gras 1.50
Tonight Mountain Bike give-away with WHMP-LIVE
Friday & Saturday Dancing
No Cover Charge Before 10pm
Fun food spirits
THE PUB
15 East Pleasant St.

■ headspin

continued from page 6

you know the time while you rhymin' MCin'/ You know that New York is hip– hop's Garden of Eden."

• Quote of the Bi–week: Hip–hop is dope knowledge, the only known antidote for prime time sensory deprivation, there is no such thing as alternative hip–hop, because the only alternative to hip–hop is dead silence.

• Headspin is a column devoted to hip–hop culture. If you have any comments or suggestions you can reach me at my Email Gaber@student.umass.edu or at the Collegian.

Gabe Rosember is a UMass student.

a groove experiment @ Butterfield basement
featuring 8:30 pm
Trick Knee sway (CD release may 2 poop dreams)
Noise laboratories
this friday 4/4
$3 brought to you by Butterfield House Council $3
no drugs, backpacks, or alcohol

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Great apartment uptown! 5 min. walk to campus. One bedroom. Begin 6/1. $630/month. 256-6441

Take over our lease or will sublet starting June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywine. Rent includes heat and hot water. Call 549-0530

Summer Apt. Available 6/1 with Fall option. Clean, 2 bedroom in Brandywine. $775/month includes gas, hot water and heat. On bus line 1 mile from UMass. 549-0879

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

88 Dodge 600 nice, runs. $800. 584-4807

89 Cutlass Ciera low miles, PS, PW, PL, AC, AM/FM, cassette, cruise. $3795. 549-1215

98 Pontiac Grand Prix $980 is new parts. $2000 or B/O 587-0328

1991 Ford Escort GT red, excellent condition, runs great, standard, stereo, A/C, sun roof. $3900/B.O Call Ian 665-0486

87 Ford Escort
A/C, F/M, 5-speed
104K miles. $1725
(413)256-1238

1985 Toyota Corolla good shape, 129K miles. $1000 Call 253-3264

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Jobs on Nantucket Work on the beach. Positions available now. Start date around May 20th. Short order cooks. Aerobics Instructor. For immediate consideration, call (508)325-6347. Housing a possibility.

Legal Assistants Wanted Fall 1997 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field— work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Stop by the office today and pick up an application. 922 Campus Center

We need two people to work in Southern Vermont Country Inn. Do dishes and rooms, wait tables, food prep, etc. Room and board plus salary, tips. Call (802)874-4140

PAINTERS- Full-time summer, EXPERIENCE PREFERRED; vehicle, references, heavy lifting required 9:00-5:00 ONLY 247-9480

NEED MONEY? Morning Paper Delivery $50 a week, short morning hours. Must have vehicle. Contact Mark or Alyce at 545-3500 or stop by The Collegian in the Campus Center Basement.

SUMMER JOBS
Communication Assistant- MA Telecommunications Relay Service, Holyoke, MA. Requirements: Typing 55wpm, clear speaking voice, good phone skills; dependable, positive attitude; full-time and part-time positions. Flexible shifts. Call (413)493-1100 for an appointment

EMPLOYMENT

Vermont Adventure! Farm and Wilderness is now hiring summer staff. We need people who want to provide positive guidance and support to adolescents coming of age in the 90's. Counselors, nurses, cooks, general staff. Organic farming, backpacking, rock climbing, waterfront, carpentry, crafts. Challenging wilderness environment in the Green Mountains of Vermont. Contact Philip Tobin (802)422-3761 or fardw@sover.net (http://www.fandw.org)

Need a summer job? Know the web? Sell MCI Internet Websites to anyone, whenever you want to work. Low cost, nice income for you. Call (800)372-7683 or e-mail for more information. disnger@aol.com

Earn great money and valuable Sales/Marketing experience. Memolink's Memobooards are coming to UMass! We need one highly motivated individual to direct our sales project. Contact David at (800)563-6654

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St.- D40, NYC, NY 10014

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C50017 (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

3 bedroom condos Hobert Lane. Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement. Now showing for June and September. Lease $1300+ 253-7879

Amherst Center 1, 2, and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas, heat, hardwood floors. We are now showing for June and September leases. Lincoln Real Estate 253-7879.

Female Wanted to share home in New Salem. Separate in-law apartment with kitchen, living room, private bath, small bedroom, furnished. No pets. No smoking. $475/month. All included. (508)544-8427

4 bedroom apartment 2 bath, 2 large living rooms. Located on bus route in South Amherst. Call 256-1561

Summer Rental- West Hyannis Port Cape Cod three bedroom. Walk to Craigville Beach. Available 5/25-8/31. (508)778-6519

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses, Falmouth area. (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

Two Metallica tickets for April 4 in Hartford. $70 or B/O. Call 546-5716

Laptop Notebook $99, VGA Color Monitor $75, Hard Drive $10, Software $5, 386 Motherboard $25 Call Steve 566-3324 ext 2

FOR SALE

486 - 850MB Hard Drive. Brand new Digital SVGA Monitor. Brand new 16 bit Multimedia kit including Acer CD. $100's worth of software. Asking $800. Call 8. at 546-3842

Lite Speed Titanium 50 centimeter road bike. Ridden once. Need immediate funds. Paid $1700, asking $1150 or B/O. 253-6452

Buy wholesale, not retail. The last phone card you will ever own. MCI Pre-paid only $2.00 for 10 minutes. This card is rechargeable. Mail $2.00 and SASE to: Collegiate Communications, P.O. Box 785, Attleboro, MA 02703 (800)372-7683

CompacPresario-Bought for $2500 in Sept.: 1.5GB Hard-drive, 16MB RAM, 32 bit Full Multimedia Package and TONS of software including Utilities programs,WIN 95, Quicken& Many many more. Asking $1400. Call Carina at 546-6011.

FOUND

Gold Earrings @ Totman 3 weeks ago. Call Phil 8-4074

Keychain with some Korea house key and car keys. Call Katie 546-5318

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT
30 hours: $395
American Academy
1-800-808-Prep
(please leave your name and number)

LOST

REWARD! Gold Chain, small diamond. Melanie 546-5738

Watch Lost at Skinner bus stop on Friday. Fossil, silver band. Girl who found it, please return. Veronica 549-7314

MUSICIANS

DRUMMER WANTED
Punk/Ska Band 25 Liars needs a drummer now! We have practice space and demo and gigs upcoming. Call Dave and Ryan 665-9112

MISCELLANEOUS

Have you ever abandoned a pet? Do you have an animal you won't be able to care for over the summer? Looking for people to talk to for Research Project. Anonymous, Confidential. Please call Carolyn 586-0161

SERVICES

Rental Problems Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning lease? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State St. Northampton 586-0829

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

3 bedroom Pufftoo Apt. Great price. Available 6/1. 546-5681

3 bedroom apartment June-August. Sunderland. Pool/Courts. Call 665-0298 Ten minutes from UMass

2 bedroom/Breadywioe with Fall Option. Available 6/1. Call 549-4982

2 bedroom Crestview Available 6/1. Call 549-9210 David

Mill Valley Summer Sublet 3 bedroom, 2 bath, fully furnished. On bus route. 1 month FREE! 253-6503

2 bedroom apartment in Brandywine. Fully furnished. $775/month. Call 549-6452

CHEAP SUBLET- Summer/Fall Option. Two bedroom apartment on Sunderland bus line. $500/month. Shelly 665-0087

3 bedroom Puffoo available 6/1. 549-5941

TO SUBLET

1 bedroom ie Braedywine Available May 1. Call 549-0520 Possible Fall Option.

Four girls to sublet an apt/house for Fall '97. Must be on bus route. Please call either Rory at 6-2778, Heather at 6-1872, or Katy/Renee at 5-3114.

TRAVEL

Ski and Party at Killington for only $109! 2 nights condo lodging and TWO daily lift tickets. Call UMass Ski and Board Club 545-3437, 434 Student Union

Party Weekend in Vermont April 4-6, only $99! Includes condo, lift ticket. Contact UMass Ski Club 545-3437

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13, 2 nights lodging and round trip bus $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED TO RENT

Wanted: 4 bedroom apartment/house on bus route for Fall. Willing to take over summer lease. Call 546-4285/Amy.

Collegian Graphics
Making It Possible

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthdays or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals, this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek employment, announce meetings, etc.
8. All personals must be signed by the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the person placing the ad. Ads filled in on the insertion order form students must provide a valid driver's license and the student number must be recorded on the insertion order. Lost or false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS
Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, APRIL 4

Friday, April 4

Conference — Student and community activists from across the country will participate in workshops and grassroots organizational training at Hampshire College's Eleventh Annual Fight for Abortion Rights and Reproductive Freedom conference from today thru Sunday, April 6. Sponsored by the Hampshire College Civil Rights and Public Policy Program. Free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible. For schedule of events or more info, call 582-5645.

Religious — A NFTY/Kesher Reunion and Regular Service will be held at the UMass Hillel House at 6 p.m. All are welcome.

Community service — MassPIRG is sponsoring a post- election clean-up to rid the campus of left-over campaign posters. The group will meet at 4 p.m. outside the MassPIRG office, located at 423A Student Union. All are welcome. For more information, call Stacey at 545-0199.

SATURDAY, APRIL 5

Comedy — The UMass Comedy Troupe will hold its weekly improvisational comedy show, "Mission Improvable" at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center basement. Free.

NOTICES

RSOs — Francellis Nunez, secretary of registry at the Student Government Association, would like to announce that the following inactive groups are in danger of being removed from RSO status: APICS, Bridge Club, Brush Up Your Shake Spear, Cheerleaders, Clean Rivers Coalition, Collegiate 4-H, European Club, Hellenic Association, Honors Students Association, Italian American Students Association, Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance, Marching Band, Marketing Club, Omega Psi Phi, Out of State Students Association, PHNORD, Russian Club, Soviet Community Empowerment, SHMAI, Tennis Club, Travel & Tourism, Truth Task Force, Twenty/Twenty Vision and the Wrestling Club. This is the last chance for groups that have been inactive for six or more semesters to reactivate their status. To reactivate, call Nunez at 545-0341.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Financial aid — Applications for summer financial aid are now available at Financial Aid Services. You must be a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass: taking summer classes through Continuing Education; going on approved summer international exchange program through IPO; or working on a graduate dissertation. Deadline is April 18. Late applications will not be accepted. –

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available for the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPIRG, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

ASOs — Francellis Nunez, secretary of registry at the Student Government Association, would like to announce that the following inactive groups are in danger of being removed from RSO status: APICS, Bridge Club, Brush Up Your Shake Spear, Cheerleaders, Clean Rivers Coalition, Collegiate 4–H, European Club, Hellenic Association, Honors Students Association, Italian American Students Association, Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance, Marching Band, Marketing Club, Omega Psi Phi, Out of State Students Association, PHNORD, Russian Club, Soviet Community Empowerment, SHMAI, Tennis Club, Travel & Tourism, Truth Task Force, Twenty/Twenty Vision and the Wrestling Club. This is the last chance for groups that have been inactive for six or more semesters to reactivate their status. To reactivate, call Nunez at 545–0341.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Financial aid — Applications for summer financial aid are now available at Financial Aid Services. You must be a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass: taking summer classes through Continuing Education; going on approved summer international exchange program through IPO; or working on a graduate dissertation. Deadline is April 18. Late applications will not be accepted. –

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low–income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545–0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545–4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577–5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577– 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

FYI's will publish service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Attention Student Comic Artists...

The Collegian loves your creative work — but we can't run it if it's not here. There are a number of artists on our waiting list hoping for a shot at spaces you currently hold. If you have a scheduling conflict or if you wish to reduce your contributions, please call Chris Conner at 545–1809

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

HSCN 2 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
26 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL 41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This week's $1 drink: Tom Collins

VEGETABLE SONORA • SCAMPI • T-BONE STEAK • CHICKEN BBQ • PASTA ROJA PORTEBELLO MUSHROOMS • CHICKEN QUESADILLA • MUSHROOM ONION CHEESEBURGER BLACKENED CATFISH • SPANISH ORZO • STUFFED PORK CHOPS • NACHOS BERKSHIRE BREWING COMPANY • MARGARITAS • BLACK FOREST CHEESECAKE SCREAMING COWBOYS • AND MUCH MORE...

We accept all major credit cards!

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 4, 1997

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	McLaughlin	Connecticut	Fourth Estate	First Figure	World at War
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Am.Journal	JAG "Code Blue" (In Stereo)		Orleans (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Hit Parade"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Code Blue" (In Stereo)			Orleans (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Hit Parade"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Family Matters	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Step by Step	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		"Stealth Warriors" (1990, Drama) Jean-Claude Van Damme				News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Crisis Center "Shots"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Fresh Prince	Martin	Judge Judy	Real TV	"Tuesday's Gone" (1995, Adventure) Roger Moore,				News	[LAPD]	H. Patrol	Real TV
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Crisis Center "Shots"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	10	Simpsons	Roseanne	Home Imp.	Seinfeld	Sliders "The Dream Masters"		Millennium (In Stereo) [PA]		News		Coach	Deep Space 9
WWLP	11	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Crisis Center "Shots"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	12	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Bone We're In	Live From Lincoln Center	Debussy		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Ent. Tonight	Family Matters	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Step by Step	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld	Mad Abo. You	Moesha (N)	Social Studies	In the House	Is the House	News		Martin	Mad Abo. You
WTBS	49	Family Matters	Family Matters	Braves Pregm.	Major League Baseball: Chicago Cubs at Atlanta Braves (Live)							"Backdraft" (1991) Jennifer Beals,
A&E	51	Quincy "House of No Return"		Law & Order "Conspiracy"		Biography: Peter Graves		"The King of Marvin Gardens" (1972, Drama) Jack Nicholson,				Law & Order "Helpless"
CNN	53	WorldView		Moneyline	Crossfire	Prime News	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live		World Today		Sports Illus.	Moneyline
COM	52	"Mulholland" (1996, Comedy) Alice Lancaster, Krista Allen,				"LOOP" (1996, Comedy) Madeline Kahn, Steven Weber,				"Caffeine" (1997, Comedy) Martin Short, Charles Grodin,
DISC	54	Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings "The Pushers" (R)		Wild Discovery: Sharks				News	World Wrest	Fangal "Dining Alone" (R)	Wild Discovery: Sharks
ESPN	50	Up Close	Sportscenter			NHL Hockey: Teams to be Announced. (Live)						Baseball	Sportscenter
LIFE	56	Supermarket	Debt	Utah	3 Blind Dates	Wire	Pandora			"Marley Girl" (1992, Comedy-Drama) Jami Gertz,
MTV	55	Music Videos	Week in Rock	Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Music Videos (In Stereo)				Amp (In Stereo)		Beavis-Butt.	World Tour
NICK	58	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug	Pugrats	Kablam!	Happy Days	I Love Lucy	Bewitched	Newhart	Odd Couple	Yes	Singled Out
SCIFI	59	Twilight Zone	Darkside	She-Wolf of London		"Hellbound: Hellraiser II" (1988, Horror) Clare Higgins,				Friday the 13th: The Series		She-Wolf of London
TLC	62	Furniture	Renovation	Hometime (R)	Hometime (R)	Myth America	Legends-Isles	Empire Conquered (R)		Killer Bees		Myth America	Legends-Isles
TNT	57	In the Heat of the Night		In the Heat of the Night		NBA Basketball: Orlando Magic at New York Knicks. (Live)					Inside-NBA	"Predator" (1987,
USA	60	Renegade "Bad Seed"		Highlander: The Series		"The Tommyknockers" (1993, Horror) Jimmy Smits,				La Femme Nikita "Friend"		"True Crime" (1995)
HBO	61	"Contact" (1997, Drama) Jodie Foster,				"The Juror" (1996, Suspense) Demi Moore. (In Stereo)				"Back in Business" (1997) Brian Bosworth,		"Back in Business" (1997) Brian Bosworth,
MAX	63	"Dunston Checks In" (1996, Comedy) Jason Alexander,				"The Truth About Cats and Dogs" (1996) Uma Thurman,				"Con Air (In Stereo)" (1996, Drama) Nicolas Cage,		"Con Air (In Stereo)" (1996, Drama) Sally Field, (In Stereo)
SHOW	64	"Hackers" (1995, Drama) Jonny Lee Miller, PG-13				"Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley,				Outer Limits		Poltergeist: The Legacy
													Motel Inn

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

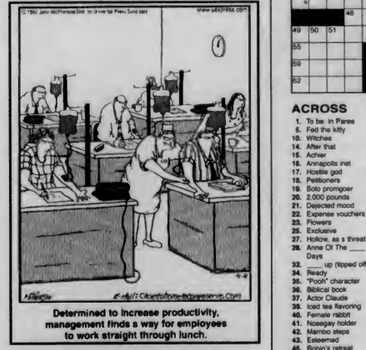
Dilbert By Scott Adams

Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Non Sequitor By Wiley

LEEDEE By Mike Rybicki



University² By Frank Cho

Today's D.C. Menu — Call 545-2626 for more information.

	Franklin		Worcester
	LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
	Hot Turkey Sandwich	Country Style Ribs	Fish Munchies	Beef Strips/
	Grilled Cheese Sandwich	Baked Ziti	Chicken Sandwich	Snow Peas &
	Fish Munchies	Charbroiled Chicken Breast Sandwich	Bow Ties/Pesto Sauce	Mushrooms
			Tri-Bean Casserole	Stir Fry Veggies
	Hampshire		Berkshire
	LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
	Hamburger on a Roll	Beef Strips/	Fish Munchies	Beef Strips/
	Chicken Cutlet Sandwich	Snow Peas & Mushrooms	Chicken Sandwich	Snow Peas &
	Breakfast Sandwich	Tilapia Santa Fe	Ravioli	Mushrooms
			Vegan Ravioli	Stir Fry Veggies

Close to Home By John McPherson

HOROSCOPES

ARIES
March 21–April 20
Focus on building up your savings. There could be a rainy day coming up, and being prepared early is your best course of action. Don't fall under a shadow person's charms. There could be an ulterior motive at work—and it ain't sex! :o) Hee!

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
You don't have to tell everything you know, even if someone asks. Add this week in particular: silence would be the best course of action. Fear is a great motivator, but it also paralyzes. Think your options through and then take action.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
Gear up for a busy week. Get down to business and you'll beat a tight deadline. Don't be shy to asking for all the relevant information, either. Next time, plan ahead a little further, and your performance will be even more impressive.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
Ask for financial advice before you start a new savings program. Avoid the temptation to go on a spending spree—leave the plastic at home. An older friend has some wisdom to share about a problem that's been troubling you.

LEO
July 23–August 23
You're at your best during an unplanned meeting. A romantic reason sparks your interest in a new way. You might want to make a resolution—it's a good time for that. A mutual admiration society gives you a chance to do more than talk.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
You're footloose and fancy-free this week—mundane tasks hold no interest for you. If deadlines loom, give yourself a strict time frame for being irresponsible and carefree—then force yourself to stick to it. It's hard, but you may be inspired.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
It's impossible to keep all your options open this week, as tough yourself to the fact that you must make a decision, and then do it. Once it's made don't look back. Second guessing yourself would rob all the progress you've made to date!

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
A pleasant tone in your voice will augment even the keenest pill. Be very clear, both to yourself and to others, about what you expect, and you'll be happy with the outcome. Extend a deadline if you need more time—focus on quality, not quantity.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
A businessman situation won't ease until you take decisive action. Plan a reward for yourself for after you do something particularly difficult—treat yourself and a friend to a movie, or just take time to talk with someone you miss very much.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
Although right now it feels like you have got it all, it's important that you don't neglect the feelings of someone close to you. Especially if you are busy at work, you could be ignoring some fairly serious cries for attention. Someone close to you gives you good advice that is pertinent to your job.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
Don't give up your goals in response to a small setback. Instead, focus on the objectives that lead to your goals. You may be due for a difficult lesson—the more open you are to suggestions, the better off you'll be.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
Stick to family when it comes to discussing personal matters. Although it's tempting to bare your soul elsewhere this week it would be a bad idea. Stay out of the limelight—someone could grow even more envious than they already are.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Quota of the Day

"Where ever you go... there you are..."

–Buckaroo Bonsi

Crossword

ACROSS
1. To be: in Paree
6. Fed the kitty
10. Witches
14. After that
15. Achier
16. Annapolis inet
17. Hostile god
18. Petitioners
19. Bob prompter
20. 2,000 pounds
21. Dejected mood
22. Expense vouchers
23. Flowers
25. Exclusive
27. Hollow; as a threat
28. Anne Of The ____ Days
32. ____ up (tipped off)
34. Ready
35. "Pooh" character
36. Biblical book
37. Actor Claude
39. Iced tea flavoring
40. Female rabbit
41. Nosegay holder
42. Mambo steps
43. Esteemed
46. Robin's retreat
48. Dropper's word
49. Hangloutes
50. Rub the wrong way
52. Watergate burglar
53. Hack's vehicle
56. Tramp
58. Director Sergio
58. Veracious
59. Copier
60. Map section
61. Barn topper
62. Japanese parliament
63. Actress Palmer
64. ERA: abbr.

DOWN
1. Coup d' ____
2. Pulse
3. Signed up again
4. Naval officer (abbr.)
5. Talks over
6. Parts of speech
7. "Star ____"
8. Election add-on
9. Welby and Kildare (abbr.)
10. Quiets
11. Wine region
12. Bothersome insect
13. Sinks in the middle
21. Bend
22. Lead
24. Poems of exalted emotion
28. Hebrew letter
29. Dropper's word
30. Heard a case
31. Blueblood
35. Words accompanying "Don't touch!" (2 wds.)
37. Morse units
32. Roe v. ____
33. Church picture
37. Recherché
38. On the ocean
39. Male (abbr.)
41. ____ of Kashmir
42. Brat
44. Exertion
45. Feet between bases on a diamond
47. Nantucket sights
48. Finnish bath
49. Actor Everett
50. Kashima ceremony devotees
51. Bushy as ____ (2 wds.)
52. Gala given
54. The ____ Queen (Erdrich novel)
56. Ad
57. Wind dir.
58. Entertainment sources

Answers to Yesterday's Puzzle

Leold (leold@jovanet.com)
by Roger and Salem Salloom ©1996

I've had plenty of time to improve things for myself, but I haven't done much.

My favorite bansai died.

I spent the heart of last Saturday night painting its dead leaves different subtle shades of green.

I need someone who thinks putting makeup on a tiny dead tree is campassionate ....someone who would say, " How lavely, Leold. You've worked so hard this evening. Why don't we go out now and have some tea?".

And when that someone dies, I'll paint makeup on their face or vice versa.

Division I move possible for football, Marcum says

By Luke Meredith
Collegian Staff

The idea of the upgrading of the Massachusetts football program from Division I-AA to Division I has been the subject of much debate in recent years. Yesterday afternoon, UMass Athletic Director Bob Marcum addressed the issue, among other things, during a speech to the Faculty Senate.

According to Marcum, moving the football team to Division I status will take a "sizable investment over a number of years," because of stadium questions and increases in scholarships and personnel.

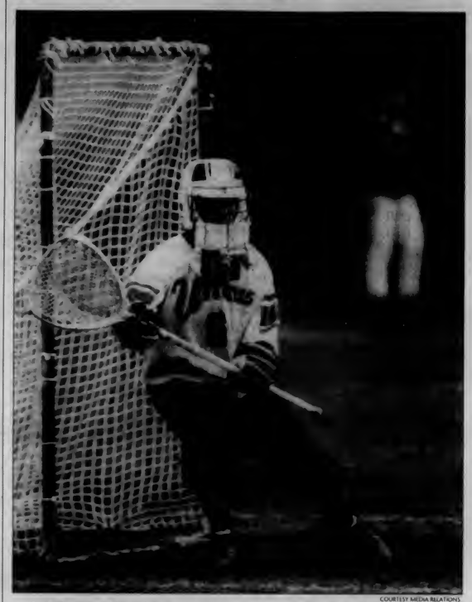
However, Marcum said the Massachusetts football program currently operates with a budget of $1.7 million, and brings in about $250,00 in revenue. If the program were upgraded Marcum believes the school could "cut its losses," meaning that if the budget for football was increased by another $1.5 million, the money made from a D-1 move would reduce an annual loss that is currently around $1.3 to $1.4 million dollars.

"Without I-A football, we jeopardize the opportunity for exposure [for the University]," Marcum said. "[Division] I- A football is something that this institution should consider. At the same time, collect the necessary data, and make a good decision as to whether or not we should move forward."

Marcum pointed out that although the men's basketball program is nationally recognized and that most games are televised, the revenue generated from television contracts pales in comparison with potential TV revenue a Division I football team can bring in.

Marcum said that the men's basketball team generated about $120,000 in revenue from TV contracts during the 1996-97 season, most of which goes to the conference, the Atlantic 10.

By consequence, each school involved in a nationally televised Division I football game will earn about $525,000 for a Thursday night game on ESPN, and $650,000 for a Saturday afternoon game on a major network.



According to Marcum, television contracts concerning college athletics are up in 2000, and conferences that feature football will have an advantage because football, not basketball, will be the driving force behind those contracts.

"I hope that we don't pass up an opportunity that we passed up previously," Marcum said. "We had two opportunities to join the Big East conference, and we turned both of those opportunities down several years ago. Today, I think that looks like a bad decision. Maybe at the time it was a good decision and people lived with it. I feel the same way about I-A football."

The question of where UMass would play should it go I-A was not discussed. Division I regulations state that a school must have a stadium that seats over 30,000 to compete in Division I football. The Minutemen's current home, Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium, seats 17,000.

Marcum said that he would devote his entire Faculty Senate address in the near future to the matter of upgrading the program if desired.

Minutemen escape snow with trip to Duke

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Goalie John Kasselakis and the No. 12 Minuteman lacrosse team will escape the winter weather, but not the tough competition, this weekend at No. 3 Duke.

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

While the post-Easter Nor'Easter has wreaked havoc on spring sport schedules across the North, the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team will not have to deal with the fluffy white schedule-buster this weekend.

The No. 12 Minutemen, taking their cue from migratory birds and wealthy vacationers, will head south this weekend for a matchup against No. 3 Duke tomorrow at 1 p.m. at the Duke Lacrosse Stadium in Durham, N.C.

UMass (4-2) is coming off a 12-10 upset at then-No. 12 Army last weekend, a game which saw eight different goal scorers find the net for the Minutemen.

Duke, meanwhile, has been on a warpath, posting a 6-1 record that includes a 11-10 nipping of then-No. 5 Maryland, a 12-9 victory over then-No. 4 Navy and a devastatingly large blowout over Boston College (21-3). The Blue Devils' only loss has come at the hands of then-No. 13 Brown, a team that has also handed defeat to perennial contender Syracuse.

UMass marks the seventh nationally ranked opponent for the Duke so far this season. While the Blue Devils do own a 5-1 record against teams in the top 20, they know the Minutemen will be no pushover.

UMass owns a 3-1 edge in the all-time series between the two schools, with the Minutemen claiming the most recent matchup (a 13-9 upset at Richard F. Garber Field).

The fact that the Minutemen are also coming off that win at Army, and have had a full week of practice — albeit indoors — under their belts, ensures that the game will be no cakewalk.

"When you play a team like Duke, you need a full week to prepare," UMass coach Greg Cannella said. "But, we have a lot of confidence right now and hopefully we can carry that over."

That confidence has come in the form of increased output from several members of the UMass offense. Chris Grande leads the Minuteman with 13 goals and has tallied at least two scores in every UMass contest this year.

Brendan Glass follows closely behind Grande with 10 goals, while Mike DelPercio and John O'Connor are deadlocked at 7 tallies apiece.

The source of Duke's success can be found in the Blue Devil offense. Junior attackman John Fay leads his team with 22 goals, nearly twice as many as Duke's next-leading goal scorer. Fay, the two-time co-Atlantic Coast Conference player of the week,

Turn to MEN'S LAX, page 7

Sunday will tell the tale for women's lacrosse

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

There are always two sides to a story: sometimes there are three sides, and sometimes a million — yet, there are always two sides. That fact is indisputable, unless you are a resident of some militaristic country, and then there is just one story which is popularly known as "the party line."

When you put the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team into the equation, the recent dirge of dreariness due to the dumping of a foot and a half of snow on the ground produces two sides to the story as well.

Does the cancelling and rescheduling of games produce a span of time where the Minutewomen can regroup after two tough losses, or does getting back on the proverbial horse mean something, too?

This weekend, UMass (1-3) will have a chance to get back to winning ways with St. Joseph's (2-3) coming to Totman Field for a game Sunday at noon. A game versus New Hampshire originally scheduled for 4 p.m. today was rescheduled to Saturday, April 19 at 1 p.m.

For the Minutewomen coaching staff, the two sides to this season's story translates to a time when the entire story could be at stake. The next few games will be the judge of success or failure for the remainder of the UMass' schedule, and while the weather outside has been frightful, so have the results of the last two contests (UMass has been outscored 45-10).

"I think the funky weather has been frustrating for us to get into a routine, and get some practices done in a row," UMass coach Francesca McClellan said. "But the timing could be a little of a silver lining, because it has enabled us to regroup, and take a little bit of a deep breath."

Assistant coach Jill Pearsall sees both sides to the debate, but she is a little partial.

"It's definitely been a problem, because we want to be out there playing on a field, not indoors," Pearsall said. "Yet, I think it has been good indoors because they've been able to use their space more effectively, and get back to working on those basics. But, we'd rather be outside. It's spring!"

After a stretch of the season having to face three nationally ranked opponents in the first four games (Harvard, Yale, Temple), while having to reschedule a game against No. 15 Brown, the Hawks will pose a return to earthly competition for the Minutewomen.

While St. Joe's has had its own 20-goal games — a 20-3 win against a non-powerhouse Mercyhurst team. Statistics are very much padded when a team faces such competition, yet the top scorers for the Hawks do boast some admirable numbers. Senior Shannon Feite leads the team in scoring

Turn to WOMEN'S LAX, page 7

JORMA KANSANEN / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore midfielder Melissa Anderson and the UMass women's lacrosse team will be back in action this weekend.

Women's water polo set to host UMass Tourney

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's water polo team will host its first home tournament of the season this weekend. The No. 9 Minutewomen just finished a road trip to California where they went 6-3. They are 13-3 overall.

First up this weekend is Boston College at 7 p.m. tonight at Totman Pool. Tomorrow UMass faces Wellesley at 2:15 p.m. and No. 19 Harvard at 8:30 p.m. Sunday's match is against MIT at 3:30 p.m. The games Saturday and Sunday will be held at Amherst College.

This weekend is important, not only because it is the Minutewomen's only home tournament this season, but also because if UMass wins, it will be the No. 1 seed going into the New England Championships at Williamston in two weeks.

"It would be nice if we were anticipating on being the top seed going into this tournament, which should give us a nice easy way to warm up before we have to get back in and play Brown and probably Harvard again," UMass coach Bob Newcomb said.

This weekend's biggest rival for the Minutewomen will be Harvard, which they lost to twice last year in double overtime. Harvard also competed in the Claremont Colleges Tournament last weekend in California, losing 26-6 to USC, a team that UMass beat. So while Newcomb said he is not using Harvard's loss as a whole gage, he said he feels the Crimson are not as strong or as deep as they were last year.

Newcomb is confident that the match between the two teams will have a positive outcome for UMass.

"That's our big emphasis for this weekend — we want to go in and try to dominate them as much as we can," Newcomb said. "So it will be a good game for us to see if we can keep some of the intensity from California."

While Newcomb cites Harvard as the biggest obstacle this weekend, he also said that the Minutewoman should be able to handle both Wellesley and MIT, and probably Boston College as well.

"But Harvard is really our big push this weekend," Newcomb said.

This year is Boston College's first year in the league, and their coach is an alumnus from UMass. According to Newcomb, their team has a really good mix of talent, but is unsure of how the Minutewomen compare, as he hasn't seen BC play this year.

"The same goes for Wellesley and MIT," Newcomb said. "We don't know a lot about them, but they have good coaches and they've got some kids who know how to play the game.

"But I don't think they are going to be really deep, or not as fast or as strong or as physical or have the ability that we do," he said.

After a week of Mother Nature's harsh reality, spring sports back on diamonds

By Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

Mother Nature must not be a sports fan, because she's thumbed her nose at all the games this spring.

To say the least, the snow has really dampened the spirits of everyone on campus. Not only is there mud everywhere, but the weather is resembling a mid-summer's night, and thanks to the melting snow, the Earl E. Lorden field now resembles a mud wrestling pit.

After going the whole week without a contest, due to postponed games at UConn and Hartford, the Massachusetts baseball team (9-4, 2-1 Atlantic 10) hosts Dayton (7-17, 2-1 A-10) for a three-game weekend series. The battle will begin with a doubleheader starting at noon on Sunday and the final game at noon on Monday. The original schedule of Saturday and Sunday was moved back a day due to the splendid assortment of precipitation that has dropped on Amherst.

Jason Bennett (3-1) will start the series off on the mound for UMass. Bennett is looking for redemption after suffering his first defeat of the season against Atlantic 10 rival Virginia Tech last weekend.

Scott Barnsby (2-0), who gets the nod in the afternoon's second game, leads the rotation with a 3.93 ERA and opponents batting average of .190. After shutting down the Hokies in the rubber game of last weekend's three-game tilt, it's no doubt Barnsby is looking to repeat his recent success.

Rounding out this weekend's hurlers is Bill Cooke, who picked up his first win of the season in the night cap of Saturday's doubleheader against Virginia Tech.

Schedule moved a day as baseball hosts Dayton

The Minutemen are coming off a road trip to Blacksburg, Virginia where they took two games from the Hokies. The final game of the series was highlighted by Adam Correa's three-run dinger in the top of the ninth which gave the Minutemen the victory.

The Flyers of Dayton may not have the best record in the league, but Ryan Fleming, the teams top hitter, is batting .437 with 2 homeruns and 17 RBIs. John Bishop (3-1) will most likely get the call to start the first game on Sunday.

This weekend's series starts a 10-game homestand for the Minutemen, who will next face Providence College on Tuesday at Lorden Field. First pitch for that contest is set for 3 p.m.

Sophomore catcher Brian Samela, the Atlantic 10 Player of the Week, is looking to repeat on last week's .455 hitting performance. The native of Cheshire, Conn. went 6-for-11 against the Hokies, with four doubles and one four-bagger.

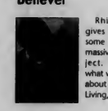
Second baseman Muchie Dagliere is swinging .396, with 1 homerun and 16 RBIs, while centerfielder Doug Clark is batting .407, with 3 homeruns, and 13 RBIs.

Softball hosts Rutgers after a week of practice

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

After a couple of great games last weekend, and a full week of practice, thanks to old mother nature, the Massachusetts softball team is set to play again this weekend.

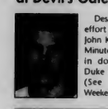
The Minutewomen will head down to Piscataway, N.J. on Saturday to take on the Lady Knights of Rutgers.



While UMass has had problems with this season's tough schedule, they now stand at 10-15, things have been picking up for them. The Minutewomen are currently on a three- game winning streak, having beaten Dayton last Saturday, and St. Bonaventure in both games of Sunday's doubleheader.

UMass was scheduled to take on Hartford last Tuesday, but the game was cancelled due to the snow.

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 7



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CVI Issue 113 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Monday, April 7, 1997

I'm a Believer

Rhino Records gives the Monkees some respect with a massive reissue project. Check out what we have to say about it (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Lax loses at Devil's Gate

Despite a 17-save effort from keeper John Kasselakis, the Minutemen fell 8-7 in double OT to Duke on Saturday. (See Sports Weekend, page 10).

WORLD

Children's health prompts cease-fire

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Afghanistan's warring factions agreed to a temporary cease-fire to allow volunteers to vaccinate children against polio, aid workers and officials said yesterday.

In a massive campaign funded by the World Health Organization and the United Nations Children's Fund, 3.4 million children across the war-battered country will receive oral vaccinations over the next five days.

"This program will protect our children against a terrible disease, but peace is necessary for it to work," Mullah Abbas, the Taliban's public health minister, said at a launching ceremony in the capital of Kabul.

The Taliban, who control the southern two-thirds of the country, has agreed to stop fighting until the campaign is complete, he said.

Leaders of a northern-based coalition battling the Taliban agreed to the cease-fire, said Dr. Mohammed Kakar, a WHO spokesman in Kabul.

After almost 20 years of civil war, Afghanistan suffers one of the highest child mortality rates in the world, according to U.N. figures.

NATION

FBI director mulls over possibility of quitting

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director Louis Freeh said he has considered quitting his job, according to a published report. "I have wondered about leaving," Freeh told Newsweek in an article appearing on newsstands today.

The magazine also quoted unidentified friends as saying they have heard Freeh wonder aloud, "Have I run out of my string? Am I hurting the FBI?"

Since becoming director Sept. 1, 1993, Freeh has had to defend an agency hit by one controversy after another. Republican lawmakers accused him of presiding over the ruination of the bureau's reputation.

Among other things, critics have accused the FBI's crime lab of mishandling evidence, and the agency came under close scrutiny for its investigation of Richard Jewell, who was ultimately cleared in the Olympic Park bombing.

Freeh was in conflict with the White House when Clinton administration officials accused him of failing to fully brief the White House on China's alleged efforts to contribute money to U.S. political campaigns.

During an appearance before the House subcommittee last month, Freeh told lawmakers that he shouldn't hold his job if they cannot trust him.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tue	Wed
HIGH: 65 LOW: 30	HIGH: 50 LOW: 25	HIGH: 48 LOW: 25

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds.....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword.....page 9
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 3
Sports.....page 10

English professor dies after 35 years at UM

University of Massachusetts Emeritus English Professor H. Leland Varley, 86, of Amherst, died on Tuesday, April 1. He joined the English department at what was then Massachusetts State College in 1938, and taught thousands of students over five decades, until his official retirement in 1973.

Varley's principal course for more than 30 years was entitled, "Contemporary British and American Fiction." He also helped attract many writers to UMass for lectures and writing classes.

He was the original master of Orchard Hill residential college at UMass in the 1960s, and he received one of the University's earliest Distinguished Teaching Awards.

An article in the UMass alumni magazine described Varley as "a combination of Abraham Lincoln and Ichabod Crane, tall, angular and slightly disheveled."

Varley received a Fulbright fellowship to Hokkaido University in 1958-59, where he developed long-standing ties with Japan. He eventually became an authority on William S. Clark, the early president of UMass (then Massachusetts Agricultural College) who helped establish Sapporo Agricultural College, the forerunner of Hokkado University.

After Varley retired from UMass, he accepted several appointments over several years to teach in Japan, then received another Fulbright grant to teach in Malaysia. He also taught American literature at Holyoke Community College for two years. An avid gardener, he had an extensive collection of bonsai trees.

Stephen R. Clingman, current chair of the English department, said "Varley was a great reader and retained his wide-ranging intellectual curiosity until the end, asking for more titles to add to his reading list. He will be remembered with pleasure by his friends both here and in Japan."

Born in Melrose Sept. 28, 1910, Varley held bachelor's and master's degrees from Wesleyan College, and a Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

He is survived by one son, Jacob, of Permaquid Beach, Maine, and two daughters, Stephanie Stephenson, of New Hampton, N.H., and Natalie Varley, of Amherst; seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

There will be no services. The Amherst Funeral Home is handling arrangements. Memorial gifts may be made to The Friends of the Jones Library, 43 Amity St., Amherst, 01002.

— Laura Stock

Famed Beat Generation poet Allen Ginsberg dead at 70

COURTESY ROBERT FRANK

Beat generation poet Allen Ginsberg died on Saturday.

By Larry McShane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Allen Ginsberg, the counterculture guru who shattered conventions as poet laureate of the Beat Generation and influenced the next four decades of art, music and politics, died early Saturday at age 70.

The bearded, balding Ginsberg died in his Lower East Side apartment surrounded by eight "close friends and old lovers," said his friend and archivist, Bill Morgan. The poet was diagnosed eight days ago with terminal liver cancer, and he suffered a fatal heart attack, Morgan said.

"He made us see that poets were pop stars," said Lenny Kaye, guitarist with the Patti Smith Group and a recent Ginsberg collaborator. "He had a sense of liberation — sexual liberation, philosophical liberation."

Ginsberg, whose blend of drug-inspired visions, hedonistic sex and gut-wrenching autobiography first emerged during the 1950s, spent several days in a hospice after his diagnosis. On Thursday, he suffered a stroke, fell into a coma and never regained consciousness.

He had returned to his apartment a day earlier after expressing a desire to die at home.

He wrote about a dozen short poems — one titled "On Fame and Death" — and "wore himself out talking to friends," Morgan said. David Cope, a friend and fellow poet, received one of those phone calls.

"He called all of his old friends from many generations personally to make contact with us one last time, voice to voice," Cope said Saturday. "To me, it was a beautiful gesture." Ginsberg's influence was almost inestimable. His extraordinary list of acolytes ran the gamut from Abbie Hoffman to Smashing Pumpkins singer Billy Corgan, Czech President Vaclav Havel to punk poetess Patti Smith, Yoko Ono to Bob Dylan.

"Dylan said he was the greatest influence on the American poetic voice since Whitman," said Gordon Ball, Ginsberg's editor and friend of 30 years. "I think that's certainly true." During the conservative, McCarthy-era 1950s, when TV's married couples slept in separate beds, Ginsberg wrote "Howl" — a profane, graphic poem that dealt with his own homosexuality and communist upbringing.

"I saw the best minds of my generation destroyed by madness, starving hysterical naked," the poem began.

"Howl" then careened wildly through scores of surreal images: "a lost battallion of platonic conversationalists jumping down the stoops off fire escapes," people who "walked all night with their shoes full of blood on the snowbank docks waiting for a door in the East River to open a room full of steam heat and opium."

"Howl" was dedicated to Carl Solomon, a patient he met during a stay in a psychiatric ward. Forty years

Turn to GINSBERG, page 3

Salman Rushdie honored at AC, gives lecture on Indian literature

By Jeremy Brothers
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — Controversial author Salman Rushdie was awarded a Doctor of Humane Letters degree at Amherst College Friday night in a rare public appearance for the Booker Award-winning writer.

The Bombay-born Rushdie has been living underground following the 1988 publication of The Satanic Verses. At that time, the Iranian government pronounced a fatwah, a death sentence, upon Rushdie's head — including a $2 million bounty.

The degree was awarded to Rushdie by the Trustees of Amherst College in recognition of his courage facing the fatwah by continuing to write, publish and make unexpected public appearances.

"You represent to us three of the things that we hold most precious: literature, freedom and courage," said Amherst College President Tom Gerety as he presented the award to Rushdie. "In inviting you here, we join you in proclaiming that no book shall ever be censored, no voice should ever be stilled."

Security at Amherst College's Johnson Chapel, where the ceremony took place, was strict. A limited number of tickets were available for Amherst College students Friday afternoon, while the lecture was simulcast in other locations across campus.

Rushdie, however, was not fazed by the guards and metal detector, calling the Iranian threat a "fundamentally banal, unintelligent threat."

"Rather than banal matters, I shall talk to you about India," Rushdie said.

With the 50th anniversary of India's independence approaching in August, Rushdie lectured in an often humorous manner about the body of literature that has come from India in the past 50 years, arriving at the conclusion that the greatest achievements in literature have been written in English, rather than the 16 different vernacular languages.

Rushdie claims that English has become an Indian language because it lacks regionality and the problems that come with the use of vernacular languages. Critical assaults upon English literature in India have accused them of abandoning their heritage, of "being the literate equivalent of MTV," Rushdie explained.

"Literature has little or nothing to do with a writer's home address," Rushdie said, trying to bridge the gap between the Hindu, English and vernacular languages by reminding people of common denominators.

"The music of India is in all of our heads — there needs not be an adversarial relationship between the language — for we all drink from the same well," Rushdie said.

After his lecture, Rushdie participated in a question-and- answer session with the audience. Rushdie responded to a question from a young Hindu woman who asked him his opinion on the validity of the sacred Vedas as a basis of scientific knowledge. He said that he found large tracts extremely boring, but very important nonetheless.

"Most good artists I know have a deep sense of literary tradition and if you're going to reject literary tradition, you should know what it is you're rejecting," Rushdie said.

The audience at Johnson Chapel also wanted to know what effect the fatwah had upon other writers.

"The victory of the fatwah isn't with writers no longer expressing themselves, but with planting hesitancies and terrifying publishers. If you try to tell writers what not to do, they are more likely to do it," Rushdie said.

In a press conference following the question-and-answer session, Rushdie spoke more about the fatwah and commented on European countries continued trade relations with Iran, as opposed to the stance the United States has taken with economic sanctions.

"The American Government has had the right idea, the Europeans — largely by reasons of greed — have taken a softer approach," Rushdie said.

JEREMY BROTHERS / COLLEGIAN

Author Salman Rushdie spoke at Amherst College Friday night.

Provost candidate screened

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts provost candidate Robert Smith promised students at a meeting last Friday that if he was appointed, he would be accountable for his actions as provost.

"Anything I say I am accountable for," Smith said. "If I tell you I am willing to advocate for you, I am willing to be accountable to you."

After a brief introduction by Ashavan Doyon, a junior Soviet and East European Studies major and a member of the Provost Search Committee, Smith addressed a small group of 10 students, including newly elected Student Government Association President Lin Wong, for over an hour in Memorial Hall.

Smith began by discussing his academic experience, ranging from his undergraduate studies in pharmaceutical sciences at St. John's University in New York to his most recent position as Vice Provost for Research and Dean of the Graduate School at Washington State University.

"I have been very active with undergraduate students at Washington State," Smith said. "I have a genuine concern in undergraduate and graduate education."

When asked by senior anthropology major Njeri Thelwell if he was interested in working directly with faculty members, Smith said that he had met with over 125 faculty members at Washington State in the past five years to talk to them about their "research and scholarship, and their teaching."

Smith also promised that if appointed to the provost position at UMass, he would schedule time each week to meet with student leaders.

"If I were here, I would set aside a lunch hour once a week to meet with groups of students from campus," Smith said.

Many of the students present at the meeting expressed concerns similar to those raised at the Goodell Building takeover. The students asked Smith how he felt about grouping ALANA (Asian, Latin American, African and Native American,) support services into one support system and expressed concern about losing staff positions in the support programs.

"If there is a discomfort level, that is a problem," Smith replied. "I certainly am willing to listen. This is important to have these kinds of interactions with students, so I can bring these stories to faculty and challenge them."

Freshmen engineering major Salwa Shamapande said that he felt the current administration was not always forthcoming in their discussions with students and asked Smith if he was prepared to speak honestly with students.

"If you say it is a priority, we want it to get done," Shamapande said.

"I'll never say 'yes' if I do not mean it," Smith answered.

When asked by a student if he was willing to step on toes to advocate for the students, Smith said that he was, but that changes can not always take place immediately.

"I have done that. I have fired people. I have made changes in programs," Smith said. "Sometimes you can-

Turn to PROVOST, page 2

Faulty generator cuts short shuttle mission

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space shuttle Columbia and its seven astronauts will return to Earth tomorrow, 12 days earlier than planned, because of a deteriorating and potentially explosive power generator.

It is only the third time in space shuttle history that a mission has been cut short by equipment failure.

While NASA considered commander James Halsell Jr. and his crew to be in no immediate danger, shuttle managers did not want to take any chances with the generator and, yesterday, cut short the 16-day science mission.

"The conservative thing to do is land on Tuesday," shuttle program manager Tommy Holloway announced at a hastily arranged news conference.

Holloway said a landing today was ruled out in order to allow for an orderly return, and because Columbia's two other electricity-producing fuel cells were working fine.

The fear was that hydrogen fuel and oxygen in the degraded generator could mix, overheat and blow up if voltage in the unit dropped far enough. Flight controllers had the astronauts turn off the unit yesterday to reduce, if not eliminate, that risk. The crew also shut down all non-critical equipment to conserve power. "Our plans would be to manage this fuel cell in a way that's not a threat to crew safety and, indeed, we are extremely confident in the two remaining fuel cells and their ability to support an orderly and methodical preparation for landing, and landing," Holloway said.

To slow the decline in voltage, Mission Control first had the astronauts reduce the power load on the degraded fuel cell. But the voltage continued to dwindle. Engineers

Turn to SHUTTLE, page 2

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff
Night Editor: Chris Conner
Copy Editor: Laura Stock
Photo Technician: Anna Feder
Production Supervisor: Lorraine Urbanski
Production Staff: Chris Lavin, Lauren Goldfarb

provost

continued from page 1

not change things right away. You have to respect faculty. You can persuade and reason with people... That is what it most important for a provost."

Smith said that he wants to come to UMass because he feels that he would have an opportunity to make positive changes.

"I think that despite concerns, this really is a fine institution. It has a good national recognition," Smith said. "There have been loss of financial problems in the past few years, but there is some reason for optimism.

"There is a new system president, a bettering economy, and faculty retirements... There will be opportunities to make changes and effect the University."

Smith went on to discuss the importance of balancing research and undergraduate education.

"You have to balance your priorities. You have to be responsible," Smith said. "It is really sad to see the W.E.B. Du Bois Library with bricks falling off it. Those safety issues have to be dealt with first."

After Smith and the students finished their discussion, Doyon asked the students to fill out evaluation forms rating Smith's suitability for the provost position.

Smith is one of seven candidates currently scheduled to interview for the provost position at UMass. Jane Winer, the next candidate scheduled, will answer students' questions tomorrow at 6 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

ANNA FEDER / COLLEGIAN

Hoop dreams
A group of students play hard at the Orchard Hill basketball tournament yesterday afternoon.

shuttle

continued from page 1

continued to dwindle. Engineers debated a few hours before deciding to shut down the unit - once turned off, it cannot be restarted in the event another fuel cell fails.

While a shuttle can land safely with two fuel cells, it's uncertain what would happen if only one fuel cell was available because of all the vital systems that would have to be shut down for lack of power.

Each $5 million fuel cell uses hydrogen and oxygen to generate electricity for the numerous shuttle systems, and produces water as a byproduct. National Aeronautics and Space Administration flight rules stipulate that all three fuel cells be working properly in orbit, otherwise a mission must be cut short.

Mission Control had been monitoring the mysterious decline in voltage in the fuel cell since Friday's liftoff. As it turns out, brief jumps in voltage were detected in the unit several hours before launch, but managers determined it was working properly and cleared Columbia for flight.

Holloway admitted that "with 20-20 hindsight," the countdown should have been halted and the fuel cell replaced. Launch controllers made the best decision at the time with the data available, he said.

Engineers have no idea why the fuel cell slowly was losing voltage. The unit has flown before in space without problems. A failed fuel cell forced an early landing during NASA's second shuttle flight in 1981; in that case, the unit was flooded with water. The only other time a shuttle mission was cut short for equipment failure was in 1991, because of a failed navigation unit. Halsell did not sound surprised when Mission Control radioed up the bad news.

Check Out the Collegian Online!
http://www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

ART SUPPLIES
DESIGN SUPPLY STUDIO
FREE DISCOUNT CARD

This Week in the Campus Center
INFORMATION, NEW PRODUCTS & SERVICES, AND SPECIALS FROM THE CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY UNION

IN A RUSH??
The Campus Sender can send your letters Next Day Air AM, Next Day Air, Next Day Air Saver, Second Day Air AM, or Second Day Air.
THE CAMPUS SENDER
Campus Center Rm. 224
PACKAGING • SHIPPING • COPIES • FAX

University Store
Stop by for weekly specials
Think Spring
Save 20% Gardening & Nature Books
All New York Times Best Sellers all the time
Poetry Books in Honor of April Poetry Month
All In Stock Spring Jackets and Windshirts
Save 40% All 1997 Planners and Datebooks
Save 80% All Pictorial Calendars

EXPERT AUTO BODY REPAIRS, AUTO PAINTING and GLASS REPLACEMENT
MARSHALL STEINBECK
PROFESSIONAL COLLISION WORK
• OVEN BAKED URETHANE FINISHES
• FREE ESTIMATES & CLAIMS ASSISTANCE
• INSURANCE APPROVED GLASS REPLACEMENT
• PROFESSIONAL UNIBODY REPAIR AND FRAME STRAIGHTENING
256-8157 256-1385
53 South Prospect Street, Amherst, Massachusetts

BLUEWALL
It's Two for Tuesdays in the Bluewall.
2 Cheese Pizzas for the price of 1.
By the slice or the whole pie....
The Romans never had it this good
Every Tuesday 3 pm til midnite

Be sure to enter to win a FULL SIZE Basketball Backboard and other Prizes!
Details at the U Store

Hewlett-Packard — Performer of the year.
We like the sound of that.
Hewlett-Packard, the world's most admired technology company, in also Forbes magazine's 1995 Performer of the Year. We are a world leader in the design, manufacturing and distribution of computer and electronic test and measurement equipment because of a core set of performance-based values we call "The HP Way." Currently, we have employment opportunities available for Electrical Engineering majors (BS, MS, or Ph.D) in the following departments:
• Research and Development • Technical Support
• Manufacturing • QA
• Marketing • Custom Solutions
Successful candidates must have excellent interpersonal, problem solving, and written/verbal communication skills. Individual must be self-motivated, detail-oriented, and able to work in a team environment.
Interested candidates please contact the University Career Center and meet with our hiring managers on campus April 8, 1997. Anyone interested in meeting with the hiring managers are invited to attend a social gathering Monday, April 7th. It will held in Room 803 from 6:00 pm to 8:00 pm. To learn more about HP and our employment opportunities, visit our Homepage on the World Wide Web at: http://www.jobs.hp.com Hewlett-Packard Company is an equal opportunity employer dedicated to affirmative action and work force diversity.
HEWLETT PACKARD

Campus Center Student Union
WEEKLY SPECIALS
For Week of April 7

ANNA FEDER / COLLEGIAN

First impressions
A group of prospective students get a first look at the Fine Arts Center during a campus tour last week.

Canadian historian talks on gender/crime link in Ontario

By Michelle Hillman
Collegian Staff

Canadian historian Lorna McLean spoke last Wednesday as part of the Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series in a lecture entitled "Gender, Community and Crime in 19th Century Ontario."

McLean, who received her doctorate from the University of Ottawa, chose to study criminal justice because she was interested in law and society. McLean started by looking at criminals in four counties of 19th century Canada.

Her study took a quantitive approach to determine why "there were more women than men incarcerated in urban jails." She began by examining jail logs in order to determine social reasons for the higher percentage of women jailed than men.

McLean incorporated a comparative approach to "cover a span of settlement periods" from 1840-1881 "which was a critical period of state formation in Ontario." She discussed only two of the counties studied, the urban center of York county, Toronto, and the rural frontier, Gray County in Owen Sound.

McLean found that one of the reasons women were incarcerated more often than men was because "in sparsely populated, newly founded communities, jails provided a surrogate medical and welfare services."

In the 1840's the Canadian judicial system served as a way to instill values and moral behavior not previously regulated by the authorities such as drunkenness and vagrancy. "Settlers in Ontario built jails in response to social problems," McLean said, also noting that "judicial institutions offered a value system upheld by the law."

She found that almost always there was a "direct correlation between vagrancy and drunkenness in urban and rural communities, and among 187 vagrancy charges some were pregnant women, some were young, poor, sick, disabled or insane."

McLean then cited several examples of how women were allowed to remain in the jails for extended periods of their choice, and how they were often found to be released with the onset of spring. Women in Toronto often considered the jails a "refuge" or retreat because they were clean and food and sometimes even medical care were provided, according to McLean.

Grant for UM School of Nursing provides clinic training for students

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts nursing students have been provided with the opportunity for clinical training thanks to a $7,000 grant the School of Nursing received from Phoenix Home Life Mutual Insurance Company.

The grant enables a community clinic at Mohawk Regional School in Buckland to be maintained for its third consecutive year.

Nurse practitioner Sandy Founds, a clinical assistant professor at UMass, along with volunteer help from nursing students around the Five College community, provide care to uninsured and underinsured residents of Franklin County and students in the regional school system.

Founds said she enjoyed her job as nurse practitioner because "I get to deal with a wide variety of common and uncommon problems."

Founds performs a wide-range of health care for patients from basic physical examinations to gynecological care, and has even detected tumors and diabetes in patients.

Lisa Miller, a graduate nursing student at UMass, is one frequent volunteer at the Buckland Clinic, where she educates and gives primary care to patients.

Miller, who has performed nursing internships in Jamaica and Ghana, said she has enjoyed working at clinics such as Buckland, and said she hopes to continue this area of work when she graduates this May.

"It's nice to help people who have a lot of gaps in their health care...," Miller said. "A lot of people who work for minimum wage cannot afford HMO or they are making it, but if anything goes wrong, they're in trouble."

Sharleen Moffat, health coordinator for the Mohawk Trail Regional School District, recognized the importance of grants since the clinic would not open without them. In addition, Moffat pointed out the importance of nurses managing the clinic, which the grant also enables.

"Nurses are very oriented to patient teaching," Moffat said. "When they provide care, we find there's much more health education and wellness information passed on to the patient."

There is a chance the clinic may extend its hours in the future, as Founds suggested, in which case more nursing students from UMass, including undergraduates, may be able build on their experience by volunteering at the clinic.

ginsberg

continued from page 1

later, Ginsberg was reciting his poetry on MTV for Generation X-ers.

Ginsberg's poetry placed spontaneity over metered verse, frank language over flowery words. His work was often confessional, discussing his homosexuality, his mother's death, his relationships.

"Kaddish," one of his most famous works, was an Oedipal poem dealing with his mother's life and death in a mental hospital. It was written in his Manhattan apartment, stream of consciousness-style, fueled by a combination of amphetamines and morphine.

His first exposure to the nascent counterculture came when he was a 17-year-old Columbia University freshman. There he met fellow future beatniks Jack Kerouac, William S. Burroughs and Neal Cassady. The group, disillusioned by conventional society, created their own subculture of drugs and hedonism.

"Basically, just a gang of friends who were very into being literate, and who were interested in art, and loved each other," Ginsberg once said of the Beat Generation's founding fathers. "Some gay, some straight."

Ginsberg was in the gay camp, and became a proponent of homosexual rights — one of many causes the activist poet embraced. In 1960, he went on television to call for the decriminalization of marijuana. He was arrested in 1967 for protesting against the Vietnam War in New York, and was tear-gassed a year later while protesting at the Democratic convention in Chicago.

He claimed that FBI director J. Edgar Hoover had placed him on a "dangerous security list" in 1965, a distinction that led to airport strip searches for several years whenever he returned to the United States.

Last year, he was one of the plaintiffs in a U.S. Supreme Court case aimed at knocking down federal regulations on the hours that "indecent programming" could air on television and radio. Irwin Allen Ginsberg was born June 3, 1926, in Newark, N.J., the second son of poet Louis Ginsberg and his wife, Naomi. The family moved to Paterson, N.J., while Ginsberg was a youngster.

Ginsberg intended to follow his brother Eugene into the legal profession, and enrolled at Columbia. But while still a teen-ager, he fell in with a crowd that included Kerouac, Burroughs and Cassady — the leaders of what became known as the Beat Generation. "I think it was when I ran into Kerouac and Burroughs when I was 17 that I realized I was talking through an empty skull," Ginsberg once said. "I wasn't thinking my own thoughts or saying my own thoughts."

Another seminal event in Ginsberg's life came in 1948: his vision of poet William Blake while he was lying on the couch of his East Harlem apartment. Ginsberg said he had a "hallucination in 3-D" of Blake reading his poem "Ah, Sunflower."

Ginsberg's first taste of notoriety came after the publication of "Howl" in 1956. Copies of the book were seized by San Francisco police and U.S. Customs officials, and publisher Lawrence Ferlinghetti was charged with publishing an obscene book.

In 1991 interview with The Associated Press — where Ginsberg briefly worked as a copy boy in 1948 — he recalled the '50s as a time of "total paranoia, suspiciousness, fear, the rich robbing the poor, and complaining about the poor. ... Marketized, mechanized fake emotions."

Ferlinghetti was acquitted in 1957, but the case generated enormous publicity for Ginsberg and his work. Ginsberg was suddenly in demand.

Ginsberg experimented heavily with drugs, taking LSD under the guidance of the late Timothy Leary in the 1960s. But he was also a practicing Buddhist, began each day with a contemplative exercise followed by a cup of hot tea with lemon.

As he grew older, Ginsberg became a guru to the counterculture movement. He coined the term "flower power" during the mid-'60s. And he eventually became more accepted by the mainstream.

His National Book Award came in 1973 for "The Fall of America: Poems of These States, 1965-1971." He was a finalist for a Pulitzer Prize in poetry in 1995 for his book, "Cosmopolitan Greetings: Poems 1986-1992."

Ginsberg toured with Dylan's Rolling Thunder Revue in 1977, doing spontaneously composed blues poems. He toured Eastern Europe in 1986, receiving an award in the former Yugoslavia, recording with a Hungarian rock band and meeting a congress of young Polish poets.

Ginsberg remained vital and active well into his 60s, performing in Manhattan nightclubs and doing poetry readings. Last year, he recorded his poem "The Ballad of the Skeletons" with musical backing from Paul McCartney and Philip Glass. Kaye produced the single.

The funeral will be private. In lieu of flowers, donations should be sent to Jewel Heart Buddhist Center in Ann Arbor, Mich. He was survived by his stepmother, Edith Ginsberg of Paterson, N.J.; his brother, Eugene; and several nieces and nephews.

Rick Pitino
Will be signing copies of his new book
SUCCESS IS A CHOICE
at the University Store
Campus Center
Tuesday, April 8, 1997 1p.m.
following his appearance at the weekly Sports Luncheon
Copies are now available at the University Store
Campus Center 545-2619
M-F 9-5 Sat. 11-4
UNIVERSITY STORE

WANTED
The Collegian is taking applications for:
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES
We are looking for Enthusiastic, Energetic, Organized and Self-motivated Freshmen, Sophomores and Juniors from any major.
If you are guilty of any of these traits, contact Luis or Craig at the Collegian Advertising Office at 545-3500 or stop in and fill out an application at 113 Campus Center Basement

Take It To The Hoopla!
new balance
Haigis Hoopla VII
Register Now for the Ultimate UMASS 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament!
SPALDING
DAILY COLLEGIAN
DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
HOWARD JOHNSON
Presented by the UMass Sport Management Department
April 26 to 27
REGISTER NOW, SPACES ARE LIMITED!!!
THREE OR FOUR PLAYERS PER TEAM
REGISTRATION FEES: Before April 9, 1997 $15 per player
After April 9, 1997 $18 per player
If you have any questions call the
New Balance Haigis Hoopla office at (413) 545-5689
Remember: Registration Deadline April 18, 1997

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor-in-Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinsheimer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W.P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

"America" by Allen Ginsberg

America I've given you all and now I'm nothing.
America two dollars and twentyseven cents January 17, 1956.
I can't stand my own mind.
America when will we end the human war?
Go fuck yourself with your atom bomb.
I don't feel good don't bother me.
I won't write my poem till I'm in my right mind.
America when will you be angelic?
When will you take off your clothes?
When will you look at yourself through the grave?
When will you be worthy of your million Trotskyites?
America why are your libraries full of tears?
America when will you send your eggs to India?
I'm sick of your insane demands.
When can I go into the supermarket and buy what I need with my good looks?
America after all it is you and I who are perfect not the next world.
Your machinery is too much for me.
You made me want to be a saint.
There must be some other way to settle this argument. Burroughs is in Tangiers I don't think he'll come back it's sinister.
Are you being sinister or is this some form of practical joke?
I'm trying to come to the point.
I refuse to give up my obsession.
America stop pushing I know what I'm doing.
America the plum blossoms are falling.
I haven't read the newspapers for months, everyday somebody goes on trial for murder.
America I feel sentimental about the Wobblies.
America I used to be a communist when I was a kid
I'm not sorry.
I smoke marijuana every chance I get.
I sit in my house for days on end and stare at the roses in the closet.
When I go to Chinatown I get drunk and never get laid. My mind is made up there's going to be trouble.
You should have seen me reading Marx.
My psychoanalyst thinks I'm perfectly right.
I won't say the Lord's Prayer.
I have mystical visions and cosmic vibrations.
America I still haven't told you what you did to Uncle Max after he came over from Russia.

I'm addressing you.
Are you going to let your emotional life be run by Time Magazine?
I'm obsessed by Time Magazine.
I read it every week.
Its cover stares at me every time I slink past the corner candystore.
I read it in the basement of the Berkeley Public Library. It's always telling me about responsibility. Businessmen are serious. Movie producers are serious. Everybody's serious but me.
It occurs to me that I am America.
I am talking to myself again.

Asia is rising against me.
I haven't got a chinaman's chance.
I'd better consider my national resources.
My national resources consist of two joints of marijuana millions of genitals an unpublishable private literature that goes 1400 miles an hour and twenty-five-thousand mental institutions. I say nothing about my prisons nor the millions of underprivileged who live in my flowerpots under the light of five hundred suns.
I have abolished the whorehouses of France, Tangiers is the next to go.
My ambition is to be President despite the fact that I'm a Catholic.
America how can I write a holy litany in your silly mood?
I will continue like Henry Ford my strophes are as individual as his automobiles more so they're all different sexes.
America I will sell you strophes $2500 apiece $500 down on your old strophe
America free Tom Mooney
America save the Spanish Loyalists
America Sacco & Vanzetti must not die
America I am the Scottsboro boys.
America when I was seven momma took me to Communist Cell meetings they sold us garbanzos a handful per ticket a ticket costs a nickel and the speeches were free everybody was angelic and sentimental about the workers it was all so sincere you have no idea what a good thing the party was in 1835 Scott Nearing was a grand old man a real mensch Mother Bloor made me cry I once saw Israel Amter plain. Everybody must have been a spy.
America you don't really want to go to war.
America it's them bad Russians.
Them Russians them Russians and them Chinamen.
And them Russians.
The Russia wants to eat us alive. The Russia's power mad. She wants to take our cars from out our garages.
Her wants to grab Chicago. Her needs a Red Readers' Digest. Her wants our auto plants in Siberia. Him big bureaucracy running our fillingstations.
That no good. Ugh. Him make Indians learn read.
Him need big black niggers. Hah. Her make us all work sixteen hours a day. Help.
America this is quite serious.
America that is the impression I get from looking in the television set.
America is this correct?
I'd better get right down to the job.
It's true I don't want to join the Army or turn lathes in precision parts factories, I'm nearsighted and psychopathic anyway.
America I'm putting my queer shoulder to the wheel.

— Berkeley, January 17, 1956

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Send your letters to:
Letters to the Editor, c/o Mike Burke
113 Campus Center, UMass-Amherst

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

No bright side to the gas crunch

Editor's Note: On May 8, the Collegian will celebrate its 30th anniversary as a daily paper. To mark the occasion, the Collegian is reprinting an editorial from each of the last 30 years. Today, we feature a piece originally printed on Feb. 13, 1974.

Perhaps the gas shortage and gas rationing will end all traffic congestion in Amherst.

Perhaps there will be no more parking hassles on campus because of lack of cars and Amherst Towing Inc. will lose a hell of a lot of business.

Other than the two things stated above I can't think of anything else on the bright side of the gas shortage in Amherst.

1967-1997
1974

However, as I rose the Belchertown Road (BR) bus from Rolling Green Apartments to campus this morning with my own and someone else's books in my lap, with one elbow in my face and one person standing on my toes, I thought of one more problem: we need more buses.

Last semester the BR bus was crowded on occasion, mainly at peak traveling times such as on your way to your 9:05 and on your way home from your 3:35. At any other time you could ride with a whole seat to yourself and sometimes even two seats to yourself.

This semester the gas stations along the BR route tell the new story. Some don't have any gas, others are open only an hour or two a day and others give gas by appointment only.

People can't drive to school anymore.

The result is gross overcrowding of buses. And not only at peak travelling times but all of the time.

Last Tuesday the 7:15 a.m. BR bus had to bypass the last two stops on the way to campus because there simply was not enough room for any more passengers. The 11:10 p.m. BR bus heading off campus that same day had standing room only. The crowding problem exists throughout each day.

The Orchard Hill, Campus Shuttle and Southwest buses are rarely overcrowded. There is no increase of passengers on these buses because of the gas shortage; those who use them seldom drive their cars to class anyway since the majority live on campus.

These buses traveling three to six miles or more off campus, however, cannot handle the increased number of passengers.

Oftentime buses spend more time at stops unloading and loading up again than they do on the road between stops.

We need more buses and we need buses more often on the off campus routes.

Dr. William P. Goss, professor of engineering here at the University and the man who worked out the first federal grant for the Student Senate Transit Service, is now working in conjunction with the service on a request to the federal government for a grant for more buses.

For a while though we will still be riding the same crowded buses together. Let's try to do a few things to make our bus riding more comfortable and hassle free.

Unless it's dark, don't ask your bus drive to make unscheduled stops. It just means wasting gas and time. While taking over 150 bus rides I observed that those people who ask the driver to stop at unscheduled stops are usually those who are overweight and need the walk anyway and the same ones who complain when the bus is not precisely on time.

When the bus driver tells you that there is no more room on the bus, don't stand with one foot on the bus and one foot on the ground insisting he let you on (I've have seen a number of people doing this).

When the bus driver asks you to move to the back of the bus, don't pretend that you are hard of hearing.

Don't smoke on the bus.

If you only want to take the bus a few blocks, why not walk instead?

Don't bitch at the bus driver for being two minutes late by your watch. Be thankful that with the gas shortage, you can get where you're going. And for free even.

Barbara Voorhees is a former Collegian columnist.

A happy media

Evan Young

Who the hell really likes the Spice Girls? Are they serious about themselves?

The Spice Girls are a group of beautifully made-up women with as much musical talent as a cork wallboard. They are not good. Their albums sell because of one little fact that media fatcats hope you, the American viewer, do not ever fully realize. Girls with sexy stomachs and too much eye make-up can sell anything on earth.

Think I'm wrong? Then explain to me how in the world No Doubt EVER became popular. They are a talentless band. Musically, they simply suck. But who needs good music when MTV can over-expose a stomach like Gwen Stefani's?

Still think I'm wrong? Remember ABBA? S.O.S.?

A friend of mine came up with the Coca-Cola advertisement of the future. A woman, semi-reclined on a silky couch, completely naked and spread-eagled towards the camera. The sub-heading: "Drink Coke."

I think it has promise. I don't know about anyone else, but sexy chicks with too much make-up make me want to buy stuff.

Who's in charge? I want someone to tell me. Somebody has to know the answers. I want to know who is responsible for the retardation of the American public. Is it Bob? From Bob's discount furniture? When that guy dies, Satan himself is going to be pissed about having to share the same space in hell with him. Personally, I hope he joins Brutus and Cassius in the inferno.

But those ridiculous Bob's commercials do have a purpose. They are the prime example of my "chicken and egg" theory on the American media. What came first: Stupid Americans or stultifying media? Every time I see one of those commercials, I get dumber. I can feel it. A little chunk of my brain (somewhere towards the back) starts to throb, then POP! It's gone forever, lost in the world of mindless, pure evil that we have come to know as the "media."

After all, what do shows like "Martin" have to offer? Movies like Two Days in the Valley? John Grisham books? "Flex" magazine? The Enquirer? What are they trying to tell us?

You actually have to become dumber to find this stuff entertaining. You have to mentally shut down different parts of your brain, like the conscience and the intellect, to really understand this trash for what it is. In this way, the media hope that you never understand what they know; we, the American people, just aren't that smart.

Disagree? Well then, why do the Spice Girls and No Doubt sell? Marion Barry is still in office. What does this say about our culture? Americans are being told that it is okay not to take personal responsibility for anything. What can any one person do? What can any one small group do? Alone we are powerless. Others are in charge — let them make the decisions that affect every facet of our lives.

Right?

Every day, hundreds of thousands of times a day, all across the country, we are being told who to be, what to do, what to look like, who to respect. Beer commercials tell men that they have to be more jacked and wear their hats backwards to pick up all those Playboy centerfold–esque women who are slurping up Coors Light at the other end of the bar. We have to be stronger, faster, richer, drive better cars, have status. Smell like Michael Jordan. Buy sofas from idiots. Lease SUVs that get 10 miles to the gallon and can climb up computer-generated mountains. Watch, as we the people at Fox, show you the worst accidents and disasters and grisly, gruesome trampling–by–elephant deaths that have ever been captured on videotape. Here! Be entertained by other people's death, pain and sorrow!

It's beyond sickening and disgusting. If the media were simply sickening and disgusting, it might be okay. No, most of what we are bombarded with is even worse; it is dulling. It makes us all lose contact with humanity. Instead of telling us to "be more stupid" it tells us to "be stupider."

Don't challenge what you know, don't think about anything. Just sit there, remote in hand, absorb, consume and rot. It's the only thing that the media truly promotes.

Evan Young is a Collegian columnist.

The bonfire of the liberties

Daniel Bodah

What does the First Amendment do for us? I can't quite remember, but I'm sure it's something about freedom of the press — isn't it something about how you can, like, print lots of cool stuff like Marlboro ads and articles about how chicks can get (and keep) a man? I think there's something in there about not printing really messed up stuff, though. I mean, we gotta keep it cool, right?

Jason Moreland is finding out about Georgia–style freedom of the press firsthand. He was the editor of a little 'zine (nickname for a self–published and distributed magazine) called Rise Above that had an official circulation of 33 issues. Rise Above came out in May of last year and contained a bunch of anti–authoritarian quotes, song lyrics and graphics. Some of the people who got it made more photocopies of it, so there were a few more than 33 issues floating around in Clayton County.

Officer Peabody of the Clayton County cops got his hands on a copy of the 'zine in July and started investigating it, but he didn't make any moves against Moreland at this point. It was only some time later that Clayton County's protectors and servers decided to pounce — just at the right time, coinciding with the national hysteria about the bombing at Centennial Olympic Park during the Atlanta Olympic Games.

Moreland was arrested when he showed up at the police station to "talk with [police] about his publication." His crime? Well, it seems that our friend Moreland had advocated the overthrow of the government of Georgia! Can you believe it? This character Moreland turns out to be an anarchist and he put all these things about how much government rots in Rise Above. Not only that, but there was a really wrong recipe for Molotov cocktails in the 'zine, too.

Moreland didn't have any money, and the American Civil Liberties Union felt his rights were being violated (I guess they missed all that stuff in the First Amendment about keeping what you print cool — they seem to think it says you can print anything) so they took on his case. Eventually the District Attorney decided to change the charges from "advocating the overthrow of the government of Georgia" to "unlawful training in the use or making of deadly weapons."

But then in February, the DA dropped the indictment against Moreland. Clayton County's good old boys in blue were none too happy, let me assure you, and they got the DA to re–indict Moreland in March. He's got a trial set for April 16, and he's looking at possible prison time and financial devastation. Why? Well, after all, he did print stuff that was against the government, didn't he? If we let people do that, why, we might have (gasp) anarchy! As the cops of Clayton County apparently know, we better nip that in the bud.

Seriously, what's going on here? Nothing uncommon. Maybe some teenage idealist's civil liberties are being crushed like a slow–moving 'possum wandering across a highway, but there's a good reason for it, we can be sure. After all, the Centennial Olympic Park bombing had just shown again that we are all threatened by scary people who aren't happy about America.

When some big thing like this — or the World Trade Center bombing, or the Oklahoma City Federal Building bombing, or the TWA Flight 800 explosion — happens, isn't it a good idea to start cracking down and protecting ourselves from "terrorism?" So after each of these events, of course we have to start hunting down and arresting all the dissidents out there, all the people who are resisting the rule of law and order in our lovely country.

When we have these witch hunts, we can't just go out and get these people, because unfortunately we have that dumb constitution giving them rights. I mean, we know who they are, but we can never just shoot them or stick them in jail and get it over with. We need to pass a few new laws that make it illegal to exercise all of our rights. After all, isn't it worth a little less freedom to be free of threats to our freedom?

Making these laws — for instance the new powers to search without warrants and confiscate property without pressing charges that we gave our cops to help them fight the "war on drugs" — also gives our wholly honest and perfectly scrupulous "elected representatives" a way to look like they're doing something important for us over there in the capitol. Now we know they've got it all under control.

Hey, I'm realizing these atrocities are actually like parties! Not only do we get to make new laws to bypass a lot of those feinty rights, but we can also have our little witch hunts and get rid of all the weirdos out there — like Moreland, or Arabs in general, or the militia freaks.

And do you know what, all of you reading this out there? I think you're starting to seem a little strange, too...

Daniel Bodah is a Collegian columnist.

Apartment Guide · Massachusetts Daily Collegian

FOUR PAGES OF
OFF-CAMPUS LIVING OPTIONS

Setting the Standard for Apartment Living

THE BOULDERS

- ✘ Large 2 Bedroom Apartments
  - *New Appliances
  - *New Counters / Cabinets
  - *New Carpets / Tile
  - * Selected Units
- ✘ State of the Art Exercise Facility
  - Stairmaster • Lifecycle • Nautilus
- Free Heat & Hot Water
- Professionally Landscaped Grounds
- On Site Laundry Facility
- Free 5 College Bus Stop on Property
- Professional Maintenance Staff on Site
- Central Mailbox Facility
- Rent Starting At $695

Call About Our Specials*
(subject to availability)

256-8534

From Amherst center take Rt. 116 south to East Hadley Rd. The Boulders is located 1/4 of mile down on the left.

- 1,2 & 3 BEDROOM GARDEN STYLE UNITS
  (ALSO TOWNHOUSE STYLE FOR 2 BEDROOM)
- CONVENIENT TO AMHERST, UMASS & INTERSTATE 91
- SCENIC HIKING TRAILS ON 28 WOODED ACRES
- OLYMPIC SIZE POOL
- TENNIS, VOLLEYBALL AND BASKETBALL
- FREE PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION
- 24 HOUR MAINTENANCE

(413) 665-3958

CLIFF SIDE APARTMENTS

MON - FRI
8:30 - 5:30
SAT
10 - 2

APARTMENT GUIDE

Alpine Commons
Phone: 256-0741
Type Of Complex: Apartments

The Boulders
Phone: 256-8534
Type Of Complex: Apartments
Price Range: Starting At $695

Brandywine
Address: 16G Brandywine Dr, Amherst
Phone: 549-0600
Type Of Complex: Apartments, 1 - 2 Bedroom

Cliffside Apartments
Address: 248 Amherst Rd, Sunderland
Phone: 665-3958
Type Of Complex: Apartment Community, 1 - 3 Bedrooms
Location: 5 Miles From UMass On Rt. 116
Price Range: $540 - $850 / Month
When Available: Currently Throughout The Summer
Best Feature Of Property: All Utilities Included, On Bus Route

Hampton Gardens
Address: 73 Barret St, Northhampton
Phone: 586-1405
Type Of Complex: Multi Family, 1 - 4 Bedrooms
Price Range: Have Section 8 Subsidy List & Mkt Rate
When Available: By Application
Best Feature Of Property: On Site Management

Harlow Properties
Address: 73 Main St, Amherst
Phone: 256-3442
Type Of Complex: Apts, Condos, Houses
Locations: Greater Amherst / Northhampton Area
Price Range: $550 - 1350 / Month
When Available: June 1, 1997
Length Of Lease: One Year

Kamins Real Estate
Address: 55 South Pleasant St, Amherst
Phone: 253-2515
Type Of Complex: Studios, 1 - 4 Bedroom Apts, & Houses
Locations: Amherst, Sunderland, Belchertown
Price Range: $360 - $1,400
When Available: ASAP
Length Of Lease: All Leases Expire August 31

Lincoln Real Estate
Address: 25 N. Pleasant St, Amherst
Phone: 253-7879
Type Of Property: Apartments
Price Range: 30% Of Income Or $499 - $565
When Available: 3 To 6 Months
Length Of Lease: One Year

Lord Jeffrey Apts
Address: 121 N. Main St, Belchertown
Phone: 323-5535
Type Of Property: Apartments
Price Range: Starting At $545 / Month Includes Heat, Water
When Available: June
Length Of Lease: 12 Months
Best Feature Of Property: Proximity To Campus

Mill Valley
Address: 420 Riverglade Dr, Amherst
Phone: 253-7377
Type Of Complex: Apartments
Best Feature Of Property: Rural Setting

New Puffton Village Apartments
Address: 1040 N. Pleasant St, Amherst
Phone: 549-0145
Type Of Complex: Apartments

Squires Village Apts
Address: 279 Amherst Rd, Sunderland
Phone: 665-2203
Type Of Complex: Apartments, 1 - 5 Bedrooms
Location: 5 Miles From Campus
Price Range: $525 - $1,005
When Available: June 1st And September 1st
Length Of Lease: One Year (Sublets Allowed)
Best Feature Of Property: Pool, Laundry Room, On Bus Rt

Sugarloaf Estates
Address: 28 River Rd, Sunderland
Phone: 665-3856
Type Of Complex: "Apartment Homes," 2 Bedroom

Best Locations! Great Maintenance Gas Heat Gas Hot Water June & September Leases Showings Start April 7th Hardwood Floors, New Appliances Gilreath Manor Hobart Lane
Lincoln Real Estate
25 N. Pleasant Street
253 - 7879

SUGARLOAF ESTATES
Minutes from UMass
Pool Area Volleyball
Management
VISIT US TODAY!
CALL (413) 665-3856

ALPINE COMMONS
Modern, four bedroom/two bath
-APARTMENTS-
Deluxe kitchens, baths, carpeting, and sliding doors to private balconies
ALL UTILITIES INCLUDED ~ ON BUS LINE ~
MINUTES TO UMass
BUS STOP

AMHERST RESTAURANT PIZZERIA
Formerly Known As Dave's
Conveniently Close to Brandywine, Puffton, Amherst Townhouses & Hobart
POSITIONS AVAILABLE
great food at great prices dine in or take out
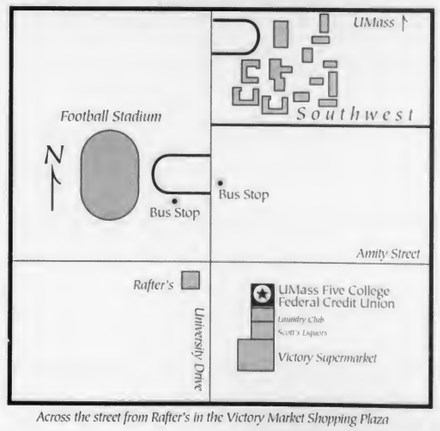
delivery coming soon
Open Daily at 7am
1185 N. Pleasant Street
North Amherst
Buy Any Large 1 Topping or More $1 OFF dine in or take-out exp. 5/15/97
Buy a Large "Amherst Special" $2 OFF dine in or take-out exp. 5/15/97
$1 OFF Any Dinner Entree Dine In Only exp. 5/15/97
PIZZA PASTA CALZONES GRINDERS
549 - 6643

Second Hand • Vintage • All Styles, Makes & Models
USED and RECONDITIONED BICYCLES
Buy · Sell · Trade · Consign
Hampshire Bicycle Exchange (413) 586-4781
EVERY SUNDAY 9am-4pm at Jackson's Flea Market open 8am-5pm • 18th year
Mountain Farms Mall Route 9 Hadley, MA
YEAR-ROUND • INDOORS
CURRENTLY ACCEPTING SPRING and SUMMER CONSIGNMENTS of GOOD QUALITY BICYCLES

LORD JEFFREY APARTMENTS
ONE & TWO BEDROOM APARTMENTS IN LOVELY RURAL; SETTING. HEAT, HOT WATER, & LAUNDRY FACILITIES INCLUDED. RENT IS BASED ON 30% ON YOUR INCOME IF YOU QUALIFY. NO PETS. ONE YEAR LEASE.
121 N. Main St. Belchertown 323-5535

APARTMENT GUIDE STAFF
Advertising Manager Craig J. Brody
Special Issues Coordinator Ryan Duques
Production & Cover Graphic Marc Dionne
Advertising Production David Voldan

Squire Village Apartments



"A Country Setting With a Convenient Location."
- Minutes to UMass -
Spacious Bedrooms • Air Conditioning • On Bus Line • Inground Pool • Laundry Facilities
279 Amherst Road • Route 116
Sunderland, MA 01375
665-2203

You are eligible for the best deal in town for financial services!

Formerly the Student Creidt Union, the UMass Five College Federal Credit Union allows any UMass student to join and receive benefits like:

- No Fee checking
- Free ATM cards
- Low rates on computer loans
- Easy terms on car loans
- Free 24 hour audio teller service
- Stafford and PLUS student loans
- Just a short stroll from the bus stop

Across the street from Rafter's in the Victory Market Shopping Plaza

UMass Five College Federal Credit Union
AMHERST • WORCESTER • DARTMOUTH
6 University Drive • Amherst • 549-7400
Across the street from Rafter's

Convenient Hours
Walk-up
Monday, Thursday, Friday
7:30 am - 9:30 am
3:30 pm - 6:00 pm
Lobby
Mon-Thur 9:30 am - 3:30 pm
Friday 9:30 am - 5:00 pm
Saturday 9:00 am - Noon

Puffton Village . . . Your First Choice
1, 2 and 3 bedroom apartments

Newly renovated units that include:
New appliances
New carpeting
New kitchen cabinets & counter tops
Central air conditioners
Rents starting at $615 per month

Featuring or

Traditional units that are:
Fully applianced
Freshly painted
Carpeted/Tiled Floors
Central Air Conditioned
Rents starting at $545 per month

All rents include Heat, Hot Water & Cooking Gas and use of an olympic size pool, 5 tennis courts, basketball court, laundry rooms and on-site parking.
Now accepting rental applications for summer and fall. Call today 549-0145

Puffton Village Apartments • 1040 North Pleasant St., Amherst, Mass

We have your reasons for living off-campus!

Come by and see our model

Monday - Friday 8 am - 4 pm

or

Saturday & Sunday 10 am - 4 pm

BRANDYWINE AT AMHERST

Spacious 1 and 2 Bedrooms •Beautiful Grounds • On the Bus Line • Swimming Pool • Private Balconies • On-site Laundry Facilities • Close to UMass • Heat, Hot Water, Gas Included • Central Air Conditioning • Private Parking • Sorry, No Pets

Brandywine Apartments

549-0600

16G Brandywine Dr., Amherst, MA 01002

Mill Valley ESTATES

Now...The lifestyle you've been waiting for...
Luxury two and three bedroom apartment in Amherst

Amenities Include:

- Central Location
- Mountain Views
- Private Entries! Select Apartments
- On PVTA Bus route

- On site daycare center
- Play areas
- Victory Gardens
- Tennis & Basketball Courts
- Laundry Room

We Offer:

- Heat & Hot Water included in your rent
- Wall to Wall Carpet
- Washer/Dryer Hookups
- Air Conditioning
- Fully Applianced Kitchens dishwashers, disposals
- Intercom (Entry) System
- Professional On Site Management
- 24 Hour Maintenance

253-7377

Equal Housing Opportunity

420 Riverglade Drive, Amherst
Just off Rt. 9, Take West St. (Rt. 116s) to East Hadley Rd.
Take First Left onto Riverglade Drive.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Black Affairs

Monday, April 7, 1997

Editor's Note:

This week's Black Affairs Page is dedicated to Pan Africanist and freedom fighter Kwame Ture (formerly Stokely Carmichael). We at the Black Affairs desk understand the need to recognize the significance of leaders like Kwame Ture and the knowledge, insight and wisdom that can be gained by such important figures in black culture. We, as a black nation, are at a point where the cries for revolution have been hushed by complacency and acceptance. It seems as if we've gotten so used to being discriminated against that we find it meaningless to bother fighting. No longer do we seem to possess the fire and drive it takes to make real change, as our parents and grandparents did before us. It is important that we learn to listen to the voices of those that were fighting racism during the '50s, '60s and '70s, so that we may regain our insight and reasons as to why we need to continue that fight now. We can not continue to accept the losses that are thrown to us on the regular. We fight ourselves for the small percentage of jobs and access to the "better things" this country has to offer, rather than fight the system to get more. Eventually, if we don't make the call for true revolution, we'll choke on the very bones we cherish so much. Kwame Ture has been rejecting scraps of freedom his entire life. On April 14th, in the Campus Center Auditorium, it is the hope of myself and the entire Black Affairs Desk, that everyone reading this will take the time to hear Ture speak and listen to the voice of Black Power.

-- Humphrey brown III.
Editor of the Black Affairs Page

The last tour freedom fighter

By Gregory Casimir
Collegian Staff

On April 14, militant black activist and international spokesman Kwame Ture will be a featured speaker in a program at UMass.

Ture was diagnosed with cancer in 1996, for which he is currently being treated, but his appearance at UMass will be one of his final in America before he returns back to Africa at the end of the month.

Formerly known as Stokely Carmichael, Kwame Ture is regarded as one of the three most influential Civil rights/black liberation leaders of the '60s, along with Dr. King and Malcolm X.

In 1965, as chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC), Carmichael championed for the development of independent political, economic and cultural resources for the black community. This concept took on the identity of the slogan "Black Power," — a phrase that resonated throughout Africa, the Caribbean, Europe and America.

In 1967, Carmichael came to Africa under the invitation of Dr. Kwame Nkrumah, Pan-African theoretician and first president of the newly independent Ghana. After the assassination of Dr. King in 1968, Carmichael moved his base of operations to Guinea where he served as the exiled President Nkrumah's political secretary until the president's death.

At the invitation of President Ahmed Sekou Toure, he made his home in Guinea. In tribute to his two mentors, he changed his name to Kwame Ture, and remained active in Africa and the U.S. as the president of the All African People's Revolutionary Party, a Pan-Africanist organization.

Prof. Esther Terry, Chair of the W.E.B. Du Bois Department of Afro-American Studies, expressed what having a person of Ture's caliber come to UMass meant.

"His life encompasses so much of the contemporary political history of the black world in our time. We in the department thought there should be some public recognition of that in the Valley," Terry said.

This tribute will take place in the Campus Center Auditorium. This program is being sponsored by the W.E.B. Du Bois Department of Afro-American Studies and the Distinguished Visitors Program, the Campus Activities Office, the Black Mass Communications Project and the Black Student Union.

The panelists for the tribute will include: Judy Richardson, the co-producer of the prize-winning documentary Malcolm X: Make It Plain; Bill Strickland, a faculty member of the W.E.B. Du Bois Afro-American Studies Department, the author of Malcolm X: Make It Plain, and a member of the Board of the Rainbow Coalition; and Ekwueme Michael Thelwell, a student activist with Ture at Howard, novelist, and former chair of the W.E.B. Du Bois of Afro-American Studies at UMass.

This event is free and open to the public. For more information, call 545-2751 or stop by the W.E.B. Du Bois Department of Afro-American Studies on the third floor of the New Africa House building.

Black Affairs is Dead...

without dedicated writers to keep it alive
The Black Affairs Page is looking for creative, thought provoking writers to represent on the page.
If you've been meaning to get involved, this is your time.
All members of the ALANA community with an interest are urged to contact Humphrey brown III at 546-0977 or come down to the Collegian in the Campus Center Basement.
This is your voice.
Take control.

The radical tragedy of a generation: From Stokely Carmichael to Kwame Ture — from Nonviolence to Pan Africanism

Stokely Carmichael and Mike Thelwell after a speech on Black Power at the University of Massachusetts in 1973.

Though at 55, still a relatively young man, Kwame Ture's public career, more so than any of his contemporaries, is epochal. That is, it recapitulates with remarkable fidelity the evolutionary twists and turns, triumphs as well as disappointments, in the political struggles of an entire generation in the black world.

The very geography of his life reflects the pattern of the Diaspora. Born Stokely Carmichael in the Caribbean, he attended high school and began his political activism in New York City in the '50s where, as a teenager, he got his first lessons in political organizing by helping Bayard Ruain organize, "The Youth March on Washington for Integrated Schools."

He served his political apprenticeship in Mississippi and Alabama in the nonviolent Civil Rights Movement and, later, assumed a national and international presence as spokesman for black power/black liberation. Now, as Kwame Ture, he divides his time between Africa and America as a proponent of Pan-African unity. Whatever else, the brother has stayed the course. And what a remarkable course it has been!

Even in a generation assuming it could change the world, his career was precocious. The mentors of his youth were Bayard Rustin and Martin Luther King, radical pacifists and later Malcolm X, the very avatar of black independence.

The 10th grader organizing his peers to March on Washington became the college sophomore doing 60 days on a Mississippi prison farm for Freedom Riding, the crime of sitting on a bus next to a white friend. As a full-time organizer for black voting rights, he would be arrested 21 more times, because he never could, "take low," bite his tongue or shut up as required of blacks in the peculiar etiquette of southern racism.

By 1965, he had helped organize for the March on Washington, the Mississippi Freedom Summer, the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party's (MFDP) challenge to the Democratic National Convention in Atlantic City. He had come through terrorism, beatings, shootings, bombings and witnessed the murders of Medgar Evers, Schwerner, Chaney, Goodman, other friends and later the murder of his friend and neighbor, Malcolm X.

Not yet 25, he had began to doubt the effectiveness of nonviolence and the possibility of integration as a viable solution for the problems of the black community as a whole. His ringing call for Black Power, therefore, reflected the logic and experience of the struggles he had been a part of and which had formed him. It was also a hard examination of the concrete realities not really addressed by the term "integration." It was the cry of a generation, heard around the world.

He, for example, predicted and warned of a coming urban decay because:

Our goal cannot be to escape the black community, but to transform and empower it. Not to "transcend" black consciousness, but to embrace and be strengthened by it. Not to reject black culture, but to explore and develop it.

— Black Power

Then there was Vietnam, that sorry, foolish, callous sacrificing of a generation. The children of the black, the Latino and the poor were being drafted disproportionately and sent home, sometimes in body bags or sometimes traumatized, drug addicted and broken in spirit.

"Hell, no," he dissented, "We won't go."

Drafted, like Mohammed Ali, he refused induction. In this case, the army blinked. Their team of psychologists found it convenient to declare him "emotionally unbalanced," and "unfit for military service." It is believed that they thought it best not to provoke the nation's black youth by jailing their spokesman.

J. Edgar Hoover and his FBI saw it differently, however. This young black man of 25 was a "dangerous" Negro, "a threat to national security," to be "neutralized, eliminated or otherwise discredited." They began by placing him under 24- hour surveillance. Your tax dollars at work.

Still, he wouldn't shut up.

The day, in 1968, when his friend and ally, Martin, was murdered was a turning point of sorts. I spoke with him that day on the phone from Washington. The brother was more angry than I can ever remember hearing him.

"They did it, man. If they can kill Martin, goddamn... Look, I can't talk now. I'm going into the community."

"To do what?" I asked.

"Organize."

That night, I saw him on television calling for rebellion. Washington's inner city erupted in flames. The government took off the gloves. It got real dangerous after that.

I have since seen FBI papers which boast of planting rumors around the world, that he was a CIA agent, hoping to get him killed. One FBI report brags gleefully of midnight phone calls to his mother's house, warning her of non-existent teams of assassins allegedly dispatched to kill her son. Three days later, the letter gloated, "he and his wife were en route to Africa." The FBI took credit. But, that was a mistake too.

Because, still, he wouldn't shut up. The most fearsome and dreaded of U.S. government agencies would be mobilized to the attack after Carmichael married Miriam Makaba, the scintillating, politically conscious, South African singer. An extraordinary artiste, whose powerful renditions of traditional Xhosa songs had won her international celebrity, Makaba was in political exile from her native land. Soon her young husband would also be exiled from his adopted country and banned from his native land and she unable to work in this country. The dreaded agency was, of course, the Internal Revenue Service, whose continuous and unrelenting harassment made it impossible for the singer to perform professionally in this country. Another reason to leave.

Ekwueme Michael Thelwell

But still he would not shut up.

For now there were independent black countries in Africa that could offer at least some security. Kwame Nkrumah and Sekou Toure, towering figures in the struggle for African independence, adopted him. He became political secretary to Nkrumah, and at least for the moment, beyond the reach of the arrogance of U.S. power.

It would be amusing to read the official report of the diplomat assigned to collect the brother's passport and, who finding him in the presence of three African body guards, was unable to do anything but sputter when he refused to surrender the document.

"May I remind you, Mr. Carmichael, that is a document of the United States government?"

"If that is true, sir, why don't you take it?"

Tangible, if limited, black power? In any event, Stokely Carmichael, former nonviolent integration activist, reincarnated as Kwame Ture, Pan–Africanist.

It would, however, be a mistake to underestimate the reach and resolve of U.S. power. For equally suddenly, if we believe the state department, this unrepentant, outspoken young black man becomes the major international danger, threatening the internal security of 26 of America's client states around the world. Britain, France, even Trinidad, the country of his birth, pronounced him persona non grata. Countries he had neither intention nor interest in visiting announced that he would be denied the entry he had never requested.

Another mistake.

For there were countries only too glad to welcome his militant presence and what he had to say. And still, he would not shut up, surfacing in places like Cuba, China, Algeria and North Vietnam, who not only invited him, but offered him a platform from which to speak.

And the things he had to say in those countries about capitalist exploitation, American racism and the arrogance of their foreign policy did not exactly endear him in Washington. Especially to those agencies that had hounded him out of the country in the first place.

There is, of course, much more that could be said, but we are out of space for now. Those were, indeed, extraordinary times, troubled and troubling times. Much has happened, but the brother has stayed the course he has set for himself. Whatever one might think or say about that course, his love for, commitment to, and pride in his people has never been questioned, nor derailed. Nor, has his courage, or his audacious, unrepentant fighting spirit ever been seen to flag or waver. This is good, for he will be needing them all now, more than ever... his courage and his people.

Michael Thelwell is a professor in the W.E.B. Du Bois Department of Afro-American Studies.

Kwame Ture speaks at an African Liberation Day celebration by the All African People's Revolutionary Party.

Ture's aunt not surprised by activism

By Kathy Ann Waterman
Trinidad Sunday Express

In the 1960s, Stokely Carmichael was jailed 21 times in the American South, during the struggle for black voting rights.

All this came as no surprise to his aunt Elaine Letren of Trinidad. In fact, to the old lady who had taken care of the boy after his parents had left for New York, both the voting and the jailings seemed quite appropriate and even inevitable. Ms. Letren tells the story of the first election with universal adult suffrage in Trinidad, when Stokely was seven. It explains why she wasn't surprised.

The first present his mother sent back home from New York was a beautiful, grown up blue suit with long pants and wide lapels. When he dressed up for church in the suit, with a bow tie and handkerchief in the breast pocket, people called him the "Little Man."

In 1948, Trinidad's first general elections were held, Ms. Letren recalls. One of the candidates was Uriah R.A.B. Butler, a militant labor organizer who had organized general strikes for independence and been jailed by the British for sedition against the crown. "RAB" Butler, now one of Trinidad's national heroes, was released from jail to contest the elections.

Long before that day came, the young Stokely had been nagging his aunt Elaine to cast her ballot. She kept telling him that she did not want to get involved in politics."

"But Tante Elaine," the boy cried, "Didn't Mr. Butler go to jail for us?"

She told him yes.

"Then I want you to vote for Mr. Butler, Tante. If he could go to jail for us, then we must support him so he could do even more."

The aunt was still not convinced.

But the polling station was only two streets over from the house in which the boy lived with his grandmother, three aunts and two sisters. On election day, the young Stokely attired himself in his "Little Man" suit and presented himself to the voting table.

"I come to vote for Mr. Butler," he informed the returning officer.

"I'm sorry, little man, you have to be 21," the officer replied. Upon which, the boy ran home in tears to complain, "Oh Tante Elaine, 14 more years is too long."

He wheedled, cajoled, wept and refused to be comforted until his aunt got dressed and went down to vote in order to escape from her nephew with the hooded, brooding eyes and political concerns that seemed entirely too heavy for a boy of seven.

One hopes that after all that, Tante Elaine voted for the radical nationalist who had been jailed for his countries freedom, but she wouldn't say.

"But the boy Stokely was always different," she recalled. "He used to hide food in a butter can to take to school to give to a classmate who ate only dried crackers for lunch."

Another time, she said, a friend of his grandmother's scolded him for keeping company with some barefoot, ragged, scruffy looking boys. According to Tante Elaine, her nephew told the woman:

"Ms. Annie, in Sunday school we sing that Jesus loves all the children of the world. You don't love them just because they're poor and haven't got? I'm sorry Ms. Annie, I can't listen to you. I got to listen to the Bible."

"The family wanted him to be a doctor," Ms. Letren said, "But you can see how he was, even from when he was small small..." the aunt smiled proudly.

Arts & Living

Monday, April 7, 1997

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Monkees reissue program designed to earn respect

By John Hendrickson
Collegian Staff

Everybody knows the Monkees. Nobody likes the Monkees. Why? Since their inception over 30 years ago, the made–for–TV quartet has had a serious public relations problem. A series of high–profile public embarrassments, ranging from allegations that they couldn't play their own instruments back in the '60s right up through their half– baked, nostalgia–laced reunion tours of the last decade, have obscured the importance of the band's importance in rock history. Hell, even Monkees fans are the musical equivalent of Trekkies. However, Rhino Records is trying, for once and for all, to set the record straight regarding the Monkees' legacy and to secure their rightful status high in the pantheon of rock history.

The "concept" of the Monkees was based on the Beatles' antics in 1964's A Hard Day's Night — four untamed, wise–ass kids with charisma and attitude to spare. Open auditions were held in Hollywood the following year; of the 400+ applicants, Micky Dolenz, Mike Nesmith, Davy Jones and Peter Tork were cast as the Pre–fab Four. In September of '66, The Monkees debuted on NBC. "Last Train To Clarksville" was released, and the question of whether they were a television show or a rock band was first asked.

"The Monkees actually could play; they were a more than capable garage band and would have fit in perfectly with the punk movement ten years later."

The verdict may still be out on that one, but if the Monkees are to be judged strictly on the merits of the show, they can only emerge as winners. The Emmy–winning program ran from 1966–68 and, in addition to offering slapstick comedy, subtle drug humor and sly social and political commentary, it also created something now known as the music video. Rhino is currently in the process of releasing all of the episodes on videotape, and cable channel VH–1 will be airing the entire series beginning in June.

However, most of the negative attention clouding the Monkees' legacy focuses around their music, as opposed to the TV show. And it's high time this matter is cleared up. The Monkees' first two albums, The Monkees and More Of The Monkees held the number one position on the Billboard album chart from October '66 through May '67 — every consecutive week — and More was knocked off by Headquarters, their third LP (in '67, the Monkees outsold the Beatles and the Stones combined). But the issue here isn't record sales, it's who's actually on the records themselves. And it ain't the Monkees. Due to their hectic shooting schedule and Micky Dolenz's slightly dodgy grasp of the drumsticks, the band was only allowed to contribute vocals to their first two albums (although Nesmith was granted production duties on the songs he wrote). However, with ace session musicians laying down the tracks and such top pop songwriters as Neil Diamond, Boyce and Hart, and Goffin and King penning the tunes, music supervisor Don Kirshner had found a formula which sold millions of records and made even more millions of dollars. And then the Monkees rebelled.

In what TV Guide called the "Great Revolt of '67," a frustrated Nesmith (displaying astounding integrity) called a press conference announcing that the Monkees weren't allowed to play on their own records; he then threatened to quit unless they were given complete musical control. And it worked. The Monkees' next two albums, Headquarters and Pisces, Aquarius, Capricorn, & Jones, LTD. (both released in '67), featured band members on most of the instruments and were appealing collections of rock, folk and psychedelia (as with the rest of their catalogue, Rhino has reissued both albums with extensive liner notes and loads of bonus tracks). Although these albums represented their creative peak, sales began to slip dramatically. One needs only to listen to Live 1967 (their opening act that tour was the Jimi Hendrix Experience) for proof that the Monkees actually could play; they were a more than capable garage band and would have fit in perfectly with the punk movement ten years later.

However, by 1968 the Monkees' fortunes began to slip — the show got cancelled, the records weren't selling, and they couldn't shake the "manufactured" stigma. Frustrated and bitter, they decided to make a movie. The result was 1968's Head. Directed by series creator (and noted filmmaker) Bob Rafelson and written by the band and Jack Nicholson, the Monkees attacked the pop culture of the day, the Hollywood machine, Vietnam, and, most of all, themselves. Spoofing their television theme song, they declared, "Hey hey we are the Monkees / you know we love to please / a manufactured image / with no philosophies." Pretty heavy when compared to, "And then I saw her face / now I'm a believer." Ramming the point home, the film ends with the band committing suicide. The critics didn't understand it, and thus hated it. The general public never had a chance to see it, as it only played in one New York theater for three days. Rhino has recently rereleased Head on videotape; almost thirty years later, it still stands as a scathing indictment of Hollywood's warped morality and a testament to the social and political climate of the late '60s.

The Monkees decided to end their last year as a quartet with a vitriolic bang, which ended up being a whimper. Determined to bring their discontent to a large audience (something the failure of Head couldn't accomplish), in December of 1968, they filmed a TV special, 33 1/3 Revolutions Per Monkee. Loosely based on Darwin's theory of evolution (humans from monkeys — get it?), 33 1/3 detailed their artificial origins and their inability to cast that albatross. Featuring Jerry Lee Lewis, Little Richard, and Fats Domino, the show was even more overwhelmingly cynical than Head. NBC, detecting this, ran the special up against the 1969 Academy Awards, effectively rendering it DOA. Rhino's recent release on videotape marks the first time the show has been available since its original broadcast.

After the filming of 33 1/3, Peter Tork quit the band, and the Monkees continued on as a trio. Their last two albums with Tork, though, rank with Headquarters and Pisces as their best. The Birds, The Bees, and The Monkees and the Head soundtrack find the individual band members pursuing their own musical paths; from Nesmith's country–rock to Tork's Eastern mysticism, the Monkees were creatively peaking.

Their next two albums, Instant Replay and Present, were essentially solo ventures for the three remaining Monkees. Although both are patchy, Jones' "You And I" (with Neil Young on guitar) highlights Replay and Nesmith's anthem "Listen To The Band" is arguably the Monkees' finest hour (Present). However, the records were ignored and in early 1970 Nesmith jumped ship. The remaining two members released a truly terrible album, Changes, and vanished. The Monkees were dead.

And then MTV (created by Nesmith, incidentally) began rerunning the show in 1986 to high ratings. Reunion tours followed (minus Nesmith, now a successful filmmaker and solo artist), and Rhino mined the vaults with the release of the excellent Live 1967, the four–disc Listen To The Band boxed set, a definitive Greatest Hits package, and the rarities and unreleased tracks compilations Missing Links Vols. 1–3. To commemorate the band's 30th anniversary, the band fully reunited to record the surprisingly rocking Justus album (Rhino), an ABC television special which aired in February, and a highly successful European tour last month (look for some U.S. dates, with Nesmith, this summer). Rhino also produced an hour–long documentary, Hey, Hey, We're The Monkees for the Disney Channel and published a companion coffee–table book of photographs and anecdotes. Expect an expanded video of the Hey, Hey special to hit stores later this year.

Back in the day, the Monkees counted such musical and social icons as Timothy Leary, Frank Zappa and, yes, the Beatles amongst their fans and supporters. Three giants of the '60s cultural landscape managed to get over the "hipness" factor and appreciate the Monkees for what they were (and still are) — a damn good pop–rock band and a unique and talented comedy group. Shouldn't you? Thirty years down the line, the music, the television show, and even Head have aged surprisingly well, appearing much less dated than some of the works of their contemporaries (when was the last time you've been able to listen to any Doors album with a straight face?). Any fans of rock history, pop culture, or '60s rock are advised to seriously give them a chance and check out some of the Monkees recorded legacy. Thirty years of disrespect has been long enough.

The band everybody loves to hate, The Monkees, is back with an extensive reissue program covering their entire catalogue. L–R: Peter Tork, Micky Dolenz, Davy Jones, and Mike Nesmith

Local artists shown on campus

By Julia Casson
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Center is home to abundant opportunities, talent and diversity, all of which are apparent at the various galleries found on campus.

• Women Artists/Massachusetts Educators is the title of the exhibit showing at Hampden Gallery. It features Liza Folman, an associate professor of art at the Art Institute of Boston and Rosanne Retz, an associate professor of art here at UMass.

Retz says that "through my artworks, I am responding to what I find beautiful in nature." This thought is evident in the intricate designs of her woodcuts. Dense forests with minute details seem to be her trademark work.

• Liza Folman is "interested in the fragility of the moment." Folman is showing her work entitled Time Pieces which depict the aspects and effects of time. Her setting for these prints was an empty lot in a small town. Her work is reminiscent of photographs and is extremely realistic.

• Imagination takes over when viewing the work of world–renowned artist Papo Colo, who has displayed his work at the Herter Gallery for the past month. His paintings have an abstract and flowing quality about them and his exhibit contained paintings with great feeling.

Papo Colo and Jeanette Ingberman are co–founders of Exit Art: First World, which is located in New York City and exhibits work of young artists.

• This April marks the 50th anniversary of Jackie Robinson breaking the color barrier in major league baseball. African–Americans were banned from the major leagues in 1887 and many proceeded to play on segregated teams. In honor of the anniversary, the Augusta Savage Gallery, located in the New Africa House, is presenting an exhibition entitled Bases Loaded: A Tribute to Negro Baseball Leagues.

The various artists portray many aspects of this piece of history through paintings, sketches, sculptures, and collages. The assortment of eight artists include UMass professors Michael Coblyn and Dorrance Hill, and locals Lorna Ritz and Greg Stone. Also featured are Tomie Arai, Frank Diaz Escalet, Grace Williams and LaVon Van Williams, Jr.

• The talents of young artists of UMass–Dartmouth can be viewed at Wheeler Gallery. The exhibit is at this campus via an exchange program between Amherst and Dartmouth. The vast array of talent is evident through the many different styles and techniques of art.

COURTESY LIZA FOLMAN

Acclaimed artist Liza Folman's Time Pieces, a collection of prints, is on display at the Hampden Gallery in Southwest now through April 17th.

ANNA FELER / COLLEGIAN

A capella group Six Minutes performed pop hits to an enthusiastic audience at Benzanson Recital Hall Friday night.

The biggest threat to depression is your awareness of it.

Some of the symptoms of depression may [illegible] Sometimes depression [illegible] MOST [illegible] That's why it's so important to identify the symptoms of depression and if you or someone you know is interrupted by a period of depression, remember that depression is treatable and [illegible]

UNTREATED DEPRESSION

http://www.save.org

TAKE ACTION!

Help promote responsible representation of body size and shape in the media!

Stop by our Campus Center table on April 7, 8, 9, and 11 to find out more.

Sponsored by: 5 College Eating Disorders Committee, and the UHS Womens Health Project

Do we know how to spoil you?
Worker-owned CollectiveCopies

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Families
Thursday, April 10, 1997
Room 917
6:30 - 8 p.m. - Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass

I think my roommate has an eating disorder.
How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help.
How can I convince her to see a professional?
Who should I suggest.. Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia.
She says it's under control, but I don't think it is.
I'm really afraid... What can I do to help?

If you are concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call University Health Services Health Education at 577-5181 or General Medicine 2 at 577-5233

■ ACC

continued from page 10

"It was obviously a timeout call in double–overtime."

While the late–game call would stand as questionable in its own right, what made the call down right controversial was Cullen's involvement.

For three years as an undergrad, Cullen wore the Blue and White of a Duke uniform. A three–time All–American who still holds three records at his alma mater, Cullen's connection to Duke runs deep. In addition to being a player, he also coached the Blue Devils for eight years.

It is not unheard of to have a school's graduate back on his home field in the stripes of a referee's uniform. The Minutemen themselves have had an alum call games on Richard F. Garber field, so Cullen has to be given a minuscule benefit of the doubt. However, when controversy erupts and bias seems apparent, something is wrong.

Casey Kane is a Collegian columnist.

M's Johnson returns; Red Sox win on road

By Jim Cour
Associated Press

SEATTLE — The loss was almost irrelevant to the Seattle Mariners. What mattered most was that Randy Johnson pitched — and pitched well.

Boston rookie Nomar Garciaparra's three-run homer in the ninth inning off Norm Charlton rallied the Red Sox to an 8-6 victory Saturday night over the Mariners.

"I'm back now, but I still have to continue to take small steps before I can get out there and do the things I used to do," Johnson said after making his first start since last May. "But this was a step in the right direction and I'm pretty pleased with tonight."

Garciaparra's first homer of the season spoiled a night when 57,110 welcomed Johnson's return to the Kingdome mound and saw Ken Griffey Jr. hit his fourth homer this season.

■ baseball

continued from page 10

Braunstein followed Clark's lead with a two–run dinger to right, giving the Minutemen a 5–2 lead after three.

After Dayton catcher Jason Seigfried's solo homer in the fourth made it a 5–3 game, the Massachusetts bats exploded, putting away the Flyers. UMass first baseman David Giglio reached on an error to start the bottom of the fourth, and Gorrie followed with an infield single. After a sacrifice and a flyout from A–10 preseason Player of the Year Muchie Dagliere, Otto walked Braunstein to load the bases with two outs. Clark then blasted a grand slam over the rightcenterfield fence, a 410 foot bomb that gave UMass a 9–3 lead.

"It was just one of those days," Clark said. "Everything was going for me. I had some timely hits."

UMass pitcher Adam Robinson pitched one inning in relief of Bennett, letting up two runs on one hit, but struck out Schwade to end the game.

Dayton 4, Massachusetts 0

It would have been great if the Minutemen took half of its runs from the first game and put them towards the second, but that just doesn't happen in real life. The exploding rockets that controlled UMass' bats from the first half of the doubleheader turned into duds, while Dayton managed to squeeze out four runs — more than enough to win the game, 4–0.

"We just hurt ourselves," Stone said. "We didn't compete at the plate, like we should."

Bill Cooke now drops to 2–2 after surrendering four runs (three earned) on five hits, with only one walk.

After four and a third, Ryan Cameron came in to finish off the game on the mound for UMass. He allowed no runs and no hits in the two and two–thirds innings he pitched, while striking out three Flyers.

"Cameron threw very well," Stone said.

Combined, the two hurlers for the Minutemen did the job, but it just wasn't enough as the line–up gave them no run support.

"We just couldn't get on board," Clark said. "We didn't make things happen." Clark who had four hits over the two games was picked off by pitcher Jay Toth at second base in the fourth inning after getting a hit and then stealing his way to the second bag.

It was things like this that made the game more painful. The Minutemen have great skill at the plate, from top to bottom, but they couldn't get on a grip on Toth's sidearm delivery.

The lack of competition at the plate in the second game gave Stone something to be concerned about — the team batted .230 in the second game, compared to hitting .538 in the first. Every conference series is important, no matter what team it is. Winning tomorrow's game is a must for the Minutemen.

"[We've] got to win every series in order to have a chance in the A–10 tournament," Stone said.

The Minutemen host the rubber game against Dayton tomorrow at noon on the Earl E. Lorden Field.

■ lacrosse

continued from page 10

left off in the first, applying offensive pressure quickly and capitalizing on their opportunities. Mike DelPercio scored on a low shot from 20 yards out in front of Kirmser.

Duke retaliated once again, this time Fey returning Diggs' favor by assisting the sophomore on the high shot from the top of the box. UMass gained momentum and regained a one goal lead courtesy of Jim Kennedy.

Two minutes later, it appeared that the Blue Devils would have the opportunity to even the score. UMass sophomore Eric Silbercasse was awarded a one minute slashing penalty for making a successful, though illegal, last ditch attempt to curtail a Duke scoring bid. The Blue Devils fired off four shots during the ensuing extra man opportunity.

Grande added a fifth goal for Massachusetts, which took the two goal lead on an assist from Glass with 17 seconds to play in the half. The score went unchanged for almost 10 minutes, until freshman Jason Hines scooped an underhanded pass to Kirmser.

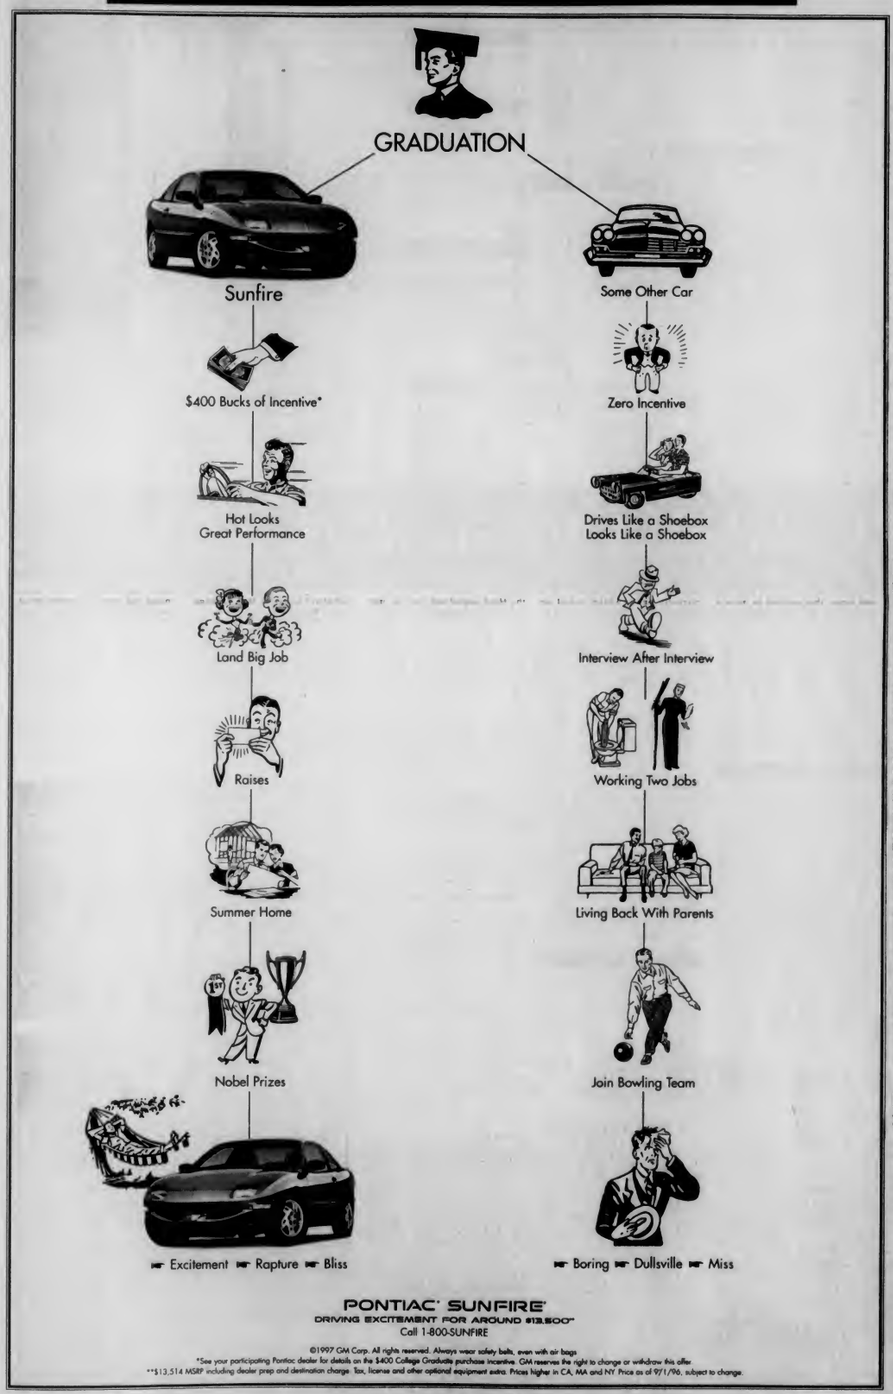
Duke countered with Adam Dretler notching his team's fourth goal. DelPercio tallied his second for UMass at 1:31 of the third, and it appeared that the Minutemen might pull away. Entering the fourth frame, the score stood at 7–4.

In the fourth quarter a series of penalties and turnovers triggered a quick erosion of the UMass lead, and at the end of regulation, the Minutemen were back to ground zero, yet couldn't pull it out in the two OT's.

UMass will hope to rebound at home from the loss, as they host New Hampshire on Tues. at Garber Field.

■ gymnastics

continued from page 10



The Minutewomen finished the competition with their strongest event, the vault. There was hardly a brighter moment at the meet for UMass than when Rokia Madore, in the lead off position, nailed her fault for a 9.70.

"Rokia has been training great, she's worked so hard. Here's a kid who is the epitome of this team. She goes and scores a 9.70 for us and it's a counting score," Kuzara said. "It may have been the best performance of our vaulting line– up, other than Lianne's vault. Now what do you say about that? You say just unbelievable things."

LeBeau, Swartz and Mosby all had strong vaults as well, Colucci ended her evening with a 9.725. Vaulting was finished off by Laing who earned a 9.85.

"Everybody down the line did an incredible vaults and this team did exactly what you'd want a team to do — perform," Kuzara said. "And I'm very pleased with them."

AN SPORTS ARE HERE

PONTIAC SUNFIRE
DRIVING EXCITEMENT FOR AROUND $12,500
Call 1-800-SUNFIRE

©1997 GM Corp. All rights reserved. Always wear safety belts, even with air bags
*See your participating Pontiac dealer for details on the $400 College Graduate purchase incentive. GM reserves the right to change or withdraw this offer.
$13,514 MSRP including dealer prep and destination charge. Tax, license and other optional equipment extra. Prices higher in CA, MA and NY. Price as of 9/1/96, subject to change.

AFRAID OF OVER-STUDYING?? TAKE A BREAK! WATCH HARD ROCK LIVE PRESENTED BY PONTIAC SUNFIRE SUNDAY 8 P.M. AND 1 A.M., MONDAY 8 P.M., SATURDAY 5 P.M. ALL TIMES EST/PST. ONLY ON VH1. www.hardrocklive.msn.com

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Trying to quit smoking or chewing tobacco? Need help? Support Group meets every Wednesday from 7-8pm in Campus Center Room 801. Free. Call 577-5181 for more info or just drop by.

Concerned about Sex, STD's, Alcohol, Drugs, Eating Disorders, Stress, HIV/AIDS or Smoking? Call Peer Health Connections at 577-5168 for answers to your questions. Completely Confidential.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Great apartment uptown! 5 min. walk to campus. One bedroom. Begin 6/1. $630/month. 256-6441

Take over our lease or will sublet starting June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brandywine Rent includes heat and hot water. Call 549-0530

AUTO FOR SALE

1992 Hyundai Elantra excellent condition, auto, A/C, stereo, 49K miles, $3500 Hyon 256-1285

'86 Volkswagen Jetta GL 5-speed, fully equipped with sunroof, PS, air, new stereo, Thule racs, full records. Kept garaged in winter. Excellent condition. Must see. 90K miles. $2500 or B/O 549-4996

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

'88 Dodge 600 incs. runs. $600. 584-4887

'89 Cutlass Ciera low miles, PS, PW, PL, AC, AM/FM cassette, cruise. $3795. 549-1215

'88 Pontiac Grand Prix $900 in new parts. $2000 or B/O. 587-0328

EMPLOYMENT

LAST CHANCE

Legal Assistants Wanted April 18th is the last day to apply to the Student Legal Services Office about Fall 1997 internships! Get hands-on experience in the legal field. Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession required— training is provided. Contact Student Legal Services today. 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Summer Jobs on Nantucket Work on the beach. Positions available now. Start date around May 20th. Short order cooks. Aerobics instructor. For immediate consideration, call (508)325-6347. Housing available.

We need two people to work in Southern Vermont Country Inn. Do dishes and rooms, wait tables, food prep, etc. Room and board plus salary, tips. Call (802)874-4140.

PAINTERS- Full-time summer, EXPERIENCE PREFERRED, vehicle, $8.50-$9.00/hr, heavy lifting required. 9:00-5:00 ONLY. 247-9480

Vermont Adventure! Farm and Wilderness is now hiring summer staff. We need people who want to provide positive guidance and support to adolescents coming of age in the 90's. Counselors, nurses, cooks, general staff. Organic farming, backpacking, rock climbing, waterfront, carpentry, crafts. Challenging wilderness environment in the Green Mountains of Vermont. Contact Phillip Tobin (802)422-3761 or fandw@sover.net (http://www.fandw.org)

Need a summer job? Know the web? Sell MCI Internet Websites to anyone, whenever you want to work. Low cost, nice income for you. Call (800)372-7883 or e-mail for more information dlengler@aol.com

Earn great money and valuable Sales/Marketing experience. Memolink's Memoboards are coming to UMass! We need one highly motivated individual to direct our sales project. Contact David at (800)563-8654.

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St. · D40, NYC, NY 10014.

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. CS0017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Uptown studio apartment for rent-available last week of May. $440 per month. Call Dan 256-5473.

2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. Available from June 1- Sept 1. Sublet or take over our lease. Hot water and heat/AC included. $750 a month. Call 549-7504. On bus route.

3 bedroom Puffton June 1. Rent: $825. Call 549-3913.

Sugarloaf Estates Ultra modern, two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water. New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Now leasing Spring and Fall. Call 665-3856.

Room for Rent Private home. $335 + utilities. Kitchen privileges. Kosher/Vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished. Available May 1. 549-4853.

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane. Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement. Now showing for June and September Lease. $1300- 253-7879.

Amherst Center 1, 2, and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas, heat, hardwood floors. We are now showing for June and September leases. Lincoln Real Estate 253-7879.

Female Wanted to share home in New Salem. Separate in-law apartment with kitchen, living room, private bath, small bedroom, furnished. No pets. No smoking. $475/month. All included. (508)544-8427.

4 bedroom apartment 2 bath, 2 large living rooms. Located on bus route in South Amherst. Call 256-1561.

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Waterfront houses. Falmouth area (508)477-6000.

FOR SALE

Round Trip USAir Ticket Anywhere in the Continental US. Expires 6-14-97. Asking $300. Call Jess 546-5266.

Laptop Notebook $99. VGA Color Monitor $75, Hard Drive $70, Software $5. 386 Motherboard $25. Call Steve 566-3324 ext. 2.

Lite Speed Titanium 50 centimeter road bike. Ridden once. Need immediate funds. Paid $1700, asking $1150 or B/O. 253-6452.

Bay wholesale, not retail. The last phone card you will ever own. MCI Prepaid only. $2.00 for 10 minutes. This card is rechargeable. Mail $2.00 and SASE to: Collegiate Communications. P.O. Box 785, Attleboro, MA 02703-(800)372-7683.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Michael: I hope you have a wonderful 22nd birthday. Cheers to days in Burma.

Ciao,

Your darlin'

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT
30 hours, $395
American Academy
1-800-806-Prep
(please leave your name and number)

MISCELLANEOUS

Have you ever abandoned a pet? Do you have an animal you won't be able to care for over the summer? Looking for people to talk to for research project. Anonymous. Confidential. Please call Carolyn 586-0161.

Motivated Groups needed to earn $500s promoting AT&T. Discover, gas and retail cards! Plan now for the next semester to get priority for the best dates. Call Gina at (800)592-2121 ext. 110. Free CD to qualified callers.

PERSONALS

Thank You Saint Jude!! LP & LP

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for two people to share room in a house. For more info contact Michelle @ 9-5836 or Liz @ 6-0225.

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Rental Problems Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 State St. Northampton 586-0829.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

3 bedroom apartment- Puffton. Available 6/1 with Fall Option. $825/month. 549-8954.

Looking for Summer Sublet? Beautiful 5 bedroom house. Has all needed utilities. On bus line and even has a yard! Next to Mike's Westview. Call Angela or Carey @ 549-1859.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom sunny, big clean, 10 min from campus. On bus route. Fall Option. Call Now! Jen 259-1581.

3 bedroom Puffton Apt. Great price. Available 6/1. 546-5681.

3 bedroom apartment June-August. Sunderland. Pool/Courts. Call 665-0298. Ten minutes from UMass.

2 bedroom/Brandywine with Fall Option. Available 6/1. Call 549-4982.

Mill Valley Summer Sublet 3 bedroom, 2 bath, fully furnished. On bus route. 1 month FREE! 253-6503.

3 bedroom Puffton Available 6/1. 549-5841.

TO SUBLET

2 bedroom/Brandywine Apt. Easily fits 4. Excellent condition. $740. Call Kristi or Melissa 549-7474.

1 bedroom in Brandywine Available May 1. Call 549-0520 Possible Fall Option.

TRAVEL

EUROPE $175.
Within USA $79 - $129
Caribb./Mexico $199 rt
Cheap Fares Worldwide!!!!!
http://www.airhitch.org
AIRHITCH (800)326-2009

Ski and Party at Killington for only $108! 2 nights condo lodging and TWO daily lift tickets. Call UMass Ski and Board Club 545-3437, 434 Student Union.

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13. 2 nights lodging and round trip bus- $115. Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437.

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for apartment on bus line for Fall '97. Please call Amy 546-0706.

Wanted: 4 bedroom apartment/house on bus route for Fall. Willing to take over summer lease. Call 546-4285 Amy.

Why should you buy Collegian Classifieds?

Because they work, that's why!

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. Last names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY first names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are for birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and UMass I.D. number of the student placing the as filled in on the insertion order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the insertion order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students
20¢ per word/day
All others
40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, APRIL 7

Film — Germinal, directed by Claude Berri, will be screened in Merrill 1 on the Amherst College Campus, at both 4 and 7:30 p.m. In English. Free and open to the public.

Lecture — Ayesha Sharriff, a professor of women's studies & American studies at Smith College will give a works-in- progress talk entitled, "Pitching Gender: Representations of Femininity and Masculinity in Twentieth Century American Baseball Fiction," at 4:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center on the Mount Holyoke Campus.

TUESDAY, APRIL 8

Discussion — An open panel discussion will be held at 10:45 a.m. in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space, to discuss Harriet Diamond and Linda Batchelor's exhibit, The Bottom Drawer.

Lecture — Robert Meeropol, son of Ethel & Julius Rosenberg will give a talk, entitled "Children, Families and Human Rights: The work of the Rosenberg Fund for Children" at 4 p.m. on the eighth floor of the Campus Center.

Lecture — Prof. Jon McGowan will lecture on "The History of Renewable Energy Research at UMass" in the Campus Center, room 903. Part of the Renewable Energy Forum.

Lecture — The seventh annual Retail Lecture Series will be held at 4 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 101. The Series is sponsored by the Apparel Marketing Program and the Department of Consumer Studies. This year's topic is "Home Fashions: An Explosive Growth Industry." Lee Williams, Executive Vice-President of Country Curtains, is the featured speaker.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9

Blood drive — The American Red Cross will hold a blood drive from 10:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, rooms 174 today and 168 tomorrow. Sponsored by First Aid Services. Call 545-1885 for more information.

Discussion — A new Medical Marijuana Users discussion and support group will be meeting at the Bangs Center from 6–8 p.m. If you or someone you care about is using marijuana for a medical condition, please consider joining us. Sponsored by the UMass Cannabis Reform Coalition. For more information, contact Andrew Hasenfeld at 549- 7879.

Film — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space's weekly video series "Faces" will feature The Hague School today at 4:30 p.m.

Lecture — The Animal Rights Coalition will be hosting a free lecture from the Living Earth series, entitled "Our Food, Our World" at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165. Refreshments will be served. For more information, call 545-1935.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series will feature Esther Katz's, "The Editor as Biographer: The Margaret Sanger Papers Project" in the Campus Center, room 162–175 at 3:30 p.m. Free and open to the public.

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will hold a meeting from 5:30-6:30 p.m. in Room 304 of University Health Services. All are welcome to attend.

Presentation — "Norwegian Nature & Culture at Telemark College," an Interdisciplinary Study Abroad Program focusing on society and the natural environment in a Scandinavian context, will be presented at 3:30 and 4:30 p.m. in Holdsworth Natural Resources Center, room 202.

NOTICES

RSOs — Francellis Nunez, secretary of registry at the Student Government Association, would like to announce that the following inactive groups are in danger of being removed from RSO status: APICS, Bridge Club, Brush Up Your Shake Spear, Cheerleaders, Clean Rivers Coalition, Collegiate 4–H, European Club, Hellenic Association, Honors Students Association, Italian American Students Association, Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance, Marching Band, Marketing Club, Omega Psi Phi, Out of State Students Association, PHNORD, Russian Club, Soviet Community Empowerment, SHMAI, Tennis Club, Travel & Tourism, Truth Task Force, Twenty/Twenty Vision and the Wrestling Club. This is the last chance for groups that have been inactive for six or more semesters to reactivate their status. To reactivate, call Nunez at 545-0341.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Financial aid — Applications for summer financial aid are now available at Financial Aid Services. You must be a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass; taking summer classes through Continuing Education; going on approved summer international exchange program through IPO; or working on a graduate assistantion. Deadline is April 18. Late applications will not be accepted.

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323-9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

Meeting — The Peer Mentor Network is a student organization for undergraduate and graduate students with disabilities on campus. Everyone is welcome. Meetings are Thursday nights from 6–7 p.m. in Campus Center. Please bring your thoughts and concerns to the meeting. For more information, contact Susan Pilner at 545-0892 or Kregg Strehorn at 545-4602.

Support group — REFLECT, the Five College bereavement support program is offering two support groups this semester: A grief support group for those who have experienced the death of someone close to them; and an illness group for those currently coping with the serious illness of a loved one. If you or someone you know is interested, please call us at 577-5316 for more information.

Health services — Confused, afraid, or just curious? Do you have questions about sex, STDs, alcohol, drugs, eating disorders, HIV/AIDS, stress management or quitting smoking or chewing tobacco? Don't know who to ask? Call the Peer Health Connections phoneline at UMass at 577- 5168. Trained students will anonymously answer your questions and tell you where to go for more help.

Commencement Housing — A limited number of residence hall rooms will be available or the relatives and friends of graduating UMass students for the night of Saturday, May 24. Commencement Housing applications are available at the University Conference Service Office, 918 Campus Center. To guarantee a reservation, completed forms with full payment must be returned to University Conference Services by May 1. There will be no on–site reservations.

Internships — Internships are available working on Earth Day, Hunger, Recycling and Clean Air. Call Melanie at MassPirg, 545–0199 or stop by the office at 423–A Student Union Building.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Daily Listings sponsored by: WALKER'S GRILL

41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST

VEGETABLE SONORA ✪ SCAMPI ✪ T-BONE STEAK ✪ CHICKEN BBQ ✪ PASTA ROJA
PORTEBELLO MUSHROOMS ✪ CHICKEN QUESADILLA ✪ MUSHROOM ONION CHEESEBURGER
BLACKENED CATFISH ✪ SPANISH ORZO ✪ STUFFED PORK CHOPS ✪ NACHOS
BERKSHIRE BREWING COMPANY ✪ MARGARITAS ✪ BLACK FOREST CHEESECAKE
SCREAMING COWBOYS ✪ AND MUCH MORE...

WE ACCEPT ALL MAJOR CREDIT CARDS!

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Channel
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WOCH & HSCN
14 UMATV
17 HSCN Programming
18 TV-19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 CNN
24 CNN/Headline News
25 BET
28 BET on Jazz
27 UCTV
28 The Learning Channel
29 TV Land
30 Comedy Central
32 Much Music

WALKER'S GRILL
41 BOLTWOOD WALK • AMHERST
This week's $1 drink: Rum & Coke

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 7, 1997

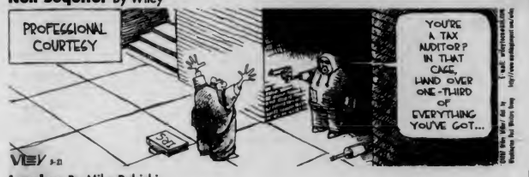
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	(12) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ☰		World of National Geographic		Live From Lincoln Center: Great Performers				Pulling Out All the Stops
WFSB	3	(1) News ☰	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Journal	Cosby (R) ☰	Raymond	Cybill ☰	Ink (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo) ☰		News ☰	Late Show ☰
WBZ	4	(1) News		CBS News	Ent. Tonight	Cosby (R) ☰	Raymond	Cybill ☰	Ink (In Stereo)	Chicago Hope (In Stereo) ☰	News	News	Late Show ☰
WCVB	5	(7) News ☰	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ☰	Relativity "Valentine's Day" ☰		a.k.a. "Mister Lawson Jr." (1994, Comedy) Charlie Sheen. ☰				News ☰	Nightline ☰
WLVI	6	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Star Trek: Next Gener.		7th Heaven "Seven is Enough"		Buffy the Vampire Slayer ☰		News		Jenny Jones (In Stereo) ☰
WHDH	7	(4) News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ☰	Foxworthy	Boston Com.	"Dante's Peak" (1997, Drama) Pierce Brosnan, Linda Hamilton, Mario Lopez. ☰				News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	(6) Fresh Prince	Martin ☰	Judge Judy ☰	Real TV ☰	In the House	Sparks (R) ☰	Malcolm-Eddie Goode Beh.		News	LAPD	R. Patrol	Real TV ☰
WVIT	9	(5) News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy ☰	Foxworthy	Boston Com.	"Dante's Peak" (1997) Drama, Pierce Brosnan, Mario Lopez. ☰				News	Tonight Show
WTIC	10	(3) Simpsons ☰	Roseanne ☰	Home ☰	Seinfeld ☰	Melrose Place (In Stereo) ☰		Manifest... With J'Aucy ☰		Jesse	Coach ☰	Babylon 5 ☰
WWLP	11	(9) News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ☰	Foxworthy	Boston Com.	"Dante's Peak" (1997) Drama, Pierce Brosnan, Mario Lopez. ☰				News	Tonight Show
WGBY	12	(2) Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ☰		Live From Lincoln Center: Great Performers				Straight Talk (In Stereo) ☰		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	13	(5) News ☰	ABC News	Seinfeld ☰	Hollyoke Hosp	Relativity "Valentine's Day" ☰		a.k.a. "Mister Lawson Jr." (1994, Comedy) Charlie Sheen. ☰				News ☰	Nightline ☰
WSBK	14	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Seinfeld ☰	Melrose Place	In the House	Sparks (R) ☰	Malcolm-Eddie Goode Beh.		News	Martin ☰	Med Abo. You	Real TV ☰
WTBS	15	Family Matters	Family Matters	Home Videos	Home Videos	NBA Basketball: Miami Heat at Detroit Pistons. (Live) ☰						★★★ "Someone's Watching Me!" (1978, Mystery)
A&E	16	Quincy "The Depth of Beauty"		Law & Order "Renunciation" ☰		Biography "Marilyn Monroe: The Mortal Goddess" (R)				Mass Merple (Part 1 of 2)		Law & Order "Benevolence" ☰
CNN	17	(4) WorldView ☰		Moneyline ☰	Crossfire ☰	Prime News ☰	Burden-Proof	Larry King Live ☰		World Today ☰		Sports Illus.	Moneyline ☰
COM	18	(8) Tick ☰	Dream On	Daily Show (R)	Comic Relief	★★½ "The Fisher King" (1991, Comedy) Jeff Bridges. ☰				On Delivery	Dream On	Daily Show	Comic Relief
DISC	19	Movie Magic	Next Step (R)	Wings "Duel Over Korse" (R)		Wild Discovery: Baby Animals		Roswell (R)		Outlaws and Lawmen (R)		Wild Discovery: Baby Animals
ESPN	20	Sp Close	Sportscenter		Outside the Lines		Beatty				Baseball	Sportscenter ☰
LIFE	21	Supermarket	Debt	Intimate Portrait "Eyri Parish"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"When Innocence Is Lost" (1997, Drama) Jill Clayburgh. ☰				Living	Mysteries
MTV	22	(1:30) Music Videos (In Stereo)		Singled Out	Idiot Savants	Indie Outing	Sports (R)	Music Videos (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Daria	Singled Out	Loveline
NICK	23	Clarissa Expl.	Tiny Toon	Doug ☰		Family and TV	Hey Arnold! ☰	Wubbulous		I Love Lucy ☰	Bewitched	Newhart ☰	Odd Couple ☰	Taxi ☰	M.T. Moore
SCIFI	24	Odyssey ☰	SCI-FI Trader	Quantum Leap (In Stereo) ☰		Sequoia DSV (In Stereo) ☰		Forever Knight (In Stereo) ☰		V "Liberation Day" (In Stereo) ☰		Quantum Leap (In Stereo) ☰
TLC	26	(9) Furniture	Renovation	Homefirm (R)	Homefirm (R)	Extreme Machines (R)		Great Egyptians (R)		Miracle Planet (R)		Extrema Machines (R)
TNT	27	In the Heat of the Night ☰		In the Heat of the Night ☰		WCW Nitro (Live) ☰				Adventures of Robin Hood		WCW Nitro (R) ☰
USA	28	Renegade "Paradise Lost" ☰		Highlander: The Series ☰		World Wrestling Federation Monday Night Raw				La Femme Nikita "Choice" ☰		Wings ☰	Wings ☰
VH1	29	(1:45) ★★½ "The Adventures of Ford Fairlane" (1990, Comedy) Andrew Dice Clay. ☰				★★½ "Little Shop of Horrors" (1986, Comedy) Rick Moranis. ☰				Behind the Music		Countdown	Talkshow (R)
MAX	31	(2:45) ★★½ "First Knight" (1995) Sean Connery. "PG-13" ☰				"Revenge of the Nerds III: The Next Generation" ☰				"Under Siege 2: Dark Territory" (1995) "R" ☰		★★ "Carried Away" (1995) "R" ☰
SHOW	33	(5:55) ★★½ "The Song Spinner" (1995, Fantasy)		My Life-Dog		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley. "R" ☰				★★★ "Miami Rhapsody" (1995, Comedy) "PG-13"		"Flashfire" "R"

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Frumpy the Clown By Judd Winick

Speedy By Todd Hartzler

Non Sequitor By Wiley

University® By Frank Cho

Leedee By Mike Rybicki

The April 3rd edition of "Leedee" appears to have been considered objectionable by certain parties. Please understand that it was in no way my intention to offend; the comments made about the hearing impaired were meant only to be deliciously and darkly ironic.

— Mike Rybicki

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

	Franklin		Worcester
	LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
	Chicken Pucks	Cricken Breast w/Stuffing	Grilled Cheese Sandwich	Chicken Breast
	Turkey Tetrazzini	Spaghetti w/Sausage	American Chop Suey	Black Eyed Peas
	Philly Cheese Steak	Italian Tofu Balls	Spaghetti w/Sauce	Pastabilities
		Quarter Pound Burger	Hearty Latin Stew	Meatball Grinder
	Hampshire		Berkshire
	LUNCH	DINNER	LUNCH	DINNER
	Hamburger on a Roll	Chicken Breast	Grilled Cheese Sandwich	Chicken Breast
	Chicken Pucks	w/Stuffing	Spaghetti w/Sauce	Shrimp Jambalaya
	Turkey Tetrazzini	Spaghetti w/Sausage	Wheatball Grinder	Black Eyed Peas
			Grilled Cheese/Branola	Pastabilities

HOROSCOPES

Close to Home By John McPherson

ARIES
March 21–April 20
An tension to one area of your life eases, storms could be brewing elsewhere. Pay close attention to mechanical things, especially if you're planning to travel. A once over with a mechanic could prevent a serious breakdown, and save you money on repairs.

TAURUS
April 21–May 21
Ask your sweetheart to help you handle a difficult situation. He or she may have just the right blend of tact and firmness to finesse a difficult person. Start saving now for a project you've been wanting to take on—by the time you have a big enough nest egg, the time will be right.

GEMINI
May 22–June 21
You may be feeling a little sensitive lately. Instead of taking it out on others, quietly unload yourself. Don't ignore a tingling phone, though, or you could miss out on an important opportunity. A solid relationship boosts your mood toward the weekend.

CANCER
June 22–July 22
Your persistence and efforts in a personal relationship are beginning to pay off in terms of increased trust and intimacy. But poor communication could cause bigger problems than you might have imagined. Make sure you aren't holding back on anything this week.

LEO
July 23–August 23
Treat yourself to a mini getaway—a drive in the country could refresh you and inspire you to new heights. Invite a group of friends over this weekend for conversation and games. You could reach a new understanding with one of them, to your mutual advantage.

VIRGO
August 24–September 22
If you're having trouble making something happen, be sure that you're asking the right questions. Sometimes all it takes is a fresh perspective. Don't overwork yourself, or you'll skip over an obvious mistake. Instead, step aside and come back to things later.

LIBRA
September 23–October 23
Turn trash into cash with an early garage sale, and treat yourself to something you've been wanting with the proceeds. Leave the credit cards at home or you could seriously overstrain your budget. Your partner offers some needed support and a great sense of humor.

SCORPIO
October 24–November 22
In matters of the heart, you need to be looking for someone more matter-of-fact. Follow a friend's advice when it comes to handling a tough personal choice. Spend more time than usual practicing a new skill or technique. It will be valuable in the near future.

SAGITTARIUS
November 23–December 21
Your funny bone is extra sensitive this week, so treat yourself to a belly laugh or two with someone you'd like to get to know better. An old friend calls with interesting news. He or she may need a favor. Offer to help in any way you can, and your own outlook will improve.

CAPRICORN
December 22–January 20
Setbacks make you crazy this week, especially if they're not of your own making. Try to be patient, and console yourself with thinking of ways you can improve this situation the next time. An evening gathering holds the possibility of a new connection.

AQUARIUS
January 21–February 18
Make a break in your routine by doing something really crazy. You don't need to be irresponsible to refresh yourself. Take a bubble bath, try a new activity, call someone out of the blue. Consider it an investment in your well-being, and you won't be disappointed.

PISCES
February 19–March 20
You may feel as though you've been going a mile a minute. Pace yourself, and you'll find your second wind. An outdoor activity gives you the opportunity to make someone very happy. If you receive an offer, make sure there are no strings attached.

For Entertainment Purposes Only

Quote of the Day

"Life is like film; it will develop only if you take your best shot."

–Bazooka Joe

ACROSS
1. Hold up!
5. Summarize
10. Mahogany tree
14. So sorry!
15. Radiate, as confidence
16. Ruin
17. Cheers from the Carmen chorus
18. Part of SLA
20. Blow up
22. ___ Dame Cathedral
23. Actor Hunter et al.
24. Dog's donation to a hangover relief
26. Shepherd's dog
29. Sound of a pedestrian
33. Felt sore
34. Artemis, to the Romans
35. Hot season in Paris
36. He went over the mountain
37. Brother (French)
38. Ne ___ ultra
39. Singing syllables
40. Fancy protective cloth
41. Belief
42. Covered with glossy paint
44. Wheedles
45. Pair makers
46. Diary Of A Genius author
47. Gamer
50. Well-educated
54. Amelioration
57. Do a laundry chore
58. "Laugh-in

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

SPORTS WEEKEND

Monday, April 7, 1997

▼ SPORTS THIS WEEK

BASEBALL
Mon. -- DAYTON
Tues. -- PROVIDENCE
Wed. -- @ Central Conn.
Sat. -- TEMPLE

MEN'S LACROSSE
Tues. -- NEW HAMPSHIRE
Sat. -- LOYOLA

SOFTBALL
Wed. -- CENTRAL CONN.
Thursday -- @ Harvard
Sat. -- LA SALLE

WOMEN'S LACROSSE
Wed. -- @ Dartmouth
Sat. --. RUTGERS

Duke downs men's lax in double OT

UMass doesn't get the call; ACC refs missing the mark

By Jeremy R. Adams
Collegian Staff

DURHAM, N.C. — Scott Diggs netted a goal with 3 minutes 35 seconds remaining in the second sudden death over time period to stifle the upset bid of the No. 12 Massachusetts men's lacrosse team, and push the No. 3 Duke Blue Devils past the Minutemen 8–7.

Diggs' goal came in the 66th minute of play, on the heels of a controversial Duke timeout.

The Minutemen faithful in attendance argued that before the Blue Devils gained possession of the ball to call timeout, UMass had already scooped up a ground ball and made an overlooked request for a break in action.

Duke	8
Massachusetts	7
Double OT

For the 4–3 Minutemen, the bizarre twist was an upsetting close to a game of balanced offense and hard-nosed defense, a game in which they did not trail until the final Blue Devil strike.

"It's unfortunate, how well we played as a group. We just came up short," UMass' John Kasselakis said. The keeper praised his defense, saying they played one of their best games yet, and coach Greg Cannella agreed.

"[Kasselakis] played tremendous, the guys in front of him were tremendous too," Cannella said. "All the guys that played did great against a team with a lot of fire power."

The Minutemen showed early that they would not back down from the challenge of defeating the Blue Devils (7–1, 2–0 Atlantic Coast Conference), drawing first blood at 12:34 in the first quarter. Senior midfielder Chris Grande shook his defender out on the perimeter, broke in towards the goal and fired a quick shot past Duke goaltender Joel Kirmser to take the lead.

The Blue Devils replied soon after, in the form of a quick strike from their leading scorer, junior attackman John Fay took the ball behind the UMass net cutting quickly around the back of the cage to Kasselakis' right. Fay released a quick toss into the near side upper corner for the score.

Casey Costello scored a second goal for the Minutemen from Brendan Glass and Jared Frood, which Blue Devil Diggs matched.

The Minutemen picked up in the second where they

CASEY KANE

After Jay Robbins went head to head with a Blue Devil player in the faceoff to start the second sudden death period, the ball came loose and four different players converged upon it in front of the UMass bench. Robbins gained control of the ball and Minuteman coach Greg Cannella immediately called timeout. But Cullen, who was nearest to the scramble — and the UMass bench — did nothing to stop the play for a UMass timeout.

In a split second, Duke knocked the ball out and gained control. In the blink of an eye, the Blue Devil troops were crowding around their bench after Cullen acknowledged and honored Duke coach Mike Pressler's cry for a timeout.

Knowing the game was still at stake, Cannella regrouped his players and prepared for another play. The damage was done, and the game's momentum had swung Duke's way. Only 25 seconds after Robins' faceoff and five seconds after the questionable timeout, Blue Devil Jim Ganella assisted the game–winning tally.

Cannella took the high road after the game, praising his team's valiant effort and refusing to comment on the officiating. In similar fashion Robbins gave a matter of fact description of the play without criticism.

"The ball shot up in the air. I came down with it, had it for a few seconds while [Cannella] was calling timeout," Robbins said. "Apparently, the ref didn't see that. It was a tough one, and they got the break."

UMass attack Brendan Glass, who tallied three assists on the afternoon was not as kind.

"We had our opportunities in overtime and double–overtime," Glass said. "You fly down here, make a long trip, put a great effort out, and you expect the same effort by the referees and you could tell from the starting whistle to the ending whistle that one guy [Cullen] was on a different page than the other two. You could sense it.

"I don't want to blame it all on the ref, we had our opportunities, but we did a great job in the game and we expect the same from the refs. It's their job.

Turn to LACROSSE, page 7

LAUREN KORP / COLLEGIAN

Despite a valiant effort in Saturday's game, UMass fell to Duke on the road 8–7.

Gymnasts place 4th at regionals

By Lisa M. Oliveri
Collegian Staff

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The Massachusetts women's gymnastics team finished its season on Saturday with a fourth place finish at the NCAA Northeast Regionals in Columbus, Ohio. The Minutewomen's score of 192.500 was a significant improvement over last year's regional score of 191.900.

Top honors went to Penn State, which turned in a score of 194.150. Second place was a tie between Ohio State and Kent State, both of which received a 193.800.

UMass coach Dave Kuzara, though disappointed at not going to nationals, was extremely pleased with his team's performance.

"We hit, you know, we didn't just hit — we rocked," Kuzara said. "We know it's a very competitive regional, and we are fighting to gain national recognition, and a team like Penn State, who won the meet, has been there five out of the last six years. So we fight and fight and we're not ever going to stop doing that."

Going in as the number two seed, UMass had a rotation of bars, beam, floor and vault, thus placing them on their toughest apparatus first.

But the Minutewomen answered the call.

The uneven bars were an event in which the Minutewomen were already lacking in depth. With the injury to Michelle LoPresti just two weeks prior, things looked tough for UMass, but like they have done all season, the Minutewomen were able to turn in some excellent performances.

First up was Sara Kelly who, until this meet, only competed twice this season on the bars. She nailed her routine, scoring a 9.025 and got the team off to a strong start. Also stepping up for UMass was Betsy Colucci, who competed all–around for the first time this season yet scored a 8.675. Lianne Laing, Mandy Mosby and Anita Sanyal followed, all turning in solid scores. Tara Swartz, the Atlantic 10's leading gymnast in the bars, wrapped things up with a 9.75.

"Scoring was low at this region, it's historically low," Kuzara said. "We think we have a great region and this was a great meet tonight, but the scores were not high."

"The judging is definitely tougher at regionals, at this regional, and as long as that was going on everywhere else, it's fine, but it's not. They're getting judged the way they have been all year, and we're getting judged harder."

Next up for the Minutemen was the balance beam. Karen Maurer started it off with a strong routine, scoring a 9.575. Colucci, Laing and Swartz followed. Mosby turned in a solid routine for a 9.725.

Finishing up for the Minutewomen was the A–10 beam champion Sanyal. Her 9.825 was good enough to give her second overall, but it was just shy of the first place spot which would have sent her to nationals.

"It breaks my heart, that Anita finishes second on the beam — the winner gets to go to nationals," Kuzara said. "The same goes for Lianne."

UMass rotated to the floor next, an event that has been one of their strongest all season. Penny LeBeau the Minutewomen off to a good start with a 9.550. Sanyal followed with a 9.60. UMass certainly had its moments of brilliance on the floor, especially Swartz's tumbling pass which Kuzara said is the most difficult in the region. Swartz turned in a 9.525. Mosby and Laing rounded out the floor with a 9.80 and a 9.825, respectively. Laing's floor performance earned her the second place overall on the floor.

Turn to GYMNASTICS, page 7

Baseball splits pair with UD Flyers

By Luke Meredith
& Jonathan M. Place
Collegian Staff

After getting an unexpected week off because of last week's snow, the Massachusetts baseball team didn't take long to get back in the swing of things, trouncing the University of Dayton 14–6 in the first half of yesterday's doubleheader. Unfortunately, UMass wasn't as successful in the second game, losing 4–0.

Massachusetts started off Sunday's doubleheader with a power show, courtesy of sophomore centerfielder Doug Clark. Clark hit two home runs, including his first career grand slam, for seven RBI to lead the Minutemen past Dayton (8–18, 3–2 A–10) 14–6. UMass also got round– trippers from Aaron Braunstein and Brad Gorrie to improve to 10–4, 3–1 in the A–10. Senior righthander Jason Bennett pitched six innings, letting up four runs, to jump to 4–1 on the year and 20–4 for his career. The 20 wins ties the UMass record for career wins.

Dayton	4
Massachusetts	0

Massachusetts 14, Dayton 6

"It was a good win," coach Mike Stone said. "He wasn't as sharp, but he was up."

The Minutemen jumped out to an early 5–0 lead in the first inning, thanks to Clark's first home run of the day. With two outs and runners on second and third, Clark took Dayton pitcher Josh Otto deep over the rightfield fence for his fourth home run of the season. Bennett let up a solo shot to Flyer shortstop Brian Schwade in the top of the second inning to cut the lead to 5–1, and leftfielder Pat Bell's RBI double in the top of the third made it 3–2. But

Turn to BASEBALL, page 7

THANG VO / COLLEGIAN

Yesterday, after crushing Dayton 14–6, UMass fell 4–0 in the second half of a doubleheader.

Women's lax, Walsh excel in victory

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

A little over 200 years ago, the shot heard 'round the world started the American Revolution, and a new country was created. Yesterday, and in much less historical terms, the sigh heard round the Valley ended in a 11–6 win for the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team, and a new season within a season began.

Yesterday afternoon at Totman Field the Minutewomen (2– 3) were able to hold on to a 5–0 halftime lead over St. Joseph's (2–4). After two big losses to nationally ranked opponents, UMass was able to bounce back in style, led by the scoring of junior tri–captain Jen Bowen (3 goals, 3 assists in the game) and senior attacker Stephanie Walsh (4 goals).

It was historical in a sense yesterday for Walsh, and with her first goal at the 10:08 mark of the first half, she became the 11th player in UMass history to reach the 100–point mark (95 goals, 8 assists).

For coach Francesca McClellan, she could not have been more pleased with her team's bounce back effort, and her top two stars of the day.

"I'm really pleased with how we came back today from somewhat of a rut," McClellan said, after a sigh of relief. "Our defense swarmed them, which we didn't do against Yale and Temple. There was no doubt that our starting lineup controlled the game readily, and we got our whole bench in, which was impressive."

The game appeared to be in the Minutewomen's hands halfway through the second half, but St. Joe's made a run. The visitors gave UMass a go for it, scoring three goals in the 10 minutes to make the game 9–5. But Walsh and sophomore Laura Koruta (2 goals, 3 assists) scored two goals in a minute to clinch the win.

For two of the team's 26 stars on this day, a week of tough practices got them back on the winning track.

"We had a good week of practices, and I think it showed today," Bowen said. "We had an intense week, both mentally and physically. We really pushed each other.

"At halftime, the coach said that we knew that they were going to come back fired up. Even with a five–goal lead, they could still come back, and they stepped up."

"It was all about team work," Walsh said. "We really played together, and moved the ball well. There were times in the game where [the pace of the game] felt slow, but overall we really seemed to turn the corner.

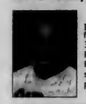
"I'm glad I didn't jinx myself [with the scoring mark], but it feels good."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

The Minutewomen's Stephanie Walsh became the 11th player in school history to hit the 100–point mark yesterday with 95 goals and 8 assists.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CVI Issue 114 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, April 8, 1997

Kaddish for Ginsberg

The memory and poetry of Allen Ginsberg is remembered, plus check out our photo montage of today's recent hit movies, (see Arts & Living, page 5).

End of an era for UMass, UNH

Brendan Glass plays UNH for the final time today at 3 p.m. today at Richard F. Garber Field. Get the scoop (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Police superintendent testifies in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — With about 30 Zulus chanting outside, a police superintendent testified yesterday at the start of a long-awaited inquest into the bloodshed that ended a 1994 march by Zulu nationalists.

The march through downtown Johannesburg left dozens dead, including eight people killed when guards at African National Congress headquarters opened fire into a crowd of Zulus armed with spears, clubs, guns and other weapons.

The Zulus were marching to protest South Africa's first all-race elections. The slaughter has become a rallying point for Zulus who oppose ANC rule, and Zulu leaders have demanded prosecution of the ANC guards.

About 30 Zulus chanted and sang outside the Johannesburg High Court for the start of the inquest. Some carried small cowhide shields and wooden sticks in keeping with Zulu tradition.

Police superintendent Peter Calitz testified that he believed police had not provided adequate security for the march.

NATION

FTC to examine goals of beer advertisers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission has opened an inquiry into whether two major beer marketers — Miller Brewing Co. and Anheuser-Busch — aim advertising at underage drinkers, company officials said yesterday.

Both companies said they are cooperating with the agency, and one, Anheuser-Busch, issued a statement saying, "We do not target our advertising toward young people, period."

An FTC official said it is agency policy not to confirm or deny that an investigation is under way.

The agency's responsibilities include determining whether advertising is unfair or deceptive. And a product marketed to young people not able to buy it legally might fall within that definition.

Both Miller and Anheuser-Busch mounted ad campaigns last year on the television network MTV, an estimated about half of whose audience is underage, according to Advertising Age, which first reported on the FTC investigation.

In Milwaukee, Susan Henderson, a spokeswoman for Miller Brewing Co., said the company received an FTC request for information on media buying on jan. 14.

"We sent information as requested and are cooperating fully," she said.

She declined to answer additional questions except to say Miller received an FTC letter.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wed.	Thurs.
HIGH: 48 LOW: 38	HIGH: 45 LOW: 35	HIGH: 45 LOW: 35

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 2
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

Parents' execution, KGB reports to be discussed by Rosenberg son

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

Robert Meeropol will respond to recent testimony from a retired KGB agent about his parents' 1953 execution today in a special appearance at the University of Massachusetts.

Son of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg and founder of The Rosenberg Fund for Children (RFC), Meeropol will discuss former Soviet spy Alexander Feklisov's claims that the Rosenbergs, the only Americans ever to be executed for espionage, did not deserve to die.

"We do have a major break in my parents' case," Meeropol said. "Alex Feklisov, who claims to be a retired KGB agent, came forward and said, 'yes, I worked with Julius Rosenberg, but he was not an atomic spy, and Ethel was completely innocent.'"

Feklisov told the New York Times and Washington Post on March 16 that Julius Rosenberg did pass U.S. military secrets to the Soviets, but did not understand anything about the atomic bomb. He added that Ethel Rosenberg may have known about it, but had nothing to do with her husband's actions.

"There are those who claim this guy is a liar and cannot be trusted, and some who say he is telling the absolute truth," Meeropol said of Feklisov. "What I am going to be doing is saying where I stand."

Meeropol, who has granted an interview for a Discovery Channel documentary along with his older brother, did not wish offer his opinions on Feklisov before today's discussion.

In addition to his talk, Meeropol will promote the fund– raising event the RFC will hold at Smith College on April 26, entitled "Celebrate the Children of Resistance." Actress Susan Sarandon, actor Mandy Patinkin, UMass professor Martin Espada and others are scheduled to give dramatic readings to benefit Meeropol's fund.

"This really is the chance of a lifetime," Meeropol said. "I have seen Susan Sarandon in movies, but never live. To be able to hop on a bus to Northampton, pay $8 and see Susan and Mandy Patinkin perform live is pretty remarkable."

The RFC is a public foundation that provides for the educational and emotional needs of children whose parents have been harassed, injured, lost jobs, imprisoned or died in the course of their progressive activities.

"That means parents who work for peace, the environment... and have been targeted for their work and have children, they may be eligible for grants through the RFC," Meeropol said.

Meeropol, who was 3–years–old when his parents were arrested, 6–years–old when they were executed and 7–years– old when he and his brother were adopted, said "those four years were pretty horrible."

"There are children today with similar experiences, so what I am going to be talking about is the story of what happens as a child in that situation," Meeropol said.

Meeropol's lecture is open to the public, and will be at 4 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 811–15. It is sponsored by the departments of political science, legal studies, women's studies and social thought and political economy.

Robert Meeropol wil visit UMass today.

Elementary students get a start in the arts

By Tamar Carroll
Collegian Staff

This Thursday, 90 fourth and fifth graders from Kensington Avenue School in Springfield will come to the University of Massachusetts and view their artwork, which is hung in Herter Gallery this week.

The Kensington students, accompanied by their parents, teachers and principal Timothy Babcock, will be addressed by a group of art education majors, whose work is also on display at Herter this week.

According to Professor John Jenkins, Deputy Director of the Fine Arts Center, this project is a University first.

"This is unprecedented for University students and elementary students from inner city Springfield to have a joint exhibition," Jenkins said.

After their reception at Herter Gallery, the Kensington students will view the exhibition of African–American quilts at the University Gallery and the Jackie Robinson and Negro Baseball League exhibition at Augusta Savage Gallery.

Art Education Professor Martha Taunton, who helped coordinate the project, explained the purpose of the field trip.

"We want to get them comfortable with going into galleries and learning about artwork," Taunton said. "We also want to celebrate their artwork. This will be like an opening for them for their work."

Kerri Warfield, a sophomore art education major who hung the students' work in Herter, was excited about the project.

"This is a wonderful space," Warfield said. "It will make them feel special."

The project also gives the 37 art education majors involved an opportunity to show their own work, and to learn how to hang and organize an exhibition.

"They are learning how to hang artwork. That is good for them," Taunton said. "They are also going to show their own work."

Carrie Lantz, a senior art education major, felt that displaying her work in this exhibition was a great learning tool.

"It is an important process to learn how to display your work," Lantz said. "It is important to know for the future because hopefully, you will continue to do your own work."

ARTSTART – The larger program

This field trip is just one of many projects incorporated into ART-START, a collaborative effort between the University and the Springfield school system to use dance, music, theater and visual arts to improve the education and achievement of inner city elementary students.

ARTSTART began in 1993 with a Chancellor's Strategic Initiative Grant of $20,000 under the leadership of Jenkins, Dr. Elaine Anderson, a member of the Fine Arts Center's Friends Board of Directors, and Springfield Superintendent of Schools Peter Negroni.

The program brings visiting artists such as concert pianist Terrence Williams, the University Dancers and the Everett Dance Company to Kensington to expose the students there to the arts.

"We try to help them see artists that represent the cultures that are theirs to help their self esteem," Jenkins said. "We want to let them know that the arts are not just for someone else. They are not all elite, they are not just for one group."

Faculty from UMass, the visiting artists and Kensington teachers work together to plan and teach instruc-

Turn to ARTSTART, page xx

Project Pulse surveys UM about drug use on campus

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

Recently released results of a Project Pulse telephone survey performed by the Student Affairs Research, Information and Systems (SARIS) Office in November 1996 found that a majority of University of Massachusetts students describe themselves as "light" or "moderate" drinkers. In addition, none of the students interviewed defined themselves as "alcoholics."

The survey aimed to investigate the alcohol and drug use of students on campus. Of the 470 students interviewed, 52.3 percent were female and 47.7 percent were male. Women respondents were much more likely to refer to themselves as "light drinkers" (53.6 percent), than men (33.7 percent). In reverse, men composed the majority of the "heavy drinkers" at 13.8 percent, while women only made up 1.9 percent.

Sally Damon, a University Health Services Educator, has done research on students' perceptions of peers using alcohol and drugs in regards to Project Pulse results.

Damon, who has worked at UMass for the past four years, compared surveys from 1992, 1994 and 1996 and found that in each of these years, the majority of students referred to themselves as "light" or "moderate" drinkers leading her to question the accuracy of students' perceptions of their drinking/drug behavior.

Damon feels the problem with telephone surveys are that "students are afraid they'll get in trouble [if they admit how much they drink or take drugs] and often students will overestimate their friends' and peers' drinking habits and underestimate their own," she said.

Project Pulse found that a majority of students (35.9 percent) said they drink once or twice per week, with the next most common response being 23.5 percent reporting they drink two to three times per month.

The intoxication rates of respondents found 71 percent reporting they had been intoxicated within the past month. Intoxication rates showed males to be more frequently intoxicated than females.

Concerning the frequency in which specific types of alcohol are consumed, beer drinkers were found to be the highest with 37.3 percent reporting they drink once or twice per week and 18 percent of the beer drinkers saying they drink three to four times per week. The majority of beer drinkers reported drinking four to six beers per sitting.

For those who drink hard liquor, 27.7 percent reported drinking about once a month. The least frequent drinkers were those who drink wine — 50.5 percent reported that they drink less than once per month.

Despite what Damon says many people think, she has discovered that the number of student drinkers has decreased over the years. In 1990, 94 percent of students reported drinking within the year, while in 1996, the number decreased to 84.8 percent.

Turn to PULSE, page 3

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Frosty dairy dessert

Cassandra Morine, a senior sociology major, enjoys the warm day while eating ice cream with her mother at Bart's.

Clinton appoints Atlanta activist as new director of AIDS policy

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Pledging an open door to an adviser who "speaks the truth unvarnished," President Clinton named Atlanta activist Sandy Thurman yesterday as his third director of AIDS policy.

In a brief ceremony in the Roosevelt Room, Clinton reiterated his commitment to halt the spread of AIDS and assured Thurman that the Office of AIDS Policy would have the resources it needs to help "succeed in this all-important task."

"My door is open to her," Clinton said. "I've worked with her, and I can attest: She tells it like it is. She speaks the truth unvarnished. She won't hold back in this office."

Thurman, an Atlanta native, is a longtime AIDS activist and member of the president's AIDS advisory panel. She replaces Patsy Fleming, who did not return for Clinton's second term. Clinton's first adviser, Kristine Gebbie, resigned in July 1994.

Thurman pledged to improve housing, Medicaid and welfare services for AIDS patients and to "counteract the devastating effects that homophobia and racism continue to have on this epidemic."

"The president has given me his personal commitment... and in

Turn to POLICY, page 2

President wants to resume peace talks

By Barry Schwied
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu at his side, President Clinton declared yesterday that he would explore "any reasonable opportunity" to get Mideast peace talks back on track. But he refused to endorse Netanyahu's call for a Camp David–style summit.

At the outset of a two-hour White House meeting, Clinton said he agreed with Netanyahu that Israel should not have to make concessions to the Palestinians to end terrorist attacks on Israeli civilians. "No one should ever have to bargain to be free from terrorism," Clinton said.

Clinton also renewed his call for a statement from Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat of "zero tolerance" for terrorism.

Afterward, Clinton described his talks with Netanyahu as "very thorough," but there was no sign of a breakthrough.

"We discussed a number of ideas to move the peace process back on track, assuming that the battle for terrorism is engaged effectively," Netanyahu said at a news conference.

"These are preliminary discussions. Nothing formal, nothing definitive was said. And I'm sure we'll have the opportunity to continue these exchange of views over the coming days and weeks."

Clinton said he would consider "any reasonable opportunity" to get peace talks up and going again. But he indicated he was not prepared to set up a summit meeting between Netanyahu and Arafat under U.S. auspices or make any other dramatic move right away. "It's important not to jump into this," Clinton said.

His chief mediator, Dennis Ross, also suggested there would be no quick fix, said the United States could not impose a solution.

"We can't wave a magic wand and put things back on track," Ross said at the annual conference of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, a pro-Israel lobby. "But we can serve as a bridge to put this process back on track."

According to White House spokesman Mike McCurry, the president gave Netanyahu "some serious things to think about." McCurry declined to say whether they had made progress toward ending an impasse in Mideast peacemaking that is Clinton's first foreign policy crisis in his second term.

Clinton described his session with Netanyahu as thorough and said he would do his "very best" to reopen peace talks.

Netanyahu began the day with a speech to an enthusiastic gathering of thousands of Christians and Jews who held their fourth annual unity conference in support of Israel.

"If they want peace, they must fight terrorism," the prime minister said.

He ridiculed a Palestinian assertion that Israel's decision to build a new Jewish neighborhood in Jerusalem amounted to a declaration of war against the peace process. "It's the terrorism of walk-up rentals," Netanyahu said as many in the audience whooped their approval.

In a serious vein, Netanyahu said 75 percent of the land on which Har Homa was being built was owned by Jews and that Israel was building 10 neighborhoods for Arabs, as well.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Today's Staff

Night Editor:
Mark McGrath

Copy Editor:
Suzanne Barber

Photo Technician:
Kenneth W.P. Scott

Production Supervisor:
Matt McCarthy

Production Staff:
Joylyn Lombard

policy

continued from page 1

turn, I offer the community my commitment to the efforts to develop vaccines, to find a cure, to stop the transmission of HIV," Thurman said. "This is not an epidemic of a few; this is an epidemic of us all."

Thurman served as executive director of AID Atlanta from 1988 to 1993 and as director of a task force on child survival and development for The Carter Center from 1993 to 1996.

Some AIDS advocacy groups cheered Thurman's appointment. The Human Rights Campaign, a gay and lesbian group, called Thurman "a solid choice to take the Office of National AIDS policy to the next level."

AIDS Action, a coalition of 1,400 community-based AIDS groups, said Thurman's appointment is an important first step toward winning the fight against AIDS. "We hope that this first step is followed by a significant investment in staff and budget resources Ms. Thurman will need," said executive director Daniel Zingale. However, ACT UP, a gay activists group, said Clinton should have selected someone with greater name recognition and criticized Thurman, a friend of Democratic strategist James Carville who campaigned for Clinton in 1992.

ARTSTART

continued from page 1

tional units that incorporate the arts into the daily curriculum at Kensington.

The 400 Kensington students also visit UMass several times during the year, to attend performances, meet students and learn about the opportunities available to them in higher education.

"It is an important partnership to let the children see possibilities that are open to them," Jenkins said. "The goal is to let them know that higher education can be for them and to get them excited about it."

It appears that ARTSTART has had an impact on the students at Kensington in the past four years. The Iowa Tests of Basic Skills showed improvement is all grade levels last year, and attendance and parental involvement have increased markedly.

"We have seen some individual children totally turned around by this project," Jenkins said. "We are seeing that their test scores are climbing and parent participation in the schools are increasing."

This past January, ARTSTART expanded to two other elementary schools in Springfield, Milton Bradley and Rebecca Johnson schools, to bring the total number of students involved to 2,100.

Jenkins said that ARTSTART is looking for UMass students from all majors to volunteer at the new sites. Students are also invited to stop by one of the three galleries from 11:45 to 12:15 Thursday, when the Kensington students will be having their lunches.

"Stop by and say hello," Jenkins said. "Three minutes of a UMass student caring could have an impact on two or three of these kids."

For more information on ARTSTART or to volunteer to help with the program, write to John Jenkins, 260 Fine Arts Center, UMass Amherst.

KENNETH W. P. SCOTT \ COLLEGIAN

Spring has sprung
Miss Esther Strong's thermometer reached 70 degrees Fahrenheit today in Amherst.

Campus Police Log

Accident — Property Damage
April 4
A vehicle struck a parked vehicle on Commonwealth Avenue and left the scene.

Animal Complaint
April 4
A dog tied to tree lunging at people was taken to the pound.

Annoying Behavior
April 3
There was a report of an individual going through trash containers at Whitmore Building.
April 4
Individuals were screaming on a balcony at Van Meter Residence Hall.
David A. Rothenberg, 19, of 10 Laurel Ave., Tenafly, N.J., was arrested for disorderly conduct, disturbing the peace and two counts of assault.
Individuals were drinking outside of Brett Residence Hall.
April 5
Bottles were being thrown from windows at Dwight Residence Hall.

Assault & Battery
April 3
There was a report of two individuals fighting at the Hampshire Dining Common.
James E. Callahan III, 29, of 218 Sunset Ave., Amherst was arrested for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.
April 5
Jason Lang, 22, of 42N Southpoint Dr., Amherst, was arrested for domestic assault and battery.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering
April 3
An individual from Mackimmie Residence Hall reported cash and CD's stolen.

Disorderly Conduct
April 3
An individual exposed himself to a woman on the 6th floor of the W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

Disturbance
April 4
A fight was reported in progress at the Worcester Dining Common.
April 5
A fight in progress near Van Meter was broken up.
Individuals at Pierpont Residence Hall were involved in a verbal argument.

Drug Law Offenses
April 5
Eric Scott Donnellan, 20, of 62 Bayberry Rd., Whitman, was arrested in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall for possession and transporting liquor, possession of class D drug and possession of a false ID.

Health/Safety Hazard
April 3
An electrical smell in the Mechanical room of Cashin Residence Hall was reported. The Physical Plant was notified.
An individual was extricated from an elevator in Cashin Residence Hall.
April 5
A manhole cover on Thatcher Way was missing.

Larceny
April 3
A chain saw was reported stolen from the Marshall Hall Annex.
A license plate was stolen from a vehicle in parking lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
Keys were stolen from Greenough Snack Bar.
April 4
An individual from Crampton Residence Hall reported a checkbook stolen.
An individual from Washington Residence Hall reported mountain bike stolen.
A license plate was stolen from a motorcycle in parking lot 63 on Stockbridge Road.
April 5
An individual from Kennedy Residence Hall reported clothing stolen.
A jacket was reported stolen from the Mullins Center.

Malicious Damage
April 5
Paper on a resident's door was set on fire and burned the carpet in Brown Residence Hall.

Suspicious Person/Activity
April 4
Keith J. Gallant, 19, of 230 Webster St, Fitchburg, was arrested for attempting to commit a crime and nighttime breaking and entering into a motor vehicle.
Shane M. Shaffer, 19, of 44 Conrad Rd., Melrose, was arrested for possession and misuse of a false ID and larceny from a building.
April 5
Richard G. Sambus, 19, of Wagamon Dr., Woodbury, N.Y., and David J. Cateletto, 18 of 113 Dayton Ln., East Hampton, N.Y., were arrested for nighttime breaking and entering and larceny under $250.

Vandalism
April 5
A vending machine in Coolidge Residence Hall was damaged.
A window was broken at Furcolo Hall.
Three large windows of the second floor of Franklin Dining Common were smashed.
A rock was thrown through a window in Emerson Residence Hall.
A vending machine was broken in Patterson Residence Hall.

Warrant Service
April 3
Scott S. Proulx, 21, of 31 Valley Road, Lincoln Park, NJ, was arrested at the school of management.
Ibraham S. Ali, 23, of 698 Alden St., Springfield was arrested at Tobin Hall.

Collegian Open House
April 18th
Food & Drink
10 a.m. - 4 p.m.
113 Campus Center (basement)

WANTED
The Collegian is taking applications for:
ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES
We are looking for Enthusiastic, Energetic, Organized and Self-motivated Freshmen, Sophomores and Juniors from any major.
If you are guilty of any of these traits, contact Luis or Craig at the Collegian Advertising Office at 545-3500 or stop in and fill out an application at 113 Campus Center Basement
BENEFITS: Great resume builder! Great pay!

Change Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
40 Some U-Turns
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE
DETOURS
30 No Limits
TO ONE WAY
20 CONSULT MAPS

WEEKLY UPDATE
University Career Center
Mather Building 545-2224

INTO AMHERST
Thinking Globally, Acting Locally
A Day of Community Service Dedicated to the Town of Amherst and Neighboring Communities
UMass Folks and Amherst Folks Joining Together to Make the Town Cleaner, Brighter, & Lovelier
Saturday, April 26, 1997
9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
For more information, contact the UMass Community Service Program at 545-3368

MERC inc.
Looking for a position in education K-12?
Come to Massachusetts Education Recruiting consortium orientation meetings held in Mark's Meadow Auditorium:
Tuesday, April 15, 1997 from 4:30 - 6:00pm
Wednesday, April 16, 1997 from 6:00 - 7:30pm

FIELD EXPERIENCE POSITIONS...
(Two examples of hundreds of positions...)
PHYSICS, EE, & ME GRADUATE STUDENTS!!!
Would you like a co-op which could easily lead into a job?
BAYER AFGA is looking for applicants to make high speed film and processing equipment for the publishing industry.
Competitive wages!
LIBERAL ART / ACCOUNTING MAJORS...
Bio Shelters in Amherst have several exciting co-op positions which you should look into!
For more information, call the Field Experience Office at 545-6265 or visit the library in the Mather Building.

SCORE
Register to Win!
GRAND PRIZE — Full Size Huffy Final Four Basketball Backboard with Stand $150 Value
OTHER PRIZES INCLUDE — Final Four Basketball T-shirts - Hats - Banners Patriots Hats - Flags - Sweatshirts
DRAWING WILL BE HELD FRI., APRIL 11 AT 4:00PM
UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center 545-2619 Mon-Fri 9-5 Sat 11-4
ENTER TO WIN!
Name
Address
Local Phone
University Store Employees Are Ineligible

Vandermead speaks on scandals

House counsel visits campus as first guest of Politics Club

By Chris Wilson
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts Politics Club hosted its first speaker last Wednesday afternoon in the Campus Center for a talk on ethics issues in Congress.

Ted Vandermead, chief counsel for the Committee on Standards of Conduct in the U.S. House of Representatives, spoke to a group of 25 on the difficulties of managing conduct issues in a Washington environment and media culture which both thrive on scandal-making.

"Vince Foster was right [in his suicide note] when he said that [Washington] is a city in which destroying people is considered sport," began Vandermead in his talk.

Vandermead spoke of the 1989 House Bank and Post Office scandals, and made references to the events which brought down former Speaker Jim Wright (D-Texas), and to the recent ethics violations of Speaker Newt Gingrich (R-Ga.).

"Members are very quickly realizing that if their staff, accountant or attorney files any documents on their behalf, they'd better read it over very carefully themselves, because any mistakes can and will be used against them by their political rivals," Vandermead said.

According to Vandermead, "The U.S. House actually has the tightest ethical and outside income restrictions of any legislative body on the planet," and often meets with foreign government leaders from emerging democracies who come to learn about our government's processes on which to model their own.

"They are shocked when we tell them that House members are not allowed to practice in their fields of medicine, law or accounting for payment while they are serving in Congress," Vandermead said.

Vandermead commented on the increasing lack of civility among members.

"If 215 members need to have a retreat in the Poconos for a week to lighten tensions and increase civility, it's obvious that we have a problem." For example, members of the Standards of Conduct Committee have recently been criticized for their service, under allegations that they are playing down issues raised against their party leaders. The recent charges which plagued Nancy Johnson (R-Conn.) were used as an example.

The confidentiality of his committee's process at times can hurt its members, recounted Vandermead, in that even after leaks have been publicized in the media, members — who are sworn to secrecy until investigations have been completed — cannot comment on the allegations, which are usually anonymously made to reporters. He criticized papers such as the Washington Post for printing such allegations without first checking on their accuracy.

"The worst thing a member can do is try to ignore an ethics allegation. Some form of response is essential," Vandermead said.

In response to a question, Vandermead said he believes that for Congress to improve its stature in the eyes of the public, bi-partisan agreement on campaign finance reform is absolutely essential. Also necessary, Vandermead said, is for members of the House to cease using the Committee for political sniping at opponents and to allow investigations to be conducted privately, without the frequent leaks to the media on unresolved matters.

The Politics Club is a new student organization, consisting of both undergraduates and graduate degree candidates in the Political Science department at UMass. They plan to host speakers from a variety of ideological points of view, and to hold debates and discussions on contemporary political issues.

Pulse

continued from page 1

Damon said many students tell her the only thing to do on campus is drink, which makes those students who do not drink (16 percent) invisible.

Project Pulse found marijuana and hashish to be the most popular drugs on campus with 50 percent of respondents reporting they had used it within the past year. No more than 20 percent of students reported using any other drugs within the past year.

Unlike alcohol use, the amount of drug use has increased by 14 percent since 1990. Fifteen percent of students said they have used hallucinogens within the past year and Damon has received a large number of calls from students worried that they are addicted and cannot quit.

Concerning drug availability preferences at parties, over half of the Project Pulse respondents reported only beer, while 18.3 percent preferred neither drugs or alcohol be available and only three percent preferred only drugs.

Damon showed concern over the static 20 percent of students who admit to drinking and driving since 1990, despite the increased education and awareness which has been done. In addition, the number of students who have been passengers in a vehicle driven by someone who has been drinking has increased by seven percent since 1990.

Another area of concern for Damon is the violence which she says often accompanies alcohol use and contributes to 95 percent of the discipline problems on campus. In addition, national figures, reflective of UMass figures, show that 85 percent of rapists and 75 percent of victims are under the influence of alcohol when the rape occurs.

Damon has found an increase in the number of students who come to her worried about their own alcohol and drug problems or those of a friend, over the last four years.

Concerning the increase of students seeking help for drug/alcohol problems, Damon says she doesn't know if it should be attributed to "a greater awareness of the dangers of abuse, of Health Services availability, or the accessibility of Alcoholics Annoymous in the Campus Center and the Newman Center."

Any students who feel they may need help for themselves or a friend related to alcohol and drug use may call the Campus Center Information Desk at 545-0012 for various services or may call Sally Damon at 577-5181.

THANG VO \ COLLEGIAN

Art in motion
Cheri Ehrlich will be having some art from her BFA thesis project displayed on PVTA buses in the Amherst area.

Haitian elections annulled due to poll-tampering

By Michelle Faul
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Haiti's opposition parties denounced parliamentary elections as a farce and called on the government yesterday to annul the results.

With a feeble turnout — some polling stations reported no voters at all in the Sunday elections — Haitians showed their disapproval of politicians and of the evolution of democracy in their Caribbean nation.

An observer with the U.S. Republican Party, Utah Lt. Gov. Olene Walker, said yesterday that she saw election officials tampering with result sheets at two collection centers in Port-au-Prince, the capital.

Leading Republicans have criticized past Haitian elections as well as U.S. policy in Haiti. President Clinton ordered 20,000 American troops there in 1994 to disband the military regime and restore democratic rule.

The Clinton administration, however, praised the elections as free and fair and said they were an important step in consolidating democracy.

U.S. State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said the Haitian National Police helped ensure peace and order during the elections. Noting that turnouts often are low in the United States, Burns added, "The important thing is that the dictators never allowed people to vote, and now they can."

At stake in the election is an internationally driven program to modernize Haiti's economy, with tens of millions of aid dollars tied to the plan. It is being challenged by the new Lavalas Family party of former President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

The election also could strengthen Aristide, who is eligible to run again for president in 2000. Results are expected in about 10 days.

Haiti's Provisional Electoral Council shocked observers Sunday night by announcing turnout figures of 30 percent and 50 percent in some districts. Foreign observers and reporters who visited hundreds of polling stations estimated turnout at little more than 5 percent of registered voters.

Former Sen. Turnep Delpe, co-leader of the opposition coalition National Front for Change and Democracy, urged the government "to refrain from trying to make the people swallow the adulterated elections."

"The authorities should show a minimum of courage and annul the elections," Rene Theodore, leader of the opposition Movement to Reconstruct the Nation, said on Radio Vision 2000.

Aristide's party was expected to gain a Senate majority in the elections, which included balloting for nine of 27 Senate seats, two seats in the Chamber of Deputies and thousands of officers for 697 local councils.

The councils will help choose a permanent electoral council to supervise elections for the next 10 years.

Wed., April 9
Spring Break!
With this coupon
take 40% off ticketed prices any one reg. price item
Wed. April 9, 1997 only!
Choose from: • Sportswear • Dresses • Activewear • Outerwear • Intimate Apparel • Handbags & small leathers • Jewelry • Accessories • Children's wear • Home accents • And more!
Not to be combined with any other savings offer. Not valid on prior purchases, swimwear & coverups, shoes, cosmetics, fragrances, gift coins or certificates. Reductions taken at the register. Merchandise available in depts. regularly found in your favorite Cherry & Webb store! Coupon valid Wed. April 9, 1997 only! One per customer.
CHERRY & WEBB UMASS
CHICOPEE / FAIRFIELD MALL / (413) 593-5711
EASTFIELD MALL SHOPPING CTR. / (413) 543-4210
HADLEY / HAMPSHIRE MALL / (413) 585-8524
LONGMEADOW SHOPS / (413) 567-6100
SPRINGFIELD PLAZA / (413) 731-7317

"There is such a thing as a free ride."
Announcing the AT&T "Ultimate Road Trip" Sweepstakes.
Going abroad this school year? AT&T would like to help pay your way.
10 Grand Prize Winners – Round-Trip Air Transportation from the U.S. to the country where you'll be studying.
Plus thousands of chances to win high-quality currency converters (hey, you may find it more valuable than the air transportation).
To enter, call 1 800 257-5424 ext. 300
Or you can enter on-line at http://www.att.com/student_abroad
Do it today.
No purchase necessary. Void where prohibited. Sweepstakes ends 5/1/97. Open to residents of the U.S., 18 years or older, enrolled at a U.S. college or university during the '97-'98 school year and traveling internationally for 14 days or more. See your Study Abroad Counselor or http://www.att.com/student_abroad for official rules and details
© 1997 AT&T

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592
http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Jacob W. Michaels Editor–in–Chief Chris Taylor Conner Managing Editor
Alycia Hines Business Manager Josh Sylvester Production Manager Craig J. Brody Advertising Manager
David Voldan Advertising Production Manager Lisa Chiu Senior Diversity Editor

Jeremy Brothers Arts & Living Editor
Humphrey brown III Black Affairs Editor
Lisa Chiu Developing Nations Editor
Mike Burke Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jamie Sinshemer Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Sarah Kimmel Jewish Affairs Editor
Raghuram Vadarevu Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Christine Soh Multicultural Affairs Co-Editor
Laura Stock News Editor
Thang Vo Photography Co-Editor
Kenneth W. P. Scott Photography Co-Editor
Casey Kane Sports Co-Editor
Chris Stamm Sports Co-Editor

Michelle Hillman Women's Issues Editor
Marc Dionne Editorial Production Manager
Chris Lavin Editorial Production Assistant
David Quist Systems Manager
Eric R. Remillard IV Finance Manager
Mark Presses Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Lyle A. Henry Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
David Quist Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Who's afraid of Ellen?

It's official: Ellen DeGeneres is "coming out."

The 39–year–old actress has spent the past year dodging rumors her character on her self–named show on ABC is a lesbian. Neatly sidestepping the issue, DeGeneres would make jokes, sometimes saying "I'm really a Lebanese."

But on April 30, DeGeneres will come out, both in fiction and in real life. While DeGeneres will not be the first homosexual portrayed on television, she will be the first major character to come out of the closet.

DeGeneres' move signifies much. Not only does she acknowledge the presence of a gay community, she will now bring that community to television — a medium with the power to influence millions.

In the past, television has played it safe. Characters are usually white, heterosexual and upper class. Television exists to transport viewers to a fantasy world, where people are beautiful and elegant. There are no real problems in TV– land, or at least nothing that can't be solved in a half–an– hour.

"Right now, television provides nothing close to intelligent portrayals of marginalized groups. ABC now has the task of revealing homosexuality in a positive and sympathetic way."

Seema Gangatirkar

As such, minorities have been pushed to the sidelines as the token black or Asian. These minor characters exist to pacify a growing minority, and yet, these same characters emphasize stereotypes of different ethnic populations.

With the exception of "Cosby" and "Family Matters," the three major networks do not have African–Americans in leading roles in sitcoms. On the other hand, the newer networks like Fox, WB and Paramount, feature predominantly African–American actors and humor.

I know of no shows on television featuring lead Asian, Latino or Native American characters.

Rhea Perlman's new sitcom, "Pearl" features an Asian woman — as a stereotypical nerd with little social skills. "Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman" pays lip service to Native Americans, stereotyping them as gentle, spiritual healers.

The major networks have a profound fear of alienating viewers by portraying characters in a light which is complimentary. Losing viewers means losing advertising dollars. It is the fear holding ABC, CBS and NBC back from showing ethnicity, class, race or homosexuality prominently in their line–up.

These are issues Americans are afraid to talk about and television caters to that fear.

Most people receive their information from television. The blatant stereotypes of Latinos, Asians, blacks and Native Americans reinforce those stereotypes in the minds of viewers, thus ensuring certain racist beliefs. Stereotypes make it easier to lump a group of people together, creating a view that can be universally accepted.

Shows like "Real Life Tales of the Highway Patrol" feature criminals who, for the most part, are lower class minorities. Real life dramas can make for exciting entertainment, but can also perpetuate the notion that minorities are responsible for the majority of criminal activities.

ABC has taken a major step forward, in permitting DeGeneres to "come out" on "Ellen."

Understanding and tolerance comes from intelligent information. Right now, television provides nothing close to intelligent portrayals of marginalized groups. ABC now has the task of revealing homosexuality in a positive and sympathetic way.

And hopefully, "Ellen" will provide a way for more homosexual characters on television, as well as more minorities.

As a popular medium, television has an obligation to fairly show all parts of America. The fact the United States is not a homogenous population ought to be the impetus to show more gay characters, more minority characters.

If there is no move to change television to represent the complex issues making up our society and lives, then television will continue to simplify and trivialize Americans to the point of fantasy.

Seema Gangatirkar is a Collegian columnist.

Global giants tip the scales

Editor's Note: On May 8, the Collegian celebrates its 30th anniversary as a daily newspaper. To commemorate this occasion, the Collegian will be publishing editorials spanning the last 30 years. Today we feature a piece originally published on February 13, 1975.

There is much to be said for the heightened consciousness of the American public in foreign affairs, particularly sharpened by the events of the international economic crisis. Price instability, trade deficits, unemployment — all disrupt our lofty visions of a better America. Public criticism is then understandably directed at the Arab oil–producing nations, the Third World in general. Blunted, though, is our awareness of the generally depressed economies of the Third World — the inflationary spirals of their industrial imports, their perpetual indebtedness, and their low standard of living. But perhaps the most telling influence on both of our economies has been the multinational corporations, private concerns (such as Gulf Oil Co. and International Telephone and Telegraph) which market on a global scale.

"For our own concern with "bigger is better" and "more is not enough", we have perpetuated a grave injustice in these territories. Our lofty visions become twisted dreams."

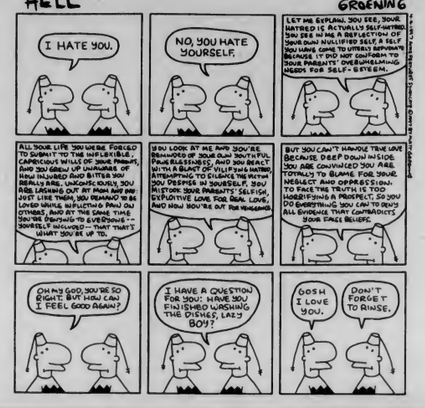
1967-1997: 1975

We have no one to blame but the architects of our foreign policy for perpetuating the oil crisis and the subsequent collapse of the world economy. One must trace the history of our economic development to understand why our foreign policy went awry. Because of the growth of business from mergers to multinational corporations, foreign policy has been dominated by the corporations rather than controlling them. The dynamic center of any future catastrophe would, inevitably, find these firms taking a leading role. Our failure to recognize this growing power has led our officialdom to overselling the idea of an "Arab conspiracy." We pay for their error in judgement: Kissinger's miscalculations.

Because the American economy is so internationalized and the international economy so Americanized, what our multinational corporations do and say has vital consequences for each and every one of us. The growing power of these giants is suggested by facts compiled by the United Nations in a document circulated within the U.N. community. Statistics show that foreign investments in just four African Territories exceed $10,000 million. In Angola, the monopoly capital of the United States completely controls the extraction of diamonds, petroleum, manganese, copper, and other minerals. Almost all of the cash crops, import and export trade, and banking of Mozambique are monopolized by the capital of the U.S. In Southern Rhodesia, over 80 percent of the mining interests are owned by the capital of certain Western Powers. In Southern Africa, the foreign investment exceeds $6 billion and monopolizes the local gold and coal mining, oil refining, chemical and machinery industries. The report emphasizes that foreign economic interests are carried on only in those sectors which yield the highest profit — much to the expense of the indigenous population.

Statistics show wages for black laborers in Angola, Mozambique, Southern Rhodesia, and Southwest Africa average annually (per capita income) about $20; over 90 percent of the population in these foreign economic–controlled areas is illiterate; over 50 percent of the children die prematurely before the age of 10 because of a conspicuous lack of medical facilities. Why do these people live in the abyss of dire misery with such abundant resources? The report concludes that the high profits earned by these foreign monopolies continues to be returned to the United States. These profits are not invested for the improvement of the economic, cultural, and social conditions of the indigenous populations. We have only ourselves to blame for failing to recognize how cruelly these corporations decide the fate of these people. For our own concern with "bigger is better" and "more is not enough", we have perpetuated a grave injustice in these territories. Our lofty visions become twisted dreams. Some of the major offenders are listed in this U.N. report: Diamond Distributors; General Electric; General Tire and Rubber; Cabinda Gulf Oil; Amerada Hess: Sun Oil; Amoco International Oil; Bethlehem Steel; Union Carbide; Goodyear Tire and Rubber; IBM World Trade; Eastman Kodak of America; Getty Oil; and Standard Oil of California (operating through Chevron Oil) — among many others.

For the American people it is time to abandon their narrowmindedness of our current foreign policy, for the greatest difficulties are where we are least looking for them — that is, in our multinational corporations.



Dennis Perry was Collegian commentator.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Opinion/Editorial

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Letters to the Editor

Is honesty absent at Amherst?

To the Editor:

As Amherst College President Tom Gerety presented an Honorary Award to Salman Rushdie, he proclaimed, "You represent to us three of the things that we hold most precious : literature, freedom and courage." Note that of these qualities Mr. Gerety holds most precious to his dear little heart, conspicuously absent is the word "Honesty."

I am currently enrolled in an Afro-American History class. A group of Amherst College students are also enrolled in this course. I was devastated to see that five men of Amherst College were cheating like fiends during the examination. After the exam, my fury increased as I heard from a colleague that a group of women from Amherst College, sitting in the third row were also cheating as if there were no tomorrow.

Mr. Gerety, the students of your institution have fulfilled those things which are most precious to you : a love of literature (copied from they neighbor), freedom (to cheat), and courage (risking a career for one exam). I do expect that Mr. Gerety will award these students with an Honorary degree for their fine work. Mr. Gerety, instead of chastising Iran for its "fundamentally banal, unintelligent threat," I suggest you concentrate your efforts on the banal lack of morals demonstrated by at least eight members of the institution which you head.

Mr. Gerety, here at the "third class institution" (as judged by U.S. News) UMass–Amherst, we focus our efforts on the diversifying of our perspective and a obtaining tolerance to all ideals. At Amherst College, you seem to be intent on exacerbating the otherwise peaceful community of Muslims in the Pioneer Valley.

But, Mr. Gerety, this is the United States of America, and you have a full right to invite and honor the man who claims that my ideals and principles are based on "Satanic Verses." In this respect, I humbly allow you to propagate your unnecessary and uncalled–for hostilities. However, for the sake of fairness, Mr. Gerety, please do ensure that your students are adequately honored.

Zaffar K. Haque
Amherst

IRA are no "good guys"

To the Editor:

I am writing to respond to Adam Levine's review of the current Ford/Pitt movie The Devil's Own (April 3) in which Mr. Levine expresses a controversial view of the Irish Republican Army (IRA). The reviewer complains that films like Patriot Games, Blown Away, and The Devil's Own present the IRA as mere terrorists around which to base a suspenseful plot. He goes on to suggest that if the audience knew what the IRA were fighting for, the films wouldn't work. In my mind this raises serious questions. Whether Mr. Levine realized it or not he presented an article which implies the IRA are "good guys." I want to show people in this country that the IRA are anything but.

Yes, they have a cause: the IRA wishes to liberate Ireland from British rule and to unite both sections of Ireland into the one country it was up until the early '20s.

How have they tried to achieve their aims? Murder, bombings and vast damage. The IRA are what the free world calls "terrorists." Earlier this semester, one student tried to convince me that these atrocities are not so bad because they are political methods by which the IRA can achieve their aims. I see this as an uninformed American view.

There are many Americans, particularly in Massachusetts, that feel the IRA are noble and their goals are morally driven. This is ignorant, for when the IRA pant bombs which murder English in London, maim children in Manchester and kill women in Belfast, I fail to see the morality. In Enniskillen, Northern Ireland just a few years ago, a young boy was severely injured in a bomb blast and had to have his face reconstructed. He was an innocent victim and I am certain he did not understand the complexities of the Irish problem. As ever, the IRA sent their apologies, which is customary when women and children are killed in their attacks, but such regret could have been so easily avoided. I believe no cause is worth such a high cost.

I must also add that the IRA is a very small minority of Irish. In recent elections only 1–3 percent of the Republic of Ireland voted for Sinn Fein, the party that represents the IRA in politics. The vast majority of the Irish in Ireland despise the IRA and last year on St. Patrick's Day, I participated in a peace protest calling for an end to violence. This occurred in Galway, one of the Republic's larger cities. Many Irish participated.

Many British people resented when President Clinton tried to interfere in the Irish problem and forge a quick solution, perhaps for political gain in this country. Who knows? I however welcomed American intervention because it was a step toward peace. Too many Americans, both delegates and people, believed that the IRA was morally motivated and that the Republican atrocities were not as bad as the British claimed. If Americans wish to say that the IRA is noble, let me counter that by saying the Oklahoma bombing, or the bombing of the World Trade Center was noble. Both bombs were for a cause and this country found the incidents morally reprehensible. The American media strongly condemned both attacks. They were very similar to the IRA attacks on Belfast, London and other communities. How can this be justified?

Let individuals follow the lead of Gandhi in India, of Martin Luther King in the United States and in Ireland Daniel O'Connell and Charles Stewart Parnell. They showed that peaceful protest does reap rewards. Terrorism, be it in the Middle East, be it by white supremacist Americans or by the IRA is unacceptable and should never be condoned.

Simon Burke
Southwest

A modest proposal

To the Editor:

I wonder whether it would make sense to establish regular meetings, at least one a semester, between administration representatives and any interested students, at which all parties could ask questions, provide information and present concerns. As far as I know, there is currently no forum for talking with administrators that is open to all students, whether or not they've been elected to office or a negotiating team or have occupied a building.

Margaret Smith
Hadley

Ode to Allen Ginsberg

To the Editor:

Your fury of energy scribbled on the page is more like stone today. More like an order handed down from on high commanding:

"Take these words, for this man has suffered all there
Was for him to suffer. Take these, his words, and go hence
From here. Mourning leads to morning, and then another's day
Will have come. So be gone, but never forgotten. Give these trials
And triumphs and joys and defeats, give them a seat upon that Stuff of your spirit. That substance of soul that is neither matter
Nor non–matter — but soothing wonder — that hubricates the wheels
Of the world and lets us all live another day.
Think of this man's tears, and feel the sweat of his nervousness.
Be discomforted and made nauseous. Use the toilet if you must,
But read on. Laugh at the insanity of the 'sanity' — laugh,
Howl like a mad person — scream with rage. Beat your arms against
The air around you — furious, appalled. Feel the blood rush through Your veins; rage, rage!!
Hold onto your conviction. Hold on...
Feel that breeze of wisdom?
Can you taste the hope in his clairvoyance?
Grab on, gently, to that small thread you now see. I needn't tell you,
But it leads to heaven! Follow it, look for it in all the eyes of the World. If ever you see it matted and knotty, give it a brush and Untangle it. For this thread is the weaver of Life!"
Gray as your beard were the skies today —
An omen of passage, a passing away.
No sparkle of light, no glint in your eye —
A shade of deep brood painted the sky.
'Twas like a stutter–step in time —
A slip of the tongue,
A lump in the throat, your day had come!
It is sad to think that you are gone.

Steven Harris
Sylvan

Letters to the Editor must be typed, no more than 400 words, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted to Mike Burke, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass Amherst MA 01003, or by e–mail to: letters@oitvms.oit.umass.edu

Letters may be edited for length, clarity, and style.

Arts & Living

Tuesday, April 8, 1997
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Theater Guild performs Fame

By Alex Iglesias
Collegian Correspondent

FAME
Bowker Auditorium
April 3–5

Three days after the hottest and most energetic musical in years hit the stage of Bowker Auditorium, half of the UMass student body is still humming or ad–libbing that ever so catchy tune,"Fame! I'm gonna live for ever..."

The UMass Theater Guild hosted four packed shows, ending with their largest attendance on their closing night. Did the ticket–sellers forget to count? It seemed like every person and their mother was at the show, saving seats at all costs, and those unfortunate late–comers had the "pleasure" of standing against the walls for a gruelling three hours.

I must give my thanks to DJ Cool Regg. Those three hours could have felt like 30 hours if we didn't have his fill–ins between set changes which gave a nice breather for the audience to relax, dance and await the next explosion.

Explosion is correct as the entire cast danced their hearts away. The powerful, yet creatively simple choreography by Michelle Alyse Ouellette, captured the audience members' eyes without room for a wink. Scene 10 was a rush as the cast came out with a reprise of fame, but the real heater was the sexy duet by Richard James (Leroy) and Tricia Granzewicz (Iris) as their stage set kiss seemed more than just an act. Nice job kids.

Act by act, the crowd was at a constant uproar as they anticipated each scene and began to feel the lives of the characters as each year went by— but what happened to the plot? It was somewhere on planet X. As far as I know, it seems like we were in high school, watching the everyday life of our past with no meaning. Until now, I believe the last time I was at a talent show was in my senior year of high school. Give me a show, not a talent competition.

Except for the few higher octave note misses by a few of the cast members, the vocals weren't shameful at all. Maybe a few more catchy tunes and a few voice lessons could have hyped up the show's beat a bit, considering the Rent look was in. Hey, NYC, homosexual topics, confusion with life, poverty and who could miss the '90s Rent attire? Very nice touch. Thank God somebody knows the '80s are out in musicals.

If we had a plot, it would hit the spot. Otherwise marvelous show. Spectacular dancing! Great performances shaped this stunning musical accented with a high–power dance finale and a refreshing pinch of humor, thanks to our dancing teacher characters. It was an awesome show.

Theater Dept. to put on famous musical

COURTESY UMASS THEATER GUILD

The UMass Department of Theater will be preforming The Fantastics April 15 through 19 at 8p.m.

By Alex Iglesias
Collegian Correspondent

Tomorrow night's the night. The costumes, the last minute prayers, and the audience rolls in as the UMass Theater Department proudly presents its new production of Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt's heartwarming musical, The Fantasticks.

The Fantasticks has been considered the longest– running musical of all time and has helped audiences around the world capture that little magic within them... and now it's here to capture yours.

Youthful and vibrant, Director Max Mount has made a remarkable attempt to revive musical theater to the Theater Department after a dry–spell of 16 years. Why so long?

"Nobody had a fire in their belly big enough in the department to put on a musical," Mount said.

Mount mentioned that most of the performers need the opportunity to expand their careers. By taking a stab at the musical scene, these performers have a chance to explore and step away from the typical conversational, dialogue– infested theater plays.

A Chicago native, Mount has worked numerous years directing musicals for inner city youth theater groups and is now a graduate student at the University of Massachusetts, working toward his masters degree in fine arts. The Fantasticks is his first musical endeavor at UMass, and hopefully not his last.

"Smiles everyone!" Mount emphasized during a recent rehearsal, as his energetic cast of 12 began a run–through.

Theater majors, non–majors, dance and music majors from UMass, Mt. Holyoke and a couple of the surrounding towns collaborate perfectly together like the pieces of a puzzle, to spark the "fantastick" magic.

With stage veterans such as Mike Chiavaroli and Dave Joseph, a stunt–man within himself, the show reaches the finest level of acting —not to mention the innovative musical arrangements of piano and harp, by Musical Director Greg Silverman.

All in all, The Fantasticks contains a sparkling mixture of romance, drama, comedy and a twist of adventure, taking the audience through the life and love of a young boy and a young girl in a fantasy world of their own. But don't be mistaken, the cast will give you a runaround with its mystical characters.

This show will capture your hearts, but attend soon because the entire first week is sold out, and the remaining tickets may soon be gone.

The Fantasticks plays April 9–12 and 15–19 at 8 p.m. with matinees on April 12 and 19 at 2 p.m. Reservations Suggested. Tickets cost $3.50 for students and seniors and $6 for the general public. For tickets, please call (413) 545–2511.

Here's a look at some recent releases

COURTESY MELINDA SUE GORDON

Better off Dead

John Cusack is back! The '80s heartthrob has a new film out called Grass Point Blank, a dark comedy about a hit man who returns home for his high school reunion.

COURTESY FRANK CONNOR

No true saint

The suave Val Kilmer makes a play for the illustrious Elizabeth Shue in The Saint. A tale of love and espionage loosely based on the classic T.V. show which starred Roger Moore.

COURTESY SHANE HARVEY

The Spirit of Basketball

In The 6th Man, Kadeem Hardison plays a ghost who helps his team and his brother, Marlon Wayans, to win the NCAA championship.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
One Way / Roundtrip
London $199 $370
Rome or Milan $340 $635
San Jose, Costa Rica $246 $460
Roundtrip
TOKYO $879
SYDNEY $898
Scheduled flights
Fares to worldwide destinations.
Enrollpasses available.
Weekend surcharges may apply.
Customs–immigration taxes apply
Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
212-986-8420*
800-272-9676
*in NYC

Lincoln Real Estate
253-7879 • 25 N. Pleasant St.
We begin showing apartments in April and May for June or September occupancy

Top of the Campus, Incorporated (TOC, Inc.) will hold its annual meeting in Campus Center 903, May 8, 1997, 2:00p.m.

RELAX?
FORGET IT!
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD--
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS
90 GATEHOUSE ROAD
256-6446

Understanding Eating Disorders:
Strategies for Friends and Families
Thursday, April 10, 1997
Room 917
6:30 - 8 p.m. - Murray Lincoln Campus Center, UMass
I think my roommate has an eating disorder.
How can I be sure? What should I do?
I think my sister is anorexic and she isn't getting any help.
How can I convince her to see a professional?
Who should I suggest.. Where should she go?
I'm concerned about my friend who has bulimia.
She says it's under control, but I don't think it is.
I'm really afraid... What can I do to help?
If you are concerned about someone who you know or suspect is struggling with an eating disorder, come to this informal workshop to explore how you can help and cope with these issues.
For more information, please call University Health Services Health Education at 577-5181 or General Medicine 2 at 577-5233

FAMOUS FOR 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
I always get Fish n' Chips at Pete's
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
ROUTE 9 HADLEY, MA YEAR 'ROUND
http://www.javanet/~mrburger/

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10. 25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733 145 main st. northampton 586-0135

OOPS!
•Free Estimates
•Lifetime Repair Warranty
•Auto Glass Replacement
•Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA
549-2880
(One Mile from UMass on the bus route)

MUSKIER TOURS & SUMMER DISCOVERY
Counselors needed for our student programs and/or our pre-college enrichment programs. Applicants must be 21 years old by June 20, 1997
We Need:
• Mature
• Hard Working
• Energetic individuals who can dedicate 4-7 weeks this summer working with teenagers.
For more information and applications:
Please call us at (516) 621-0718 in NY or (800) SKIMMER or Email : staff@summerfun.com
Visit our tour director on April 14th in rm. 902 Campus Center from 9-5

COURTESY MICHAEL LAVINE

I want you to want us back

The classic rock band Cheap Trick has returned to the spotlight. After a decade of touring stadiums and another decade of touring dingy clubs, the Trick have returned to the big leagues. They will be opening up for Stone Temple Pilots at the Mullins Center.

Homage to Beat icon Ginsberg

Justin Beland

Allen Ginsberg: June 3, 1926 – April 5, 1997

"Genius Death your art is done / Lover Death your body's gone / Father Death I'm coming home" — from "Father Death Blues"

After his reading in the UMass Fine Arts Center last year, I approached Allen Ginsberg and asked, if it wasn't too much trouble, if he could sign my copy of his Collected Poems 1947–1980. His deep, friendly eyes stared back through his thick glasses, a smile clearly visible through his graying beard. "I can, if you believe I can," he replied.

In the end, we have his words, his "Starving, hysterical, naked" words. One side will tell you that, if poetry is behavior, he did nothing but misbehave — he rambled, he possessed no structure, he wrote about nothing.

The other side, the side that was kept up nights reading his crazed visions, his "bop lyrics," his dark fears, darker fantasies and even darker dreams, will tell you he rambled, he possessed no structure — but he wrote about everything, and that's what we love about him.

"First thought, best thought," he wrote in the introduction to Collected Poems 1947–1980 (Harper & Row), "spontaneous insight — the sequence of thought–forms passing naturally through ordinary mind — was always motif and method of these compositions." Thought–forms that were both eloquent and disturbing, more so than any of his Beat counterparts. Some did beautiful things with words, but couldn't grab your attention. Others got your attention, but didn't deliver the "poetic goods" that college professors will tell you are necessary. Ginsberg fueled both fires, releasing manic thoughts and ideas through brilliantly written poetry and prose that burned like an inferno on the page. His love for life could be seen in both his poetry and his journals ("Being is the one thing / All the universe shouts" from "This Is About Death"), as could his fear of death ("One time is all time / if you look at it out of the grave" from "In Death, Cannot Reach What is Most Near").

There were the arrests, the pro–drug and anti–censorship campaigns, the heavily publicized escapades with Jack, Neal, Bill, Peter and the rest of the Beats, the turn to Buddhism. He could be seen at anti–war rallies, gay rights rallies, with Bob Dylan (who called Ginsberg "the single greatest influence on American poetical voice since Whitman") in the '60s, with the Clash in the '80s and on stage playing his accordion and finger–cymbals in the '90s. During the '90s he exhibited the same intensity and clarity of madman's vision that he had exuded 50 years before.

His best eulogies are possibly from his own poems: From "Metaphysics,": "There is no other world. The Circle is complete. / I am living in eternity. / The was of this world / are the ways of Heaven." From "Kaddish," a poem dedicated to his late mother who died in a psychiatric hospital: "The key is in the window, the key is in the sunlight as the window — I have the key — the key is in the bars, in the sunlight in the window." And possibly the most appropriate epitaph, from "Adapted From Neruda's 'Que dispierte el lenador'": "And here I say farewell / I'm nothing more than a poet. / I want love for you all / I didn't come here to solve anything. / I came here to sing, / and for you to sing with me." We can still sing with him. If we believe we can.

Let's see if we can't cheer ourselves up a tad, shall we? The Pulitzer Prize for Poetry was given away yesterday to the very deserving Lisel Mueller, for his powerful Alive Together: New and Selected Poems (Louisiana State University Press). Mueller, 73, is a German immigrant who also won the National Book Award for poetry. Alive Together is his seventh book of poetry — a compilation of 35 years of his work exploring a wide range of subjects including cultural and family history, music and language. Mueller's breathtaking linguistic virtuosity is as impressive as it is enchanting, memorable and imaginative. Of course, that's probably why they gave him a Pulitzer.

In other awards news, for those of you who haven't heard, Polish–born poet Wislawa Szymborska was the recipient of last year's Nobel Prize for Literature for her brilliant collection View With a Grain of Sand (Harcourt Brace). The collection, like all of Szymborska's work, is both sensual and intellectual, tender, wise, feminine and above all—human. She interweaves history, science, physics, philosophy and nature with extreme ease, masking the exceptional intelligence and philosophical depth of her work with self– irony and an exquisite sense of humor. This is definitely a collection worth checking out. Szymborska continues the line of poets that have won the Prize, including William Butler Yeats (1923), T.S. Eliot (1948), Pablo Neruda (1971), Czelaw Milosz (1980) and last year's winner, Seamus Heany.

UMass' own Dara Wier put forth a stellar reading last Wednesday at the Globe Bookstore in Northampton. Reading older poems as well as new material form her perpetually– delayed new book tentatively entitled Our Master Plan, Wier's words ignited the standing–room–only audience. Crowd warmer and local fave Jack Haly was magnificent as well. Look for Wier's new book from Carnegie Mellon Press early next year, and look for the Globe to continue its terrific series on Wednesday with Ginsberg Growing Darkness, Growing Light (Carnegie Mellon) author Jean Valentine, with guest Amy Dryansky.

One item mentioned last week that definitely bears repeating: Sophie Cabot Black will be reading tonight at Wooton's Books, downtown Amherst at 8:00 p.m., as part of the of the Amherst College Creative Writing Center Series. Her work has appeared in a number of anthologies, including The Best American Poetry 1993, edited by Louise Gluck. Black has received the Grolier Poetry Prize (1988), Poetry Society of America's Masefield Award (1990) and Medwick Award (1990), and the Norma Faber First Book Award for her first collection The Misunderstanding of Nature (Graywolf). Also worth repeating is Gillian Conoley reading at UMass' Memorial Hall on April 10 at 8:00 p.m. Her book, Tall Stranger (Cornell University Press), was nominated for the National Book Critic's Circle Award for poetry.

Speaking of NBCC nominees, another brilliant UMass teacher and poet, Martin Espada joins a phenomenal group including folk singer Pete Seeger, Academy–Award winning actress Susan Sarandon and Tony and Emmy award winning singer/actor Mandy Patinkin to team up for "Celebrate the Children of Resistance," a benefit for the Rosenberg Fund For Children. The event takes place Saturday, April 26 at 7:30 p.m. at John Greene Hall at Smith College. Tickets can be purchased through the Northampton Box Office (586– 8686). Tix Unlimited in the UMass Student Union, Food For Thought Books in Amherst and the Odyssey Bookshop in South Hadley. Espada, whose latest book, Imagine the Angels of Bread (Norton), snagged a NBCC Award for Poetry nomination last year, will also be reading at the Odyssey on Wednesday, April 30 at 7:30 p.m. Espada's reading is the second in a one–two National Poetry Month– ending punch, as the incomparable Adrienne Rich gives the UMass English Department's semesterly Troy Lecture on April 29. More on all these big–time goodies in the coming weeks.

And finally, since we're all saddened by Ginsberg's passing, I feel it necessary to lighten the mood a little. A copy of Very Bad Poetry (Vintage) should do. Containing such masterpieces as Matthew Green's eloquent "The Spleen" to Georgia Bailey Parrington's haunting and insightful "Elegy to 'A Drowned Puppy'" (no, I'm not making this up — I wish I were), this collection stands to overshoot anything Oxford or Riverside ever put out.

That's all for now. Tune in next week when I tell you whether or not "semesterly" is a real word.

If you have any information on upcoming readings you would like to contribute, please send it to the Collegian, care of this column.

Justin Beland is a Collegian Columnist.

COURTESY MERCURY RECORDS

The world will surely miss the bitter yet fragile words of a true American poet. Although Allen Ginsberg may not have been the nicest or most stable individual to walk this earth, his eccentricities and creative genius should inspire us all.

India Nite a cultural celebration

By Christine Soh
Collegian Staff

The Indian Students Association presented its annual cultural celebration, India Nite, on Sunday.

Hosted by graduate students, Ali Raza and Deepika Manya, the event featured musical performances and traditional dances. It displayed "but a small slice of some of our cultural traditions, both ancient and contemporary," Raza said.

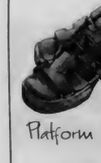
In August of 1947, India became independent of British colonial rule. Quoting Jawaharlal Nehru, Raza said, "A moment comes, which comes but rarely in history, when we step out from the old to the new, when an age ends, and when the soul of a nation, long suppressed, finds utterance. It is fitting that at this solemn moment we take the pledge of dedication to the service of India and her people and to the still larger cause of humanity."

This spirit was present throughout the evening's performances. The displays presented in the cultural show ranged from the opening two Veena recitals to the fusion dance entitled, "Bombey meets Boston."

Several appearances were made by professional dancer Aparna who impressed the audience with three different performances. The third of these was a part in a skit entitled "Visa: It's nowhere you want to be," presented by the Forum of Progressive Artists.

This short play focused on the difficulty international students and travellers have with obtaining U.S. visas.

"The turmoil and tensions of going to a U.S. consulate to ask for a visa is one that all of us from the so–called Third World are familiar with," Raza said.



Skit–writer Raju Sivasankaran used "the symbolism of the queue that forms outside each U.S. consulate in India to highlight some of the issues we have all confronted and the questions they raise for us," Raza said as he introduced the short play.

Also displayed as part of the cultural celebration were several dance performances given by students from the Five College area. One dance entitled "Choli Ke Peeche Kya hai" was performed by a dance group featuring UMass undergraduates. It was a traditional song usually performed the night before weddings describing the situations a young bride faces. The unique performance given on Sunday integrated the Peruvian style with the Indian style.

The cultural show was brought to a close when the Indian national anthem was sung. It was followed by an Indian dinner with traditional dishes and the Hindi movie, "Raja Hindustani."

Halter-tops

Short shorts

Platform slides

ZAYA downtown Amherst

Take It To The Hoopla!

SPALDING

new balance

Haigis Hoopla VII

April 26 27

Register Now for the Ultimate UMASS 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

HOWARD JOHNSON

Champion

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

SPORT COURT

Presented by the UMass Sport Management Department

new balance

Pizza

Bueno Y Sano

April 26 to 27
REGISTER NOW, SPACES ARE LIMITED!!!
THREE OR FOUR PLAYERS PER TEAM
REGISTRATION FEES: Before April 9, 1997 $15 per player
After April 9, 1997 $18 per player

If you have any questions call the
New Balance Haigis Hoopla office at (413) 545-5689

Remember: Registration Deadline April 18, 1997

TAKE ACTION!

Help promote responsible representation of body size and shape in the media!

Stop by our Campus Center table on April 7, 8, 9, and 11 to find out more.

Sponsored by: 5 College Eating Disorders Committee, and the UHS Womens Health Project

Women's tennis beats on Fairfield Stags 5–2

By Mike Coray
Collegian Staff

For the University of Massachusetts women's tennis team, there was a definite sense of urgency for a dominant match last Friday night as they took on Fairfield University at Hampshire College. The Minutewomen (9–3), who beat the Stags 4–3 in early February, were looking for a more convincing win this time around, and they got it, 5–2 behind some strong overall team play.

The doubles matches were first on the courts, and the No. 1 doubles team of freshman Ola Gerasimova, and junior Caroline Steele performed well, knocking off the duo of Nancy Searle and Amy Hanson of Fairfield. The match was close in the beginning until Gerasimova and Steele took a 5– 4 lead and never looked back. Every ball that was softly lofted over the net, Gerasimova put away with one hit, and the duo simply proved too strong and cruised to an 8–4 victory.

The No. 2 doubles combination for UMass was senior Liz Durant, and sophomore Gillian Kane, who played together for the first time in the doubles competition. Kane, playing in the absence of Durant's usual partner, Marie Christine Caron, came out strong with the senior as they jumped out to the early lead 3–1. However, unable to seize the opportunity to go up 4–1, Fairfield closed the gap to 3–2, and then took over the lead, on their way to an 8–6 win.

With those two matches completed, the doubles point rested on the shoulders of junior Lama Gorodetskaya, and sophomore Jackie Braunstein in the No. 3 doubles match. With the support of the team behind them, Gorodetskaya and Braunstein battled back from a 7–6 deficit to take the win, 9–7 in exciting fashion to cap off the doubles competition, and the point to go up 1–0 in the match.

"This team needed to get together themselves and play, and I'm happy with the result," Assistant coach Tom Lowry said. "We haven't played a duel match since February, and this is the beginning of our spring season, and I think they came together well and they did a good job."

As the singles began, there were only three matches being played at the same time, with no thanks from the old folks of the retirement home that took up court No. 4. In any event however, Durant wasted no time in fronting up a court as the senior dismantled Deirdre Tindall of Fairfield 6–2, 6–0 in a match that took under a half–hour.

Durant said her serve was what gave her the advantage, along with having the doubles matches first, which got her warmed up and ready to go. After the match, Durant was complemented by her teammate.

"She played like a senior," Gorodetskaya said. "She went on the court, took care of business, and she left. That was a senior performance."

Gerasimova, at No. 1 singles, was next to finish and had her way as well playing against Fairfield's Lenka Hurton, winning 7–5, 6–0. Gerasimova continued her strong play that she showed in the doubles, and mentally took her opponent out of the match as well.

"I had to do everything that I could, and I just kept it going," Gerasimova said.

Playing at No. 3 singles, Braunstein also kept the winning going as she won her match as well very handily by the count of 6–3, 6–1. Bruanstein had the edge in the match, with the knowledge of her opponent Amy Hanson, who she had played three times previously, and beaten every time.

"I was a little nervous in the beginning because I was expected to win," Braunstein said. "But it was just a matter of playing the match, and I knew how to play her."

Steele, whose match at No. 2 versus Searle of Fairfield went on for hours before Searle took the win in a very tight match of two players whose skills and styles were equally alike. The final was 6–3, 5–7, 7–6 (7–3). Steele had her serve working well, but it was only a matter of who was going to blink first, as both players were pushed to the limit tracking down hard hit balls by the other.

As for Kane, who was playing in only her second collegiate singles match at No. 5, put up a good fight and showed some signs of good things to come, however she lost the match 2–6, 1–6.

Gorodetskaya finished off the competition at the No. 6 spot, playing a pro–set match (First one to 8 points) knocking off a familiar opponent for her as well, Candice Srubar, as she downed her 8–0.

"We've played so many times already, and I already know my plan, where to play, how to hit, and I know her weaknesses and her strengths, and you just have to go out there and stick to your plan," Gorodetskaya said.

The Minutewomen took four of the six singles matches and the doubles point for the 5–2 victory, starting off the spring 1–0 and improving their record to 9–3. Total team play was the key in this match, and UMass knows how important it is to get these wins, so that when the tougher competition comes along they can be prepared, and put up a solid fight.

The next match for UMass will be at home this Wednesday when they take on Connecticut at 2:30 p.m. on the upper Boyden tennis courts.

JORMA KANGANEN / COLLEGIAN

Led by Ola Gerasimova, the UMass women's tennis team beat Fairfield 5–2 on Saturday.

■ women's gym

continued from page 10

low on bars, and that really affected the outcome towards the end of the meet," Kuzara said. "There were a million other routines that ended up being scored higher. A lot of that you could attribute to bars being the first event. The judges gave a 9.50 for Mandy [Mosby] and a 9.60 for Anita [Sanyal], and they just weren't going to go that much higher.

"The scores weren't going for us. I just have nothing but a great feeling about this meet, and yet I feel like we have to go home and re–evaluate everything in terms of what we are doing to get to the next level."

The Minutewomen had four all–arounders competing on Saturday — Laing, Swartz, Betsy Colucci and Mosby. Mosby placed fifth in the all–around with a score of 38.575, tied for fifth on the floor exercise with a 9.80 and tied for sixth on the balance beam with a 9.725.

Colucci, whose all–around performance was the first of the season for her, finished 14th with a score of 37.725. She also finished ninth on vault with a 9.725. She shares similar sentiments as Kuzara.

"I am so proud of the whole team, the way we just stuck through everything. We picked it up and we didn't lose spirit. The scores didn't go our way, but I am really proud of us, we had a great year," Colucci said. "I think this meet is a big step for us. We realize how good we are and next year we are going to be back."

And let's talk about Karen Maurer. Maurer hasn't competed much this season, but what she has done has really given the team the edge. Kuzara in a previous interview commented on how nobody talks about his Juniors. These past few weeks Maurer has turned in powerful performances on beam. But perhaps it was the huge smile on her face after she nailed her first combination on beam that said it all.

"That's the hardest position, first up on beam. There's so much at stake, and Karen had the best routine of the year. That was better than the A 10 performance, it was better than any routine she's done all year," Kuzara said. "The scoring was really tough on beam. We nailed beam, we can't do beam any better than that."

The Minutewomen were equally impressive on the floor exercise. Again, two of the women who normally compete on floor didn't, but UMass' depth allowed them to garner the same solid scores. Both Penny LeBeau and Sanyal, who has competed a handful of times on floor this season, had counting scores.

"We knew we were a great floor team and a great vault team. And floor and vault went exactly how I thought it would go from a performance aspect. Penny, unbelievable floor routine, but it's a 9.55," Kuzara said, stressing that he believed LeBeau should have received a higher score.

Though the low scoring obviously had an impact on the outcome of the meet, it was continually said by team members that they were very proud of their performances, and happy with the experience gained at regionals. Sanyal gave her thoughts on the team's accomplishments.

"I think this season was an amazing season, I think we finally started to realize how much potential we really have and we started to gain a lot of confidence, especially by the end of the season," Sanyal said. "And I think that regionals by far was our best, best, best meet and even though we may have not scored as high as some of home meets, we really pulled together so hard and we performed as well as we ever could have."

The Minutewomen will be graduating two seniors, Swartz and Laing, who have been with the team as long as Kuzara has. He said his two seniors were very special to the program, and commented on their place at regionals.

"Well, they wanted a storybook ending, and the last three or four weeks they were putting a lot of pressure on themselves," Kuzara said. "And the team was putting a lot of pressure on themselves, and there's a certain amount of that which is good, and there's a certain amount that is kind of holding us back, I think.

"To have been through what they have been through towards the end of this year, I think they will always be remembered. We didn't need to make it to Nationals for this year to be a successful season. Tara and Lianne have had a great, great career."

Swartz also talked about the past year.

"Overall this season was a great season, we knew we had the talent to be at regionals, and that's important," Swartz said. "But there's another year, another season and each year the team improves and gets closer and closer [to Nationals] and we are going to get there, it's just a matter of time."

■ men's track

continued from page 10

Tying for a season best for high jump were Senior Ron Tauro and Sophmore Ryan Fortune with the height of 6'5".

Others placing first for UMass were Conception in the 400 meters (48.4) and Fortune in the triple jump (1.96m).

"It was a comfortable victory for us, especially since so many people stepped up," Coach O'Brien said.

This year's team is looking extremely sharp and could be even better than last year's squad.

"We thought the B.C. meet would be closer. But this year's team looks stronger than last year's. I think we will be sending more people to IC4's than last year," sophomore Dan Leboeuf said.

The Minutemen return to action on Saturday, April 12 when they will host Holy Cross, Iona, and Providence College at Llewelyn Derby Track at 12:00 p.m.

It will be the last home meet of the year, as UMass prepares for the larger meets of the season.

■ women's track

continued from page 10

senior Kristen Donaldson recorded an 18:34.75 in the 5000.

Sophomore Nicole Way, the former triple jumper who switched events due to nagging injuries sustained in an accident over the summer, placed second in only her second ever appearance in the 800, with a time of 2:18.79.

Other key contributions included Raqueil Shelton's third place showing in the 100 meter dash with a 12.55 and Irish following at 12.61. In the 200, Irish took third at 25.63, with Freshman Andrea Comeau and Bell also picking up points finishing fifth and sixth respectively. Comeau also picked up third in the 100 meter high hurdles at a personal best time of 14.72.

Another freshman, Sarah Hirsch, placed fourth in the 3000 and just missed placing in the 1500 by blowing out her heat but losing out to times in the second heat. Tracy Meagher finished sixth in the 3000, also picking up points. Lacking Kenku, the 4x400 relay team came in a strong second, featuring Cooper, Eaton, Irish and Comeau.

Next week the Minutewomen travel to Southern Connecticut to face Brown, Northeastern, Boston College, and Southern Connecticut.

■ softball

continued from page 10

winning streak when they clash with the Lady Blue Devils of Central Connecticut State (2–13) in an out–of–conference twinbill.

Over their successful stretch, UMass has celebrated the resurgence of their offensive attack, and the stability of their pitching staff. Through the past five games, the Minutewomen have shown little mercy, outscoring their opponents 35–6. This outburst was emphasized by a Nicole Faessler dinger against St. Bonaventure, and two grand slams in one game Saturday against Rutgers by Kim Gutridge and Kelly Buckley, a UMass record.

Also, the consistent overpowering performances from second–year pitchers Liz Wagner and Danielle Henderson has shut down opposing lineups.

This week, Henderson's efforts were recognized when she was named A–10 Pitcher of the Week for the second consecutive time. Since the A–10 season began last week, Henderson has allowed only one earned run over 18 innings, plummeting her ERA to a dominating 1.56 runs per game.

Meanwhile, Wagner hasn't done much to tarnish her standing as 1996 A–10 Pitcher of the Year. Wagner pitched two games last week and surrendered only four runs, lowering her ERA to 3.02.

Central Connecticut State comes into town haunted by a ten–game losing streak. Over this time, the Lady Blue Devils have been outscored 68–6. This is not a mistake. Not producing many runs, and giving up plenty of them, the Lady Blue Devils are running into a dangerous UMass squad that is finally running on all cylinders.

The Lady Blue Devils bat .166 as a team, and give up 5.09 runs per game, while UMass bats at a .233 clip and gives up 2.19 runs per game.

Alomar returns to action; O's lose to Royals 6–5

By Craig Horst
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Booed when he was introduced and booed even louder when he came to bat, Roberto Alomar returned to baseball yesterday.

Alomar had two hits and said he was just happy to be back on the field.

"I just want to go out there and play the game of baseball," Alomar said after Baltimore lost 6-5 to Kansas City in the Royals' home opener.

"The fans are entitled to their own opinion and that's all I can say about it. You just have to try and enjoy the game and do what you are capable of doing. For me, all I have to do is go out and pay the game of baseball."

The Baltimore Orioles second baseman was playing for the first time since completing a five-game suspension for spitting in the face of umpire John Hirschbeck last season.

The autograph hounds sought out Alomar before the game, but he received a less hospitable reception when his name was announced over the public address system at the Kansas City Royals' home opener.

He was booed in all four plate experiences.

Fans cheered politely when he made a nice play on a bad-hop grounder in the second inning, but they also cheered when he struck out in the third.

"The main thing for me was it was good to be out there," Alomar said. "It was a good day for me. Not for the team, but hopefully we can come here [tomorrow] and win a game."

The booing picked up for his first at-bat. Alomar, the game's second batter, sacrificed after Brady Anderson's leadoff double. Anderson scored on a sacrifice fly by Rafael Palmeiro.

Alomar started at second base, playing on a sprained ankle that he said was almost fully healed.

He spent nearly 10 minutes before batting practice signing about two dozen autographs for about a 100 fans around the third-base dugout. They seemed to have put aside the September spitting episode that polarized players and umpires and further discouraged fans already upset about baseball's labor problems.

"He was wrong, but there is not a person around who hasn't made a mistake," said Jeremy Earl, 16, who landed an Alomar autograph. "Forgive and forget," said Chris Bell, 22, who had a game program signed by Alomar.

When Alomar had to leave, those who did not get autographs were understanding.

"I appreciate your taking the time, Mr. Alomar," said one. "Thank you very much, Mr. Alomar," said another.

Alomar rejoined the Orioles after an extended stay in Florida to treat his ankle. He had hurt himself stumbling on stairs in his apartment building in Baltimore, then aggravated the injury before spring training in a charity basketball game.

He received about 15 minutes of treatment on the ankle before the game, and the ankle was heavily taped.

Alomar declined to talk about the suspension as he dressed in the clubhouse before batting practice.

"Let's talk about baseball," he said. "I want to leave it at that."

When pressed about how he felt to finally play again, Alomar tried to deflect the questions.

"I just try to go out there and play my game," he said. "If you worry too much about things, you can't do the best you can." Orioles manager Davey Johnson supported his second baseman. "I know he's going to be sensitive about it," Johnson said. "I know he's going to hear things. I told him when they didn't have emotion, that's when he has to worry."

Pesky booted from dugout; Legend bumped to press box

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON — In a break with tradition that rivals the departure of Roger Clemens and a new billboard above the famed Green Monster, the Boston Red Sox have banished longtime coach and goodwill ambassador Johnny Pesky from the dugout.

The 77-year-old former shortstop known to generations as "Mr. Red Sox" was told by the team that he can continue to hit grounders during fielding practice, but then he must change out of his uniform and watch the game from the press box.

"It hurts me quite a bit, to be honest with you," Pesky told The Boston Globe in yesterday's editions. "I don't have much time left and I was hoping they'd let me stay in the dugout. I think some of the players like having me around there."

Pesky did not return a call from The Associated Press seeking comment.

"He is a permanent member of the Red Sox. We have an agreement to pay him for the rest of his life. Nobody's throwing Johnny Pesky out of anywhere," said former spokesman Dick Bresciani, who saw his own duties change as the Red Sox try to become more corporate. "It's not a slap. We want to expand his role. He was getting away from doing a lot of the things he had been doing" like working with minor leaguers and in the community, Bresciani said. A reporter who stopped by the team's Fenway Park offices was told that neither general manager Dan Duquette nor CEO John Harrington was available for comment. But fans and players let their opinions be known immediately.

"After all these years? That stinks," said Darren Schriever, a Red Sox fan who was scrubbing graffiti off the Cask & Flagon bar across the street from Fenway Park in preparation for Friday's home opener.

"I'm 24, and he's been there my whole life. He was as much a part of the dugout as the benches."

John Michael Paveskovich — Pesky's full name — broke in with the Red Sox in 1942 and led the league in hits his first three seasons, which were interrupted by three in the military. He was traded to Detroit in 1952, then to Washington in '54 before retiring with a lifetime batting average of .307.

His playing days are best remembered for a gaffe, though: He allegedly held a relay throw too long during the 1946 World Series, allowing Enos Slaughter to score from first on Harry "The Hat" Walker's double with the winning run in Game 7.

But since then, Pesky has won over the typically unforgiving Boston fans with his geniality and love for the game, demonstrated in a half-decade as coach, manager, broadcaster and advertising salesman. More recently, he had been a "special assistant for player development," a nebulous position that most recently involved helping with infield practice and sitting on the bench during home games in case his years of experience were needed. "How can you let No. 6 not be around the kids? He does nothing but help them. He likes it. He likes to be there for them," first baseman Mo Vaughn told the Globe.

"That's lovely, man. Johnny Pesky gave his heart and soul to the Boston Red Sox. He's a great man and he should be appreciated for all this time. He should be here with us, on the road with us, talking with us. Johnny Pesky, if anybody should be here, it's him."

Pesky told the Globe that Duquette called him before spring training and told him he wouldn't be welcome in the dugout, banishing him to the press room.

"I don't know. Maybe they want me to go away," he told the paper. "I guess they'll tell me what they have planned for me." Added Vaughn: "Most people want to go to their home at his age. And he wants to come out here. He should be an untouchable person in this organization. But, I thought that Roger Clemens was untouchable, too.

"Pesky ain't nothing but a good man. A good man, a good baseball man. He's good to have around."

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

3 bedroom Puffton Apt. take over lease June 1st. Please call Mark, Seth, or Scott 549-2645

Great apartment uptowa! 5 min. walk to campus. One bedroom. Begin 6/1 $630/month 256-6441

Take over our lease or will sublet starting June 1st. 2 bedroom in Brendywnie. Rent includes heat and hot water. Call 548-0530

AUTO FOR SALE

1982 BMW 733i 160K, blue, inspected, good condition. $4000 546-2604

1992 Hyundai Elantra excellent condition, auto, A/C, stereo, 49K miles $3500 Hyon 256-1285

86 Volkswagon Jetta GL 5-speed, fully equipped with sunroof, PS, air, new stereo, Thule rack, full records. Kept garaged in winter. Excellent condition Must see. 90K miles $3500 or B/O 549-4995

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

88 Dodge 600 nice, runs. $800. 584-4807

99 Cutlass Ciera low miles, PS, PW, PL, AC, AM/FM, cassette, cruise $3795. 549-1215

EMPLOYMENT

Environmental Sales. Hello? Do you believe in being in the right place at the right time? International Marketing Co. is rapidly expanding into the Western Massachusetts area. You'll never know unless you call (413)827-7555.

Drivers Wanted College students, anyone to sell Good Humor Ice Cream from one of our vending trucks. Work outdoors this summer. Be your own boss. RTs available in your area. Earn $750-950/weekly. Male or Female. Apply now. Call Mon.-Sat. 9am-3pm only (203)866-2641 or (800)899-1009.

Cape Cod West Yarmouth Resort needs reliable maids. Saturday only, 9:30-4:30. $60 per day. Bonus if you stay through 8/30. (508)775-0985.

LAST CHANCE

Legal Assistants Wanted April 18th is the last day to apply to the Student Legal Services Office about Fall 1997 Internships! Get hands-on experience in the legal field. Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession required— training is provided. Contact Student Legal Services today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Vermont Adventure! Farm and Wilderness is now hiring summer staff. We need people who want to provide positive guidance and support to adolescents coming of age in the 90's. Counselors, nurses, cooks, general staff. Organic farming, backpacking, rock climbing, waterfront, carpentry, crafts. Challenging wilderness anvironment in the Green Mountains of Vermont. Contact Philip Tobin (802)422-3761 or f a n d w @ s o v e r . n e t (http://www.fandw.org).

Summer Jobs on Nantucket Work on the beach. Positions available now. Start date around May 20th. Short order cooks. Aerobics Instructor. For immediate consideration, call (508)325-6347. Housing a possibility.

PAINTERS- Full-time summer; EXPERIENCE PREFERRED; vehicle, $6.50-$9.00/hr.; heavy lifting required. 9:00-5:00 ONLY 247-9480

We need two people to work in Southern Vermont Country Inn. Do dishes and rooms, wait tables, food prep, etc. Room and board plus salary, tips. Call (802)874-4140.

Need a summer job? Know the web? Sell MCI Internet Websites to anyone, whenever you want to work. Low cost, nice income for you. Call (800)377-7683 or e-mail for more information. dlenger@aol.com

Part-Time Sales Reps Wanted "Lead the way into the 21st Century" with our copyright "Slogan" sweatshirt. Be your own boss and earn extra money fast. Send for details at: The 21st Century Group, 332 Bleecker St - D40, NYC, NY 10014

Cruise and Land Tour Employment work in exotic locations. Meet fun people and get paid! For industry information, call Cruise Employment Services (800)276-4948 ext. C0017. (We are a Research and Publishing Co.)

FOR RENT

Houss- 4 large bedrooms Main St. Dir bus route. 5 minutes from Upton. Call 253-5188

Uptown studio apartment for rent- available last week of May, $440 per month. Call Dan 256-5473

2 bedroom Brandywiss Apt. Available from June 1- Sept 1. Sublet or take over our lease. Hot water and heat/AC included $750 a month. Call 549-7504 Dn bus route.

3 bedroom Puffton June 1. Rent- $825. Call 549-3913

Sugarloaf Estates Ultra modern, two bedroom apartments. Free heat/hot water, New kitchens, baths, carpeting, washers/dryers and more! On bus line. Minutes to Amherst. Great specials! Now leasing Spring and Fall. Call 665-3856

Room for Rent Private home. $335 + utilities. Kitchen privileges. Kosher/Vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished. Available May 1. 549-4853

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane. Gas, heat, hardwood floors, heated basement. Now showing for June and September Lease $1300+. 253-7879

Amherst Center 1, 2, and 3 bedroom apartments. Gas, heat, hardwood floors. We are now showing for June and September leases. Lincoln Real Estate 253-7878

Female Wanted to share home in New Salem. Separate in-law apartment with kitchen, living room, private bath, small bedroom, furnished

FOR RENT

No pets. No smoking. $475/month. All included. (508)544-8427

4 bedroom apartment 2 bath, 2 large living rooms. Located on bus route in South Amherst. Call 256-1561

Cape Cod group & summer rentals. Winterfront houses, Falmouth area (508)477-6000

FOR SALE

ATTENTION SNAKE LOVERS: Selling 1 juvenile Ball Python and 1 grown male Albino Burmese Python. I must sell and you must see. Call 549-5893

Round Trip USAir Ticket Anywhere in the Continental US Expires 6-14-97. Asking $300. Call Jess 546-5266

Laptop Notebook $99, VGA Color Monitor $75, Hard Drive $10, Software $5, 386 Motherboard $25 Call Steve 566-3324 ext. 2

Buy wholesale, not retail. The last phone card you will ever own. MCI Pre-paid only $2.00 for 10 minutes. This card is rechargeable. Mail $2.00 and SASE to: Collegiate Communications P.O. Box 785, Attleboro, MA 02703 (800)372-7683

PERSONALS

Thank You Saint Jude!! LP & LP

INSTRUCTION

GRE / GMAT 30 hours, $395 American Academy 1-800-808-Prep (please leave your name and number)

LOST

Lost Pictures- possibly fell out of car or were taken from car in Puffton Village around 11:00 p.m. Friday 4/4 Sentimental Value. Please return. Reward 546-2426

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Offices, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Piercings by the Bearded Lady 222 Steta St. Northempton. 586-0629

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUMMER SUBLET

Sunny one bedroom furnished. South Prospect St. Amherst $300/month. Call Karolee 256-4119.

3 bedroom apartmast- Puffton Available 6/1 with Fall Option $825/month. 549-6954

SUMMER SUBLET

Looking for Summer Sublet? Beautiful 5 bedroom house. Has all needed utilities. On bus line and even has a yard! Next to Mike's Westview. Call Angela or Carey @ 549-1859

3 bedroom Puffton Apt. Great price. Available 6/1. 546-5681

3 bedroom apartment June-August. Sunderland. Pool/Courts Call 665-0298 Ten minutes from UMass

2 bedroom/Braodywiss with Fall Option. Available 6/1. Call 549-4982

Mill Valley Summer Sublet 3 bedroom, 2 bath, fully furnished. On bus route. 1 month FREE! 253-8503

3 bedroom Puffton Available 6/1. 549-5941

TO SUBLET

2 bedroom/Brandywiss Apt. Easily fits 4. Excellent condition $740. Call Kreth or Melissa 549-7474

1 bedroom in Braadywina Available May 1. Call 549-0570 Possible Fall Option.

TRAVEL

Ski and Party at Killington for only $108! 2 nights condo lodging and TWO daily lift tickets. Call UMass Ski and Board Club 545-3437, 434 Student Union

TRAVEL

Montreal- Party Weekend April 11-13. 2 nights lodging and round trip bus. $115 Call UMass Ski Club 545-3437

WANTED TOP RENT

Looking for apartment on bus line for Fall 97. Please call Amy 546-0706

Wantad: 4 bedroom apartment/house on bus route for Fall. Willing to take over summer lease. Call 546-4285 Amy.

COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS

9 Spring and Fall Call 665-3856

Room for Rent Private home. $335 + utilities. Kitchen privileges. Kosher/Vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished. Available May 1. 549-4853

3 bedroom condos Hobart Lane Gas, heat, hardwood

THEY REALLY WORK.

Personals Policy

1. All personals MUST be proofread by Collegian classified employees before payment and acceptance of the classified.
2. First names MAY NOT be used in personals. ONLY last names and initials are allowed. The only exceptions are birthday or congratulations personals, in which case the full name may be used.
3. Phone numbers are not allowed in personals. NO EXCEPTIONS.
4. Addresses are not allowed in personals. this means dorm room numbers as well.
5. Personals of a threatening or derogatory nature are not acceptable. Personals of a vindictive or libelous nature are not acceptable. Personals may not be used for the purpose of harassment.
6. Profanity may not be used in personals.
7. The personals section is for personals only. The personals section may NOT be used to sell items, seek roommates, advertise meetings, etc.
8. All personals must have the name, signature, and ID # of the author. The author of the personal must be listed on the personal order. Non-students must provide a valid driver's license and the license number must be recorded on the invention order. Use of false identification or misrepresentation is subject to penalties under the law.
9. The Collegian reserves the right to refuse or to edit any personal that does not meet the Collegian's standards in accordance with the statutes of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Rates

Students

20¢ per word/day

All others

40¢ per word/day

$2.00 min./day

NO REFUNDS

Please write clearly and legibly. We are not responsible for errors resulting from illegible handwriting or type.

Standard Headings

ACTIVITIES
ANNOUNCEMENTS
APARTMENT FOR RENT
AUTO FOR SALE
COMMUNITY EVENTS
EMPLOYMENT
ENTERTAINMENT
FOR SALE
FOUND (2 DAYS FREE)
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
HOUSES FOR RENT
INSTRUCTION
LOST
MUSICIANS
MISCELLANEOUS
MOTORCYCLES
PERSONALS
ROOM FOR RENT
ROOM WANTED
ROOMMATE WANTED
SERVICES
SUMMER SUBLET
TO SUBLET
TRAVEL
TRANSPORTATION
WANTED TO RENT
WANTED

Five College Community Calendar

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

TUESDAY, APRIL 8

Discussion — An open panel discussion will be held at 10:45 a.m. in the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space, to discuss Harriet Diamond and Linda Bachelor's exhibit, The Bottom Drawer.

Lecture — Robert Meeropol, son of Ethel & Julius Rosenberg will give a talk, entitled "Children, Families and Human Rights: The work of the Rosenberg Fund for Children" at 4 p.m. on the eighth floor of the Campus Center.

Lecture — Prof. Jon McGowan will lecture on "The History of Renewable Energy Research at UMass" in the Campus Center, room 903. Part of the Renewable Energy Forum.

Lecture — The seventh annual Retail Lecture Series will be held at 4 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 101. The Series is sponsored by the Apparel Marketing Program and the Department of Consumer Studies. This year's topic is "Home Fashions: An Explosive Growth Industry." Lee Williams, Executive Vice-President of Country Curtains, is the featured speaker.

Meditation — A Yoga and meditation session will be held by the Ananda Marga Club at the Main Lounge of Butterfield Residence Hall at 8 p.m. This session will introduce attendees to basic meditation and Yoga techniques. There is no fee or registration. All are welcome. Please contact 253-9533 for more information.

Meeting — There will be a Food Services Workshop from 4-6 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 168C.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9

Blood drive — The American Red Cross will hold a blood drive from 10:30 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center, rooms 174 today and 168 tomorrow. Sponsored by First Aid Services. Call 545-1885 for more information.

Discussion — A new Medical Marijuana Users discussion and support group will be meeting at the Bangs Center from 6-8 p.m. If you or someone you care about is using marijuana for a medical condition, please consider joining us. Sponsored by the UMass Cannabis Reform Coalition. For more information, contact Andrew Hasenfeld at 549- 7879.

Film — The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space's weekly video series "Faces" will feature The Hague School today at 4:30 p.m.

Lecture — The Five College Program in Peace & World Security Studies (PAWSS) will sponsor a talk by Professor Eqbal Ahmad on "Ideology and the Intellectual: Profiles in Dissent," at 7:30 p.m. in Main Lecture, Franklin Patterson Building, at Hampshire College. The event is free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible.

Lecture — The Animal Rights Coalition will be hosting a free lecture from the Living Earth series, entitled "Our Food, Our World" at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165. Refreshments will be served. For more information, call 545-1925.

Lecture — The Women's Studies Proseminar Lecture Series will feature Esther Katz's Margaret Sanger Papers Project, "The Editor as Biographer: The Margaret Sanger Papers Project" in the Campus Center, room 162-175 at 3:30 p.m. Free and open to the public.

Meeting — There will be follow-up meetings for University Center 2000 from 11 a.m.-noon in the Campus Center, room 802, and office meetings from noon-1 p.m. in the Coffee Shop.

Meeting — The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB) will hold a meeting from 5:30-6:30 p.m. in Room 304 of University Health Services. All are welcome to attend.

NOTICES

Presentation — "Norwegian Nature & Culture at Telemark College," an Interdisciplinary Study Abroad Program focusing on society and the natural environment in a Scandinavian context, will be presented at 3:30 and 4:30 p.m. in Holdsworth Natural Resources Center, room 202.

Conference — The Women of Color Conference will take place from April 18-20. Sign-up sheets will be in the Student Union, room 416 and on the Campus Center Concourse.

RSOs — Francellis Nunez, secretary of registry at the Student Government Association, would like to announce that the following inactive groups are in danger of being removed from RSO status: APICS, Bridge Club, Brush Up Your Shake Spear, Cheerleaders, Clean Rivers Coalition, Collegiate 4-H, European Club, Hellenic Association, Honors Students Association, Italian American Students Association, Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance, Marching Band, Marketing Club, Omega Psi Phi, Out of State Students Association, PHNORD, Russian Club, Society Community Empowerment, SHMAI, Tennis Club, Travel & Tourism, Truth Task Force, Twenty/Twenty Vision and the Wrestling Club. This is the last chance for groups that have been inactive for six or more semesters to reactivate their status. To reactivate, call Nunez at 545-0341.

Juggling — The UMass Juggling Club will meet on Fridays at 3 p.m. next to the Information Desk in the Campus Center. No experience required.

Financial aid — Applications for summer financial aid are now available at Financial Aid Services. You must be a continuing student enrolled in a degree granting program at UMass: taking summer classes through Continuing Education; going on approved summer international exchange program through IPO; or working on a graduate dissertation. Deadline is April 18. Late applications will not be accepted. –

Meeting — Common Ground will be holding support and advocacy meetings for low-income students and allies every Tuesday in the Campus Center (room to be announced) from noon–2 p.m. For more information, contact Mary Sutherland at (413) 323–9725 or leave a message in our box in the GEO office, basement of the Student Union.

